Boyhood ways, such as hiding cigars from his mother in the barrel of his gun, which she would not touch, undergraduate life and poetry, and the after-training for the work of a physician, were all described briefly, but clearly and entertainingly. Of Dr. Holmes later years, and the era during work of those years, Mr. Vincent had much of admiration to say, and his words concerning those well known poems, "The Last Leaf" and "Dorothy Q," and "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," which has been called "The epic of the boarding house," found an echo in the minds of many present.

As a lecturer, Mr. Vincent is pleasant and unaffected in his manner and delivery, and shows himself to be thoroughly well informed upon and in sympathy with his subject.

OVERCOMES LOSS OF POWER

A NEW INVENTION FOR BICYCLES.

Designed by a New Market Man—Device Will be Manufactured by a Somerset Company.

David Fraser is an old resident of New Market, and he enjoys the distinction of having made himself quite prominent, not only in New Jersey, but in other States as well, through his inventive genius. About four years ago he started the cycling world by introducing a patented wheel which he thought would revolutionize the exercise. After several trials the scheme was given up, owing to lack of perfection.

Now Mr. Fraser comes before the people with a device which he claims will completely change the wheel business around. He has secured a patent on it and recently a company was formed. It is now incorporated with capital to the amount of $100,000. The papers have been filed at Somerville. Mr. Fraser is general manager of the company, and according to his own words, "He is boss." There are several men in the company, but the only ones Mr. Frazer will name for the present are W. J. Davis, of New Market, and Lawyer John Frecht, of Somerville. The factory will probably be located at Somerville. It is not unlikely that an office will be established in this city.

Mr. Fraser's patent can be used on any kind of engine or bicycle, and for he claims no loss of power. On the bicycle the arrangement is very unique. Alongside of the large sprocket wheel are located two smaller wheels with cogs. Of the latter wheels one is slightly smaller than the other. The smallest does not revolve, but is held in place by a steel rod which is fastened to another part of the frame. The other wheel works in the cog and with every revolution the two wheels on the ground are revolved three times. This can be increased by increasing the size of the wheels close to the sprocket wheel.

Mr. Fraser claims that he has been able to exchange power for leverage and thus overcomes the loss of power. He also claims that a very high gear can be pushed with comparative ease. It can be attached to any wheel and sell at a reasonable figure.

Mr. Frazer told a Press reporter yesterday that he had been offered $30,000 for his patent, but that he would not sell it. The name given the company is "The Frazer Speed and Power Utilizing Company." The patentee says that his device works contrary to the theory of scientific men, but he knows that they will sooner or later acknowledge that he is right.

Mr. Frazer has for many years been obliged to work very hard for a living and he says that now he is going to enjoy the fruits of his labors and take things easy.

Queen.

The colored society people of Plainfield are arranging for a May Queen fancy dress ball the evening of May 9th, at which the best dressed lady will be crowned queen of the ball.

SAVE SOULS OF SAILORS

FLOATING ENDEAVOR WORK EXPLAINED TO PLAINFIELDERS.

Mrs. Cassera Tells of the Good Influences Exerted Among the Marin ers at the "Floating Bethel" in Port.

Something of the work of the Christian Endeavorers among the mariners of this country was told at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church last Friday. Mrs. Cassers, who is in charge of the "Floating Bethel" at New York, was present. With her were five sailors, three from the S. S. Teutonic and two from the S. S. Umbria.

Mrs. Cassera gave a very interesting talk on the floating Endeavor work. She told something of the origin of the movement. It was started in 1892, at the time of the National Christian Endeavor convention in New York. In 1893, a "Floating Bethel" was placed at the Brooklyn navy yard. There are now "Floating Bethels" at many of the leading ports of the globe. The mission, of which Mrs. Cassera is in charge, is located on Hudson street, New York. There is a Christian Endeavor Society there composed of 125 sailors, 65 of whom are active members.

Mrs. Cassera's talk was rather of the mission and the methods employed there than her own experiences in the work. She told how on the arrival of a vessel in port she and an assistant went on board. They talked with the sailors and distributed reading matter among them and invited them to the Bethel. Many of the sailors spend their nights at the mission where they are free from the usual temptations that surround the seafaring man. The mission at the mission are passed pleasantly and the sailors seem to enjoy them. In this way a path has been opened whereby she is able to do them much good spiritually.

One of the sailors present gave a selection on the mandolin, "What Shall the Harvest Be?" Another gave a lengthy testimony, and all united in singing "Let a Little Sunshine In."

Joseph M. Hawkins, chairman of the missionary committee, was the leader of the meeting. Considering the stormy night, the attendance was very good.

A FIREMEN'S HOME.

The Matter Takes Direct Form Before the Legislature.

Senator Ketcham, of Essex, has presented to the Legislature a bill which provides for the establishment of a home for disabled firemen. The bill appoints as commissioners Bird W. Spencer, Benjamin W. Cloud, William M. Jeffries, William G. Corliss Charles N. Reading, John McKiernan, William H. Brown, George T. Werts, Egbert Seymour, William S. Hanoock and William Bettle. The commissioners are to buy or build a home at an outlay not to exceed $75,000. To raise this money the commissioner of banking and insurance is to add the money received from fire insurance companies on account of the 2 per cent. tax levied on them, instead of turning it over to the relief associations as now. The relief associations may also contribute to the fund. When the home is furnished and equipped and the commissioners have reported to the Legislature, the Governor shall appoint from the active or exempt firemen of the State eight persons, one from each Congressional district, who shall constitute the board of managers with the president of the New Jersey State Firemen's Association and the State Banking Commissioner and State Comptroller. The home shall be supported by bequests, gifts, etc., and the balance be made up by drafts upon the fund above alluded to in the Banking Commissioner's hands.

CONGRESSMEN WANT TO RETURN.

Loudenslager and Gardiner to Seek Fourth Terms.

Representatives Fowler, Gardiner, Loudenslager, Parker and Stewart are understood to be intending to seek a renomination to Congress this year. Representatives Howell and Pitney are as yes undecided. Representative McEwan, when interrogated, responded in a semi-jocular manner: "If you were my most intimate friend, and asked me that, and I replied that the last vote of the district—the Seventh—showed a Democratic majority of 1142 votes, wouldn't you say that I ought to consider before returning a definite answer?"

The Democratic districts are the Third, Fourth and the Seventh, represented by the three representatives who are undecided whether they will run again.

KLONDIKE HARDSHIPS SCARE HIM.

A. M. Franklin at the Gateway of the Region, But Will Now Turn Back.

A. M. Franklin, of Brooklyn, formerly of this city, who rode to Seattle, Wash., on his way to Klondike, is now at Seattle and has made up his mind not to enter the Klondike after all. The reports of the terrible sufferings and hardships there have deterred the strongest from continuing their way to the gold region. Franklin will remain there for a short time and then return to the east again.

COUNCIL SECRETLY TALKS ABOUT REPORT

Work of Borough Expert Accountants Was Discussed.

THE RESULT WAS NOT MADE KNOWN.

A Private Conference After the Regular Council Meeting—In Open Session Councilman Burtis Reported Progress in the Work—Resolutions and Petitions Passed and Grants—Borrowing Notes to Pay Borough Indebtedness.

The business of a public nature transacted at the March meeting of the Borough Council held last Friday was transacted in a very short time, and the balance of the evening was passed by the Council in executive session, supposedly discussing the work of the special committee which has in charge the report of the expert accountants on the borough books. The result was not made known, but a report is expected in the near future.

The financial statement of Clerk Arnold was presented as follows: Borough, balance, $3,405.44; fire department, $1,531.71; roads, $1,603.39; lights, $1,713.56; poor, deficit, $371.31; paid county and State, $4,512.63; cash balance, $3,650.16. The sum of $102.93 was also reported as having been collected from licenses and fines.

Collector Spencer reported that $1,852.51 had been collected since the last report, and the amount previously reported to be $41,999.95, making in all to date $43,852.46.

The West End Hose Company notified the Council of the election of W. W. Mills and G. Giddis to membership in the company, and they asked the Council to confirm their action. The company now numbers nineteen members.

Mr. Burtis, for the special committee having in charge the report of the expert accountants on the borough books, reported progress as regards their investigation of the report. Mr. MacLaughlin reported progress in the matter of securing new books and the new system of vouchers for the borough accounts.

At this time a number of resolutions were offered. The first three were by Mr. Woolston. One provided for the drawing of a warrant for $20 in favor of the six months note on the $1,000 certificate indebtedness due March 8th. The second resolution provided for the drawing of a warrant for $1,511.25 in favor of Collector Spencer to meet the note of $1,544.18 with interest. The third resolution provided for a loan of $1,500 chargeable to the road account. Two resolutions were offered by Mr. Burtis. The first one was for the drawing of a warrant for $1,511.25 in favor of Collector Spencer to pay the note of $1,544.18 with interest and charged to the borough account.

The other resolution was for the securing of a loan of $1,500, the same to be charged to the borough account. Mr. Rogers offered a resolution that a warrant for $1,028.94 be drawn in favor of Collector Spencer to meet a note of $1,025 with interest.

Mr. Woolston recommended the laying of a crosswalk across Madison avenue near the residence of former Mayor William L. Saunders. The same was granted. It was also one to be laid across Somerset street opposite J. P. Humble's grocery store. Regarding the latter Mr. Schuit said that he introduced a resolution two years ago for the crosswalk and nothing had ever been done with it. The Council promptly granted the request for the walk.

This concluded the regular business and the Council went into executive session.

GOT IN THE WAY OF THE TROLLEY.

Street Commissioner Conover Tried to Turn Across the Track.

An exciting accident occurred on Somerset street near Lincoln place last Friday about 9 p. m. George Conover, borough street commissioner, was returning from Westfield, and passed through Chatham street to Somerset street. When he reached the latter street a trolley car appeared, going toward the mountains. Mr. Conover was going the same way, and was driving rather fast. When near Lincoln place his horse was slightly in the lead, and Mr. Conover turned into Lincoln place ahead of the car. The consequences were that his wagon was upturned, was also one to be struck the trolley car and Mr. Conover was thrown out. One rear wheel was a complete wreck, and the buggy was otherwise damaged. Before the horse could get away someone standing near caught him.

Someone assisted Mr. Conover to his feet, thinking that he might have received injuries. He appeared to be all right and soon took charge of his rig which he left near Boyce's Hotel until he could make arrangements to take the damaged wagon home.

Getting Ready for Summer Work.

The city steam roller is now being overhauled and put into condition for work this spring. It has been found necessary to replace a few of the parts and make several slight changes in the machinery. The roller will be used on the streets as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP IN CHURCH REALM

A Notable Service Held in Trinity Reformed Church.

CONGRATULATIONS ON ALL SIDES.

Fine Remarks Made by the Pastors of All Local Evangelical Churches and Trinity's People Extolled for Their Excellent Work in the Religious Work—Collation Given by the Ladies of the New Church—Use of the Church Afterward.

The exercises in connection with the dedication of the new edifice of Trinity Reformed church were continued last Friday with a fellowship service in which the pastors and congregations of all the other churches of the city and North Plainfield were invited to participate.

Nearly every seat in the church was filled when the exercises of the evening began with a short song service, led by Horace J. Martin, chairman of the music committee of the church. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church. Dr. Schenck then made a few remarks upon the feelings of people concerning the new church. They were proud of it, he said, only in the sense that it gave them pleasure to have at their command increased facilities for the work of saving souls. He emphasized the value and importance of Christian unity among the different churches, and expressed his pleasure at having present so many of the pastors and people of sister churches.

R. E. Anthony, the superintendent of the Sunday school of Trinity church, took charge of the services after making a few introductory remarks he introduced Rev. D. J. Yeiss, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church. That veteran pastor, in offering his congratulations, mentioned the fact that he was in Plainfield long before the organization of Trinity church, and had been privileged to watch with pleasure its growth ever since the beginning. The church, he said, has always been one of the spiritual forces of this city. Ever, indeed, until the records in heaven are unrolled shall we be privileged to know all that it has accomplished. There are many organizations outside of the church which are doing good missionary and philanthropic work in the city, but above all these is the church itself, for it is the church to which our Lord has given its ordinances. The name Dutch, which used to be in the title of this church, was a good one, for it stood, as with the glorious struggle in Holland, and to that little State herself, whom England and America owe so much of their civilization, and to whom the whole world owes so much that is best in thought and life. Three things are essential to a successful church—a conscientious, unified people, a good pastor, and a good building—and Trinity church seems now to possess all the requisites of a successful future career. The prayer of the people and pastor of the First Baptist church is, and the blessing of the Holy Spirit may rest upon this church and its work.

Rev. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, was the next speaker.

"My first remembrance of this church," he said, "dates from a Sunday evening in March, fifteen years ago, before I had ever seen the inside of the church of which I am now pastor, when I attended a little temperance service here and was invited to take part. I then first came to be associated in a pleasant fellowship to form the acquaintance of your excellent pastor at that time, Dr. Raymond, and that friendship has remained a very dear one ever since.

"I think the important position which the church occupies in this city may be found in the fact that it is the church of peace among the Nations. The assaults against both, which often seemed about to succeed, but against that little heap of half subdued rebels in the home of the Dutch father and father. Each has been the position and the privilege of this church when the warring forces of the world have beaten back. It is not that any Nation should not have its own land, but if it should it would rise up against the very rock upon which the church stands, and be driven back. I believe the enlarged facilities with which we are now equipped will better equip us for the fight to uphold the truth and to the falsehood and error in the world."

Rev. John W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, was the next speaker.

"My message is from you," he said, "upon this church home, which is the home of the God of truth and of Christian fellowship. We are bound together by ties of similar hopes, and I come to you bearing greetings over the enemies of God. Therefore I feel another church rejoices tonight with you. The unity and growth of one church is a source of advantage to all others, and in the joy of one church all members of the Church militant are able to rejoice, the victory of Christ Jesus also. In your improved and beautiful surroundings you have placed in your hands a keener instrument to accomplish your work for the Master. May it assist you in realizing ideals of grace to the glory of our Master."

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First Methodist church, said, after being introduced, that he brought greetings in behalf of the sister church, which was sixty years old.

"I come to me," he continued, "that this is the Dutch have taken Plainfield, and we know that while we are their neighbors we will treat us well. When a church grows it is victorious, aggressive way, to raise for accomplishing the work of God, it is easy to just such an hour of blessed as this. But more beautiful than the church show is the work that will be done through this agency on human souls. I know that through the visible work is about you, you will not be unmindful of that ground work which has for its end the regeneration of the human heart through the agency of God's Spirit."

Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, was the next speaker.

"I congratulate Trinity Reformed church," he said, "on rising to a higher plane. It has been raised about six feet. I believe, in six months, and at that would constitute into mathematics to ascertain, that in time you will all get to heaven. But the people of Plainfield do not want you to go just yet. There is work to be done for you in this city, and more nor less than helping others to get to heaven. Some of my brethren who have preceded me tonight have congratulated you on being Dutch. I would congratulate you on the fact that you are reformed, but the reformation happened so long ago that most of you do not think about it any longer. And after all it is not reformation that you are working for, but regeneration—not an outward change in man, but an inward transformation. I congratulate you upon the passion you have for souls, and I congratulate the rest of us; he is a salutly man, a devoted man. The only danger in his case is that he will attempt tasks beyond his physical strength. I congratulate him, also, upon his congregation. No church in Plainfield is doing a better work than Trinity church is doing."

Rev. H. W. McKane, pastor of the First Church of Christ, was called upon and responded in a happy manner, saying that he was proud to be reckoned one of so goodly a company. He was not so much interested in the past of Trinity church, he said, as in its present. He was glad to know from what he had heard and what he saw, what the church, the pastor and the people were. He was glad to know that the church stands for something, namely, to promote the glory of God and to uplift mankind.

Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, was next called upon.

"Many people," he said, "take pleasure in tracing their ancestry back to Christendom. Many take pleasure in the promise which made this church beautiful. I am reminded tonight of that saying of the Psalmist. 'One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after: that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord.' It is my wish and my belief that your pastor will so hold up the Lord Jesus in daily ministrations that you will look upon Him with changed faces and behold Him in the fullness of His marvellous beauty."

Rev. Arthur E. Main, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, was the next speaker.

"Fellowship," he said, "means partnership and we rejoice with you tonight and bring our contribution of good-will, which is due to you and your pastor. I find significance and value in the name of this church. It is a partnership of Christian thought, feeling and action. It is a partnership in faith, in love, in labor and in reward. It is our privilege to labor together to establish the brotherhood of man by knowledge of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. May the beauty of this church be but the promise of a more glorious day of righteousness which shall draw by its power men, women and children into fellowship with God."

The last speaker of the evening was Rev. William C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church.

"I bring you," he said, "the congratulations and the well wishes of my people. May all happiness be grown in the years to come. May your ship ever sail over tranquil seas. May your church ever be a spiritual home. It is our success. Frances E. Willard's last words were 'How beautiful to be with God.' I say tonight, how beautiful to have God with us in this beautiful church."

A number of letters were received from pastors of Plainfield and North Plainfield churches who were unable to be present, expressing their congratulations and good will. A number of pastors arrived too late to make addresses, but took part in the reception which followed.

The singing "Blest be the tie that binds," the pastors and people adjourned to the new lecture room on the floor below, where refreshments were served by the ladies of the church. Nearly everyone present at the services early in the evening remained and enjoyed an exchange of greetings with the pastor and people of the church, and a committee from the Ladies' Christian Work Society, assisted by the members of the church and the Young People's Societies, served refreshments to all present. The committee in charge was composed of the following ladies: Mrs. H. J. Martin, Mrs. E. H. Bird, Mrs. P. M. Demarest, Mrs. F. A. Church, Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mrs. J. Krymer and Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle.

DR. VINCENT FOR YALE.

Writes That He Sent His Only Son to the University and Has Never Regretted It.

Bishop John H. Vincent has written to a friend in New Haven denouncing the New York Voice, the temperance organ which has been attacking Yale so bitterly. Bishop Vincent says in his letter, dated February 21st:

"The Voice, a New York temperance paper, publishes my picture and says under it: 'Dr. Vincent would not send a son to Yale.' I have just written to Dr. Funk, of the Voice, the following:

"'Dr. Funk: I do feel grieved at the sensational announcement in the Voice that I would not send a son to Yale. I never signed any documents relating to no license in a college town with the thought of Yale Uni versity in my mind. The only son I ever had I sent to Yale, and I have never regretted it. Please publish this statement in the Voice.

Truly yours, John H. Vincent.

"'P. S.—Please show this to President Dwight.'"

State Endeavorers Preparing.

Preparations are already under way for the New Jersey State Christian Endeavor Convention, which will be held in Asbury Park next September.

COUNSELORS IN THE SCRIPTURAL STUDY.

Baptist Sunday-school Teachers Organize For a Year.

RETIREMENT OF AN OLD OFFICER.

Charles Smith Resigns as Secretary Owing to His Poor Health, and in Recognition of His Services a Resolution was Passed Thanking Him for His Services—Rules K. Case Chosen Superintendent of the School Again.

The annual meeting of the officers and teachers of the First Baptist church Sunday school was held last Thursday in the lecture room of the church. There was an exceedingly large attendance of members and the business considered was of interest and importance.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was considered first, with the following result: Superintendent, R. K. Case; secretary, W. O. Chapman; treasurer, F. W. Jones; assistant secretary, H. B Drake; superintendent Mt. Olive Sunday-school, M. C. Dobbins; secretary and treasurer, Charles Conover. B. J. Shreve was re elected librarian of the home school.

It will be noticed that there was a change in the office of secretary, which was held by Charles Smith. Mr. Smith resigned his position last evening owing to ill health. The school will lose a valuable officer and stanch supporter. Mr. Smith held the office of secretary for twenty five years, and during that time he served faithfully and efficiently. In recognition of his services the present evening adopted a resolution in which Mr. Smith was thanked for what he has done during his term of office. A similar vote was extended to C. W. McCutchen for a handsome donation of money to the school

Treasurer F. W. Jones reported the receipts for the past year to be $2,3-9.94, and the expenditures $2,133.75, leaving a balance of $256.19. During the year $481.75 was given to foreign and home mission work, and $469.72 was given to the home department Sunday-school work, including the salary of the superintendent of the work, Miss Julia A. Shinn.

The finance committee, through the chairman, J. H. Case, reported the finances of the school to be in excellent condition. Miss Julia A. Shinn, who has charge of the home department Sunday-school work, stated that there has been an increase in the attendance at the school. There are about one hundred members of the home department work.

For the Mount Olive church Sunday-school, Charles Conover, secretary and treasurer, reported that the work was progressing steadily, notwithstanding various difficulties. The expenses of the school during the year, chiefly for supplies, amounted to $115. Superintendent M. C. Dobbins also made a few remarks of an encouraging nature.

During the evening Mrs. Ward, of Elizabeth, who is a member of the church choir, sang two very pretty selections.

Another meeting of the officers and teachers will be held the last Thursday of this month, when arrangements for the annual excursion will be made and other business will be considered which could not be taken up this meeting.

GERMANS TO HAVE A CONCERT.

Visiting Singing Societies Will Come to Add Their Voices.

The monthly meeting of the Gesang and Turn Verein was held Thursday in the hall on Somerset street. The members decided to give a concert in the hall on Saturday, April 2nd, at which time visiting singing societies will be present. It is expected that there will be a chorus of about seventy voices. The evening of March 14th the woman's section of the society will give a calico party, and the proceeds will be used to start a building fund to make necessary additions to the present structure.

Tuesday evening, March 22d, there will be a meeting of delegates from the Independent Turnerbund of the metropolitan section. The purpose of the meeting is to consider a new constitution which is now being considered by other delegates of the same society. At this meeting arrangements will be made for the quarterly meeting when the constitution will be taken up for final adoption. The meeting will probably be held at Paterson.

Before the meeting closed last evening two new members were elected. Nothing else of importance was considered.

Gift of a Silver Pitcher.

One of the observable features that greeted the eyes of the visitors to the parlor of Trinity Reformed church Thursday, when it was thrown open for inspection to those who had attended the meeting in the auditorium, was a beautiful silver water pitcher that graced the centertable. After much inquiry and conjecture, it was finally learned that the donor was J. W. Johnson, of LaGrande avenue, who intended the article to represent his goodwill towards the society.

THE PLACE WHERE MAN MEETS DEITY.

There is Always Reverence for Houses of Worship.

TRINITY'S HOME SHOWS THE POINT.

Wherever in the Wide World Stands a Structure Dedicated to a Meeting Place for Man and God is Testified to a Great Principle and Teaching Laid Down in Scripture—Trinity's Debt of Gratitude Referred to Also.

The fourth of the series of special services in connection with the dedication of the remodeled edifice of Trinity Reformed church, was well attended March 2d, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather.

The service was opened with the usual brief song service, led by Horace J. Martin, chairman of the music committee of the church. A pleasing vocal selection was sung by a trio of the Seventh-Day Baptist church choir, consisting of Miss Nancy Randolph and Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth. Rev. Arthur E. Main, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, gave a Scripture reading from I Kings II:28 53, and offered an eloquent prayer.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church, then arose and stated that he did not wish to let the opportunity pass to express how great a debt of gratitude was owing to the members of the church and its friends whose assistance had made the task of remodeling the church a success. While no expressions of thanks was made to the living, those who had passed away should not be forgotten. He wished to call special attention to the gift of $1,000, made to the church by the late Miss Gertrude Vandenburg, which was the real beginning of the work now completed. "Though gone from us," the pastor continued, "she is still with us in what we behold." Attention was called to the excellent co operation of the various organizations within the church, including the Ladies' Christian Work Society, the Christian Endeavor Society, the Young Ladies' Mission Band and the Sunday-school. All had worked with zeal and remarkable earnestness.

Mention was also made by the pastor of the excellent service of the building committee, composed of H. E. Gayle, E. E. Anthony, J. P. Laire, Robert Clark and R. A. Meeker, of the consistory, and B. L. Hegeman and J. F. McDonald, of the congregation. Special reference was made to the untiring zeal of Mr. Gayle, who gave his time and best efforts continually to the work. All these assurances of gratitude, the pastor said, he wished to convey to the friends of the church from the consistory, for whom he was speaking.

The hymn "In the Cross of Christ I Glory" was sung, and the quartette from the Seventh-Day Baptist church sang a selection while the offering was being taken. Dr. Schenck then introduced the preacher of the evening, Rev. James F. Riggs, D. D., professor of New Testament Greek in the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, who preached as a supply in the church many times, and became very popular with all who heard his sermons.

Dr. Riggs took as his text a portion of II Chronicles VI:13, "But will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth?" "The thought hinted at in these words," he said, "is one of the great thoughts of human experience, namely, that of a meeting place of God with man. Wherever two join in the earth we find a reverence for the place where, rightly or wrongly, men believe that God meets with man. For endless years men have been lifting up their hands, praying that God would meet man, and wherever there stands a church, a cathedral, a ruined temple or a mystic shrine, whether at Athens, India, or in the hot sands of Egypt, or among the ancient Druid ruins of England, and the old abbeys of Scotland, it testifies to man's belief that God does meet with man.

"The tabernacle of the Mosaic dispensation was the place where the Hebrews realized that meeting place with God. There is a distinction to be made between the residence of the Diety and the approach of man. For example, the Greeks believed that the goddess Minerva lived in the Parthenon. It was not a place for audience at all, but a residence for the goddess. And so all the heathen deties were supposed to shut themselves up in marble cells in solitary grandeur and haughty isolation from man. Modern churches are built on a different idea. In them the thought of the approach of man to God is present. They are furnished and made comfortable as places for human occupation.

"The text, it will be noticed, discriminates nicely between these two thoughts. The holy place in the temple of the Hebrews represented the place where man came to get near to God; the most holy place was the dwelling place of God where he came to meet men, and the two were divided by a veil. This veil is a symbol for the flesh, and Christ is the link connecting divinity with humanity. The Jewish high priest, with the name of Jehova written upon his mitre stands forth as a strangely typical figure illustrating the same thought. He stood before man as the representative of man.

"But there is another and a deeper idea contained in the text to which this previous thought is a stepping stone. Will God dwell with men? When men dwell together they affect each other, and so, if God dwell with men, his influence will be seen. Here is the answer to our text. Not in the sacred place, nor in the sacred word, but in the sacred person of Christ are we shown God dwelling with men. He was wholly man, and he was also very God of very God.

"As in an orchestra all the various tones blend in one grand harmony, so in the human life there should be a harmonious blending of the intellectual, the animal, the emotional and the spiritual. This will be true of the perfect church also, for here we the individual members may differ, they will be so unified by the power of God's spirit that they will work together and their desires and aspirations will blend into a beautiful harmony. In this grand chorus there will be the music of immortality. So let us ask in our own souls, Does God dwell with me? We must see to it that the question asked in the text is realized and made actual in ourselves."

BRAVE ACT OF AN UNKNOWN.

SAVED A NEWSBOY FROM INJURY.

The Little Fellow Fell in Front of a Plunging Horse, but the Stranger Acted Quickly and Effectually.

As the weary commuter wends his way homeward in time for dinner, the streets of Plainfield are alive with small newsboys. There is none of them livelier than a twelve-year-old lad named Edmunson. He lives on West Third street.

Last Friday Edmunson was lustily calling out The Press and the Journal. He attempted to cross Park avenue at the intersection of Second street. The street was filled with teams and vehicles, but the little newsboy started to dodge past them. He jumped in front of one, then behind another. Then he started to pass directly in the way of a horse attached to one of the wagons from Giles' dairy on Watchung avenue. The horse struck the lad and he fell headlong into he mud, directly in the path of the plunging animal.

A tragedy seemed sure when a man, he was a stranger to those who witnessed the act, sprang out. He grabbed the lad by the collar, landed him on the sidewalk and then disappeared before the astonished youngster had time to collect his thoughts and thank his preserver.

JUSTICES ATTACK A NEW LAW.

The Legislature Forces a Move to Abolish Their Offices.

A writ of certiorari has been filed to test the constitutionality of the act under which Robert H. Ingersoll has been appointed District Court Judge of Atlantic City. This act was one of the first passed by the present Legislature and signed by Governor Voorhees. It affects cities under the second class, and for that reason is alleged to be special. The contest, while it is made in the name of a resident of Atlantic City, is said to have been prompted by justices of the peace throughout the State, who see in the act the first step in a general move to entirely strip them of power.

Child's Body Found in a Field.

The dead body of a two-weeks-old infant was found under a heap of brush in a field near the silk mill Thursday at Stirling, by a man who was repairing a break in the water reservoir. The body had evidently been concealed in the brush for several weeks. An investigation is being made to ascertain whether the child was deserted and left to die in the field, or was placed there after its death.

Doing Well in the Klondike.

A letter recently received from Robert Wyckoff, who is now in the Klondike region, states that he is doing well and that his health was never better. He also says that the prospects are good for some rich findings.

Lost flesh lately?
Does your brain tire?
Losing control over your nerves?

Are your muscles becoming exhausted?

You certainly know the remedy. It is nothing new, just the same remedy that has been curing these cases of thinness and paleness for twenty-five years. Scott's Emulsion. The cod-liver oil in it is the food that makes the flesh, and the hypophosphites give tone to the nerves.

EAST END BAPTISTS HAVE A NEW HOME.

Third Street Mission Edifice Nearly Ready for Occupancy.

UP-TO-DATE AND PRETTY IN DESIGN.

Land on Which the Chapel is Located was Donated by Charles W. McCutchen—Occupies a Prominent Position on the Street—L. W. Randolph One of the Principal Promoters—Description of the Interior of the Chapel.

About seven years ago the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church were looking about for some way to make themselves useful in the cause of missions. They had done more or less for foreign work and now it had been suggested to them that there was work to be done at home. As a result the members established what is known as the East Third Street mission.

The first meeting was held in a tent located in a vacant lot on East Third street which is now owned by the mission. The first meeting was in every way a success and even more so than those expected. Meetings were held during the summer, and when the weather was so cold that outdoor meetings could not be held, arrangements were made to rent a house on the same street. This house was owned by a family named Marsh and was especially adapted for the services to be held. As time passed on it became apparent to the minds of many workers that the place was too small, and that other quarters should be sought.

The superintendent of the mission, L. W. Randolph was fully alive to the needs, and he at once started a scheme to secure for the worshippers more commodious quarters. In a short time a strip of land was purchased on East Third street, adjoining Mr. Weber's butcher shop. The land was purchased by Charles W. McCutchen and was to be given to the East Third Street Baptist Society with the understanding that the members were to raise a sufficient amount of money to erect thereon a chapel. This offer was gladly received and the members of the society went to work with a will. Another condition was that the work was not to be started until the money for the chapel should have been collected. This looked rather discouraging at first, but it was considered best, for then there would be no debt on the building.

During winter the money was secured and the work of erecting the building was started. Today the structure has almost reached a stage of completion and by the first part of April the members hope to take possession.

It occupies a prominent position on Third street and is really an ornament to that section of the city. The foundations are of stone, while the upper parts are of brick and wood The height of the roof, which is very steeping and graceful in its alignment, adds greatly to the imposing structure. On the left as one approaches the chapel there is a driveway and an alcove, as well as the main entrance to the building.

On entering the structure one is surprised to see how conveniently everything is arranged. There is one large meeting room that will accommodate several hundred people. This room is arranged so that one portion of it can be shut off from the rest, and used for class rooms. There is also a gallery of good proportion. While the room is not deep it is extra wide and this is considered to be an advantage.

The building is to be lighted by electricity and gas, and a neat chandelier will be suspended from the ceiling in the centre. A large furnace located in the cellar will supply the heat for the rooms. When the furniture, piano, etc., are neatly arranged in the chapel it will, indeed, present a bright and cheerful appearance. The chapel is well lighted throughout with necessary windows.

The chapel is designed to meet the growing needs of the work and in this, those in charge have made no mistake. The work that has been carried on by the workers has been very gratifying to the officers and members of the First Baptist church, who have contributed largely to the work of putting up a chapel. When the chapel is dedicated a programme of great interest will be presented. It is expected that several prominent speakers will take part in the exercises.

Conduits for Telephone Wires.

It will now only be a matter of a few weeks before the work of laying the underground conduits for the telephone wires will be begun. The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, whose wires are to go underground, is now having plans for the work prepared and they are rapidly nearing completion. It will then only be a question of suitable weather before the streets will be torn up to allow the conduits to be placed under the roadbed.

Residential Purchase.

L. C. Batson, of West Front street, has sold his house on that thoroughfare to James Trimmer, of Califon, who will take up his home in this city.

RESULTS OF ELECTION.

was very little to excite interest. The ticket nominated by the Republicans and Democrats was elected as follows: Town committeeman, T. H. Taylor; commissioners of appeal, P. H. Ackor, A. P. Voorhies, Goldstein Smalley; surveyors of highways, E. S. Ackor, George Steward; pound-keepers, John Gunn. J. R. Doty. In the contest for the office of constable, H. F. Ackor, R., and C. Rolf, D., each received 29 votes, and another election will be necessary. The Republican appropriation of $1,000 for roads was defeated, and the amount of $1,500 named by the Democrats was carried. The salary of Town Committeemen was made $25 as usual. The appropriation of $300 for support of poor was carried.

RESULTS IN UNION COUNTY.

Indications Are That J. Martin Roll is Elected Freeholder.

The contests in the other townships of Union county were very close. The vote was the largest that has been polled except at a State or National election. The returns are slow in coming in, but they indicate a slight Democratic gain in the Board of Freeholders.

George W. Littell, Republican, has been beaten in Cranford by Emmor K. Adams, Independent Republican, nominated on a citizens' ticket, and indorsed by the Democrats. Adams and all the rest of the candidates on the citizens' ticket were elected by over 900 majority.

James A. Burnet, Democrat in Union township, is re-elected Free holder by about 60 majority. The Democratic candidates for the other township offices were elected by about the same majorities.

The indications are that Freeholder J. Martin Roll, Republican, the trolley king, is re-elected in Springfield by a much reduced majority, and that Freeholder Swain, Democrat, has been successful in Summit.

The latest returns from Linden indicate the defeat of Harry McCandless, the Republican candidate for Freeholder, by Francis T. Higgins, Democrat, by 28 majority. The entire Democratic ticket was very probably elected.

The contest in Clark township was very close. It resulted in the election of Mayor Benjamin King, Republican, for freeholder over M. H. Ackeer, Democrat, by a majority of 4. The remainder of the Republican ticket was elected by a majority varying from 4 to 6

MAYOR KYTE NOW.

He Received Nearly All the Votes Cast in Fanwood Borough.

In Fanwood borough the Citizens' ticket headed by George Kyte, for Mayor, went through with large majorities. The total number of ballots cast was 71, and the majority of John Robinson, Republican candidate for freeholder, over Charles French, Democrat, was 38.

For the office of mayor, former Sheriff George Kyte had practically no opposition, receiving 62 out of 71 votes. Alfred MacKowan and John P. Stevens were elected councilmen for three years. Col Chas. K Moore, Republican, was defeated for justice of the peace by John L. Jones, Citizens' candidate by a plurality of 17. Anthony Farley, another Citizens' candidate, was elected commissioner of appeal, and appropriations of $2,000 were voted for borough expenses.

NO FIGHT IN WARREN.

Republicans and Democrats United on Candidates.

The following candidates were unanimously elected in Warren township: For justice of the peace, Chas. E. Austin; for township committee, Henry P. Williams, for constable, John Miller, for commissioner of appeals, William F. Redman, all for three years; for surveyor of highways, William Miller; for poundkeepers, Antone Ammon, Jacob Koechlein and John Burnett.

WOMAN'S PART.

Elston M. French's Popularity With the Ladies an Element of His Success.

There are those men in the borough who account for Elston M. French's victory for the Assessorship by linking his success at the polls with his popularity with the fair sex of the community. Though without their votes, Mr. French concededly had the voice of every woman whom he knows in the borough with him in his canvass for votes, and however much the husbands may declare that they voted for the young man out of the goodness of their own heart, it is not at all improbable that they were prompted by the admonition of their wives or sweethearts.

MAYOR WILSON JUBILANT.

He is Highly Gratified Over the Result of Election.

Mayor Wilson is beaming all over with smiles this morning as a result of the election in the borough Tuesday.

He expressed himself as highly gratified and pleased, especially with the choice of Messrs. Rogers and Valiant for the Council. The Mayor said that with such gentlemen in the Council the taxpayers could be assured of careful administration of public affairs.

Maggie Benford in Court Again.

Paradise alley has again come into prominence. Mrs. Maggie Benford, grey-haired and decrepid, is again implicated. James Brown, a very Americanized son of Italy, claims to be the victim of her wrath. He says that she has been using all sorts of improper language to him, calling him bad names and generally disturbing the neighborhood with her foul tongue. But for her and her family, he says, Paradise alley would never have attained the unenviable reputation it has secured.

Death of C. H. Winfield.

Charles Schermerhorn, manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, in this city, is in receipt of a telegram stating that Hon. C. H. Winfield, of Jersey City, died at his home in Greenville, Wednesday. Mr. Winfield was formerly Prosecutor of Hudson county and a well-known man throughout the State. He is related to Mr. Schermerhorn.

Councilman T. J. Carey, of Prospect place, has closed his house and placed his furniture in storage. He is now boarding on Grove street and taking his meals at McVey's hotel.

PASSING COMMENT.

At the square which stands at the intersection of LaGrande and Putnam avenues and Franklin place there is a group of electric lights that sadly need attention. They were meant to be a cluster of four sixteen candle-power lamps inside of a large globe. The vicissitudes of life have ended the career of two of the lamps and the other two burn very dimly. At night the square is hardly lighted, instead of being brightly illuminated, unless the moon comes to the assistance of the electric lights.

The weather of Sunday was so decidedly springlike that there were many wheelmen and wheelwomen who availed themselves of the privilege of a spin on the country roads. The roads were in fairly good condition except for sundry small sections of mud. Plainfield sent its quota of wheelmen out and there were a number of others who passed through the city during the day. The owners of fast horses found the day a good one for their kind of pleasure and there were numerous fast steppers to be seen all along the country roads. Aside from the county roads the rest of the thoroughfares were nigh impassable for the mud.

Editor Morse, of the Westfield Leader, is original and up-to-date in his methods of maintaining a live religious interest in the Disciples mission at Garwood, which he conducts. Taking the current war talk for a basis, he printed the following card and distributed it among his friends:

WAR HAS BEEN DECLARED AGAINST Satan.
Christ warns you against the enemy.
Will you enlist?
Will you have Jesus for your Captain?

The Cranford Chronicle editor says that the slips were signed in enthusiasm and numbers.

Wheelmen of this city, and especially members of the Young Men's Christian Association, will be interested to hear of a wheeling trip with educational features which is being arranged by Secretary Lewis, of the Prospect Park Branch, of Brooklyn. Mr. Lewis received so many favorable comments upon a similar trip taken by a number of association men under his direction last summer that he has decided upon a trip next summer through the Shenandoah Valley. The length of time required for the trip will be two weeks. The route will include visits to Valley Forge, Gettysburg, Antietam, Harper's Ferry, the Luray Cavern and other points of interest. The indications are that the party will be a large one this year, as the plan combines pleasure with education in a very acceptable manner.

From time to time many budding poetical geniuses offer their wares gratis to The Press, and sometimes they escape the waste basket and blossom forth in type to startle the poet's friends who usually are ignorant of his or her ability to successfully rhyme words and soft sentiments. The following poem has been hanging on the coat tails of the editor for some time, and so here it is:

TO LINCOLN.

Hail thou! O Lincoln grand,
Thou saver of the States.
Thy name shall ever stand
Unchanged by time or fates.
Thou didst for freedom rise
To set the negroes free.
Praise for thee shall reach the skies
Thou lover of blest liberty.
They looked to thee for freedom.
Thine ear did hear their cry.
Thy hand stretched forth to save them.
Emancipation thy reply!
Once more then we must hail thee
Hail thou! O Lincoln just.
In sacred memory thy name shall be
Tho' thy body's turned to dust.
Thy name can never perish
In the country of the free.
Thy acts we all shall cherish
Till time no more shall be.
By an impious hand did death
Seek thee for his own.
But he did not take away the memory
Of the saver of our flag and home.

—H. L. Martin.

Incidentally it might be stated that Mr. Martin is a shoemaker. Also that he is musing now over a memorial poem to the memory o the Maine victims.

A BAKER'S HARD LUCK.

Rudolph Kersting Sadly Broken Up Over His Business Failure.

After a hard struggle to keep his business going, Rudolph Kersting has been compelled to close up his bakery on West Front street. Yesterday City Judge DeMeza, as attorney for Kersting's old partner, Hermann Klinsman, who held a mortgage for $300, closed up the place. There were also several other attachments.

Kersting was greatly excited over his troubles and it was feared might take desperate measures. His wife was in terror for fear that he might attempt to end his own life. Judge DeMeza and Constable Rockafellow stopped him as he attempted to leave the store. After a search the constable found a loaded revolver on his person.

The property at the bakery will be sold Monday at auction to satisfy the mortgage.

GOOD STORY OF NAPOLEON.

He Liberated a Scotchman at Oberkampf's Request.

Napoleon had at one time many admirers in England, especially among the commercial classes, who suffered deeply from the war, but he alienated the sympathies of all such by his cruel arrest of the English who were in France at the time of the rupture of the peace of Amiens, in 1803.

Yet, in individual cases, Napoleon showed some magnanimity. A young Scotchman, one Robert Hendry, from Glasgow, a scientific dyer and chemist, had taken advantage of the peace to visit the great manufacturing houses of France, and he was staying at Jony, where Oberkampf had established a huge cotton printing factory, when war suddenly broke out. Hendry was thereupon constituted a prisoner by the authorities, but allowed to remain on parole at Jony.

Napoleon one day visited the factory unexpectedly, accompanied by Josephine; he made a rapid progress through the works; villagers and work people, the latter numbering 1,400, assembled to witness his departure, cheering the cortege, and cheering still louder when the Emperor was seen to take the cross from his own breast and affix it to that of the modest Oberkampf. Isabey painted the scene, and the picture is still to be found upon the walls of Versailles. But Oberkampf had still something to ask. Napoleon smiled propitiously, but made a wry face when he heard the petition, which was for the release of the prisoner. "An Englishman?" "No, sir, a Scotchman. His mother, his sisters, depend on his labors." "Well, he shall be free, then," said the Emperor.—Household World.

MAN WHO DISCOVERED VAN WYCK.

New York's Mayor Responsible to Johnny Carroll for His Place.

Mayor Van Wyck, before his nomination by Tammany last Fall, was practically unknown even in New York. He was a member of the Wigwam, but of no more importance than hundreds of other braves who follow Big Chief Croker. John F. Carroll, an east side politician, and an intimate friend of Mr. Croker, suggested to the latter that Van Wyck's name when the councils were casting about for candidates for Mayor of Greater New York. Carroll saw his man triumphantly elected, and during the reign of Tammany, will, in consequence, be the biggest man in Metropolitan politics. Carroll has been an office holder from away back.

HE WAS TAUGHT SELF-RELIANCE.

A Good Story of Henry Ward Beecher's School Days.

Henry Ward Beecher used to tell thi story of the way in which his teacher of mathematics taught him to depend upon himself.

"I was sent to the blackboard, and went, uncertain, full of whimpering.

"'That lesson must be learned,' said my teacher, in a very quiet tone, but with a terrible intensity. All explanations and excuses he trod under foot with utter scornfulness. 'I want that problem; I don't want any reasons why you haven't it,' he would say.

"'I did study two hours.'

"'That's nothing to me; I want the lesson. You need not study it at all, or you may study it ten hours, just to suit yourself. I want the lesson.'

It was tough for a green boy; but it seasoned me. In less than a month I had the most intense sense of intellectual independence and courage to defend my recitations.

"One day his cold, calm voice fell upon me in the midst of a demonstration. 'No?'

"I hesitated and then went back to the beginning, and on reaching the same point again 'No?' uttered in a tone of conviction, barred my progress.

"'The next!' and I sat down in red confusion.

"He, too, was stopped with 'No?' but went right on, finished, and, as he sat down, was rewarded with 'Very well'

"'Why,' whimpered I, 'I recited it just as he did, and you said 'No?'

"'Why didn't you say 'Yes,' and stick to it? It is not enough to know your lesson; you must know that you know it. You have learned nothing till you are sure. If all the world says 'No?' your business is to say 'Yes,' and prove it.'"—Good Stories.

During the Revolution a little American privateer once stole up on an English line-of-battle ship in a defense fog, mistaking her for an East India merchant, and ordered her to strike. When the seventy-four ran out her guns and threatened to blow her puny assailant out of the water, the Yankee skipper stepped to the gangway, and taking off his hat, said politely: "Oh, very well, sir, if you won't surrender I will."—Argonaut.

Another letter from Mrs. Cummings, the wife of the prominent insurance agent of Main Street, Syracuse, N. Y. She has improved so much by taking Capsuloids since she last wrote us that she has of her own accord sent the following communication:

THE CAPSULOID COMPANY, New York.

GENTLEMEN:—Since I last wrote you I have steadily improved in health, owing to your Capsuloids. The only drawback was due to a fall I got down stairs, but I rapidly recovered from that and feel that I am almost entirely cured, though I have been taking your Capsuloids only two months and my ailments were of several years. The Capsuloids have cured my indigestion completely; my stomach, which was so sore that I was afraid to eat anything, will now digest anything I eat; my strength and color have increased. I still feel for flushes at times, but I am improving so rapidly in every way, terrible case of dyspepsia and indigestion as mine could be cured so quickly. It is all due to Capsuloids.

THEATRICAL.

Sidney R. Ellis' very successful attraction, "Darkest Russia," will be presented at Seaman Music Hall Friday night. It has a strong plot, full of dramatic situations, and although having largely for its theme the unenviable lives of Russia, it is in no way sensational. It does not bore the audience with scenes that are unreal. On the contrary every act known to the stage has been utilized to make the effect as natural and picturesque as possible. In dealing with the secret service of nobility, Nihilists and exiles, the author, H. Grattan Donnelly, has shown great skill, and the play pictures Russia as it is today in a true and faithful manner. The company that will interpret the different characters in the play is a strong one, and Manager Ellis' promise guarantee is given that it will be a first-class performance. Best reserved seats on lower floor, 50 cents.

Manager Max Edwards announces with much satisfaction that he has effected an engagement with Augustin Daly for the appearance of his famous company in the greatest success seen in this country for years, "Omar the Tentmaker," which will have its first presentation at Stillman Music Hall Wednesday night of next week. This is the original production that has been holding sway in New York at Daly's Theatre and throughout the country. It is complete and perfect in every detail. The music is delightful, the costuming exquisite and elegant, the whole production one of sumptuous beauty. The original beauties will appear—Miss Virginia Bacic, Miss Nancy McIntosh, Miss Ethel Hornick, Miss Helena Nelson, James T. Powers, Cyril Scott, Augustus Cook and Julius Steger.

PRETTY SCHOOL MARM WILL BE RETAINED

Hot School Election Held Up in Warrenville.

POLITICIANS FAVORED YOUNG MAN.

Pastor Opdyke and Miss Cherubman Rallied Around the Standard of Miss O'Connor, Who Comes from Round Brook, and Trustees Favoring Her Employment There Elected Over Those Pledged to Fred Sage, a Home Boy.

The issue of home trade in regard to the selection of school teachers made the school election in Warren township, Tuesday afternoon, a very exciting one. In such large numbers did the voters turn out that they had to adjourn to the school yard, out in the cold, where the meeting was held.

For nearly five years, Miss Mary O'Connor, a comely young woman from Round Brook, directed the youthful mind of the small boys and girls in School District No. 1, which includes Warrenville, in the way they should go. She was a favorite with the children and their parents as well. Now Fred Sage was a boy from old Warren. He has considerable ability and was quite popular with the people of the township. He wanted to teach school and preferred to do so at home. He had friends among the school trustees and they wanted Sage to have the position he coveted. That was where the trouble began.

Now the trustees had nothing against Miss O'Connor, except that she interfered with their project of putting young Sage in as a teacher. So they decided to make a change. The pupils and their parents protested but it did no good and last fall Miss O'Connor was dropped and Sage installed as teacher.

There are nine school trustees in all, the terms of three of whom expire this winter. Two others resigned. Phillip Voorhees moved out of the township and Edward Cooper resigned on account of the general dissatisfaction over the change in teachers. That left five trustees, a majority of the board, to be elected at the meeting Tuesday.

The faction that favored the reinstatement of Miss O'Connor, was led by Rev. Dr. George Opdyke, pastor of the Mt. Horeb M. E. church. John C. Cooper, the great Republican leader of the township, was the chief of the supporters of young Sage. Pastor Opdyke rallied his good people about him while the G. O. P. workers gathered about their leader. The contest waxed hotter and hotter as the day approached and both sides worked hard among the farmers of the district. Everybody took one side or the other and the community was fairly evenly divided.

The meeting was to have been held at the Warrenville schoolhouse, but the crowd was so large that they adjourned to the yard under the trees. The attendance of voters at the meeting was the largest on record, 193 being present.

The first skirmish came in the selection of the chairman. The superior tactics of Cooper's faction won for them the election of George Terrill as chairman. The secretaryship was given to Rev. Dr. Opdyke.

Ten candidates were nominated. Each faction had its complete ticket and made a bitter fight for it. After two hours of excitement, the polls were finally closed and the votes counted. The adherents of Miss O'Connor finally elected their ticket by a small but comfortable majority. The men elected were John Gunton, Frank Alletee, Rev. Dr. George Opdyke, Adam Betzel and Andrew Fleming. There was considerable excitement over an item in the account of the old board of trustees. It was for $50 paid to Miss O'Connor, for a month over which there was some dispute. The friends of the young woman had already raised $45 by subscription to be paid her and they were anxious to know whether she received the subscription and her salary also. The old board refused to explain.

ENTERING INTO MANHOOD.

Birthday Party Given in Honor of A. Windham's Last Year in His Teens.

A birthday party was given to Augustus Windham, Jr., of Fairview avenue, last Tuesday evening in honor of the celebration of his nineteenth birthday. The evening was passed in a very sociable manner and dancing was the feature. There were about twenty-five persons present, and all wished the host many happy returns of the day. Mr. Windham received a number of very useful and handsome presents from his relatives and friends.

AWAY FROM CHURCH FLOCK.

WHERE IS PASTOR P. S. GIBSON?

Some Say He Went to Attend a Conference, Which is Ended, and Others Say to Hold Revival Meetings.

Where is Rev. Philip S. Gibson?

This is the question which is puzzling the officers and members of the new Calvary Colored Baptist church, of which Mr. Gibson is the pastor.

When the Calvary Colored Baptist church was organized some time ago it was thought that Pastor Gibson had steered his bark into smooth waters, but troubles have continued to pursue him. For two weeks past his young daughter has been dangerously ill with scarlet fever, and the health authorities have quarantined the house. The pastor has been obliged to remain away from the house or give up his pastoral work.

Last Friday a few of the officers of the Calvary church were informed by Mr. Gibson that he intended going to Newark to attend the Baptist Ministers' Conference, and might not be home until Monday. He provided a preacher to fill his pulpit Sunday, and nothing was thought of his absence for a few days.

When the time passed on, however, and the pastor was not heard from, there were whispers among the church members concerning his whereabouts. The Ministers' Conference did not continue after Sunday.

Some of the officers say that he has gone to take charge of a protracted meeting, but were unable to tell where the meeting is being held.

One of the anxious ones at present is Spencer Conway, president of the Ash Carters' Union, who is Gibson's bondsman. He clings steadfastly to the theory that the absent pastor is conducting a protracted meeting. He does not know the pastor's whereabouts.

AN UP-TO-DATE DRUG STORE.

Improvements to Be Made by Druggist Rowley on Front Street.

Frank Rowley, the popular druggist, is making arrangements to have one of the best drug stores in the city and thoroughly up-to date. His store adjoining Music Hall will be fitted with entire new fixtures and a handsome soda water fountain. He will make a specialty of soda water and also his own preparations, which have a well-earned reputation.

One of the best features of the change will be a large and convenient entrance from the Music Hall lobby into Mr. Rowley's drug store. This will be handy for Music Hall patrons, who will often desire to patronize the soda fountain between the acts. Mr. Stillman, the owner of the store, has consented to make this improvement for Mr. Rowley.

Exempts Nominated Officers.

The Exempt Firemen's Association held a regular meeting last evening and nominated officers for the election to be held at the first meeting in April. The members discussed the idea of giving an entertainment at an early date. The date and character will be determined a little later. Other business transacted was of a routine nature. The entertainment will be held in Washington Hall, and the proceeds will be for the benefit of the disabled members of the association. The committee in charge consists of the board of trustees and Chief Engineer T. O. Doane.

Crushed Foot Paid His Fare.

While stealing a ride on a coal train yesterday afternoon George Beinton, aged 15 years, of Wilmington, Del., had his left foot crushed between the bumpers. The accident happened near Bound Brook, and the young man was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital, where he is now confined under treatment. The injury is not a serious one, and Beinton will not lose his foot.

Valuable Equine to be Executed.

A valuable road mare, belonging to City Judge George W. DeMeza, of West Second street, broke her ankle a week ago. Her foot became fast in the manger. Every effort has been made to save the horse, which has been the property of the Judge for the last seven years, but with no avail and it will be necessary to end the life of the equine.

Recorder Long's First Case.

Recorder Long, of the borough, had his first case this morning. Marshal Wilson arrested John Daley for leaving his horse untied, and the offender of the law was arraigned before the Recorder. For the offense Daley was fined $2, which sum was paid.

Made a Notary Public.

V. W. Nash, Jr., of the law offices of Murphy & Blats, went to Elizabeth yesterday, where he was sworn in as a notary public by the county clerk.

Mrs. Mary Henderson, of Prescott place, will entertain a number of her dusky friends at her home with a dance this evening.

TO MEET AT DEATH TRAP.

LEHIGH OFFICIALS AND FREEHOLDERS WILL CONFER TOMORROW.

Danger to Life and Limb Lurks at the Park Avenue Crossing and It is the Intention to Provide for Safety.

New Brunswick, March 17th.—The county officials and representatives of the Lehigh Valley Railroad have at last taken steps toward doing away with one of the most dangerous grade crossings in Middlesex county. The crossing in question is located near Oak Tree station on the main line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad where Park avenue, running from Plainfield to Metuchen, crosses the tracks.

The crossing is one of the most dangerous in this section of the State, partially on account of the arrangement of the crossing itself and partially for reason of the great amount of traffic on that thoroughfare daily. The crossing is on a curve and the woods and underbrush grow close to the track on three sides so that it is impossible to see if a train is approaching until the vehicle or cyclist is on the track. There is a sharp hill on Park avenue, just north of the crossing, down which wheelmen are greatly tempted to coast without knowing of the dangerous proximity of the railroad.

All these dangerous features of the crossing have been brought to the attention of the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex county, and a committee has been appointed from that body to confer with the officials of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company looking toward some remedy. Tomorrow afternoon the committee from the Board of Freeholders will hold a conference with the Lehigh Valley officials at Oak Tree, and personally investigate the matter. The committee will make suggestions which, it is hoped, the railroad men will decide to adopt.

SAINT PATRICK'S DAY CONCERT.

Emerald Isle Ballads to Be Sung at the Casino Tonight.

Plainfield has had many concerts, but never one devoted solely to ballads, especially to the melodies of Ireland.

The concert to be given at the Casino this evening is gotten up solely to give pleasure to the audience, and it ought to be well patronized. The singers will undoubtedly do their parts well and the programme is most attractive. It is as follows:

Duet—"Lily of Killarney."
Mr. Miles

"By Killarney's Lakes and Fells"..Miss Miller
"I'm Sitting on the Stile, Mary"..Dr. Jackson
"There is Not in This Wide World a Valley so Sweet".....Madame Rio
"The Minstrel Boy to the War Has Gone."
Mr. Miles
"Kathleen Mavourneen".....Miss Miller
"Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms".....Dr. Jackson
"Angels' Whisper".....Madame Rio
"Harp O'More".....Mr. Miles
Quartette—"Erin, the Tear and the Smile in Thine Eyes." and "'Tis the Last Rose of Summer."

The words of the songs will be printed on the programme. Tickets may be obtained at Armstrong's pharmacy or at the Casino. Admission is 50 cents.

TOWNSHIP OFFICIALS ORGANIZED

LEGISLATIVE TILT OVER BERGEN PLAN.

Victory Won by Opponents of the Measure.

A LIMITED FRANCHISE CLAUSE.

Underjthe Amendment the Authorities Cannot Sell a Franchise for Longer Than Twenty-five Years—Assemblyman Murray Heard in the Discussion—Bill Will be Taken Up Today Again—The General Game Law Considered in Senate

Trenton, March 17.—There was a pretty parliamentary battle in the House yesterday afternoon, lasting nearly two hours and carrying the session over to nearly 7 o'clock. The battle was over the Squire trolley bill, for which one portion of the population of Union county is clamoring, and which is opposed by another portion. The victory was won by the opponents of the measure.

When the bill came up on second reading Mr. Marnell submitted an amendment prohibiting the authorities from granting a franchise for longer than twenty-five years.

Mr. Squire opposed this, and said that no company would accept such a restricted franchise.

Mr. Murray said that while he was not in favor of granting unlimited franchises, yet he thought the municipal boards could be trusted to protect the rights of the people.

Messrs. Porter and Gledhill opposed the amendment, saying it was submitted for the purpose of killing the bill.

The amendment was adopted by a vote of 63 to 22 and a motion to reconsider was tabled on Mr. Gledhill's motion.

It was thought that this carried the entire bill over under the rules, but it did not. The bill was again taken up and a new amendment offered, to oblige the company receiving the franchise to pay a percentage of the gross receipts of the company to the municipality through which the tracks ran.

Mr. Porter promptly moved to lay the new amendment on the table. Mr. Allen seconded the motion, and it was carried. This carried with it the entire bill, which, with the amendment, will be taken up today.

When the committee's substitute for Senate bill No. 61, the general game bill, came up on its second reading in the Senate, Senator Stokes offered an amendment to the section permitting farmers to trap out of season rabbits found to be damaging trees or crops, requiring such farmers to secure a license from the Game Warden. The amendment was opposed by Senators Reed, Francis and Engle, and was finally lost.

Mr. Stokes offered amendments fixing the seasons for gray snipe from March 15th to May 1st, and from August 15th to January 1st, and for dove or upland plover the months of August and September. They were agreed to.

Senator W. M. Johnson offered a further amendment fixing the season for woodcock, squirrel and partridge from October 15th to December 15th, and for rabbits and quail from November 10th to January 1st. Senator Stokes spoke against the amendment, on the ground that it would practically kill the measure. The amendment was not agreed to, and the bill was ordered to be re-engrossed and placed on third reading.

BURGLARS IN BOARDING HOUSE.

After Ransacking the House They Raided The Wine Cellar.

During the winter months Alexis Vanette runs a business college in New York. During the summer he conducts a private boarding house near Mt. Bethel for the benefit of his pupils and others. During the winter the place is closed. Sunday night some unknown miscreants broke into the house and ransacked it from garret to cellar. They helped themselves to what they wanted, but the exact amount stolen will not be known until Mr. Vanette returns.

In the basement was a well-equipped wine cellar. This the burglars raided and selected the most valuable of the stock. They gained an entrance through a window, which they broke open.

Tomorrow evening at the home of Charles L. Lewis, 123 East Sixth street, Miss S. A. Palmer will give an analysis of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which will be given next Saturday afternoon at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, by Theo. Thomas' orchestra. A cordial invitation is extended to all lovers of music to attend. Each person attending will be given a sketch of themes, etc., which will be of advantage to those who expect to hear the rendition in New York.

EARNEST WORKERS TRUE

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOYS' MISSION BAND.

A Tidy Sum of Money Sent to the Mission Field—Reports of Past Year's Work and the Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the "Earnest Workers," the Boys' Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue church, was held in the church parlors yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. President Edward Jones was in the chair. The annual report was read by the secretary, Geo. Richards, showing that monthly meetings had been regularly held and that interest in the band is increasing. The report of the treasurer, Brockholst Miller, showed that $60 was sent to the mission field during the year just brought to a close. An interesting address was delivered by Miss Florence Smith, a missionary home on a furlough from Barranquilla, Colombia. At the close of her remarks the report of the nominating committee was called for and responded to by Richard Lovell, who presented the following ticket: President, Geo. Richards; vice-president, Edward Jones; secretary, Ames Brooks; treasurer, Whitney Baker. These were unanimously elected. At the close of the meeting all were invited to remain and partake of tea, which was poured at a prettily dressed table in an adjoining room by Mrs. Richards and Mrs. Chas. Corwin, and was served by the members of the band.

DOCTRINE OF HEREDITY.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson's Fifth Lecture to Discuss That Question

The fifth free lecture in the course on evolution at All Soul's church, by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, will be given tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. The subject of the lecture is "Natural Selection and Crime." It deals with the doctrine of heredity, that awful fact, so helpful on the lower ranges of life, so apt to fill us with shuddering as we view it on the human plane. The question whether crime is increasing is then considered. About this matter the authorities seem much at variance. Prisons and reformatories are spoken of at some length, as the question of how it is best to treat the criminal for his own and the State's good is increasingly interesting to all philanthropists. The sort of sympathy due to prisoners from Christian people is then indicated and the lecture concludes with a consideration of the aid to discharged convicts which is most feasible and desirable.

GOT THE WRONG PAMPHLET.

Trinity Church Attendants Given Old Dedicatory Programmes by Mistake.

Last evening, in the Trinity Reformed church, after the very able address by Rev. W. W. Clark, of New York, on "Christian Assurance," it was intended that each person present should receive as they passed out a pamphlet touching on the subject of home missions. By a mistake, each person was supplied with one of the programmes of the church dedication which occurred February 27th. The pastor and officers of the church felt very humiliated over the affair and take this opportunity to inform those who received the programmes instead of the pamphlets intended.

CAPTAIN OF THE VETS.

George Bedford Chosen to Fill H. S. Thatcher's Office.

At the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, held Tuesday evening last, George Bedford was elected to fill the position of captain, owing to the resignation of H. S. Thatcher, who resigned when he moved to Chicago. Mr. Bedford's position as first lieutenant was filled by the election of Ray McVoy. Sergeant Clarkson was elected second lieutenant. H. C. McVoy, Ray McVoy and Fred Sutton were appointed as a committee for Memorial Day. The members of the camp now drill after every meeting under the direction of Captain Bedford.

Harris' Lane Closed.

Lincoln, March 17th.—The march of improvement at Lincoln has closed up Harris' lane, one of the oldest highways in the State, and over which the colonists traveled many a time. In laying out Lincoln several new avenues were surveyed, and these will take the travel that has for over a century passed over the lane.

The Jews of Today.

Rev. Joseph Hyender will deliver a lecture on the Jews of today in Vincent chapel this evening. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Epworth League. No admission will be charged, but instead an offering will be taken.

—Tomorrow evening the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church will hold an interesting meeting in the parlors of the church.

EXCITING TILTS AT LAW.

COUNTER CLAIMS OF LITIGANTS.

And After the Taking of Testimony the Lawyers Mutually Agreed Not to Sum up.

A number of exciting tilts between counsel and witnesses occurred at the hearing of the case of Johnson against Hansen, on contract, which took place in Justice Mosher's court yesterday.

Both parties to the action are farmers living at Dog Corners. Charles Johnson brought an action in January against James Hansen, for the hire of a wagon, vegetables and personal services, covering in all a period of four years. The plaintiff's attorney was Irving L. Brady. The amount of the claim was $26.50.

Hansen, through his attorney, W. K. McClure, filed a counter-suit for $90.85, for services rendered during a period of five years. The items included personal services, wife's services, board of the Johnson family, and the use of farm implements.

After several adjournments the case came up yesterday, and occupied the greater part of the day. Johnson produced as witnesses himself and his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Hansen and a farm hand named Smith testified for the defense.

The evidence showed that the two families had been neighbors for several years, staying at one another's houses, giving vegetables, loaning farm implements, and horses, and doing other favors. Last fall the families fell out and they at once proceeded to hunt up old accounts and demand settlements.

Mrs Hansen proved a tart witness, and had to be admonished by the Justice to soften the tone of her answers to Lawyer Brady's questions.

The examination of witnesses ended at 3:30 o'clock, and the lawyers entered into a novel agreement by which each omitted to sum up his case. The Justice was asked to pass upon the evidence as presented.

The judgment of the court was reserved until next Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

OF COLONIAL DESCENT.

Death of W. L. Patton's Sister Across the Atlantic Ocean.

In the death of Mrs. William Miller, of Lancaster Gate, London, Eng., Mrs. William L. Patton, of West Fifth street, loses her eldest sister, with whom she has spent sixteen years abroad.

Their father, William Saltonstall, was identified with Chicago from 1835, where both daughters were born. They are of Colonial descent through Sir Richard Saltonstall, patentee of the State of Connecticut, Gurdon Saltonstall, for twenty-one years Governor of Connecticut, and Brigadier-General Saltonstall, of Revolutionary fame, who married into the family of Governor Winthrop, of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Miller visited Mrs. Patton in 1890 and will be remembered by several in Plainfield. She was only 57 years old and leaves a husband and six children, two daughters and four sons, two of whom, John Doull Miller, of East Ninth street, and Constantine Saltonstall Miller, of Halifax, N. S., live here.

The burial takes place Saturday, and Mrs. Miller will be placed in the family vault in Highgate cemetery, London.

Mrs. Saltonstall, the mother, is still living in Chicago.

Benefit for Maine Survivors.

Elizabeth, March 17.—A benefit will be tendered to the survivors of the battleship Maine by the Kruesold Concert Company, at the Star Theatre Monday evening. During the intermission Lieutenant George H. Mather, U. S. N. A., in command of the Second Division of the New Jersey Naval Reserves, will give a complimentary exhibition and drill with his division. The actual work of sailors and marines will be shown in regulation manner.

Lack of Interest.

The members of the Board of Trade should have held a regular monthly meeting last evening, but a quorum was not present and the meeting was adjourned until next Tuesday evening. Those present included Harry Runyon, F. C. Lounsbury, J. C. Pope, R. A. Meeker, Fred Thorn, J. D. Spicer and W. R. Codington. Nothing whatever was done by those present.

Animatoscope Tonight.

So great was the number who were unable to gain admission to the Howe's animatoscope exhibition in the Second Presbyterian church of Amsterdam, N. Y., that he was obliged to remain a day longer. He will only appear tonight in Plainfield, so don't miss the opportunity.

—A stage load of colored adventurers are going to attend a dance at Rahway, this evening.

EVERY STREET WILL RECEIVE ATTENTION.

Plans to Utilize the Recent Appropriations Promised.

STEAM ROLLER SOON TO GO TO WORK.

A System Mapped Out by Which the Work Will be Prosecuted in a Thorough Manner—As Soon as Spring Rains are Over the Dirt Roads Will be Repaired—Cleaning of Streets Now Being Pushed Forward With a Large Gang of Men.

With the prospect of a large appropriation for use in the city streets, the work of the street department is the subject of much comment. Every body is anxious to know what is to be done and how the department intends to do it. A system has already been mapped out by the street committee of the Council, and Street Commissioner Garvett is arranging the details of the work.

Every city street in Plainfield, whether macadamized or dirt, is to be looked after this year. The steam roller will soon be in condition to resume its work for the summer. It will start on the macadamized streets that are in the greatest need of repairs and are subject to the heaviest travel. The other macadamized streets will be patched with stone. Some of the worst places will be filled in with patches are of sufficient size to repair it. In the other cases, the flaw will be filled and gravel will be used.

The dirt roads will receive attention as soon as the heavy spring rains are over. They will be scraped and the gutters cleaned. Then they will be "turnpiked," that is, built up in the centre so as to have a roundi

It is the intention of the department that every street in the city shall be cleaned this spring. This work is now in progress. Yesterday a number of men were at work on Park avenue. They will continue their work along to West Seventh street, so that thoroughfare to the south will be in good shape. Other streets will then be looked after. As already stated, the dirt roads will be cleaned before the spring rains, but the macadamized roads will receive attention.

At present the force is engaged in cleaning from the street the sand that has accumulated in the western part of the city during the winter. The work of macadam street cleaning will be kept busy in the eastern section of the city. The work is somewhat hindered by the lack of rain to cement the gravel to the present roadbed. If dry weather should continue, however, the steam street sprinkler will be put in use.

Orders Mrs. Clark's Will Probated.

Elizabeth, March 17.—The estate over the estate of the late Hezekiah Clark, of Rahway, was settled in the Union County Court at Elizabeth yesterday by Judge McCormick. The will set aside the caveat filed against the will by her sister, Mrs. Harriet A. Cory, of Westfield, and ordered the will probated.

Warren Township Committee Organized.

The Town Committee of Warren township held a meeting at the Jr. O. U. A. M. hall in Mt. Bethel, Tuesday morning, and organized for the new year. W. H. Rogers was elected chairman; Thomas C. Bird, treasurer; and Henry F. Way, clerk. After the new officers were sworn in and the bonds of the treasurer received, the Committee adjourned.

The Last Lesson.

The Teachers' Primary Union will meet tonight in the small room of the Y. M. C. A. building. The lesson will be taught by Julia Shinn, of the First Baptist church. All teachers and those interested are invited to attend. This is the last lesson that will be taught until further announcement.

In Justice Newcorn's Court.

The contract case of Gavett against Scriven was tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday, and judgement rendered for the plaintiff. The contract case of Runyon against Phillips was also tried with the same result. Execution was issued in the latter case.

Township Attorneys.

Pope & Runyon have been appointed borough counsel for North Plainfield township for one year. The appointment was secured partly because of the excellent manner in which the firm conducted the difficult Harriet-Dell case for the borough.

Lucetta Council's Third Year.

The third anniversary of the organization of Lucetta Council, No. 23, Daughters of Liberty, will be celebrated Wednesday evening, April 13th, by an entertainment and reception at Washington Hall.

The Row Store Closed.

That suave [illegible], Louis Callman, closed up the "Row Store" on West Front street last evening. The stock was transferred to Concordia vans to Mr. Callman's establishment in Elizabeth [illegible]

WHY AND WHEREFORE.

I know not whence I came,
I know not whither I go,
But the far stands clear
That I am I one
In this world of pleasure and woe,
And out of the mist and murk
Another truth shines plain—
It is in my power
Each day and hour
To add to the joy or pain.

I know that the earth exists,
It is none of my useless why,
I cannot end one
What it is all about—
I would but waste time to try.
My life is a brief, brief thing,
I am here for a little space,
And while I stay
I would like, if I may,
Be brighten and better the place.

I think, with us all
[illegible] of a high conceit;
[illegible] thoughts
[illegible] sent to the spot
[illegible] a bit more sweet,
[illegible] to gladden the world,
[illegible] right all wrong.
If nobody shirked
And each one worked
To help his fellows along.

Cease wondering why you came;
Stop looking for faults and flaws;
Rise up
In your pride and say:
"I am part of the first great cause,
However or fall the world.
There is room for an earnest man;
It had rather be
Or it would not be—
I am here to strengthen the plan."
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Form.

YVONETTE.

Yvonnette was a fair little girl of five summers, and with her wee, tight-fitting white hood and tiny sabots was as pretty a child as could have been found anywhere in Vendee.

Jean Malo, her father, a farmer on the estate of Count de la Mordine, had quitted his home some weeks previously with several companions, with his gun slung over his shoulder and a stout club in his hand, to hunt the boar at least, so he said. But if was in front of several hundred grenadiers had invaded Brittany, and Yvonnette's mother had grave reason to fear that had gone on an infinitely more dangerous hunt.

Rumors of fighting had circulated freely throughout the province, the whole region changed from church towers and steeples adorned thereto the youth of villages were flocking to the standard of Cathelineau, whom the Bretons had chosen for their commander-in-chief.

It was the day on which this story opens Yvonnette's mother was more thoughtful than usual, and so much so that her trouble was noticed by the child, who demanded several times,—

"Where is papa?"

Getting no answer to this and other questions, she at last drew her little chair up to the window and sought consolation with her doll, Rose. The latter was a new doll, which her father had bought at the fair at Chollet, and was Yvonnette's constant companion and the recipient of her confidences.

Suddenly she heard outside the sound of a drum, which was fired in quick succession. There was in no way unusual in the beating of the bells, but the sound of firearms and the shouting of excited crowd were familiar to her, and were merely associated in her baby mind with the holidays, when the grand lords and ladies from the neighboring castle deigned to take part in the fetes and dances on the village green. But Anne Malo, her mother, white and rigid as a statue, and her hands pressed tightly upon her heart, was gazing out of the window with wide, frightened eyes.

"What is the matter, mamma?" questioned the child.

"Hush, darling!" was the only reply of the farmer's wife, who suddenly recovered herself, closed the shutters, lit the lamp and dropped on her knees beside the fire.

Yvonnette watched her wonderingly, and her big blue eyes wandered from the kneeling figure to the high gothic fireplace, beside which the cat was purring and blinking contentedly. She was about to follow her inclination and go to play with him, when the door was flung open and a countryman, pale and bedraggled, with a gun in one hand and a flag in the other, burst into the house and slammed the door behind him.

"Papa! papa!" screamed Yvonnette delightedly.

Anne Malo had sprung to her feet and thrown herself in her husband's arms.

"Whatever has happened," she sobbed, "I have been nearly wild with anxiety every hour since you have been away."

"All is lost!" responded the farmer moodily. Take this flag and hide it carefully. If ever the Blues should find it here it would be all up with us."

He kissed the standard reverently and handed it to her. As he did so a few drops of blood oozed from under his cap and down his matted hair.

"Jean, you are wounded!" exclaimed Anne.

"No, it is nothing," replied the Chouan, picking up his gun.

"Where are you going?" she demanded, resolutely barring the door with her body.

"To fight with the others."

"You will do nothing of the kind."

"Wife, let me pass," ordered Malo.

"My comrades are waiting for me. It is my duty."

"You shall not go," she repeated then stepping swiftly, she picked up the child and held her out to him.

"You haven't even kissed baby," she exclaimed, reproachfully.

Malo wavered.

"They will think I am a coward," he muttered, unloosening against the bed in spite of himself, and leaning upon it for support.

"Jean, you are wounded, I knew it. Come into the cellar and let me take care of you," she entreated. "The enemy might search for you, and you must live for me—for Yvonnette."

"No, I must go," he insisted, bracing himself with an effort; but his strength gave out as he said it, and he reeled into her arms.

She supported him into the obscure cellar and laid him among the bundles of straw. Then she returned to the dwelling-room. Now that he was no longer there she could act. She took the flag, broke the staff over her knee and threw the pieces into the fire. Next she hid the gun under a pile of faggots in the corner. Then pouring some vinegar and water in a bowl, she told the child to be good and not make a noise, and went to attend to her wounded husband.

Yvonnette continued to play with her doll, but her attention was attracted to a strip of the flag which the flames had respected. It was a piece of white silk with fleur de lys embossed in gold upon it. She drew it out of the embers with a cry of delight, and setting her doll upon her knee was engaged in plaiting the silk upon it in the shape of a dress when the door again opened and a big, fierce, white mustached soldier in a blue tunic, white breeches and high gaiters entered. He was a sergeant of grenadiers of the Republic.

He glanced around the room and at once noticed that the gun rack was empty.

"One of those wolves who have been peppering us from ambush evidently lives here," he muttered. "There's a thousand livres for the culprit who will denounce him. A thousand thunders! If we catch any of the rascals they will get a short shrift and no ceremony."

He tore aside the curtains of the bed, peered around and suddenly caught sight of Yvonnette, who, not in the least concerned, went on dressing her doll.

The savage expression of his face softened into a tender smile and he went towards her.

"What a shame to leave her all alone in the house for such a time as this," he muttered. He bent, took her in his arms and kissed her.

"What's your name, little dear?" he asked.

"Yvonnette," replied the child.

"Why, I've got a little Yvonnette, too, just like you, and three little boys as well," he said, and the recollection of his little brood in Paris brought the tears into the soldier's eyes.

At that instant he noticed the silk on the doll, and the hard, fierce expression returned to his face again.

"Where did you get that?" he exclaimed harshly, dropping the child and seizing the stuff.

"There," said Yvonnette, half frightened at his change of manner, pointing to the fire.

He rushed to the hearth, drew some of the half burnt pieces of the flagstaff from the flames, with a piece of scorched silk, and recognised them.

"Who do these belong to?" he went on.

"To papa."

"Where, is your papa?"

"There," said Yvonnette, pointing to the door.

"I've got one of them at last," growled the sergeant, savagely, seizing his gun. "And if I don't fill him with lead enough to sink him to the bottom of the sea inside of two minutes my name is not Laderoute."

He strode to the cellar door and shook it. It was bolted on the inside, and still further enraged he raised his rifle and was about to splinter the frail partition with the butt end of the weapon when he heard a sound that made him turn his head.

Without realizing the danger her father was in, but instinctively frightened by the fierce looks of the grenadier Yvonnette had burst cut crying.

The sergeant looked at her and lowered his gun, and a guilty flush suffused his face.

"I kissed her a moment ago and now I was going to kill her father," he muttered. "Laderoute, you're a blank-ed, blanked, blankety-blanked cuss. That's what you are."

He hastily gathered up the incriminating debris of the flag and plied the child with questions. As he did so a company of soldiers marched up to the house. Sergeant Laderoute took Yvonnette on his arm and stood in the doorway to prevent them from entering.

"No one here but this little lady," he said. "Right about face—march!"

Then he kissed the child.

"For my own little Yvonnette's sake," he murmured. "Good-by sweetheart," and putting her down, closed the door and hurried after his comrades.

Quite a Simple Matter.

Jilkins is the facetotum of an artist who has made some noise in the world and is quite as important a personage in his own estimation, as his master. One day a lady called on the artist in the absence of the latter and was received by Jilkins.

"Dear me," she cried, glancing first at an incomplete picture and then at Jilkins, "I declare it is very much like you!"

"It is me," said Jilkins, with a superior air. "I sits for all his old men. That's what he's specially good at."

"You must be a very useful person to your employer," observed the visitor.

"So you think that Mr. Blank, R. A. is especially good at old men?"

"Yes. Can why? He's about nothing to do! I order his frames, wash his brushes, set his palettes, mix his colors and sit there for him to look at. How can he help being good? He's got nothing to do but shove the paint on!"

Woman is a subject never mentioned in Congress. It would be considered a terrible breach of etiquette to ask a man about his wife.

AMONG CANNIBALS.

The Experience of a Missionary — The Butchery of Children.

Mgr. Augouard, the vicar of Oubanghi, in a pamphlet published by the Catholic Missions, gives some terrible details of cannibalism in African villages in close proximity with European establishments.

"Two children," he says, "who had previously traveled with me to Brazzaville, were quite proud of being able to talk to us in French before their astonished compatriots. They gave us provisions in exchange for brech cloth which they immediately put on, and, without further ceremony, they jumped into our boat to continue the journey with us. On the way I questioned them in regard to the habits of their country. I asked them if they said their prayers regularly and if the people in their village still ate human flesh. They told me artlessly that every evening after sunset the throats of two or three children were always cut. The ages of the children destined for the butchery ranged from 8 to 15 years. They told us that in every village the same practice was carried on, but that the heads were no longer carried in triumph, because that displeased the fathers of the children. Upper Ubanghi, however, that some of the inhabitants of the villages refused to taste the 'meat.'"

Speaking of one of the friendly chiefs, Mgr. Augouard says:

"Chief Besson deserves special mention. He has rendered valuable service to the missionaries, and his fidelity has never been questioned. For this he received a gift valued at about 10 francs, which is considerable in his country. The honest fellow asked me if he could make one request. I told him to speak out like a man. He said that he was amply satisfied with the gift he had received, but he hoped that on my return from my next trip I would bring him a shirt, a pair of trousers and a hat. It is curious to notice the passion for that awkward piece of headgear, even in the heart of Africa. I solemnly declared to the chief that his request was to be granted. He bowed and retired, majestically draped in my old 20 cent blanket."

HAS SEEN SEVEN POPES.

Cavaliere Pacelli, an Italian Centenarian, Knows Leo XIII Personally.

An interesting example of a centenarian is to be found in Cavaliere Pacelli, an ex-pontifical customs house officer, who lives in Rome. He was born at Viterbo, on the 25th of January, 1801. He is very well, eats with appetite, smokes his cigar and generally goes three times a week to enjoy a chat at the old Caffe della Pace, where as a youth he used to go 80 years ago. Cavaliere Pacelli has an excellent memory and well remembers the events which took place during the stormy period of the pontificate of Pius VII. He was an employee at the customs house of Acquapendente, when Pius VII was obliged to leave Rome and go into exile. Cavaliere Pacelli remembers that when the exiled pope drew near to Acquapendente he ordered the carriage to stop and drank some water from a little spring.

In appearance the old man greatly resembles Alessandro Manzoni. Leo XIII, who knows him personally, takes great interest in him and never fails to inquire after him when he sees his son the journalist, Commendatore Pietro Pacelli, who is himself a grandfather. On Jan. 24, Cavaliere Pacelli celebrated his one hundredth birthday, he was received in audience by his holiness, who gave him his special blessing. This wonderful centenarian has lived in Rome the reign of seven popes and speaks enthusiastically of Gregory XVI and Pius IX. His friends all hope that he will welcome in the new century.—New York Catholic News.

LEO XIII A LANDLORD.

The Pope Has a House In Paris and a Country Estate.

The pope is a Parisian landlord. Officially he has become the landlord of the famous dwelling known as the Hotel de Plessis-Belliere, on the Place de la Concorde, by a decision of the civil tribunal of Limoges, sanctioning the arrangement arrived at between Leo XIII and the heirs of the Marquis du Plessis-Belliere.

By this arrangement, which ends a dispute that has gone on since 1887, the pope retains the house on the Place de la Concorde, and the castle and estate of Moreuil in the department of the Somme.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Peasant Russian Priest.

Father John, author of the now famous book "My Life In Christ," has been a priest in the Russian church for more than 40 years. He lives in the city of Cronstadt, on the Finland gulf, and is a man of the loftiest character. It is reported that the czar of Russia pays the throngs of poor people try to get within the range of his bealing, and great crowds follow him, believing him to possess some miraculous gift, but he does not himself claim that he has any special power. He is a great believer in the power of prayer. It is said that his influence for good among the Russian masses is greater than that of any other Russian under the czar, and his position is probably greater than that occupied by any single minister among English speaking nations in his own country.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Fee Door.

Evangelist Moody is an enemy of the pew door. He says truly that it is an invention of Protestantism. But he is slightly in error when he announces that it is unknown in Catholic churches. If it were possible to provide for religion without them, it would be a distinct benefit to the cause of faith to get rid of pews altogether and return to the unreformation custom of omitting church furnishings from the Catholic place of worship.—Catholic Universe.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 13. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—How to keep the Christian Endeavor pledge.—Matt. xxv. 14-30.

The parable of the talents, which forms our topical reference, was spoken by Christ to a mixed multitude on the Mount of Olives a short time before His crucifixion. It illustrates the faithful and unfaithful use of different gifts and talents and the results. It may well introduce us to the study of the subject of how we should keep the Christian Endeavor pledge.

I. We should keep the pledge as a duty and an opportunity from Christ. In the parable of the talents the master who goes away and intrusts talents to his servants represents Jesus Christ, who has gone to heaven and left duties and opportunities to His disciples. The duties and opportunities of the Endeavor society as represented by the pledges are obligations owed to Christ. We pledge ourselves to Him. Our vows are given not to the society, but to Christ. We promise Him that we will do whatever He would like to have us do. That moment the Christian Endeavor society with all its opportunities for service become Christ's vineyard. The opportunities are all furnished by Him to us, to be used for Him and to be accounted for to Him. If we would keep these facts constantly in mind, we would keep the pledge more faithfully.

2. We should keep the pledge in accordance with our respective gifts. All the servants did not have the same number of talents. To one the master gave five talents, to another two and to another but one, according to the ability of each one. Christ has not given us the honest fellow asked me if he could make one request. I told him to speak out like a man. He said that he was amply satisfied with the gift he had received, but he hoped that on my return from my next trip I would bring him a shirt, a pair of trousers and a hat. It is curious to notice the passion for that awkward piece of headgear, even in the heart of Africa. I solemnly declared to the chief that his request was to be granted. EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning March 13. Comment by Rev. W. J. Sales, M. A. Topic, The Breadth of God's Love.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Acts x, 11-23.

It is one of the curious things in human nature that holding to truth and duty tends to narrow men in their views and sympathies. Holding tenaciously some items of faith, fully organized the others often leads to a pride of knowledge and sense of superior moral worth which at times becomes almost arrogance itself. Others are looked upon as ignorant or wilfully vicious. More and more we withdraw ourselves from them lest we be contaminated by intercourse with them. We grow in our pride of mental and moral superiority and become settled in our sectarian bigotry.

So Peter found himself when Cornelius' servants came to ask him to go to the godly centurion's house and show him the true way to serve God. Jesus might not eat with or keep company with one of another religion. His fellowship was a constant badge of Hispicty and purity. Three times the vision on the housetop of Simon the tanner was given to the apostle before he was moved far enough from his Jewish narrowness to understand the breadth of the Christian religion and the true nature of his mission as an apostle of Jesus Christ.

One of the hardest things for us to master is the fact that others who do not believe as we do may still be sincere and earnest and as truly godly in life and purpose as ourselves.

When the practice of others is different from our own, we wonder how they can do such things and yet hope for the favor of God.

Our exclusiveness is not a sign of superiority, but of an intolerant spirit, far different from the spirit of the Master.

Peter finds that God has many true worshipers who are not Jews. Though they had not the enlightenment which the Jews possessed regarding spiritual things they had the earnest spirit of inquiry and of obedience and of beneficence toward those needy. They were and never can be loved of God. His command is to His more favored children to not regard such as wicked and worthless, but to go to them in the spirit of helpfulness and meekness, gladly giving them instruction in the right way, showing sympathy and friendliness.

Ruskin in his "St. Mark's Rest" shows how this mind rules in so much of our interpretation of things national as well as individual. All are eager in the missionary service of their own schism. But zeal for our sect is not love of God or our fellow man.

God's love is over all His works. He accepts all everywhere who reverence Him and work the things they believe right according to their best light.

Religious Gambling.

In a prayer meeting recently a young man said that two of them had debated whether they would come to the lecture or go to a concert in another church. They decided to "flip up a cent." They tried it twice, and both times it was for the concert, but after all they thought it was duty to come to the church prayer meeting, and so they had compromised and taken part in it. This shows a decided advance in sentiment over what has prevailed in times past in many places. More and more the people are coming to use reason instead of chance to decide the course of duty. Still there are those who leave the decision of their course of action to some juggling of cents or feelings. Religious gambling has had too large a place in times past. Payment of financial obligations has been left to the chances of lotteries or raffling bands instead of provided for by honest contributions. Some churches never seem to be able to get through a deficiency without a fair or supper or entertainment of some kind. They often resort to thus tossing coins to see if you should go to prayer meeting. Eat your way through is not so good as to attend worship.

Fullest Life.

Sir William Hamilton well said that there are but two ends to be reached in *life—perfection and happiness. It al*most seems as if these two are really but one, the fullness of life in one and the real good and goal toward which all should strive. But there are so many paths which are alluring which never reach this mark. A selfish or self centered, self seeking life can never be happy. Our lives must be Christ centered if we would know true joy. Activity is also necessary. No idle life can ever be a satisfied one. Exertion, noble activity, godlike strife, for mastery—these are essentials of life in its full exercise. Work for others must fill the heart and mind and hands if we will find contentment. One must love, love deeply, passionately, must live for it, be ready to suffer and needly for his loved ones, if he would know the ecstasy of being. In the glow of self sacrifice one first finds real satisfaction of soul. This is the Christ soul and the Christ life. Do you know it?

Christmas Cards and Easter Anthems.

These two terms well express the fundamental difference between the two festivals and pathetic, simple, dignified and grandeur. Sweet must be the simple music which tells the story of shepherds and angel songs, of manger cradle and virgin born babe. Grander must be the burst of holy melody which celebrates the triumph of life over death.

Probably no theme has so thrilled the hearts of men as this Easter gladness. The grandest musical compositions ever devised by men have been written for its celebration. The "Gloria" of Mozart's "Twelfth Mass" stands unrivaled. The oratorio of "The Messiah" is perhaps the noblest musical composition as a whole which the world has ever heard. The hallelujah chorus is its climax. Song greetings of the ages attest our joy and hope to do. The human voice combined with musical instruments reaches a point which sculpture and painting and architecture can never hope to attain.

Churchgoing.

And, best of all, by churchgoing we have our share in the greatest act of Christian worship—the showing forth of the Lord's death in the holy sacrament. We may eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ to the strengthening of our soul. No private prayer, no Bible reading at home, will make up for the loss of this. And this is the Christian's highest duty and the Christian's dearest privilege. By churchgoing you honor your God, you win His blessing on all your pleasures and all your cares. By forsaking your assembling you lose the blessing of His presence, and your soul will faint and perish, until you come near to forget God. And then how shall He remember you when He calls together His people at the great day? If you have any love and gratitude to God for creating, redeeming and sanctifying you—if you want anything from Him, if you have a soul to be saved—don't give up going to church. If you don't love Christ, if you don't care about salvation, it is useless to argue with you.—Church Evangelist.

A Prayer.

Oh, Lord, who art our Guide even unto death, grant, we pray Thee, grace to follow Thee whithersoever Thou goest. In little daily duties to which Thou callest us bow down our wills to simple obedience, patience under pain or provocation, strict truthfulness of word and manner, humility, gentleness; in great acts of duty or perfection, if Thou shouldst call us to them, uplift us to self sacrifice, heroic courage, laying down of life for Thy truth's sake or for a brother. Amen.—C. G. Rossetti.

REV. JOHN CHIDWICK

THE CHAPLAIN OF THE BATTLESHIP MAINE.

The Third Catholic Priest to Be Appointed a Naval Chaplain—The Work of a Priest on a Man-of-war—Character of the Mass at Sea—Sailors' Funerals.

An uppermost thought in the minds of many American Catholics, when the first tidings of the terrible disaster that recently befell the United States warship Maine in the harbor of Havana reached these shores, was whether the Catholic chaplain of the vessel, Rev. John P. Chidwick, was among the officers who escaped death. Happily their anxiety was speedily allayed, for early in the days following immediately after the loss of the ship came the news that all the officers, with two exceptions other than the chaplain, had escaped injury, and upon Father Chidwick devolved the mournful and solemn duty of conducting the religious services over the remains of the victims of the disaster, to whom the citizens of Havana gave an imposing public funeral.

Rev. John P. Chidwick, the chaplain of the ill fated Maine, is a priest of the New York archdiocese, who, previous to his appointment to his present position by President Cleveland, was attached as curate to St. Stephen's church, East Twenty-ninth street, New York. He was the third Catholic priest to be *appointed a naval chaplain, his predeces*sors in that position being Rev. Charles H. Parks, also of the New York diocese, who received his appointment in 1888, and Rev. William H. J. Reaney of the Baltimore archdiocese, who was made a chaplain in 1892. Since Father Chidwick was appointed a Roman Catholic chaplain, Rev. E. H. Fitzgerald of the St. Joseph diocese, who for several years was connected with the Catholic Indian bureau, has been named; so that at present the Catholic corps of the 24 naval chaplaincies, an all inadequate share, since fully one-half of United States bluejackets are said to be Catholics.

The chaplain of the ill fated Maine contributed last September a very interesting article, "A Parish Afloat," to Donahoe's Magazine, the following extract from which will give the reader an idea of what a naval chaplain's work aboard ship consists: "The chaplain's chief duty," wrote Father Chidwick, "is his Sunday services.

"The naval regulations about the proper observance of Sunday are very strict and command that captains of ships to which chaplains are attached shall have divine services offered on all Sundays when the weather and circumstances permit. It is seldom that divine service is omitted. The attendance is entirely voluntary for officers and men, although the regulations order both to be present. The time and place for divine service are fixed by the commanding officer, who must consult the convenience of the ship and the requirements of the Sunday functions. About 10 minutes before the time the boatswain sounds his whistle and gives the rather grotesque order to the division in charge of the work to 'rig church.' The compartment wherein I celebrate mass will hold about 150 men.

"It is the most protected apartment aboard ship and the most suitable for our purpose. The benches for the men face the altar, on one side of which is an organ and on the other side are chairs for the attending officers. A small room in the compartment serves as a sacristy. When the preparations are finished, word is sent to the officers in charge of the deck, and at the appointed time the church bell tolls, and the church pennant is raised above the stars and stripes."

After alluding to the fact that this church pennant, which is a small, triangular flag showing the cross, is the only one ever placed above the national flag, Father Chidwick describes the character of the mass at sea, with a choir of sailors singing hymns and the deep voices of the tars answering the prayers after mass. The attendance at these masses varies, of course, according to circumstances, but the Maine's chaplain says it often mounts to 600 or 700. On grand feasts military high mass is celebrated, and the naval chaplains, when at sea, say mass daily in their cabins. Every Sunday the chaplain has regular confession and communion days, generally once a week, and when other vessels than his own are near he is expected to minister to the spiritual needs of the Catholic sailors on board them. Some ships, Father Chidwick informed us, have morning and evening prayers, which are called "quarters," and the chaplain is often asked for beads, scapulars and agnus dels by the men.

In this article of the Maine's chaplain is also given an account of the way in which sailors' funerals are conducted, and a mournful interest attaches to the subjoined extract at this time: "The regulations require that Christian burial be provided for all men who die in the service. If possible, the body is interred with the rites of the church to which the deceased had belonged. When this cannot be done, as is frequently the case, the ship is hove to, the flag displayed at half mast, and the officers and men are mustered on deck to pay their last tribute to the departed. The funeral services follow, and the body is consigned to the deep. A guard of honor fires three volleys over the grave, and the bugler sounds the last 'taps'—and, mournful notes of the bugle which tell of the hour of sleep. If the death occur at a hospital, an escort and guard of honor from the ship to which the deceased had been attached accompany the funeral cortege to the grave. As the procession enters the cemetery the bugler precedes, followed by the chaplain. This spectacle is always impressive."—Columbian.

LON CALHOUN'S WAKE

MOURNERS FLED AND ONE OF THEM TOLD THE POLICE.

When They Came Back with a Policeman the Supposed Dead Man Gave the Fun Away, and All Hands Joined in the Wake, for Which $45 Had Been Raised.

Taken all in all, Lon Calhoun's wake was about the finest wake that ever happened in Jersey City. —

News of Lon Calhoun's death reached the headquarters on Wednesday night. Whence it came nobody knows, but it was duly noted on the bulletin board that "our esteemed and associate" had passed away after a long and painful gastric attack, leaving a sorrowing widow, who would communicate with the society regarding the funeral. On Thursday morning President McCarthy of the society telephoned to the sorrowing widow his condolences on her husband's death.

"Dead!" said Mrs. Calhoun, "Lon ain't dead. He's downstairs embalming a man that is."

"You don't say so," exclaimed McCarthy. "That's too bad. We were going to give him a wake. The boys are taking up a collection now to bury him."

"They'd better keep it for somebody that needs burying worse than he does. Lon's good for a heap life yet."

"Well, look here," said McCarthy, "it's too bad to disappoint the boys. You tell Lon that he's dead, and that if he'll get into the coffin we'll give him the time of his life."

There was some further conversation about details. Then Mrs. Calhoun went to the head of the stairs and called her husband.

About the time that the late Lon Calhoun was peacefully folding his wife's communication above his quiet breast, the delegation from the society, headed by President McCarthy, arrived. There were six men in the delegation. All of them had had some experience in similar sad affairs. They knew their duty, and they did it. One by one they passed before the coffin and spoke their pieces.

"In the midst of life we are in death," said the first.

"We mourn our loss," said the second.

"One shall be taken and another get left," was the contribution of the third.

"He—he—he was all right, Lon was," stammered the next man, who was in hard luck, the first speaker having stolen his thunder.

"The good die young," asserted the fifth man confidently.

"We shall not look upon his like again," groaned President McCarthy, who came last, in such broken tones that he made a great hit with the rest of the mourning party.

Meanwhile the widow and Secretary Brown sat with their faces buried in their hands. McCarthy's five companions took seats, and looked at each other in gloomy silence, while the one nearest the door made a swain sounds his whistle and gives the rather grotesque order to the division in charge of the work to 'rig church.' It burst and they achieved the descent of the stairs as the careless Alpine traveler hastens down a crevasse. At the bottom they collected themselves and regarded each other with blanched faces.

CONSTANCY.

Miss Moon, she go
Foh a day or so
A-sailin' fros de sky.
Den she hide away,
An' she sulk an' stay
Our patience fah ter try.
But we goes along,
Wif a cheery song,
A-visitin' night by night,
An' dah's many a star
A-winkin' dar
Foh ter gib a striddy light.

Miss Moon, she see
Pitty soon dat we
Seems jilted 'long fus' rate
Den mo' an' mo'
She seemds to glow,
Quite affable an' great;
An' she say she'll make Dem all take
Dah lamps indo's, she guess;
An' we smiles to see
How shine in free—
But we loves de stars de bes'.

Dah's folks we meet,
Wif dah ways so sweet
Whose shinin' brings no remarkb;
Ef you hatter 'pend
On 'em till de end,
Der'd lamed in de dark.
We likes de smile,

AUNT MARTHA'S JOKE

BY BARRETT.

"I am coming for a fortnight's visit to you, Eliza, if it will be convenient for you to have me. I realize that age is coming upon me very fast, and I wish to see you and Eugene's children, and the dear old home where Eugene and I grew up together. I want to see it all once more before I go to join him. You know I always had a fancy that our loved ones who have gone before single out the new arrivals of their acquaintance, and glean all the news about those they left on earth. I want, therefore, to have the latest news to carry to dear old Eugene.

"Yours as ever,

"Martha King."

P. S. I have grown very deaf since I saw you last."

"A fortnight of Aunt Martha, and she deaf, too! Suffering moses!" cried Ella King.

"But she is not long for this world, and has lots of money to leave to somebody," said Lucy. "And we have the honor to be her only living relatives. I guess we had better bear with her yet a little longer, my dear Ella."

"Yes, but wealthy relatives have a way of promising to die off shortly and then hanging on until the heirs are gray-haired and worn out with hope deferred. Don't you believe her! She is not near dead yet, and there is no knowing how many more 'positively last appearances' Aunt Martha will make."

"Girls," said Mrs. Hollister-King mildly, "she is your father's only sister."

"Yes'm," said Ella, with a grimace.

"I am sorry she is deaf," said Alice, the youngest daughter, who sat quietly sewing in her usual corner.

Ella and Lucy burst into unmusical laughter. Alice always amused them with her strange ideas, while they were a perpetual irritation to their sweet, womanly younger sister.

"Miss Goody is so glad, too, that dearest Aunt Martha is coming! Miss Goody loves her auntie truly, and she doesn't love her money a bit. Oh, no!"

"I do love Aunt Martha," Alice said. "I do not see how you and Lucy can forget how kind she has always been to us. And you know—you simply know—that her money has no influence with me. It is as mother says; I cannot forget that she is my dead father's sister."

"Hear, hear!" cried Ella, "Will your reverence pray continue? We always enjoy your little sermons."

"I do not care to discuss Aunt Martha any further," said Alice, indignantly; and gathering up her sewing, she left the room to avoid the discussion.

She and her sisters could never agree upon any subject, and Alice was always retreating to her own little room for peace and solitude. She was not a favorite with her mother, who often said that she and Ella are Hollisters, but Alice is a King all over, both in looks and disposition."

Mrs. Hollister-King had been a beauty of the orthodox blonde type, and her elder daughters were blessed with the same yellow hair, blank blue eyes, white eye lashes, and fair skins.

"Alice is pretty enough for those who like brunettes," said her mother, "but I never admired dark women myself."

Two weeks later a sweet-faced old lady with soft waves of gray hair was placidly knitting in Mrs. Hollister-King's big "family room." She had been there a week, and had learned a good deal about "dear brother's folks" which she vowed in her loving old heart never to tell him when she crossed the river, and sat with him "under the shade of the trees."

Lucy and Ella were both engaged in altering their evening dresses.

"Well," sighed Ella, "when our dearly beloved aunt 'shuffles off' I won't have to make one piece of lace do duty on three or four gowns. This is the third time I have changed around since Monday."

"And I won't have to paint my soiled white slippers to match my red dress, either. I shall have perfect toilettes—won't I be lovely? Oh," she added, as she caught the flash of Alice's eyes, "never mind, Alice! The dear old thing is as deaf as a post. Isn't it fun that we can say what we like about her, and she sits there smiling at us as innocent as a lamb? I'm glad the old girl is so deliciously deaf."

"Mother," cried Alice, her cheek aflame with anger, "why do you allow such coarse, heartless remarks to be made? If I am to keep the respect for you that I always want to have, you must act such behavior go on unreproved!"

"Alice," said Mrs. Hollister-King raising her white eyebrows languidly "you forget yourself. I do not need any advice from you as to how to manage my affairs. I rather enjoy Lucy's and Ella's harmless little jokes. You seem to have no sense of humor whatever. Your poor father had none either."

"Humor! If you call the unfeeling ridicule of our best friend humor, then I thank the good Lord that I have none of it!"

"What is the matter, my dears?" inquired Aunt Martha, mildly, noticing the growing animation in Alice's face.

Innocent Aunt Martha!

"Oh, Alice is angry because she cannot have a new gown for the ball," yelled Mrs. Hollister-King into her ear. "Lucy and Ella, you see, are cheerfully touching up their old ones."

Alice cast a look of scorn at her mother, and Aunt Martha smiled and shook her head reprovingly at her youngest niece.

"I must go home to-morrow, Eliza. I am afraid a deaf old woman like I am is a drawback to the pleasure of the girls, and I don't want to wear out my welcome. If it is not asking too much, I would like one of them to come and stay with me a for week or two now and then."

"Excuse me!" laughed Lucy to Ella.

"I will come any time you want me, auntie," said Alice.

"Do, dear, do!" said Aunt Martha warmly.

"Good little Alice!" said Ella. "Well, you shan't get ahead of me. Here goes!" And she bawled at Aunt Martha. "Don't talk of going when you have only just come, dear auntie. And I am coming to see you if you will let me. I would dearly love to go."

Aunt Martha left the next day, amid many expressions of regret from her sister-in-law and her two blonde nieces. Alice did not say much, but Aunt Martha parted with her most affectionately.

"Dear Alice! You are so like my dear Eugene! Do come to see me soon."

It was only a few weeks later that Martha King died. Let us draw a veil over the grief of the Hollister-King's at the reading of the will. Her whole property was left to her "beloved niece, Alice Vivian King," with never a word for Lucy or Ella. But there was a letter for them which ran:—

"My Dear Nieces:—I have played quite a neat little joke on you, and you two are blessed with such rich funds of humor, that I am sure you will think it irresistibly funny. I was hot on to your little ruse last time I was at your house, and you can fancy how I enjoyed your many pleasant witticisms at my expense. This is 'tit for tat,' my dears, and I trust it will be a lesson to you. Aunt Martha."

What It Might Stand For.

A girl baby was recently brought to a clergyman of the city to be baptized. The latter asked the name of the baby.

"Dinah M.," the father responded.

"But what does the 'M.' stand for?" interrogated the minister.

"Well, I do not know yet; it all depends upon how she turns out."

"How she turns out? Why, I do not understand you," said the minister.

"Oh, if she turns out nice and sweet and handy about the house, like her mother, I shall call her Dinah May. But if she has a fiery temper and displays a bombshell disposition, like mine, I shall call her Dinah Might."—Syracuse Post.

MAKING RATS WORK.

St. Louis Firm Gets Its Drain Pipe Cleaned Gratis.

There are 150 men in North St. Louis who defy any one to dispute the fact that Tom Maguire is a genius. Mr. Maguire is yard foreman at the Laclede Gas Company's plant. His enthusiastic proclaimers of his genius are his fellow-workers in the big yard.

A sewer pipe leading from one of the buildings to the river bank, 160 feet away, became clogged. The pipe is 16 feet below the surface. It was not known just where the obstruction was, so arrangements were made to open the trench. Then Maguire brought into play what proved to be the trump card, viz., rats.

He had been thinking about the plan for several days. One night, by the aid of generous hunks of fresh cheese, he managed to entrap two big gray rodents, and these he determined to put into the sewer. They were taken to the mouth at the river bank and released. The opening was then closed securely from the inside, leaving the animals with only one chance of life. That was to go straight ahead. And they did.

Several more rats were caught each succeeding day and turned into the sewer, until a dozen fine specimens were safely housed in the pipe. One morning after the last detachment joined the main rodent army water commenced to trickle from the pipe from rods and steam were applied. In ten minutes the sewer was clear.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

CHEATING BUTTERFLIES.

When They Have Mistaken Artificial Flowers for the Natural.

Some most remarkable instances of the erring of instinct among insects have frequently been noted among naturalists, and they add an interesting chapter to the physiology of sense. One of these was the case of a butterfly, which persisted in visiting the artificial flowers on a lady's bonnet, mistaking them for the natural products. Another, and perhaps more striking instance of fault is noted by the distinguished French entomologist, M. R. Blanchard, and concerns a species of sphinx moth, which entered a hotel room in the half obscurity of early morning, and was found to flit with direct intent to definite parts of the wall paper painting. These were decorated with paintings of leaves and flowers, and to the latter the insect approached in repeated attacks, thrusting forward its proboscis as though intent upon intruding it into the open cups of the beguiling flowers. After repeated failures and the resulting discouragement, the effort was given up, and the sphinx escaped by the window. This case of self-deception is interesting in another way, inasmuch as it proves that it is not always the sense of smell, but at times that of sight, which directs insects to their flowers.

The Long Journey.

In a certain township not many miles from Cleveland the good man of a local household was laid away in the little churchyard on the hill. After the funeral the relatives, both near and distant, returned to the family home and the officiating pastor came with them. There they enjoyed a good dinner and afterward gathered in the best room for social converse.

Naturally their talk turned upon the serious event of the day, and presently the good pastor, drawing a deep sigh, solemnly remarked:

"Well, our departed brother has gone a long journey."

There was a brief silence, and then a cousin of the deceased, a fussy little woman with an intense desire to bear a share in the conversation, suddenly remarked in a tone of profound wisdom:

"Well, you know, brother, that they all say, that travel is such an eddication!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why the Burglar Cried.

Not long since three young fellows who had been making a night of it reeled up to the house and found a negro busily engaged in gathering up all the silverware and depositing it in a big sack in the middle of the dining-room floor, preparatory to carrying it away. The thief was greatly frightened. The three young men were also much alarmed. One of them had a pistol. He had very little faith in the firearm, but he called the colored porter and, handing him the weapon, told him to hold it on the burglar until the three young men went out for a policeman. When the office finally arrived the porter dropped his arm with the pistol. The cylinder dropped out. Not a single load was in the pistol.

When the burglar was searched, two seven-shooting revolvers, loaded and self-acting, were found on his person. The burglar was so disgusted with himself that he cried.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Photographing by Firefly Light.

Experiments have been made in photographing by the light of fireflies. A large number of them were placed in a small box and confined by a netting. The box was provided with sensitive plates, and in some instances covered closely in order to discover the power of the light emitted by these insects. It was found that they have a quality not unlike the X rays, as the plates that were closely covered showed unmistakable evidences of a photographic process.—New York Journal.

ON AN OSTRICH FARM.

CONSTANT LOVE FOR THEIR MATES A CHARACTERISTIC.

The Birds Live to be Seventy or Eighty Years Old—Plumage of the Female of No Great Value—Feathers in Their Raw Condition Bring $60 a Pound.

One might write much about the habits and manners of the ostrich. When about four years old the birds are mated and they have not already chosen their own partners for life; they are of an affectionate and loyal nature, however, and there are more love matches among them than marriages of conveniences. From that time until the end of their seventy or eighty allotted years, there is only loyalty and devotion; any ostrich husband will fight off a stranger hen who comes his way, and only a lonely widowerhood ever induces him to love twice.

When the birds are eighteen months old, that is, soon after they reach their permanent style of dress, they may be plucked. A plucking occurs only once in ten weeks; as often as that, the whole troop is looked over, and those whose plumes are ripe are marked as victims. No bird undergoes this process oftener than every nine months, so their lives are for the most part peacefully undisturbed, being free of lovemaking and sugar beets. It is a sorry sight to see this destruction, even though pride and a haughty spirit do proceed it, for the wolf comes in sheep's clothing, and the plucker rattles a great sack of dry corn in a way that would make any ostrich mouth water. "Here's a fine meal," says the whole troop, and forthwith they come, lunging, plunging, lurching for the grain. Those less eminently garbed females are worth little for plumage; when their brother took to his lashing style, he did not realize that a his glory lay his downfall. As the whole troop crowds close around the pile of corn, one of the doomed follows a singled out, driven or coaxed a little a one side, and in a second the gate of a pen has closed him in.

It is a narrow pen, with sides joining in a wedge-shape, and into the wedge the angry bird is forced by two men who guard most carefully the while against a kick from a heavy foot. It s the work of a second to clap the stock over Mr. Ostrich's head, and this calms him like a dose of soothing syrup. The stocking is made from a long strip of heavy blue jeans, and the under end is left to dangle. The bird so that the beating wings grow still in his wonder. The long stocking s shaken and pecked at, but it cannot e worked off by any blundering vexation, and from this moment the ostrich is to the mercy of his masters. Now the plucking begins.

One of the great close-held wings is turned back, revealing a wealth of black plumes, white plumes and variegated plumes. The great floating white ones, such as adorn the picture hats, are not close to the body, if they were left until ripe enough to pull, the ends would have outlived their perfection. The scissors are sharp and merciless, and clip, clip, they are snipping off dollars and dollars with every stroke. The ostrich is not in the wings, those which are protected closer s my guide depreciated, hurting the so the body may be pulled out without bird very much. Not very much. As soon as the clipping and the tugging cease. The bird probably imagines he is inexplicably ordered out for a moment more, my whilom dandy, that a daub of red paint may designate your sign post legs as belonging to a plucked bird. That done, the stocking comes off, and out you go to liberty in the broad corral outside, to liberty, but not to present happiness. For the shame of a plucked bird is crushing. It is long before he can rise above it, and his more fortunate companions use no chance to twit him on his disgrace, fighting him off as often as he tries to mingle with them. His only comfort lies in having companions in misery, for several proud fellows must undergo the humiliation on the same day. The feathers are carefully stowed away by a man with a bag; the loss of one would make a loss of money. In their raw condition, uncured and undyed, they are sold at wholesale for $60 per pound, or about 60 cents for a feather, but some of the finest plumes are worth much more. The body feathers are never pulled, but gathered gently as they drop in the corrals.—Toronto Globe.

A Jewish Custom.

It may not be generally known that, as a constant reminder of the forty years' wandering in the wilderness, and of the hardships that they endured, every Jew who can possibly do so builds a "booth" or "abiding city," in the houses of all good Jews some portion is left incomplete.

In Lord Rotschild's mansion in Piccadilly a small part of the beautiful gilded ceiling is unfinished, while in the drawing-room the gold drawing room of the late Baron Hirsch one corner was left nearly bare. It is said that when curious guests inquired the reason he was wont to reply gravely that the money gave out before the decorations could be completed.

"And now," said the colonel of the rappers and miners, "who will volunteer to crawl through the trench and fire the magazine?"

There was no response.

"It is a dangerous mission," said the officer; the man who attempts it will find himself in very cramped quarters, and is liable at any moment to get stuck. Who will go?"

There was another brief silence, and then a thin man with a weakened face spoke up:

"I guess I can do it, if any man can, colonel. I used to live in a New York flat."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BONANZAS IN BEEF.

FORTUNES MADE IN SHIPPING TEXAS CATTLE NORTHWARD TO FEED.

Kansas and Nebraska Farmers Buying Hundreds of Thousands and Profiting by Their Purchases—Enormous Shipments.

Central and Western Kansas are experiencing a revival of the cattle industry that is almost equal to that of the palmy craze of the third of a century ago, when the ranges of this part of the state were covered with the herds that came up from the plains of Texas. In this instance the herds are not coming by the slow method of driving over the cattle trails, but are hurried by the latest improved stock cars in special trains, and reach the feed yards fresh from the ranges of the Southwest. The rush for cattle began about a year ago, and is now at its height. The herds that are shipped into this state and Nebraska are wanted for so eagerly that it is almost impossible to keep them long in the yards. The farmers take them at prices that were two years ago thought beyond the possibilities, and the banks in many instances lend more on them than the same stock would have sold for at that time. The great cause of this craze has been the high price for beef and the large amount of corn and feed that has been produced on the plains, and has been worth a small price. When corn sold for 10c to 15c farmers saw how they could do better than that by handling cattle and selling the grain in beef, and they began to ask for feeders. The supply was forthcoming, and it has so far kept up with the demand. While Texas has furnished the larger amount of this feeding stock, there has a great portion come from New Mexico, and the reports that have come from the ranges from time to time that the young stock was getting thinned out has not had any effect on the shipments.

The men who have made the most money out of the business have been the shippers, and next to them those who have bought the young stock and rough fed them for a while, and then turned it over to those who have corn to feed them much grain. The shippers have bought the cattle on the range, and retailed them to the farmers, who are so eager to get them that they will willingly pay a large price for the stock. They have made it so profitable for the shippers that they have in most instances cleared $1 to $5 a head, this making a very nice profit for a few days' handling of a train load of stock.

But Kansas is not getting all the cattle that are coming from the herds of the Southwest. Thousands of cars have been going through to the stations of Nebraska, where they are to be fed on the corn that has in some places been stored for two years, awaiting a favorable time for the marketing of the crop. The statistics of the state just given out show that the farmers in every county of Nebraska report that they are buying largely of the Texas stock, and that there will be no shortage of the cattle in that state. This is the first year that the feeding business with the ranges so far south of it west has been tried extensively, and the outcome is being watched closely. Should there be a fall in prices and a hard winter there will be heavy losses, but it is not likely that any such calamity will come as that of the great cattle craze of the early '70s, when the cattle trail days were ending.

In 1871 about 600,000 head of cattle were driven north over the trails to Kansas, and as there came just then a scare in regard to the danger of eating Texas beef and the prices fell off in the Eastern markets, a large portion of them were put on the range to wait the turn of the tide. The Western Kansas plains were covered with them, and without provision for the winter that it was hoped would be mild. In the middle of December came a storm of sleet and high wind, with which the poor cattle drifted until they brought up against the kindly shelter of a creek bank. They died by the thousands, and with them went the ponies and even the cattle herders. Wherever they stopped and lay down the cattle were frozen stiff, and the herd owners found that from one-third to one-half of their possessions were gone. From one railroad station 29,000, from another 30,000, and from another 50,000 were taken from the dead animals, were shipped after the storm. One firm put 3,900 head on the range, and in the spring could find but 110 of them. This sort of a loss ruined many of the heaviest dealers, and the cattle trade received a blow from which it has never recovered to experience a revival of the old boom.

One curious result of the importation of the Texas cattle has been a revival of the love for Herefords, which were so much in favor a few years ago, and then went out because of the growth of the dairy business. It is considered to mark the new cattle with the white faces and to get the beef results, and there is a demand for Herefords that is making the starting of farms for the breeding of fine thoroughbred stock a popular form of investment.—Correspondent St. Globe-Democrat.

FAURE FOR CLEANLINESS.

He Upsets Provincial France with His Demands for Bathtubs.

President Felix Faure devotes special and unceasing attention to cleanliness. He is doing more to spread the use of the bathtub in France than any other Frenchman of these or former times. A Paris correspondent says that wherever the President goes for a week or ten days there must be a bathhouse with all modern improvements. He refuses to stop even over night in a house or hotel that has no bathroom. His hobby seems to be cleanliness. Inconvenience, for the bathroom is not a universal institution in France, as in this country. In fact, the provincial French towns are as barren of private bathtubs as most prairie villages in this country. Nevertheless the President holds fast to the bathtub as a condition precedent to his visit to any town or castle.

In the Presidential palace in Paris and in the castle at Fontainebleau, M. Faure had elaborate bathrooms fitted up. In this state Nebraska has much for so eagerly that it is almost impossible to keep them long in the yards. The farmers take them at prices that were two years ago thought beyond the possibilities, and the banks in many instances lend more on them than the same stock would have sold for at that time. DOCTOR'S BILL IN ALASKA.

Only $400 for Amputating an Arm—Soothing Syrup $8.00 a Bottle.

Charles H. Metcalf, who recently returned from Alaska, brought news concerning the welfare of Dr. P. J. B. Le Blanc, a Detroit physician who accompanied him to Alaska last January. Mr. Metcalf says that when he left Dawson City, last July, Dr. Le Blanc had a practice from which he received an average of $100 a day. As the doctor had been in the camp only six weeks, he was much encouraged at the prospect of doing a flourishing business in the winter, when pneumbonia, rheumatism and other diseases incident to severe cold weather usually find many victims.

According to Mr. Metcalf the doctor goes about his professional duties with a case of medicines and surgical instruments in one hand and a buckskin bag for gold dust in the other. As there is very little money in the camp, gold dust forms the principal medium of exchange, and each time the doctor calls upon a patient he is given enough nuggets to pay the bill. When Mr. Metcalf left Dawson the doctor had not had time to arrange a schedule of prices, but he thinks a tariff sheet made up as follows would not be far out of the way:

One bottle of soothing syrup....	$8.00
Prescribing for frost-bitten ear.	7.50
Setting a broken leg.....	225.00
Amputating an arm	400.00

"It is very difficult to get medicine and surgical instruments over the pass," said Mr. Metcalf, "and doctors' bills are therefore extremely high. Doctors are also very scarce.—Detroit Journal.

THE TURKEY BUZZARD.

A Repulsive Bird in Appearance but of Great Use as a Scavenger.

The turkey buzzard is most repulsive in appearance, its featherless neck having a plucked effect which no doubt gave rise to the legend here told. As its name denotes, the buzzard is not unlike a turkey, but its dusty, unkempt appearance forms a great contrast to well-groomed, dignified kings of the barnyard whose namesakes they are. The turkey buzzard has, however, one point of beauty that deserves mention—his flight. He is the embodiment of winged gracefulness. He spreads his wings and floats, seemingly motionless, a black object against the azue of the Southern sky, too far away for the watcher to note his ugliness. Without motion of the wings he will sail for hours at will, a pair of dusky pinions resting on the sultry air. You watch him breathlessly until he descends, when the spell is broken, for repulsive and ungainly he stands revealed—the scavenger of the tropics. Yet the poor, ugly, ungainly bird has his uses. Without him the South would be a sorry victim of fevers and diseases bred from offal festering under the fierce tropical sun. As a scavenger he is invaluable, and the law to protect him is the prime calling for which he was created.—Providence Journal.

George's Sermon.

In a country village near the town of B—— the son of a well-known farmer went up to one of his father's men, who was rather older than the rest and said:

"George, why don't you hold your head up the same as I do, and not always go looking on the ground?"

Being near a wheat field, the old man answered:

"You see that field of corn yonder, if you look you will see all the full and valuable ears are bowed down, while those that have nothing in them stand upright.—Spare Moments.

HOW BAILEY BEAT BARNUM.

And That at the Veteran Showman's Own Game, Advertising.

One of the elephants with the Barnum-Bailey circus was the means of making the fortune that Mr. Bailey is credited with possessing. It was as a baby phenomenon that pachyderm did the good turn for the successor of "The Great and Only Barnum."

It was away back in 1880, when the news got around that the first elephant born in captivity was living and traveling with the Bailey show. Mr. Bailey was a struggling young circus owner then, battling against fearful odds. Barnum was at the height of his remarkable career—at the very topmost notch of circus fame.

Mr. Barnum, quick to see the advantage of having so important an attraction as a real American baby elephant, telegraphed to Mr. Bailey as follows:

"Will give you $100,000 for your baby elephant. Must have it."

Mr. Bailey wired in answer: "Will not sell at any price."

This seemed a daring thing for Mr. Bailey to do, for $100,000 would almost have purchased the entire show. Even Mr. Bailey's best friends, whom he consulted in the matter, advised him to accept the offer instead of doing that he refused it and hustled East with his circus to meet Barnum on his own ground.

By the time that the Bailey circus reached the East the whole country was billed with posters on which was printed in staring letters "Thinks of the Baby Elephant." Underneath that heading was printed Barnum's telegram to Mr. Bailey. As the Bailey show followed in the wake of the Barnum circus each town in which the Barnum aggregation appeared was billed with Bailey posters.

Probably the Bailey advertising did not affect the attendance at the Barnum circus. But the advertisements staring the veteran showman in the face everywhere he went worried him, and finally to dodge the huge posters he changed the route of his circus, although that route had been determined upon nearly twelve months in advance. He jumped from New York to Kansas City and surrendered the whole East field to the Bailey show. The next year the two shows were consolidated, and have been one show ever since. Barnum's one joke with Mr. Bailey as long as the shrewd old circus manager was alive was, "Well, have you any more baby elephants that you do not want to sell?"—New York Press.

EARLY REFRIGERATION.

Different Methods Given of the Early Manner of Freezing.

The most ancient method of making ice is practiced in India. Holes are dug in the ground and filled with straw at the bottom of these, and on it, at the close of the day, are placed pans of water which are left until the next morning, when the ice that is found within the pans is collected. This is said to be carried out in Italy also. As where the ground is dry and will readily absorb the vapor given off from the water in the pans. The freezing, of course, is due to the great amount of heat absorbed by the vapor in passing from the liquid to the gaseous form.

Another process was practiced in the day of ancient Rome, when the wealthy are said to have had their wines cooled by having the bottles placed in water into which saltpeter was thrown, the bottles being the while rotated.

Dr. Cullen, in 1755, discovered that the evaporation of water could be facilitated by the removal of the pressure of atmosphere, and that by doing this, water could be frozen. Nairn, in 1777, discovered that sulphuric acid would absorb the vapor of water placed in a second vessel separate from that containing the water, but connected with it. This discovery he put to use in 1810 by constructing an apparatus for absorbing the vapor of the water that it was desired to freeze. This apparatus greatly facilitated the freezing operations of a vacuum freezing machine.—Cassier's Magazine.

AN ECCENTRIC COUNT.

He Annually Hired a Room and Stayed in Bed for Three Months.

There recently passed away at Paris a very old and eccentric gentleman, named Count Bertrand, son of the general of that name, who, with his wife and children, accompanied the first Emperor Napoleon to the island of St. Helena, and remained there with him in exile until he died, bearing with all the eccentricities of temper and of manner of the fallen monarch, and serving him with a fidelity and devotion that evoked the admiration of all the English on the island. The only pleasure which Napoleon seemed to have was in playing with the little boy and girl of Gen. Bertrand, and he used to amuse himself by drilling the little fellow, who was his godchild.

It is the latter who recently died as a very old man. He was not to ascribe his longevity to the fact that he made a practice of leaving home annually, hiring a room at a quiet hotel, and then taking his bed for three months. During the whole of this time no one was allowed to call upon him or visit him. Indeed, no one save his servant was permitted to enter his room. This was brought to him only once a day, and the man was under the strictest orders not to speak a word to his master the whole time.—Chicago Record.

VOORHEES' HAPPY LOT.

When Senator Voorhees became acting Governor, it was said that he would have no trouble, as Griggs had filled all the berths. But to Voorhees falls the appointment of a Chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and five members of the State Board of Arbitration. For these few places there are hundreds upon hundreds of applicants. The Labor Bureau Chief gets a salary of $2,500, and it is pretty well settled that either Senator Hoffman, of Atlanta, or Colonel Benjamin F. Lee, of Elizabeth, will be named for the place. The members of the State Board of Arbitration get $1,200 each, and the candidates for membership to the board are many. The gentlemen whose terms are about to expire are: Samuel S. Sherwood, William M. Doughty, James Martin, Charles A. Houston and Joseph L. Moore. The Governor will also have the naming of six assistant factory inspectors who will get a salary of $900 each. As these deputies do not have to be confirmed by the Senate, Governor Voorhees has decided not to appoint them until after the Legislature adjourns.

A DESERVING OFFICIAL.

The meeting of the Borough Council last Monday Mayor Wilson made a deserving tribute to Borough Clerk Jos. K. Arnold. The Mayor commended the clerk for his efficiency and expressed the idea that he did not ask for the salary received than he actually supposed he did. The Mayor stated that hereafter the clerk would receive $600 for all services and that the fee usually received by him for making out licenses, and which fee is allowed by law, would be turned into the borough treasury. The Council enacted a new office—that of township auditor—and Mr. Arnold was appointed to that office with a salary of $200. Under the new arrangements Mr. Arnold will receive about $75 more per year than formerly.

SELFISH! SOMERSET.

Says the Somerville Democrat, the Bound Brook State Centre has got itself in an unpleasant frame of mind over the agitation of a Greater Plainfield and gives voice to the following wail:

The Plainfield Board of Trade has taken up the project of a committee to formulate plans for consolidating the city and borough under one government and so changing the county lines as to have both in the District of Somerville. Naturally the people of other parts of Somerset county will object to parting with the thriving borough while to take in the whole city would give Plainfield a supreme advantage in securing Somerset's county seat and other ambitious towns entirely in the shade. In fact, the whole scheme seems shady, and perhaps it will be well to wait and see what light the committee may be able to throw upon it.

A MINOR'S LIABILITY.

In Plainfield, where the installment business done by bicycle dealers with many minors is very large, the following will be of supreme interest, though of course it has no bearing on the contracts made in New Jersey, and on the contrary the State courts might make an entirely different interpretation in similar cases:

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has decided that a minor who has entered into a contract for the purchase of a bicycle on the installment plan may return the bicycle at any time and take back the full amount he has paid to the dealer. A number of lawyers have read the full text of this decision, but say that it is a strictly just one, although they were greatly surprised when they first heard of it, as the same point has arisen many times during the past few years and has always been decided the other way.

Acting Governor Foster M. Voorhees has written to the editor of the Morristown Chronicle, in reply to the request that he was drawing two salaries. His letter in effect is as follows: "I am entitled to draw the two salaries referred to in the Morristown Banner editorial; as a matter of course I shall not do so. I shall cover the salary attaching to the office as Senator into the treasury."

COLORED FARMERS' CONFERENCE.

Seven years ago Booker T. Washington, the greatest American negro of his time, called a conference of colored farmers of the south to meet at Tuskegee. The conference has come together annually ever since. It measures year by year the progress of the agricultural negro of the south. The movement has spread from Alabama into neighboring states until the Tuskegee conference that met recently included delegates from Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Mississippi and even Texas.

Unique and picturesque to a degree were the proceedings of the conference. The blacks of the southern agricultural districts are not hampered by conventionalism as the northern city negro is, and they spoke out in meeting exactly what they thought. There was a tendency manifested to whack the southern negro preacher. The resolutions adopted as the expression of the delegates declared for securing land, diversifying crops, raising fruit and poultry and "improving and purifying the character of the ministry." A brother from Creek Stand, Macon county, brought down the house by making report for Creek Stand as follows: "De colored people in Creek Stand have got 2,000 acres of land, and de preacher am still callin' fur more money dan he gits." He continued, "We gives de preacher all he is wuff, den we quits."

Booker T. Washington, the leader and moving spirit of the conference, made one of his characteristic speeches. Dull and insensate indeed the negro race of the south must be if Booker Washington's words do not rouse answering vibrations of courage and ambition in their souls. The negro leader bade them buy land and own their homes. He said: "I want every one of you to come here with the idea of getting something to make him better off than when he came here. Only a few of those we want to help are here, but we can come with the determination to make himself stronger and to go home and help others he will do great good." He bade them improve their schoolhouses, raise their own fruits, vegetables and meat and give their families decent homes to live in.

Eighty-five per cent of the southern negroes are agriculturists. These annual conferences are doing much to stimulate them to progress in civilization. We hope such help of their own negro race, however, in the educated young men and women of his own race who are willing to labor for their people.

The experiment that has been making in a small way during the past two years with the branding of female seal pups to make their skins valueless is reported successful. The only objection to this novelty, but the operation is soon over, and the seal can plunge into the depths of the sea to cool the burn. The branding is done so effectually that it destroys half the skin. The female seals pass to and fro in the ocean during the breeding season while engaged in the care of their young. With the skins branded and destroyed poachers will have no object in capturing the mother seals. The young males, technically called "bachelor seals," meantime can be herded during the closed season in the shallow waters of the breeding grounds at St. Paul island. Colonel Joseph Murray, United States treasury agent in charge of the seal islands, believes this plan will effectually preserve the American herds from extermination whether Great Britain co-operates with us or not.

The United States government needs a factory of its own for the manufacture of smokeless powder. An appropriation for this purpose was asked for in the last estimate of expenses in his department made by the secretary of the navy. Such a factory complete would cost nearly $100,000. It should be built at once. If war should occur now with any foreign nation, the government would be seriously crippled for want of powder. It could not buy any from foreign nations, for that would be a breach of the law of international neutrality after war had actually begun.

The time is coming when mechanical power can be transmitted electrically hundreds, perhaps thousands, of miles. It may be that ocean tides will run machinery in the interior of the country. Already lines are being constructed to supply power and light for San Francisco from streams in the Sierra Madre mountains. The current will be sent over a line 110 miles long.

Professor W. J. McGee has an idea all his own. It is that we can bore down deep into the earth and get hot water and air in limitless supply. The great Ponce de Leon hotel at St. Augustine is now heated with water pumped up from a very deep artesian well. There is something creepy in the idea, however, especially to a person educated in the old fashioned way.

If there was ever anything hopelessly fiendish and infernal beyond the possibility of excuse or forgiveness, it is the present attempt of certain speculators to manipulate and make money out of stocks by stirring up a war scare. Those who do it will meet the judgment their crime calls for.

The two new regiments of artillery to be raised immediately by order of congress will increase that arm of the service to 7,000 men, seven regiments.

LATE RETURNS SHOW SOME BIG SURPRISES.

Union County Board of Freeholders May Be a Tie.

MR. ROLL, TROLLEY KING, ELECTED.

If Elizabeth Goes Democratic Next Month the County Legislature Will Be Composed of Eight Democrats and Eight Republicans—Election in Spring-field Was Hotly Contested—Summit Went Democratic—Results in Other Towns.

Latest returns from the township elections in Union county show some big surprises in the freeholder contests. Should Elizabeth elect four Democratic freeholders next month the new board would stand eight Republicans and eight Democrats, with one Independent Republican. Freeholder Wahl, Republican, of New Providence; Freeholder Swain, Democrat, of Summit; Freeholder Robinson, Republican, of Fanwood; Freeholder Burnet, Democrat, of Union, and Freeholder Boll, Republican, of Springfield, were all re elected by nearly the usual majorities. A feature of the elections was the very heavy vote polled in most of the townships, it being only exceeded by that cast at a Presidential election.

The election in Springfield was the most hotly contested held in years, and the vote was unusually large for a township election. The fight was over the office of chosen freeholder, and J. Martin Roll was re-elected to the board by a plurality of 11 votes. His total was 91, against 80 for Lewis T. Terry, the Prohibition candidate, and 56 for Dr. T. J. Jackson, the Democratic candidate.

Early in the morning a so called "Independent Republican ticket" bearing the names of the regular Republican nominees, except that Terry's name was in the place of Roll's for freeholder, made its appearance. Thirty-seven of these tickets found their way into the ballot box. The Prohibition vote was 43 and the Democratic 61.

Mr. Boll and his friends were greatly pleased over his victory. George MacDonald, who was recently appointed postmaster at Springfield, was supported by Mr. Roll, who declared Mr. Terry, the opposing candidate for the place, to be a "Mugwump." Mr. Terry and Mr. Roll were candidates for the Republican nomination for freeholder, and after the latter had been nominated Mr. Terry accepted the Prohibition nomination, and made an energetic canvass in the effort to defeat Mr. Roll.

The entire Republican ticket, except Mr. Roll, was elected by 63 plurality, and is as follows: Township committeeman, three years, Albert P. Carter; justice of the peace, unexpired term, Ezra B Squire; constable, three years, Isaac R. Howard; commissioner of appeals, three years, Theodore Squire; surveyors of highways, George W. Goff and Abraham J. Kolster; poundkeepers, Nathan C. Merwin, George W. Goff, Christopher Thomas and Thomas Lamb.

The entire Democratic ticket was elected in Summit with the exception of constable. George C. Hand, the Democratic candidate for township committeeman, defeated A. M. Jones, Republican, by twelve majority. The other successful Democratic candidates are: Freeholder, William H. Swain; assessor, James W. Reeves; justice of the peace, LeRoy Gibby; commissioner of appeals, Alexander A. Taylor and J. F. Chamberlain; overseer of the poor, John Kelly; surveyors of highways, Patrick Kelly and Martin Funcheon; poundkeepers, James Moore, William A. Sayre, William Eagan and James Eakley.

John F. Wahl was re elected chosen freeholder in New Providence on the Republican ticket by a majority of fifty. Jasper Fuchs, the Democratic candidate for member of the township committee, was defeated.

Cranford defeated Freeholder George W. Littell, Republican, by about 200 majority, his successful opponent, Emmor K. Adams, being elected by a combination of Republicans and Democrats on a Citizens' ticket.

In Clark township every vote but one in the township was cast, and Major Ben King, Republican freeholder, was only re elected by four majority.

Linden, a strong Republican township, furnishes the greatest surprise. Hugh Nicholson, Republican, was beaten by twenty-eight votes for freeholder by Francis T. Higgins, Democrat.

Light Vote in Somerset.

Returns from all townships in Somerset county show that the spring elections resulted in a light vote and small Democratic gains. In Bridgewater township, the county seat, the Democratic ticket was elected. Jas. Ten Eyck, Democrat, defeated William Hodgson, Republican, for township committeeman. The township of Bernards, Branchburg and Hillsborough elected Oliver H. Perry, Edward E. Hoagland and John S. Everett as Democratic freeholders. In North Plainfield and Franklin G. G. VanCleef and Andrew Lutkins were elected as Republican representatives. The Board now stands eight Democrats and two Republicans.

SACRED TO MEMORY OF THE VETERANS.

G. A. R. Men Want a More Solemn Memorial Day.

ARRANGING FOR ITS OBSERVANCE.

The Exercises This Year Will Seek to Impress the Rising Generation as That Sports and Recreations of the Holiday Will Give Way to Deeper Reverence for the Dead Heroes—Plans for This Year—Committee in Charge.

The committee from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., having in charge the observance of Memorial Day held its first meeting last Thursday and discussed a number of plans for the coming event. The committee consists of I. L. McVoy, chairman; Charles B. Stephens, secretary; Elmore D. Moffett, William Day, Col. Mason W. Tyler and Capt. J. Frank Hubbard.

The event this year will be different in many respects from previous celebrations. The sense of the committee seems to be that heretofore the day has been made too much of a gala day and that there has been too much of a Fourth of July spirit manifested. They recognize that the celebration should be made as sacred as possible, and should be given up to solemn thoughts of the dead heroes. Starting with these suggestions for a basis, the committee are strongly impressed that the great hurrah usually attend ant upon such occasions should be done away with.

As one member of the committee said, "We cannot put a stop to bicycle racing, baseball and sports in general, but we should set an example for the younger generation to follow that will lead them to regard the day as sacred as possible. There is no doubt but what the day in previous years has been desecrated and made an occasion for joyfulness, and it is the intention of the committee to turn about and place a proper reverence on the day."

On the morning of May 30th the veterans and school children will march to the various cemeteries with martial music and decorate the graves of the departed veterans. This will be done by the post members as a body and special details will not be sent out as heretofore.

During the day the members of the Woman's Relief Corps have been obliged to work hard to make the proper arrangements with school children for the observance of the day. This year it is planned that the women shall be relieved somewhat from this arduous task. There will not, probably, be the usual chorus of school children to sing, but instead a male quartette will be substituted to sing patriotic songs, while a band of music will be present at the memorial service in the afternoon which will be held in either Music Hall or Reform Hall.

The committee accepted the invitation of Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, to attend divine service at the above church the Sunday evening before Decoration Day.

Charles Stephens and William Day compose the committee on music, flags and hall, while Elmore D. Moffett, Mason W. Tyler and J. Frank Hubbard compose the committee having in charge the securing of appropriations and speakers. Wm. Day is a committee of one to take charge of the matter of decorating the graves and he will select his assistants. The whole committee will meet again Wednesday evening, March 23d, at the office of Elmore D. Moffett, on North Avenue, when further arrangements will be made.

FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

A Somerville Man Brings Suit Against a Westfield Corporation

Walter L. Chapman, an accountant, living in Somerville, has brought suit in the Supreme Court against the Iron Clad Rheostat Company, a corporation manufacturing electrical apparatus at Westfield. The suit is for $1,000 for breach of contract

Chapman entered the employ of the concern as accountant some time ago. He purchased a quantity of stock which he claims was to be repurchased in case he was discharged from the employ of the company. Some time ago he was discharged, but the stock was not repurchased by the other stockholders. So he has brought suit through his attorneys, Murphy & Blatz, of this city.

Committee Conference.

On the evening of March 29th, a conference of missionary committees of the Christian Endeavor Societies of Union county, will be held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church. Miss Alice Woodland, of the borough, superintendent of this branch, will have charge of the meeting.

Commissioners of Deeds.

The following new commissioners of deeds were appointed for Somerset by the Legislature Thursday: Bridgewater—John R. S. Lane, Joseph K. Parker; Franklin—Thomas Cooper; Hillsborough—Peter N. Van Nuys; North Plainfield—John H. VanWinkle, Jr., and David D. Smalley.

STARTLING, BEYOND BELIEF.

VIOLA HAGGERTY TOTALLY BLIND SINCE BIRTH, IS SUDDENLY RESTORED TO SIGHT BY THE BOY PHENOMENON.

The Most Stupendous Achievement of all His Many Wonderful Cures in Plainfield.

The past six weeks the citizens of Plainfield have been electrified, dumbfounded, bewildered, and finally convinced by a most wonderful occurrence. Nearly every day for years that time reports have reached the public press of phenomenal cures being performed upon many well-known citizens, by a young man called the Boy Phenomenon.

While he has daily been accomplishing cures of the most chronic and aggravated cases that for years have defied the skill and ability of the most eminent and learned practitioners, it was not until this week that one cure in particular was accomplished, which was so truly marvelous and phenomenal in its rapidity, that even those standing in charge, who had previously pronounced the case incurable, could hardly realize a cure had been effected. Such a wonderful power to overcome has made rapid progress in treating with disease in every form. Research and study have brought to light many wonderful cures in the realm of healing humanity, without doubt the greatest and grandest discovery known in the annlas of medical science for the benefit of mankind. Strange to say, it centres on human or vital magnetism as the one great healing power whose potency is unquestioned and unrivaled.

Today, in the office of the Boy Phenomenon is so strong and subtle in its effects that he cures the most difficult cases of chronic diseases, often with a single treatment. He stands unapproached and unapproachable, meeting with the most signal and surprising success after all others have failed, while the competent hands the dazzling noontide of his brilliant career. The light of the marvelous cures he has accomplished in Plainfield is destined to be reflected in the sick, astonishing to the most incredulous, and converting the rankest skeptic to his most enthusiastic following. The common people begin to stand aloof and wonder and marvel at his miraculous success.

One of the many surprising cures effected last week is that of little Viola Haggerty, blind since birth. The following statement from her mother needs no further comment.

To the Public:

I, Mrs. W. H. Haggerty, residing at 41 Chatham street, Plainfield, hereby state that my daughter Viola, 9 years of age, has been totally blind since birth. Doctors had told me she would never be able to see anyway, I took her to the Boy Phenomenon, after she was examined by Dr. Levaseur, consulting physician to the Boy Phenomenon, who said the chances of benefiting her eyes were slight, I would let him take the case. So we were leaving the office when the Boy Phenomenon entered, and seeing her sightless eyes filled with tears, placed his hands over her eyes she was able to see objects the first time in her life. I was surprising none am surprised us by calling our attention to different things she saw. She has had three treatments since and her sight is growing strong daily. Words cannot express the deep gratitude I felt at her sight being restored.

Mrs. W. H Haggerty.

I can cheerfully verify the above statements of facts, as I am personally acquainted with Mrs. Haggerty and know the pitiful condition of her daughter Viola, previous to her visiting the Boy Phenomenon, and was myself present when the miracle was performed, and saw her after 11 days she is still able to see.

Mrs. J. H. Carney.

"AMERICA'S SONG MAKERS"

DELIGHTFUL MUSICAL LECTURE.

A Picturesque and Entertaining Talk—The Lecturer Referred to Several Composers.

Plainfield music lovers had an unusual treat Thursday in the delightful lecture on "America's Song Makers," given in the Casino by Mrs Alfred Chester Coursen, under the auspices of the Rasores and the Woman's Parliamentary Club.

The pretty little Casino stage presented a charming appearance, arranged as an outdoor drawing room. Mrs. Coursen, whose bright, sympathetic face attracted her audience at once, was introduced by Charles W. McCutcheon. She began her talk, which was picturesque and entertaining throughout, with an account of the earliest music of America, that of the Indians; showing charts of the picture-writing which is the Indians written music, and then singing the weird but surprisingly melodious songs. The African slave songs, with their plaintive beauty, followed, and then the transition was easy to Stephen C. Foster's 'Old Kentucky Home," which provoked much applause. The composer of whose songs Mrs. Coursen then gave example were not spoken of in any chronological order, but were arranged to alternate grave and gay, simple and elaborate. The composers, of whose life Mrs. Coursen made some brief mention, were DeKoven, MacDowell, Bevin, Gerrit Smith, Foote, Neidlinger, Loomis, Chadwick, Margaret Ruthven Lang and Dudley Buck. The song which seemed to best please the audience was Nevin's "Oh, That We Two Were Maying," which Mrs. Coursen was obliged to repeat. Mrs. Coursen has a sweet, well modulated and intensely sympathetic voice, which was exceedingly pleasing. Her accompaniments were played by Miss Ellington Lum.

A. F. Naylor, of Hopewell, has taken up his residence in this city at the home of John Holder, 207 West Fifth street.

ROBUST GIRLS PLAY GOOD BASK BALL

The Senior and Third Classes Meet in the Gymnasium.

ROUGH PLAYING WAS AVOIDED.

The Fair Contestants Attired in Bicycle Suits and Red Sweaters—Excellent Exercise and Within the Bounds of Modesty and Propriety—Both Sides Showed Acquaintance With the Rules of the Game—Names of Players and Results.

The public had its first glimpse of basket ball as played by the girls of the Plainfield High School Friday afternoon, on the upper floor of the Whittier building. The room has been converted into a gymnasium for the benefit of the girls. It was a match game between teams composed of the girls of the Senior and of the Third classes. The public, in this case, was confined to the friends of both teams who were invited to witness the contest.

Now to the privileged ones who were present at the game it was a pleasant surprise. Those who have seen a basket ball game, as played by the local Y. M. C. A. team and their opponents, have considered the game as rather rough for school girls. By making a rule that when a player once secured the ball no effort should be made to knock it out of her hands, the rough play was eliminated. The game, as shown in the match of yesterday, proved itself an excellent exercise for any girl of ordinary abilities, and entirely within the bounds of modesty and propriety withall.

There was no uniform attire on the part of the girls. All wore the ordinary short bicycle skirt so much in vogue. Several of the Seniors wore red sweaters with the initials, "G. A. A.," standing for Girls' Athletic Association, in white letters on the front of the sweater. While embodying all the features necessary for the active exercise, there was nothing striking in the costumes.

The game itself was something of a surprise. Considering the short time since the introduction of the game among the school girls of Plainfield and the fact that the exercise was something of an entire new character to the girls, the progress that they have made was remarkable. As it was the first game before an audience, both sides felt that situation at first. As the game progressed, however, and the contest grew warmer, the fair players forgot the spectators lined up against the walls and played with rousing vigor.

The Seniors were the first to gain courage and, as a result, they took the lead for the first half. When time was called for the end of the first half, the score stood 10 to 6, in favor of the higher class.

With the beginning of the second half the younger girls recalled the team play as directed by superintendent H. M. Maxson, who has coached that team of late. Their team play was certainly superior to that of the Seniors, although the latter did well. The younger girls seemed a trifle more agile and felt the lively exercise to a less degree. When time was called the score stood 16 to 16. Play was then continued until one side scored more. Miss Constance Patton, by a brilliant throw, made the winning goal for the Senior team. The final score was 18 to 16 in favor of the Seniors.

It would not be fair to the participants to mention the special work of anyone. By playing the side line game it was only possible for the forwards to make the goals. Miss Patton and Miss Loizeaux divided the work on the Senior team. The other team played into the hands of Miss Miner for the goal throwing and she made seven out of the eight.

The teams were composed of the following:

SENIOR CLASS.		THIRD CLASS.
L. Loizeaux	left forward	P. Denton
C. Patton	right forward	E. Mina
C. Long	centre	E. Morse
M. Stillman	left guard	H. Matson
E. Osgood	right guard	A. Morgan
A. Kirby

Walter L. Long, coach of the Senior team, officiated as referee. The umpires were Superintendent H. M. Maxson and George Proctor Smith.

Be sure of Hall's Catarrh Cure.

Genuine Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. GAVE A YANKEE SOCIABLE.

WAS CRIGINAL AND ENTERTAINING

Queen Esther Band of Grace M. E. Church Illustrated Songs in a Very Unique Manner.

Grace M. E church was well filled last Thursday with an audience that was thoroughly delighted with the Yankee sociable given by the members of Queen Esther Band of the church. The affair was a novel one. There were three parts to the entertainment, all of a musical nature. Part first consisted of the rendition of popular airs on the piano by Bert Simpson, who played a few notes of each song. Each person was given a piece of paper and a pencil. As the songs were given in brief they were supposed to guess the title and jot it down. Some of the guesses were very amusing.

Part second was devoted to the illustration of popular songs by tableaux, as follows: "Coming Through the Rye," Carrie Pangborn; "Star Spangled Banner," Edna Sebring, Frances Culp, Margaret Darby, Mildred Long; 'Peek-a Boo," Edna Sebring, Frank Culp and Margaret Darby took part, while George Voehl's St. Bernard dog was a prominent character. Ada VanHorn, Ethel Noe, Ethel Stout standing behind a copy of the New York Times, represented the song "Just Behind the Times." Edna Sebring and Frances Culp dressed in gowns of blue, represented "Two Little Girls in Blue." The St. Bernard dog was sent after a small ball thrown by George Voehl, Jr., thus representing "After the Ball." Edna Sebring, Frances Culp and Margaret Darby represented 'Little Fisher Maiden" by sitting in a canoe. "The Street Musician" was represented by Harry Schuck who played a violin and received compensation from Winnie Carroll as John Carney who were supposed to be playing on the streets. The song of "Marguerite" was interpreted by Marguerite Darby who stood close by a Marguerite plant. "See Saw" was represented by John Carney who was sawing wood.

The last part of the programme was a representation of terms used in music.

At the close a silver collection was taken and the whole affair netted about $10. Miss Nellie Valiant, as president of the band, was in charge, and she was assisted by Miss Marguerite Schuck and Miss Della Voehl.

CLING FAST TO THE FEES.

Republican Leaders Oppose the Bill for Salaried County Officials.

The surrogates and county clerks of New Jersey are up in arms over the bill introduced into the Senate which proposes to take away all their fees and put them on salaries. The bill was probably introduced for the purpose of making capital for the Republican party on the ground that it was an economic move. But the bill has already reached the breakers. The Republican leaders who, two years ago, were enthusiastically advocating the abolition of the fee system in the State offices find that when the principle is extended to the profitable county offices, such as that of surrogate and county clerk, there is a decided protest.

Senator Stokes, of Cumberland county, has come out flat-footed against the measure. He thinks that the county clerks earn their money and are worth more than the salary provided for them in the bill.

The measure provides that the county clerks, surrogates and registers of deeds shall receive the same salaries, and are provided for as follows: Atlantic county, $2,200; Bergen, $4,500; Burlington, $4,500; Camden, $5,200; Cape May, $1,500; Cumberland, $3,000; Essex, $7,500; Gloucester, $2,200; Hudson, $7,500; Hunterdon, $2,200; Mercer, $4,900; Middlesex, $4,700; Monmouth, $4,700; Morris, $4,500; Ocean, $1,500; Passaic, $5,600; Salem, $1,800; Somerset, $2,300; Sussex, $1,800; Union, $4,900; Warren, $2,200.

In this provision, the second-class counties are the greater sufferers. In some of them, such as Mercer, the county clerks and surrogates find their offices exceedingly profitable. In Mercer county they are each worth to the incumbent from $15,000 to $18,000 a year, and a considerable amount of that money goes into the campaign funds of the Republican party when there are lively local or State elections.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. J. D. Runyon, of Park avenue, is detained at home by illness.

Mrs. Flaag, of Bassbrook Heights, is a guest of Plainfield friends.

Patrick Casey, of West Third street, is recovering from a badly sprained ankle.

Mrs. Williams, of Roxbury, Pa., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, of West End Park.

David Curtis, of Westfield, called on friends in Plainfield today. Mr. Curtis was formerly a resident of this city.

Mrs. William Drumpleman, of Rahway, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Tier, of Bank place.

VOICE FROM AN ASYLUM.

LAWS COMMITTING INSANE PERSONS UNJUST, SAYS JUDGE ULRICH.

The Former Plainfield Lawyer Writes to Senator Reed Urging a Commission to Revise Laws Caring for the Insane.

In the Senate Thursday Senator Reed, of Somerset, presented a petition from former Assemblyman John Ulrich, of Union, which brought up recollections that were not of the pleasantest to several of the members who listened to its reading.

Judge Ulrich set forth that the laws for the committal of insane persons to hospitals, sanitariums and similar institution are "palpably unjust, deficient, wrong, inequitable and contrary to the intent of the Constitution," and that the laws for the liberation of persons illegally committed to these institutions are equally deficient.

The former Assemblyman went somewhat into details to prove this latter allegation, and urged the attention of the Legislature to the subject with a view to securing remedial legislation. He concluded by asking that a joint legislative committee be appointed to investigate the different State hospitals for the insane.

Judge Ulrich was committed to the Trenton Asylum some years ago, but is now in a private sanitarium. He was at one time very prominent in State politics.

His petition was referred and there is a possibility of the appointment of a committee to make the investigation he considers.

MRS. THRIFTY'S DINNER.

A Novel Entertainment Given in the Congregational Church.

The Woman's Association of the Congregational church arranged a pleasing entertainment and social given in the church Friday evening.

The first part of the evening was spent in listening to a number of pretty selections rendered by Mrs. Buckley's Ladies' Orchestra, interspersed with recitations by Miss Pound, whose elocutionary ability is marked. The musical selections and recitations were heartily received by all and repeated encores were given.

Part second was devoted to the novel features of the programme. Each person present was given a printed programme which was headed "Mrs. Thrifty is to give a dinner party to some of her friends and has given her grocer a generous order. She is setting the table with suitable appointments, after which she will serve the menu."

The table furnishings were then guessed as follows:

"A brief sleep and relations," napkin; "A Sailor and part of a house," salt cellar; "A gang and the Latin for 'and'"; "A tool and a term of respect," saucer; "A dairy product and a baseball player," milk pitcher; "A letter and a horse's gait," decanter; "A family inheritance," plate.

Everything now being ready Mrs. Thrifty invited her friends to dinner and served the following menu:

"An insect and a letter," beef; "Maxim and an herb," sausage; "Timber and a fowl," woodcock; "Absalom's undoing," hare; "A thickening of the epidermis," corn; "Letter of the alphabet," peas; "Hasty pudding and part of a house," mushrooms; "A short visit, a personal pronoun and a part of a plant," cauliflower; "Difficult for a slow person to do," catchup; "A large city, a color and the staff of life," Boston brown bread; "Lists," rolls; "The fruit which made Norse gods immortal and a pitcher's term," apple pie.

The above caused plenty of fun and amusement for those present. The programme was concluded after refreshments were served. Mrs. Floyd Fuller, chairman of the association, was in charge, and she was assisted by Mrs. LaBoyteaux and Miss Chase.

Newark Classis Meet Here

Plainfield will be honored by a session of the Classis of Newark, Reformed church, Tuesday, April 12th. It will be the regular spring session of that body and will be held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, in the morning and afternoon.

—McDonough Brothers are prepared to deliver ice made from artesian water, to any part of the city in fifteen minutes after they receive the order. They handle Lehigh coal only. Telephone call 47.

—Edward White is offering some great values in the carpet department in rugs, matting, oilcloths and carpets. They placed on sale yesterday fifty handsome art squares at a remarkably low price.

—Retail merchants throughout the State are making a strong effort to have the Legislature declare the trading stamp business illegal, but the stamp people are also up and doing to thwart any such purpose. Senator Reed is arrayed on the side of the merchants.

WILL ANNEX HAWAII

Joint Resolution for That Purpose Reported to the Senate.

USES TREATY PROVISIONS

Action Decided On by the Committee on Foreign Relations—Sent to the Calendar—No Time Set for Discussion—Text of the Resolution.

Washington, March 17.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations yesterday agreed to recommend that the Hawaiian Islands be annexed by legislation in open session, and agreed upon a joint resolution for the accomplishment of this purpose, which Senator Davis afterward reported to the Senate.

The resolution went to the calendar, and Senator Davis did not give any notice of calling it up. The following is its text:

Section 1. The tender and the agreement of Hawaii having in due form signified its consent in the manner provided by its constitution to cede absolutely and without reserve to the United States of America all rights of sovereignty of whatsoever kind in and to the Hawaiian Islands and to their dependencies, also to cede and transfer to the United States the absolute fee and ownership of all public buildings or edifices, forts, harbors, military equipment and all other public property of whatever kind and description belonging to the Government of the Hawaiian Islands, together with every right and appurtenance thereunto appertaining, the same be it

"Resolved, That said cession is accepted, ratified and confirmed and that the said Hawaiian Islands and their dependencies be and they are hereby annexed as a part of the territory of the United States, and are subject to the sovereign dominion thereof, and that all and singular the property and rights hereinbefore mentioned are vested in the United States of America.

The resolution then adopts the language of the treaty beginning with the second paragraph of the second section, down to the end of the treaty, but does not cite it as a part of the treaty.

Those sections provide for the disposition of Hawaiian public lands, for the temporary government of the islands until Congress decides upon a permanent form of government, the relations of Hawaiian treaties and preservation of Hawaiian customs conditions until those of the United States shall be put into operation the status of the public debt of Hawaii by the United States to the extent of $4,000,000, the regulation of Chinese immigration, the appointment by the President of five commissioners to prepare a code of laws for the government of the islands.

It also provides that the commissioners provided for shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The last three sections appropriate for the third and last sections for the purpose of carrying the resolution into effect, and that $100,000 is made immediately available.

Senator Davis said no determination had been reached as to when the joint resolution would be called up for consideration in the Senate.

FATAL FIRE IN CHICAGO.

Several Men Killed by Leaping From a Burning Building.

Chicago, March 17.—A fire, in which eight persons are known to have lost their lives, broke out in the building at 215 and 217 Wabash avenue at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire started with an explosion on the top floor, and spread with remarkable rapidity. It was not under control until it had burned for over an hour. The loss is estimated to be about $1,000,000.

Those known to be dead are Miles Smith, Samuel Clark, Edward Binns, an unidentified woman and a negro janitor. Seven persons were injured and several are said to be missing. Among those missing is Policeman Rogers. It was believed at first that fully a score had been killed, but once the fire was under control many supposed to be dead were found unhurt.

The building was occupied by a number of firms dealing in musical instruments and photographic apparatus and supplies.

The entire front of the building was blown out by a terrific explosion followed by several others in rapid succession, and the entire building was quickly enveloped with flames.

Just what caused the explosion is not known, but it is supposed that they occurred in the rooms on the top floor occupied by a photographic supply house.

All those who lost their lives were killed by jumping or falling from windows from which they sought for help.

The building and contents are a total loss. In less than half an hour after the fire broke out the structure, which was one of the finest eight story and basement buildings in the city, was a mass of ruins.

VERDICT IS EXPECTED SOON.

Doubtless It Will Declare There Was An Outside Explosion.

Washington, March 17.—There is encouraging news in the prospect of an early completion of the report of the Board of Inquiry. Assistant Secretary Day is advised that the court, now at Key West, will not return to Cuba. All the evidence needed has been obtained, except as further investigation by the divers may bring additional confirmation to the theory of an external explosion. Captain Sampson could write the results of the investigation to-day if necessary.

Delay has been occasioned by the earnest attempt to discover the parties guilty of the awful crime. This has been extremely difficult, and may never succeed. The story that the report of the board is being withheld for a purpose is nonsense. A moment's reflection will show the absurdity of this view. There can be no object either of the administration or of the board itself in postponing the day of the verdict. To avoid delay is necessary in order that preparations for war may continue indicate a lack of thought. The record of the court of the board does not mean war unless it is shown that Spain ordered the Maine blown up.

The degree of Spain's responsibility must be determined before there is a demand for reparation, and this will take time enough. As an indication of the thoroughness of the administration to prove Spain's contributory negligence, or the more vigorous policy may be adopted of demanding indemnity against Spain, in which case Spain must prove that she is not responsible for what happened to the Maine.

These possibilities show that the receipt of the report of the Maine court of inquiry is not necessarily the climax of the situation. Spain's answer to the finding of the court will be of more significance than a report the substance of which already has been anticipated. Meantime the country may expect good friendly expressions and "representations" from the Spanish Minister at Washington.

Already Minister Polo is recognized as a more skillful diplomat than his predecessor, Dupuy de Lome. Polo apparently is so frank and free from guile that his statements almost carry the conviction of truth. Senor de Lome was smooth enough, but not such a consummate and accomplished dissembler as Senor Polo. The administration is on its guard.

WANAMAKER'S OPENING SPEECH.

Not Afraid of War, Says the Ex-Postmaster General.

Lancaster, Pa., March 17.—John Wanamaker, the merchant and former Postmaster General, opened his campaign for Governor here last night. Mr. Wanamaker will make the fight for the candidacy for the Business Men's League of Pennsylvania. He was greeted by an enthusiastic crowd of citizens.

Among other things, Mr. Wanamaker said:

"The beautiful white battleship that steamed out of New York harbor a month ago became a white coffin buried in the deep. She is dead of night. Without passing hasty judgment on our sister nation and willing to wait for the information, the air is full of the fear of treachery and dastardly brutality.

"We do not seek war, but we are not afraid of it. To Congress we have voted fifty millions into the President's hands for immediate use if necessary, we send loyal greeting, and say, make it a hundred millions if needed. To the Navy Department that bought two battleships yesterday we send cordial approval and give our consent to buy two more to-morrow.

"We are not clamoring for bloodshed, but we are swearing fidelity to the flag and insisting on justice to the honored dead and living."

WATSON FOR GOVERNOR.

Populists in Georgia Ignore His Advance Candidacy.

Atlanta, March 17.—Notwithstanding the declaration of Thomas E. Watson that he would not be a candidate for Governor this year, he was last night nominated by the Populist Convention amid a scene of the wildest political frenzy.

The full ticket is: For Governor, Thomas E. Watson; for Secretary of State, L. M. Jackson; for Comptroller, Gen. Benjamin Milliken; for Treasurer, J. H. Traylor; for Commissioner of Agriculture, W. L. Peek; for Attorney-General, Cary Thornton; for the Supreme Court, Walter B. Hill, Prohibitionist; Judge Lumpkin, Republican and Hal Lewis, Democrat and present incumbent.

There is little doubt Watson will enter the fight and work for the nominees of the convention, looking at it in the third person, and regard himself solely as a supporter of the Populist ticket.

Gov. Dyer Renominated.

Providence, March 17.—The Republican State Convention met yesterday, and Governor Elisha Dyer was renominated by acclamation, and William Gregory, of North Kingston, the present Senator from that town, was named as candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. Charles P. Bennett, of Providence, was nominated for Secretary of State; Willard B. Tanner, of Providence, for Attorney-General, and Walter A. Reed, of Gloucester, for General Treasurer. The platform adopted eulogized the work done by the Republican party, the many reforms instituted under that regime and the general favorable conditions of the finances of the State.

Peaceful Talk in Spain.

Madrid, March 17.—El Heraldo, in a very conciliatory article supposed in official circles to be inspired, indulges in pooh-poohing the "fiction that Spain desires to provoke a war," says:

"If the United States really wishes peace and limits herself to maintain it, let each go half way, and the pacification of Cuba and the tranquility of Europe will be accomplished."

PRESIDENTS POLICY

He Still Thinks There Will Be a Peaceful Settlement.

NO CHANGE IN HIS COURSE

Said That Arbitration Will Probably Be the Outcome—The President Aware That the Maine Was Blown Up by a Spaniard.

Washington, March 17.—A Cabinet officer who has a right to talk for the President, says:

"There has been no change in, the policy of the President in the present situation, and he is strictly of the opinion that there will be a peaceful settlement of the Maine matter. The President is handling the question with the utmost skill and wisdom."

The move made by the Spanish Government through Minister Polo, which was virtually asking the President to reverse his position, will have no effect. The action of the Sagasta Ministry is considered as a clever diplomatic move, and is made now for effect, not only in this country, but more especially upon foreign nations.

A Diplomatic Document.

The statement sent out by the Associated Press to the effect that Spain disclaimed that the United States directly with the insurgents and have them stop their war against Spain and give autonomy a proper trial, and at the same time withdraw the American fleet from the vicinity of Cuba, is in effect asking the administration to entirely reverse its policy. The statement given out was carefully worded, and it is stated that a diplomatic document was left with the State Department to the same effect.

While the Spanish Minister had no idea that the President would accede to Spain's request, this document will be, used to influence foreign governments to show that Spain made an appeal for a fair and uninterrupted trial of autonomy in the island, without the menace of the United States Navy, which gave the insurgents every hope that they would get aid from that country.

The State Department is still exceedingly reticent in regard to the Spanish Minister's call, butthe facts as stated are not denied, and it is generally known that the statement printed yesterday came from the Spanish Legation.

It can also be stated, as a Cabinet officer is quoted above, that there will be no change in the President's policy, and that he will not think for a moment of withdrawing the fleet from Key West, and will continue not only to use his efforts with the Cubans, but also with Spain for peace on the island.

There is still uncertainty at the Navy Department as to the exact time when the report of the Board of Inquiry will reach Washington. The orders have been issued to all officers and other officials to refrain from talking on the present situation have had the effect of closing the sources of inquiry at the Navy Department, and at the War Department, and it is very difficult to get even the routine information.

What a Senator Says.

An administration Senator, who had an hours' talk with Assistant Secretary Day yesterday, said, as he left the White House: "There is no doubt, dent, from what he knew, that there was no danger of open hostilities between the two countries. The Senator does not like to have his name used, but he said it was evident that the President,from his private sources, knew that the Maine had been blown up from external agency, and that while the Spanish Government was not directly responsible, the court would show that it was the work of Spanish miscreants, or sympathizers.

"This Government will demand an indemnity from Spain, but the administration knows, from recent investigations, that Spain will not be able to pay it. Spain will appeal to foreign nations on the ground that the inquiry into the explosion was an ex parte one, and that it had no participation in the investigation, and demand that it be left to arbitration."

Arbitration Probable.

The Senator said that with the example of the Alabama incident before this Government it was his opinion that arbitration would be the outcome, and that it would be some time before the question could be settled. He said it was his opinion that the President was requiring the Board of Inquiry to make a most thorough and exhaustive investigation, so that when the report was made he would have facts and positive evidence with which to make the demand upon Spain.

The Senator added that, while this evidently disposed of the Maine incident the Cuban question was still unsettled, and that he, President, was now hoping that the whole matter would be settled at one time, and the independence of Cuba and peace on the island be secured through the friendly diplomatic channels as the settlement of the Maine explosion.

In speaking about Spain's latest demand, Senator Hale said that he considered it merely a diplomatic scheme, and it would have no effect upon the administration.

Commander Brownson in London.

London, March 17.—Commander W. H. Brownson, United States Navy, who was ordered to New York March 1, to go aboard the American line steamship St. Paul for the purpose of making arrangements for the purchase of warships for the United States Government, arrived at Waterloo station at 6.55 last evening. Mr. Brownson said that he had a very enjoyable voyage, and that arrangements were not completed at the purchase of the Brazilian warship Amazonas by the American Government.

Spanish Trade Treaty Progressing.

London, March 17.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"The Cortes Commission, at its meeting to-day (Wednesday), approved the report relative to the basis of the treaty of commerce with the United States. Spain will concede certain reductions in tariff on condition that the United States grants benefits under the reciprocity clauses of the Dingley law."

CONGRESS WILL NOT ADJOURN.

The House and Senate Polled—227 Noes; 8 Yeas.

Washington, March 17.—Congress was polled yesterday on the question: "Are you in favor of the adjournment of Congress before the report of the Maine disaster is received and be*fore a settlement of the Cuban question* is made?"

The majority sentiment is overwhelmingly in favor of Congress remaining in session until both of these questions are settled. Many republicans in the House who feel very strongly on this matter refused to place themselves on record because they thought their opposition might show a lack of confidence in the President and his policy. They argue with Chairman Cannon of the Appropriation Committee that in any circumstance Congress will be in session for six weeks yet transacting routine business, and they confidently anticipate that before the expiration of that period the Maine disaster and the Cuban question will have been settled.

Should it become evident that there is an intention to adjourn Congress before these two questions are disposed of almost to a man these Republicans would vote to remain here all summer if necessary.

House Democrats are almost unanimously against an early adjournment of Congress. In this position they have the support of the Populists, Fusionists and Silverites.

In the Senate an adjournment resolution could not pass. Enough Senators have expressed themselves against adjournment to make sure that Congress will remain in session.

The following is the result of the poll:

Total number of nays, House and Senate, 227.

Total number of yeas, House and Senate, 8.

Total number of non-committal, House and Senate, 113.

Washington, March 17.—Gen. Grosvenor, referring to the reports that are current respecting the adjournment of Congress, says that the report that President McKinley had fixed a date for the adjournment, or that he had any desire, wish or expectation that Congress should adjourn at one time rather than at another was not only without foundation, but ridiculous beyond expression. Congress alone and the Constitution, he said, could fix the date.

MAHER WON QUICKLY.

Disposed of Steve O'Donnell in the Second Round.

Philadelphia, March 17.—Peter Maher finished up Steve O'Donnell in short order in the Academy of Music last night. In after stopping the fight in the second round, when Steve was so groggy that he was all but knocked out. At the end of the first round Maher was to have been six rounds, Maher objected to O'Donnell wearing bandages on his right wrist, this was quickly settled by the Australian removing them.

In the second round Maher began hostilities by landing a left on the ear and a right on the face. O'Donnell came back with a left on Maher's ear. Peter landed a left on the jaw and Steve, sending O'Donnell down.

Maher walked to his corner as if it was all over. O'Donnell got up and went to him. Maher turned and rushed O'Donnell into his corner and banged away at him. Steve went to his knees and stayed there in a groggy condition and the referee stopped the one-sided contest.

Gen. Miles Reviews the Troops.

New York, March 17.—Madison Square Garden, decorated within with bunting and the flags of all the States of the Union, and with the Stars and Stripes flying from every balcony, presented a scene of animation last night. It was the most interesting night in point of attendance that the athletic portion of the military athle9 tournament has known, and standing room was at a premium, even in the upper balconies. Major-General Nelson A. Miles, the Commander of the United States Army, came to review the militiamen and the regular troops who have taken part in the tournament.

The review, of course, was the feature of the night's entertainment, for the 8,000 spectators were anxious to see the boys in blue massed before their commander-in-chief. He was anxious, too, to catch a glimpse of the man who would direct the movements for their defense in case of war.

Death of Thomas McKean.

Philadelphia, March 17.—Thomas McKean, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of this city, died last night. A few days ago Mr. McKean suffered a stroke of paralysis and his condition grew steadily worse. His wealth is estimated at between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000. Mr. McKean was president of the North Pennsylvania Railroad, and a director of the Reading Railroad, the Philadelphia Valley Railroad and the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, as well as several financial institutions. He was a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania. *His gifts to the latter aggre*gated more than $300,000. He was born in 1816. His great-grandfather, Thomas McKean, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence and Chief Justice and Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

A man who has returned from the Klondike to his home in Shreveport says the gold-fields are not visited by the work of transportation companies, and he warns all who intend to go to Alaska to abandon the idea.

SPAIN REMONSTRATES

Our Preparations Indirectly Encourage Cuban Insurgents.

PREJUDICIAL TO AUTONOMY

Views of the Spanish Cabinet Concerning Our Emergency Measures and the Assembling of Ships at Key West Communicated to State Department.

Washington, March 17.—The war preparations being made by the United States, the assembling of ships at Key West, the purchase of cruisers abroad and the emergency measures in the War and Navy Departments, have come to the official attention of the Spanish Government, and the views of the Spanish Cabinet thereon have been communicated to the State Department.

*This has not taken the form of pro*test, however, as it does not appear that the Spanish Government claims or asserts the right to question such internal measures as the United States may adopt, even though they be of a character to indicate preparations for war. It is rather by way of representations, conveyed in a friendly spirit and without threat, as to the serious influence which these warlike preparations will have in encouraging the Cuban insurgents at the moment when the autonomy plan is to have its crucial trial through the Cubans, and that to this way defeat the reforms Premier Sagasta is seeking to carry out. It has been specially pointed out that the presence of the fleet of United States war ships at Key West cannot be regarded as a friendly measure, as the sending of ships was officially represented when they were first sent to Havana and the Viscaya returned the complimentary visit.

In short, the presence of this extensive fleet near Cuba, together with the war measures taken by the United States, are regarded by Spain as seriously prejudicial to the policy of autonomy to Cuba, which the United States have alike approved, and an indirect encouragement to the insurgents in defeating the desires of both the Spanish and Cuban people of that policy. Finally, and in the same spirit of friendly representation rather than of protest Spain has pointed out that a war by the United States, and for Spain under such circumstances would be unjustifiable before the world, and a crime *against humanity and civiliza*tion.

The representations contained no reference whatever to the Maine disaster or to redress or indemnity therefor.

The published semi-official statement of the Spanish Cabinet's views as to the responsibility of the Spanish Government in the situation has created a profound impression.

Officials decline to discuss it publicly, but there is general belief among them that the publication marks the beginning of a new chapter in the troubled relations between the United States and Spain.

The statement is believed to be a first step toward forming public opinion in Europe in anticipation of a failure on the part of the Spanish officials in the success of the autonomous programme which it had outlined, and that an attempt is to be made to place the responsibility upon the United States for any failure that may follow. This movement is regarded as adding much to the gravity of the present situation.

The Administration will be influenced by the suggestion that the presence of the fleet of the North Atlantic Squadron at Key West is a disturbing factor in the belief for a moment. Visible evidence of that determination was the ceaseless activity of the naval officials as well as the secrecy surrounding the plan of the War Department to-day.

Although the Secretary of the Navy is still pursuing with vigor his quest for suitable warships that may be purchased in Europe, beyond the two already secured at the Armstrong works, no further acquisitions have been made.

INDEMNITY FOR THE MAINE.

Treasury Auditor Morris Says President Will Demand It When Time Arrives.

*Cleveland, March 17.—Frank H. Mor*ris, Fourth Auditor of the Treasury and a personal friend of President McKinley, who is at present in Cleveland, in speaking of the Cuban question, said:

"There will be no war. Whatever the agency was, the officials at Washington are positive that the Spanish officials had nothing to do with the blowing up of the Maine. The President, when the time arrives, will demand an indemnity and it will be paid."

Mr. Morris' department has charge of the work of settling the claims of the heirs of those lost by the Maine disaster. "We have found on investigation that out of 378 men who were on the boat, 63 were foreigners," said Mr. Morris.

"Of the 253 who were killed we have succeeded in getting into correspondence with 127 claimants. It will surprise you to know that less than 10 per cent of the number had insurance, depending on them and many have no direct heirs."

Powderly Confirmed.

Washington, March 17.—T. V. Powderly was confirmed as Commissioner of Immigration by the Senate in executive session yesterday, by the vote of 43 to 20. Senator Chandler was the only Republican who cast his vote against confirmation, while many of the Democrats voted for Mr. Powderly. Senator Hann made a brief speech in which he asserted that Mr. Powderly's support of the Republican ticket in the Ohio campaign was not the result of any collusion or bargain.

Praises Moderation of Americans.

London, March 17.—Mr. Sidney Low, formerly editor of the St. James Gazette, has written a long letter from New York extolling the moderation of the Americans on the subject of Cuba, and declaring the British would not have endured such savagery at their doors," adding, "the Spaniards would have been cleared out of Cuba, bags and baggage, long ago."

TO FORTIFY THE DRY TORTUGAS.

Gen. Wilson Expected to Make Report to Government on the Island.

Washington, March 17.—Gen. John H. Wilson, chief of engineers who has been in the south inspecting the forts and looking over our coast defenses, is expected to make a report to the Government this week. It is understood that his report will contain plans for the fortification of Tortugas quarantine station which lies off the coast of Florida below Key West. While South he made an examination of the islet of Key West, and 128 miles southwest of Cape Sable, the most southerly point of mainland in Florida. One of these ten isles is Garden Isle, upon which Fort Jefferson was built under the direction of General Totten, who instituted what was known as the masonry forts, which formed our only line of seacoast defense from 1850 until 1870.

The Federal Government in 1870 began to discard the solid forts of brick and stone for the more modern breastworks of earth and concrete, which have a greater power of resisting the more powerful rifles of latter days. This work was done by the War Department lent Fort Jefferson and other adjoining islands to the Treasury Department for the use of quarantine station between this country and Cuba. At present it is in a defenseless condition and is a positive source of danger, as it could be occupied by an enemy as a base of naval and military operations.

The most essential features of the defenses would be the mounting of heavy guns, and with these the harbor would give one of the best protected roadsteads in Southern waters. The main defenses are on Tortugas (meaning Turtle) Island, and occupy practically the entire island, although a small narrow coral reef sweeps around it, affording additional shelter. The fort is known as Fort Jefferson. It is a three-story brick structure, with casements, the walls being 4 feet 3 inches thick. The garrison quarters are in these casements, the old plan being to place the artillery in the upper stories and the infantry below. The Fortifications Board, headed by Gen. Miles, some time ago decided that the islands were necessary as a part of the system of coast defenses.

The naval scheme for defense of the coast as laid down in the plans of the Naval War College last summer also contemplated the islands as a base. Of operations while the board appointed by Secretary Long selects sites for dry docks last fall also devoted considerable space in its report to showing the importance of the islands from a strategic point of view. The anchorage is probably better than that of Key West. This fact is made evident by the preference for the Tortugas harbor as a rendezvous for Sicard during the rendesvous of the North Atlantic Squadron now in progress.

FRENCH NAVY ACTIVE.

The Fleet Reported as Preparing to Mobilize—To Aid Russia.

Paris March 17.—The Aurore affirms that the French fleet is being prepared for mobilization, adding that feverish activity prevails at all the arsenals and shipyards which are working until 10 o'clock at night.

Continuing, the Aurore says the French northern squadron at Cherbourg is ready for immediate departure. Steam is up and the men are being swung during the night, at Cherbourg, for the adjustment of their compasses.

Finally, it is asserted that, in order to complete the number of officers, second-year students are to be appointed midshipmen, and all the admirals have been instructed to arrange their plans to join twenty-four hours after being summoned.

The Aurore explains that the mobilization is conected with preparations to support Russia, by a naval demonstration in the far East.

Spain Has Not Bought the O'Higgins.

Washington, March 17.—Secretary Long stated to-day emphatically that the War Department had hopes that they would secure the Chilian armorclad O'Higgins; that their belief was based on information received from Lieut. Colwell, naval attache at London. Secretary Long said that he had positive assurance that the Spanish Government had not purchased the ship as yet.

London, March 17.—The announcement that Spain has bought the warship O'Higgins of Chili is now absolutely denied. It is reported that the United States are now negotiating for the ship.

Benson Bank of Erie Closed.

Erie, Pa., March 17.—The Benson Bank, owned by the late Judge William Benson of Waterford, did not open for business yesterday morning, and a long line of depositors gathered around the building. No statement of assets and liabilities has yet been given out, but it is believed the assets will equal the debts. A committee has been selected to audit the accounts of the bank.

"President's Own" Troops Organize.

Canton, March 17.—A regiment of 600 volunteers, to be known as "The President's Own," has been provisionally formed here. All the officers have been named, subject to the approval of Governor Bushnell. James McKinley, a nephew of the President, is sergeant.

STUDENT SELF-RULE.

A SUCCESSFUL EXPERIMENT IN COLLEGE GOVERNMENT.

A Five Years' Test Near a Large City—Broken Rules and Penalties—College Authorities May Recall the Charter to Will.

Most colleges give free play to the democratic instinct only in the informal and unofficial life of the students, and have had to submit to the powers that be in the matter of government. In the few instances outside of Bryn Mawr, in which self-government has been tried it has not been thoroughly successful, probably because the attempt has not been completed at Bryn Mawr, however, the entire government of the students has been placed in the hands of the students, and a most successful record is shown of a government of the people, for the people, and by the people.

Up to 1892 the conduct of the students was entrusted to themselves, and a system of government almost public opinion successfully met the needs of the then comparatively small community. In that year, owing to the increasing size of the college and the corresponding complication of community life, the rule of unformulated public opinion was found inadequate, and the Student's Association for Self-Government was formed, and a charter drawn up to give definite expression to the hitherto unwritten laws. The authorities and dean of the college formally conferred on and intrusted to the association cognizance of all matters concerning student life which do not fall under the jurisdiction of the authorities, which is strictly academic, or under that of the mistresses of the halls of residence.

The sphere of the mistress includes everything pertaining to household arrangements, the management of servants, the various times and seasons, such as the hours for meals, the hour for closing the halls, all purely domestic rules and regulations. If anything goes wrong in the household economy, complaint is made, not to the association, but to the mistress, and redress or remedy comes from her.

In accordance with the terms of the constitution the association must have a president and vice president, elected annually, who, ex-officio, are members of an executive board of five, the other three of which are likewise elected annually. This board is supplemented by an advisory board of ten, who act with the former when requested to do so, or when a difficult situation is to be met. At a meeting of the whole association in the autumn of each year the president and must be called at the request of ten students. The quorum is two-thirds.

There are several proctors in each hall of residence elected by the students of that hall, who are responsible for the daily conduct of the students and meet at regular periods to report to the executive board. The proctor system has proved fair and away the most expedient method of keeping general order and her often ungracious duty is lightened somewhat by the feeling of loyalty and personal responsibility which self-government arouses. A proctor is not a policeman, but an anchorage is probably better than that of Key West. This fact is made evident by the preference for the Tortugas harbor as a rendezvous for Sicard during the rendesvous of the North Atlantic Squadron now in progress.

The executive board has the power of inflicting penalties for breaches of the rules. The penalties are fines, which are issued by the executive board, by the power of inflicting penalties to enforce its decisions rests with the association at large. The extent of the association's independence of the college authorities is shown by the fact that it practically possesses the power of expulsion, inasmuch as it has the privilege of recommending the expulsion of a student to the authorities, who have given their promise to support the decisions of the body. In the event of an extreme measure being expulsion any student has an appeal to the association.

The five members of the executive board are possessed of great power and have jurisdiction over the conduct of some 300 fellow students, the association consisting of the whole body of students, graduate and undergraduate. It is therefore, of course, considered a great distinction to be a member of the board, and, indeed, the office demands no inconsiderable qualities both of mind and character. Tact, judgment, firmness, fairness, and above all, a level head are essential.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

GATERED TO THE TASTE FOR PICTORIAL ART.

Great Artists' Work Shown by King's Daughters.

AFFAIR HELD IN TRINITY CHURCH.

The Pictures Arranged in Artistic Manner Around the Sides of the Room—Charles Dana Gibson's Popular Subjects, as Well as the Work of Many Other Artists—Many Patrons There—The Names of Those Who Had the Unique Affair in Charge.

Lovers of the best in pictorial art were given a treat last evening by the exhibition of the work of the best known artists, which was held by the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters in the new parlors of Trinity Reformed church.

The pictures, of which there were fifty in all, were arranged in an artistic manner about the sides of the room. The entire collection was purchased from a New York publishing house and was representative of the best work of the artists represented.

Seven of the pictures were from the brush of Charles Dana Gibson. They included a sketch of "The Original Gibson Girl" and "A Voice that Was Beautiful." The latter picture represented a girl with dreamy eyes playing a guitar and singing, while a man and woman sit nearby with pensive faces, overcome by the charm of her voice

The collection of the pictures of Alice Barber Stephens was very full, and included some of the best in the collection "The Woman in the Home," "In the Whirl of Society" and "The Woman in Business," were among the best by this artist. A series of pictures beautiful, but some what idealized, were exhibited from the brush of W. L. Taylor. They included "Leisurely Lane," a lovers' scene, and "While the Heart Beats Young," and "Where Town and Country Meet."

Edwin A. Abbey, the master of illustrators, was represented by a single picture. "The Puritan Girl at Church." Other artists represented in the collection were Howard Pyle, A. B. Wenzel, Albert Lynch and Will Low.

The attendance of patrons was large and the pictures could readily. The members of the circle served chocolate and wafers to their guests, and ice cream and cake were on sale. A dime offering was received during the evening. The neat sum which was realized will be given toward the support of a city nurse who is engaged by the City Union of King's Daughters.

The Whatsoever Circle has eleven members, of whom the following were in attendance last evening: Miss Laura Emmons, Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mrs. J. F. MacDonald, Miss Lillian A. Force, Miss Elizabeth DeCamp, Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff, Mrs. Emily Cory, Miss Mabel Woodruff and Miss Minnie Williams.

Excellent music was rendered during the evening by the Epworth League orchestra, of Westfield. The members of the orchestra were W. C. Townsend, violin; John S. Burhans, Jr., violin; Herbert Pearsall, cornet; L. Pearsall, trombone; J. Hewitt, clarionet, and Miss Alice Crosby, accompanist.

Mrs. J. F MacDonald and Mrs. Will F. Williams presided at the refreshment table, and were assisted in the serving of Bueian tea and chocolate by Miss Etta Krymer. Miss Minnie Williams, Miss Edith DeBois and Miss Laura Williams. The cake and cream were served by Miss Emma Line, Miss Grace Emmons, Miss Nellie McGinnis, Miss Martha Cook, Miss Mabel Moore, Miss Nellie Hockridge, Miss Maud VanDyke and Miss Bertha Fisher. The receipts were in charge of Miss Mabel Woodruff.

The sale of pictures was conducted by Miss DeCamp, Mrs Frank E. Woodruff and Miss Lillian A Force.

No Cause for Action.

The case of Jacob Finger against John and William Miller was retried before Justice Speer, at Washingtonville, Monday. McNabb & Clark represented the plaintiff and S. S. Smackhamer and Horace Codington, of Stirling, the defendants. The Judge decided that there was no cause of action.

Doctors now agree that consumption is curable. Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced.

The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites.

To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if thin, you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

DEADLY CLUTCH OF FLAMES ON A WOMAN.

Fire Proved a Terrible Master in Westfield.

MRS. AMOS CLARK THE VICTIM

Tried to Prevent the Spread of Flames in a Field and She Became a Living Torch Before the Eyes of Her Family—Husband Smothered Out the Fire, But Not Until it Had Done its Fatal Work—Died in a Few Hours—Medical Skill of no Avail.

Fire proved a terrible master in Westfield Wednesday, Mch. 9th when it took the life of Mrs. Arthur Clark before the eyes of her husband and children.

The Clark family live on a farm on Mountain avenue about one mile from the railway station. The place was at one time the home of Mr. Clark's father, Amos Clark, who represented this district in congress. Clark, with the assistance of a hired man, was cleaning out the brush and other rubbish about the place that Wed. afternoon. In a field near the house a large heap of brush was placed and set on fire.

Clark went some distance down the road and stood talking with a neighbor when the two were suddenly startled by a series of piercing screams. They looked in the direction whence the sounds and saw Mrs. Clark with her dress in flames, making frantic efforts to free herself from the burning clutches of the fire.

She had gone into the field where the fire was spreading in the grass, and while attempting to stop its progress her clothing accidentally caught.

Clark ran to his wife's assistance and attempted to smother the flames with blankets. They were extinguished only after the clothing had been nearly all consumed.

The flesh was burned so badly that it began to peel as soon as Mrs Clark was carried to the house.

She lost consciousness soon after the accident.

Dr. J. B. Harrison, of Westfield, was hastily called and did all that was possible to relieve the injuries.

The case was one that was beyond medical skill, however, and at an early hour next morning Mrs. Clark died

MARRIED AT ATHENS.

Sister of a Plainfield Lady Takes a Husband in a Far Off Country.

Miss Grace Aspinwall Bowen, of Brooklyn, a daughter of the late Henry C. Bowen, and sister of Henry E Bowen, of Watchung avenue, was married March 9th at Athens, Greece, to Arthur Sherburne Hardy, United States Minister to Persia. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs Rufus Byam Richardson, whose husband is director of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, and Professor of Greek language and literature at Dartmouth. Arthur Sherburne Hardy is a graduate of West Point and Amherst College, and was at one time editor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Mrs. Hardy was also a sister of Herbert Wolcott Bowen, formerly United States Consul General, of Barcelona, Spain, who was a yearly visitor at the Hotel Netherwood.

Death of a Young Lad

The death of Charles Flanders, aged six years, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Flanders, occurred after a short illness with malignant diptheria and pneumonia. Everything possible was done to save the little fellow's life, but all was of no avail. He was a grandson of Rev. Dr. J. J. Yerkes, of West Seventh street, and the family have the entire sympathy of a host of friends in their hour of bereavement.

TROLLEY WILL BE LINKED TWO WAYS.

Street Railway System is Spreading East and West.

PROBLEM OF DUNELLEN TRANSFERS.

The Directors of the Plainfield Street Railway Company Will Meet in a Few Days to Adjust Terms With the Brunswick Traction Company, Which Will Tap Them at Dunellen—More Cars Talked of for Plainfield Line.

The prospect of uniting Plainfield with a big trolley system from both the east and the west has increased the interest in the proposed actions of the Plainfield Street Railway. That company will be called upon to make several decisions in its plans of action with the new companies. These are awaited with interest.

There will be little trouble in adjusting the arrangement between the Plainfield Street Railway and the Elizabeth and Westfield Electric Street Railway, whose line will stretch toward this city from Scotch Plains. The principal capitalists of both companies are the same, which fact will make it easy to make some agreement whereby the cars of the Elizabeth and Westfield line can run direct to Plainfield.

At the Dunellen terminus of the Plainfield road the situation will be somewhat different Those interested in the Brunswick Traction Company, which has just secured a franchise in Dunellen are not at all interested in the welfare of the Plainfield company.

The Brunswick company will run cars direct from New Brunswick and Somerville to Dunellen and will want to continue them over the lines of the Plainfield company into Plainfield proper. It is not probable, however, that any arrangement satisfactory to both companies will be arrived at for some time, and until then the passengers will have to be transferred at Dunellen. A meeting of the directors of the Plainfield Street Railway will soon be held to consider the matter.

There is another matter that is being seriously considered by the Plainfield company. That is the increase of the car service in the city. The traffic on the electric cars is steadily on the gain and the company is thinking of running the cars on six minutes headway during the busy times of the day instead of on twelve-minutes headway as at present. This would necessitate doubling the number of cars. There are now a number of turnouts that are not in use at present, but could be utilized for an increase in the car service.

Any such increase in the number of cars as proposed would necessitate a corresponding increase in power Under the existing circumstances the Plainfield Electric Light Company cannot furnish any more power than they are at present. The company is not in the position to give any more power without making some changes in its plant. The trolley company wants more power and wants it very soon. So the company is now investigating the project of having a power house of its own or getting someone to start one to supply the street railway system with all the power necessary. Both projects are being considered. If the Electric Light Company makes a change, it is possible that the present conditions will be continued, although the officials of the trolley company prefer to have a power house of their own.

HIS SERVICES VALUED.

S. L. Titsworth Engaged as Organist of Trinity Church for the 18th Year.

The music committee of Trinity Reformed church was empowered last Thursday by the consistory of the church to re-engage the present organist of the church, A. L. Titsworth, for another year. This will be the commencement of Mr. Titsworth's eighteenth consecutive year as organist of the church. Such a long and continuous service speaks volumes for his proficiency, and is a strong evidence of the satisfaction with which his efforts are received by the congregation of Trinity

The music committee was also empowered to secure a quartette choir for the church, composed of the Misses Krymer and Williams and the Messrs. Clark and Moore. If satisfactory results are obtained, this quartette will be engaged permanently.

Didn't See the Clothesline.

Arthur Smith, of Grandview avenue, met with an accident while practicing baseball with the team of the New Jersey Military academy of Monday afternoon. He ran into a clothesline which he did not see, and cut a gash in his chin nearly two inches long.

From Somerville to Plainfield.

Mr. Kitchen and family, of Somerville, have leased the Day property at 92 Duer street, and will take possession April 1st. The Misses Kitchen are saleswomen at White's dry goods house, and the change will be more convenient for them.

FOUR OR SIX ROOMS... THAT'S THE QUESTION

What Shall the Borough New School Building Be?

PRESIDENT MCCUTCHEN'S REPORT.

The Sum of $10,500 is Asked for Current Expenses and Later on a Special Appropriation Will be Necessary to Provide Sufficient Room for Children to be Educated—Trustees McCutchen, Wells and Waring Were Re-elected for the Term.

The annual school meeting was held in the Borough Public School building last evening The attendance was very small, much unlike previous meetings. President S. St. John McCutchen called the meeting to order, and Henry McGee was made chairman, while J. K. Arnold acted as secretary. The polls were opened at 8:05 and remained opened until 9:05.

The terms of S. St. John McCutchen, Henry Wells and E. J. Waring, as members of the Board of Education, expired, and they were renominated without a dissenting vote. J. H. Howell and Paul Loizeaux were appointed tellers. The former received the ballots for school trustees, while the latter received the vote for the appropriations.

While the voting was being carried on, the annual financial report of District Clerk R. M. Fountain was read by Secretary Arnold. It showed the disbursements to be $22,001 37, and the receipts $28,367.68. There is an actual balance of $6,251 24. There is $102.07 in the hands of the district clerk.

After the above report was read, President McCutchen presented his annual report, in part, as follows:

To the Public of No 18 Plainfield:

It is unnecessary that the Board should review at length the progress and work of the school, and yet there remains to be made an interesting and instructive comparison of the figure to attendance reported to you a year ago, with these given in Mr. Wightman's report, for the growth can best be shown by such a comparison.

TEACHING FORCE.

Number of teachers reported, 1907	21
1906	20

ENROLLMENT.

Kindergarten, 1907	53
1906	126
Primary Department 1907	321
1906	321
Intergediate Department, 1907	191
1906	184
Grammar Department, 1907	173
1906	179
High Scho l Department, 1907	90
1906	90
Total Enrollment, 1907	840
1906	943

The enrollment for the year is 89 per cent. of all the children in the borough, of school age, as shown by the last school census, that is all the children between the ages of 5 and 18. The average attendance for the months of the present school year (730) is 75 per cent. of the total school enrollment. Both of these percentages are high compared with like statistics in other similarly constituted communities and the encouragement in these figures by universal experience, lies in the fact that such high percentages of enrollment and attendance are possible only where a high school standard is maintained.

TRUANCY.

While considering this question of attendance, I wish to speak of cases of truancy from school; unnecessarily irregular attendance, and cases of children of school age who do not attend any school. Of the last class we learn that there are probably 25 to 30 in the borough. There are generally a class which more needs attention and education. It is desirable that these children shall attend some school; which school the Board of Education has not stated by law, but to some one of our schools, public, private or parochial, they should be compelled to go.

SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION.

The necessity for additional school room is well known. Mr. Wightman's report describes our overcrowded condition. One class of more than 50 we have located in the basement of the German Reformed church on Crab Orchard street, but is now ill-fitted for our use. The heating and ventilation are unsatisfactory. The light is unfavorable and apt to injuriously affect the eyes of the children, and the fact that the accommodation of this single class of about 50 is $30 per month or $300 for the school year of ten months. This amount is equal to interest at 5 per cent. on $6,000. This is a large sum for the expensive housing of a single class. Children ready for promotion are held back, because the classes ahead of them are so full that no room can be found for them.

Accommodation should be furnished for at least four classes, including in these, of course, the class now located in the German church, and one of the divisions of the Kindergarten Department.

It is a fact that the board and its building committee have been diligent to learn what the probable cost of a new building will be, and their effort now is to reach a lower estimate of cost. This problem faces us also. Shall we erect a four-room or a six-room building?

A four-room schoolhouse would give us the relief we immediately need, but we would practically fill it at once, and leave no provision for further growth.

If we put up a six-room building the added accommodation will carry us over a longer period, and will probably suffice to house our school for several years to come. Which is the wise plan for you and for us?

The suggestion has been made to us from outside of the Board, that we build a four-room schoolhouse at one end of the borough or our present needs, and within a few years ask you to build another at the other end.

We get the impression that a proper four-room building will cost, equipped, from $8,000 to $10,000, and a six-room building from $10,000 to $12,000.

The Board will soon present this matter to you for your action, at a special meeting which we shall call at which meeting we shall make definite suggestions and ask you to take action on the same.

SPECIAL SCHOOL TAX.

We are asking you to vote to raise by special school tax:

For teachers' salaries and current expenses	$ 9,780.00
For fuel and janitors' supplies	880.00
Making in all	$10,660.00

This amount is only $730 00 more than you voted last year, and is, in our judgement, imperatively necessary to properly run the school for the coming year.

We wish to express our great satisfaction with the qualifications and work of Mr. H. J. Wightman, our superintendent, and the corps of teachers.

S. St. J. McCutchen,
President.

For the Board of Education.
North Plainfield, March 15th, 1905.

The vote showed that the candidates for school trustees were re elected. The total vote was 66, of which num ber Mr. McCutchen received 64, Mr. Waring 66, Mr. Wells 63, St. John 1, and Mr. McGee 2

On the vote for appropriations there were 66 votes cast for the appropriations consisting of $9,420 for salaries and expenses, and $850 for text books and supplies In the first account $750 more is attached to the account for salaries and expenses. There were three votes cast against the appropriations and one blank There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

SUGAR AS A STRENGTHENER.

The Greater Amount of Saccharine the More Work Accomplished.

It is a fact well known to Alpine tourists that on difficult climbing excursions an increased desire is felt for the consumption of sweets and sweetened foods, and many who never touch such things at home devour large quantities of them on these tours. It is also frequently remarked how eagerly the guides appropriate any sugar that may be left over and consume it on the route. At the instigation of the Prussian War Office, investigations have recently been made by means of a special apparatus into the question whether the consumption of small quantities of sugar rendered the tired muscles capable of renewed exertion. In order to obtain a practical result, the person who was made the subject of the experiments was kept totally ignorant of the object of the experimenters. On one day a sweet liquid was administered containing thirty grammes of sugar, on the next day a similar liquid containing a sufficient amount of saccharin to produce it indistinguishable from the other as regarded taste. When a very large amount of muscular work had been performed before the employment of the apparatus for further labor, it was found that on the days when sugar was administered a distinctly greater quantity of work could be got through than on the days when saccharin was given. The blood had become very poor in sugar in consequence of the severe muscular effort which had previously been gone through, and hence the administration of a comparatively small quantity of sugar had the effect of producing an increased capability for work.—New York Ledger.

An Invisible Brake.

It is stated that the invisible brake will be placed on the leading 1898 wheels. This is significant as showing that wheelmen are coming to their senses on this question. For a long time they have contended that brakes were unnecessary, because riders could stop the machine by back pedaling, but the truth was that they were ashamed to carry a brake, because it seemed to be a confession that the rider could not manage the wheel. But sometimes in the country where there are steep hills, and they either have to dismount or else be in danger of having their wheels run away with them. If the chain breaks, no amount of skill in back pedaling will save the rider. The invisible, may be carried without causing the blush of shame to rise to the wheelman's cheek.

Origin of the Word "Hoodlum."

Out in San Francisco, twenty-five years ago, there was a notorious character named Muldoon, who was the leader of a gang of young ruffians. They were a terror to the community, and about as tough a lot of citizens as you could find on the coast.

A reporter who had been assigned to a story in which they figured undertook to coin a word designating the gang. He reversed the name of the leader, and referred to them as "noodlums." The compositor mistook the "n" for an "h," and as "hoodlums" the word passed the proofreader. And now "hoodlum" is a recognized word, and will probably survive.—Philadelphia Record.

The Spritzer Got the Lead.

A gentleman calling at a hotel left his umbrella in the stand in the hall with the following inscription attached to it: "This umbrella belongs to a man who can deal a blow of 250 pounds weight. I shall not come back."—Tit-Bits.

A WOMAN'S CURIOSITY.

The Penalty Sir Walter Scott's Mother Paid for Her Inquisitiveness.

Sir Walter Scott's father, who was an elder of the church, and of course zealous for King George and the Government, once received day after day a mysterious visitor on legal business, who came much muffled up and stayed till a late hour. Mrs. Scott, Sir Walter's mother, was eager to know who this stranger was, but her husband always gave evasive replies to her questions. One evening, however, she attained her end by penetrating to her husband's room with a tray, and persuading the client to take tea. Mr. Scott was perceptibly angry, and would not join them. After the stranger had gone, Mr. Scott took up the cup that that he had used, and, carrying it to the window, tossed it out upon the pavement. "I can forgive your little curiosity, madam," he said, "but you must pay the penalty. I may admit into my house on a piece of business persons who are unworthy to be treated as guests by my wife. Neither lip of me nor of mine comes after Mr. Murray of Broughton's." The mysterious visitor was once Prince Charles Stuart's secretary, and had traitorously borne evidence against his master. Sir Walter Scott preserved the Broughton saucer with reverence, in honor of his father.

WAR CAUSED BY A SINGLE WORD.

The Lack of the "Et Cetera" Incensed the King of Sweden.

In 1654 a Polish nobleman became obnoxious to the laws of his country by reason of a crime. He fled to Sweden, says London Answers, whereupon John Cassimir, king of Polanu, wrote to Charles Gustavus, king of Sweden, demanding the extradition of the criminal. The king of Sweden, on reading the dispatch, noticed that his own name and titles were followed by two et ceteras, while the name of the king of Poland was followed by three. The missing et ceters so enraged the king of Sweden that he at once declared war against Poland. This war was carried on with great bitterness until 1660, when a peace was signed at Oliva, near Dantzig. A contemporary writer, Kochowsky, poured out his lamentations on the war in these terms: "Is it not a shame that et ceters been to us! With how many lives have these two potentates paid for these missing eight letters! With what streams of blood has the failure of a few drops of ink been avenged!" In the time of the treaty it was explicitly laid down that the custom of shortening titles by "et ceteration" should still hold good, but for the future each of the two parties should give the other three et ceterss.

The Bet Was On.

The Electrical Review tells an amusing telephone story of a certain Chicago lady named Brown. One morning recently she proceeded from the second floor to the telephone in the hall closet to order things from her market man.

"Hello!" said Mrs. Brown. "Is this the Oakland market?"

"Yes."

"Well, this is Mrs. Brown's residence. Will you please send me a large, thick, juicy steak by four o'clock?"

The boy employed in the Oakland market happened to answer the telephone, and promptly responded:

"Well, you just bet your sweet life I will!"

"Do you know, sir, to whom you are speaking?" indignantly inquired Mrs Brown.

"Sure, I do," said the boy. "You're Jenny, Mrs. Brown's cook."

"You are mistaken, young man. You are speaking with Mrs. Brown herself."

"Is that so?" replied the boy. "Then in that case, madam, we'll call the bet off."

Corean Paper Superior to That of China

According to a writer in The Paper World, the best paper is made in Corea, excelling that manufactured in China and Japan. It shows the greatest variety of color, transparency and fineness, with strength and flexibility The product is highly valued in China and Japan, where it is used for umbrella covers, as roofing and as a substitute for window glass. Coreans make lanterns of all shapes, tobacco bags, card cases, toys and soles for shoes. They also make waterproof cloth for the rainy season of the same material, saturating it with oil. Paper treated in the same way serves as hat covers. The floor of almost all Corean houses are covered with oiled paper about one-fourth of an inch in thickness.

The Editor's Coupe d'Etat.

It has always been a question with the country newspaper man what he would do if an indignant woman set out to horsewhip him. Some years ago W. W. Wick, of Topeka, was running a country paper, and a woman assailed him on the main street of the town. He gathered her up under his arm and paraded around the square She kicked and squirmed, but he marched laughingly along, displaying her to the crowd that had gathered. It mortified the woman so much that she left town on the next train and never bothered the editor afterward —Kansas City Journal.

MOULINE NATTE, OR CANVAS AGAIN

Worn Instead of Taffeta to be Used for the Underskirt.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun)

In the new materials there seems to be everything between gauze and serge coming into market. Canvas in a varied form, very soft in texture, is to be worn again, and its new name is "mouline natte." It shows embroidered stripes, too, which makes it very decorative. Cashmere, very thin and light, and various poplin fabrics with satin stripes are also on the list. Muslins woven so as to have the appearance of being tucked crosswise seem to be the chief novelty, and in transparent fabrics, such as grenadine and mousseline de soie, they are charming. For thin cotton gowns there is a great variety in white and colored muslins, which come with the skirts practically all made, as the ruffles and insertions are all in place, some of these skirts have three and four ruffles of embroidery with insertions at the head of each one; others have only one ruffle at the bottom and vertical bands of insertion striping them at intervals all around above it.

One or two hints as to the most desirable purchases to be made at the bargain counter just now may be of use. Surely it is safe to invest in any material which has bayadere stripes, corded effects of any sort, and surah silk in any pretty color is likely to prove useful, as it is employed, instead of taffeta, for the underskirts in some of the latest gowns. This may be interpreted as a prediction as regards the fate of the fashionable rustling skirts, since surah has no such sounding rustle in its folds. Peau de sole and glace silks in plain or shot colors are very much used for the shirt waists, now such a feature of morning dress, and velveteens with polka dots of contrasting color are also one of the popular materials for this purpose.

The irrepressible cotton shirt waist has appeared again in the shops, with a few variations to recommend it as new. The yoke is straight across the back, instead of pointed as it was last season. It is not nearly so pretty, but a change is a necessity in the rank and file of fashion. The sleeves are smaller, and the front is pouched after the manner of the latest blouse. The fashionable tailor gown of the season is supplied with two or three silk waists in addition to the one which matches the skirt. They are variously trimmed with lace, velvet, and bands of fur, or made in the simple shirt waist style, with tucks and handsome jewelled studs for their only decoration.

Something new in lace is "wire-grounded" Valenciennes for trimming underwear and warranted to wear out the nainsook it decorates.

White suede gloves are the thing for afternoon and evening wear, and white suede slippers are worn for dancing.

THEATRICAL.

The Geisha girl flitted about the stage of Music Hall last evening and gave a large and fashionable audience one of the best performances in musical comedy ever witnessed in Plainfield. Japanese in construction, it was bright and modest to a degree that made it extremely popular. The Geisha was picturesquely staged and costumed, and presented with the best talent of Mr. Daly's forces. In the quaint role of the Japanese girl who runs the Geisha of the "Tea House of Ten Thousand Joys," coy and innocent in her flirtations with the jaunty English Captain, impersonated charmingly by Julius Steger, Miss Nancy McIntosh imparted a flavor to the character that made it a dainty and enchanting one. Virginia Earle as Molly Seamore, the English girl, whose dashing vivaciousness and inclination for adventure led her into complications upon which the last act hinged, was as clever as anything she has ever appeared in. James Powers, as the Chinese proprietor of the tea house, was wily, subsidive and deceptive all in one moment in his humorous interpretation. Mr. Powers was never seen to better advantage than in the Geisha. Augustus Cook as the august and imperial potentiate of Japanese official circles was a bluffy official who wielded his power with fun-making proclivities. The supporting company was excellent.

The celebrated Guy Brothers will appear at Stillman Music Hall tonight. The performances throughout are first-class in every particular and are thoroughly enjoyed. The Guy Brothers are cultured singers and musicians, and in their various roles elicit rounds of applause. The Flood Brothers, in their wonderful acrobatic feats, catch the attention of everybody. They are certainly wonders in their particular line. Taken as a whole, it is unquestionably one of the best shows that will strike the town in a long time.

The most flattering praise is being showered upon the comedy, "The Good Mr. Best," as being one of the most wholesome and meritorious attractions of the present theatrical season. This attraction will be seen in this city Saturday evening. The management promises much out of the ordinary.

The simple pathos and genial humor of "Way Down East" at the Manhattan Theatre in New York are making this picturesque idyl of New England country life one of the most remarkable successes of recent years. All sorts and conditions of people flock to see this charming drama. Men of National distinction are to be found there. Richard Croker attended twice within a week—a compliment in itself. The officers of the "Monitor Terror" were wildly applauded as they sat in a flag-adorned box the other evening. The clergy are commending the piece as wholesome and sympathetic with a strongly emphasized moral. Rev. Horace Porter, assistant pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, writes thanking Brady and Ziegfeld "for doing a brave and noble service in putting before the world a far more powerful and delightful play than 'Shore Acres'" and bringing home to thousands of men the lessons which too many of them most seriously need.

PASSING COMMENT.

An amusing story is told in connection with a wedding that took place at Plucksamin some time ago. The name of the bride was Miss Bertha Shinn, and the groom sported the name of William Bone. The wedding was an event of importance in the place, and all went well until newspaper accounts of the wedding from the papers of nearby towns were received. The relatives and friends of the couple were made as angry as wet hens by seeing the accounts of the wedding headed by the startling label, "Shinn-Bone."

A lady who has a large establishment in this city went to the immigrant office in New York one day last week to hire some help. Among the servants she wanted was a man who could attend to the garden and the stable. A fine looking young Irishman passed a creditable examination as to gardening, but when asked if he could drive horses to the woman's amazement replied: "I don't know it I could in this country." She inquired the reason of the difficulty, and he answered: "Sure ma'am, I come from a small town many miles from Dublin, and, ye know, outside of Dublin the horses are all jackasses." It is needless to say that he was promptly engaged.

New York, March 17.—General John Watts Kearny, father of John Watts Kearny, Jr., who escaped from the Brookside Sanitarium in North Plainfield, N. J., Sunday night, left with his bride for Europe on the St. Louis yesterday. He ascribed the present difficulty to the influence of his sister, the Marquise de Kernal. BOOM IN PECAN NUTS.

SOUTHWEST TEXAS IS SHIPPING THEM BY THE CARLOAD.

Mexicans Extract the Kernels More Satisfactorily Than a Machine—A Large Industry in This Business—Trees Grow Where Their Roots Can Reach Water.

Not much is heard about the pecan nut, not even in Southwest Texas, where it grows wild and, in favorable seasons, is harvested in great abundance. The pecan nut has already a good market value, but it is only within the past few years that shipments have been made from San Antonio to Eastern and Northern markets. These shipments were at first small, but the dealers have found the profits so satisfactory that their scale of buying is increasing each year, and carload shipments have now become common. It requires considerable capital to handle pecans in carload lots, and for this reason the small dealer is at disadvantage compared with the more wealthy cotton broker who makes pecan buying a side issue to his regular business. The profits are certain and the pecan nuts are obtained with no difficulty. The nuts are brought into the city from all parts of the surrounding country by small farmers, small boys, and professional Mexican pecan pickers. They are sold to the local dealers at low prices, the pickers being satisfied with very reasonable wages. Local pecan dealers not only receive the nuts from the above-named sources, but also buy large quantities from the small merchants of the little towns of the surrounding country.

Before shipment is made to Northern markets, the nuts are run through an assorting sieve and then classified according to size and thickness of shell. The soft-shell pecan commands a much higher price than the hard shell. The latter comes from a long-lived tree, which also produces in more abundance than the soft-shell tree.

All the streams around San Antonio are lined with pecan groves. Many poor Mexican families make the pecan kernels their primary article of food during the fall and winter months.

The Mexican housewife is an adept at preparing the kernels as delicious table dishes. A kind of flour is made from the dried kernels. This flour makes a wholesome, finely flavored bread. The nuts are also made into delicious puddings and cakes. The Mexican pecan candy man is an old institution of San Antonio and is well remembered by tourists who visit the city. These Mexican candy men sell their stock on the streets exclusively, the tourists and health-seekers being their best patrons. This sale of pecan candy on the streets is a custom peculiar to San Antonio. It is not to be seen in any city in Mexico.

The Mexicans are experts in removing the kernels from the shell and quite an industry is being built up in that work. It was started in a somewhat interesting manner. A local confectioner sent to a friend in New York, who was also in the confectionery business, a few pounds of the pecan kernels as a present. The New York confectioner then sent an order to his friend for 200 pounds of the kernels. The recipient of the order secured the services of a number of Mexicans, and the desired quantity of pure meat kernels was quickly turned out and shipped. This shipment led to others, and the demand continues to increase. Large shipments of kernels are now made every fall and winter to New York, Chicago, St. Louis, and other Eastern and Northern cities. Fancy prices are obtained for the kernels from the large confectionery houses, and the profits are large. The labor employed is inexpensive. An attempt was made recently to remove the kernels by means of a machine, but it was quickly found that the Mexicans performed the work more satisfactorily and cheaply than the machine.

The polishing of the pecan nut is also a growing industry. The nuts command a trifle better price when the remnants of bark are removed and their surface polished. The polishing is done by placing the nuts in a large cylinder, which is revolved rapidly.

The pecan tree flourishes in every part of southwest Texas, wherever its roots can reach water or moisture. The profits in raising the nuts are so large that all the groves now in existence are being protected and many orchards of the trees have been planted by farmers in the past few years. There is one orchard of pecan trees of several hundred acres near Brownwood, Texas. The orchard has been grown from the direct planting of the nuts. It is now several years old and will soon begin to bear.—New York Sun.

LACE APPLIQUE TO HAVE ITS REIGN

Sashes of All Kinds, Both for the Neck and Waist in Favor.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun)

Dame Fashion always presents some disturbing elements, or suggestions like the bustle, crinoline, or long trains on street gowns, each season, just to excite interest and the spirit of opposition in women, and this time it is the sloping shoulder, which no one can contemplate with any degree of satisfaction. The long shoulder seam reaching down on to the arm hampers our movements and is altogether un comfortable, but it is safe to assume, from previous revivals of old-time modes, that when this condition does come about modern ingenuity will have devised some means of giving the appearance of sloping shoulders without the discomfort. We have been threatened with the bustle, too; but while the skirt is so close fitting around the hips it cannot materialize in any very extensive proportions.

In all the details of dress we can indulge our fancies to the utmost, as trimmings of every sort are to be worn, and the advance importations show a variety in colors and kinds never surpassed. Black braid, like satin, and velvet ribbon are to be very much used for trimming the two spring gowns of wool and net; and garnitures in the form of yokes, bole ros, and skirt panels are shown in a great variety, made of silk and mohair braid, silk and jetted net and chiffon, and gorgeously jewelled lace. Bands of Honiton lace applique, on chiffon and net foundation, studded here and there with tiny spangles, are among the novelties. Lace appplique of any sort is the vogue, and, if properly applied, it is sure to be an artistic trimming. Applique sprays are sewn on velvet, satin, and silk, as well as chiffon, of which yokes and vests are made, and the one point to be considered in the use of applique lace is that the material to which it is applied shall be fine and handsome. Wide Cluny lace insertion is used to trim fancy waists of white chiffon, and there seems to be a preference for the Honiton variety of lace this season. Yak laces have also put in an appearance again.

Sashes of all kinds and conditions are well to the front in fashion, and the new ribbons are more beautiful than ever. There are Roman stripes, checks and plaids, with satin bordered edges, and flowered, corded, and watered ribbons of all kinds. Net, chiffon, and lace sashes will continue in favor; but it is not alone sashes for the waist that swell the list. The sashes for the neck are quite as conspicuous and more generally worn, for all women seem to like the long silken cravats around their throats. They are made of liberty gauze, chiffon and thin silk, or of Swiss, with hemstitched and lace-trimmed ends. The newest of these neck sashes is a scarf of net with an elaborate lace pattern at the ends and an edge all around. They range in price from $4 to $15, and are really very elegant. In smaller things for the neck there is unlimited variety; short bows and knotted cravats of pure white lawn, with knife-pleated frills on the ends, are added to an array of lace knots and neck frills, which are beyond description.

IS IT NECESSARY?

STOMACH NOT NEEDED ACCORDING TO A RECENT OPERATION.

Performed on a Woman in Switzerland—In Time It May be Classed with the Veriform Appendix—Theories of Digestion Revolutionized.

Is it possible for a human being to live and enjoy good health without a stomach?

This inquiry is receiving a great deal of consideration in the medical profession the world over just now, on account of the success of an amazing operation upon Anna Landis, in Zurich, Switzerland.

She furnishes the first case ever known of a person surviving and digesting solid food after a complete removal of the stomach.

Medical records are replete with cases where large portions of the stomach have been removed; but there was always enough left to connect with the intestines by suture and enable the patient to dispose of food of a certain kind.

Two things about the operation have startled the medical profession. First, its boldness. No physician has ever before been brave enough to attempt the entire removal of the stomach, and even those who have made a partial removal have treated the patient for a long time on pre-digested food.

Mrs. Landis was fed with solids within twenty-four hours after the operation. The second starting point is that all previous physiological deductions about the importance of the stomach as a vital organ are likely to be upset.

There is a possibility that in the course of time the human stomach may be classified with the vermiform appendix and the uvula, as a perfectly useless piece of anatomy that any man can get along better without.

It is even suggested that in the process of evolution the coming race will be born without stomachs.

The operation was performed by Dr. Carl H. Schlatter of Zurich.

Anna Landis, aged fifty-six years, is a silk weaver by occupation. She claims that cancer is hereditary in her family. As a child she recalls having had frequent attacks of abdominal pain. Medical treatment had never afforded her any relief.

The operation lasted two hours and a half.

An assistant held up the left lobe of the liver to enable the operator to work freely. It was necessary to open the woman's body from a point at the breast bone to the lower part of the abdomen.

The stomach was taken entirely out, and the end of an intestine was attached to the lower end of the gullet, thus forming a new and independent canal. After the operation the woman's pulse was 96, steady and of fair volume. The loss of blood was very light.

For one week the patient was fed on milk, eggs, brandy and bouillon. Then the wound was examined and was found to have healed well. Thereafter the patient was given chopped meat, and the digestion proceeded without interruption or abdominal pain.

Ten days after the operation the woman continued to eat well and took food in fairly large quantities. She could eat both food and wine therefore handicapped in the mastication of her food. On the tenth day a phenomenon was noticed by the physicians. Mrs. Landis had no stomach, and yet she had all the symptoms of sickness at the stomach.

She declared that she was nauseated by watching the surgeons change the dressing on another surgical case. She had similar attacks of nausea at intervals during the succeeding three weeks.

After the patient left her bed and was walking about she was in better health than she had been for a great many years. Three months after the operation she was working as an attendant in the hospital.—New York World.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Are added to your veins by taking with each meal one of the natural iron Capsuloids made from the fresh blood of young, healthy bullocks.

Hundreds have testified that this is the only iron medicine which agrees perfectly with stomach and bowels. The following testimony is selected at random from among some hundreds. Mr. Howard Patterson, of Tremont, N. Y., while acting as manager of one of Mr. Edwards' grocery stores, began to lose flesh and after almost losing his life through a steady decline, was saved and restored to health by taking Capsuloids. He writes as follows:

THE CAPSULOID COMPANY, New York City.

GENTLEMEN:—I cannot thank you too heartily for what your Capsuloids have done for me. I was a powerful young man two years ago but developed consumption, and continued to grow worse for nine months, when I was induced to try Cilmaco, Scott's and medicine failed to do me the slightest good. My blood was all gone. I was completely out of health; to simply make change for customers made me pant. I grew thinner and thinner, lost my appetite and coughed terribly and was pronounced by the last stage of dry consumption, when I heard of your Capsuloids. They did like magic. My blood grew rich, my heart soon ceased palpitating. I could get my breath easily, my appetite returned, I grew strong, had good color and had gained 20 pounds at the end of seven weeks. I am still gaining right along and will report to you later. I am out of all danger now. HOWARD PATTERSON.

A WEALTH OF SUGGESTIONS.

PLAN ADVANCED TO ACQUIRE OWNERSHIP OF WATER WORKS.

It Is Claimed That the City Can Purchase the Water Plant and System and Make It a Paying Investment, Besides Giving Lower Rates—Question of Passenger and Freight Rates Thoroughly Discussed—Central Will be Asked for a Cheap Ten-Trip Ticket—Building Ordinance Severely Criticised.

A deluge of all sorts and kinds of suggestions fairly flooded the adjourned meeting of the new Board of Trade last Tuesday. Fifteen of Plainfield's enterprising business men were present, and their combined efforts produced ideas startling enough to satisfy the most radical of them all. There were some things about the city that did not satisfy the members, and they were perfectly free to express their criticism. Altogether the meeting was an exceedingly lively one.

The opening was quiet enough. President F. C. Lounsbury was in the chair. The resignation of VanBuren Brothers from the Board was received and accepted.

A communication was received from the Boston Chamber of Commerce, asking that a petition be sent to President McKinley asking for a reciprocal treaty with Canada. J. C. Pope offered a set of resolutions setting forth the advantages of such an act to the United States. The secretary was instructed to forward the resolutions, which were immediately passed.

Former Mayor Hegeman was not present to report for the committee on transportation but Elston M. French read his report. He stated that the committee had been at work securing the freight rates on other railroads for a distance equal to that of from New York to Plainfield and comparing them with the rates on the Jersey Central Railroad. Replies had been received from the New York Central, the Erie, the D., L. and W., the Lehigh Valley and the New York, Susquehanna and Western. The Lehigh Valley was the only one in which the freight rates were lower than the Jersey Central. The Lehigh Valley was about 10 per cent. lower. The report continued that the Lehigh Valley people wanted the trade of Plainfield, but for certain reasons they could not build a spur over to this city. Mr. French said that he thought, however, that some adjustment might be reached about the cartage to South Plainfield whereby a rate still lower than that on the Central could be secured.

Here somebody suggested that the committee look into the fact that the New York and Elizabeth Dispatch Company would deliver goods in Plainfield for 25 cents a hundred weight while the United States Express Company charged 40 cents a hundred weight.

Mr. French then gave some comparisons of the passenger rates of the same railroads. The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western sold a ten-trip ticket for $4.15, for a place the same distance from New York as Plainfield. They also sold a fifty-trip ticket for $16.25. The regular round trip ticket was the same as on the Central but the single trip ticket was slightly higher. The rates on the other roads were all higher. The committee made the recommendation that the Board petition the Jersey Central Railroad to put a ten-trip ticket on the market and sell it for $3.75, making the cost of a trip to New York 75 cents. The report was accepted and it was decided to petition the Central as suggested.

The question of water works, which was the burden of the report of the committee on municipal improvements, was not an unlooked for subject. J. Fred MacDonald made the report of the committee. The report stated that it was to the interest of the city and borough to own their own water supply. They recommended that the city purchase the pipe lines of the present Plainfield Water Supply Company if at a reasonable figure. If not, they recommend the investigation of the cost of the construction of a new water supply station. They suggested that a committee of three from the Board of Trade confer with similar committees from the Common Council and Borough Council to look into the matter.

The report opened a discussion of the subject. President Lounsbury gave some figures going to show that the city would really save money to own its own water works and that it now paid out enough to the present company to pay the interest on the bonds to pay for a new system. The receipts from the consumers would soon establish a sinking fund that would pay off the bonded indebtedness in eighteen years according to the figures of Mayor Fisk.

It was stated that the present water works could only be purchased by mutual agreement of both parties. It was thought that the company ought to be given a chance to sell and would sell if it were sure that the city and borough were going to own their own water supply. It was explained that the city now paid $15 each a year for its fire hydrants and that that was the smallest amount paid by any city for their hydrants. The contract will run out in three years and then the company will probably raise the rates.

After a lengthy discussion the recommendation was adopted, and the members of the committee on municipal improvements, J. Fred MacDonald, Wm. A. Westphal and Wm. C. Smith, were appointed a committee to confer with committees from the Councils.

Robert A. Meeker, chairman of the committee on streets, roads and bridges, was not present to report, but President Lounsbury told of his visit to the street committee of the Common Council regarding a storm sewer for Plainfield avenue. John D. Runyon suggested the need of a similar sewer to carry off the water beneath the railroad bridges over Watchung and Park avenues.

There were no reports from the committees on sanitation and education.

President Lounsbury read the report that the committee on manufactures had presented to the board of management and the suggestions contained there were discussed. The first suggestion was that the Board advertise in the New York Herald, World and Brooklyn Eagle. Then that a prospectus of the city and borough be issued. G. Q. Packer suggested that the merchants of the city have a uniform statement issued by the Board printed on the back of the envelopes. He told how such a plan was largely used in western cities. J. D. Runyon remarked how the people of Buffalo advertise on the back of their letter heads. It was thought that the plan of utilizing the back of the envelopes might be successfully tried in Plainfield, and the matter was referred to the committee on statistics and publication.

It was recommended that the board start a subscription paper to secure funds for the board. Another suggestion was that three large signs advertising Plainfield be placed along the line of the Jersey Central railroad.

A lively discussion was provoked by the suggestion that the board ask the Jersey Central railroad to change the name of the station from Netherwood to Belvidere avenue, so that people would get the idea that it belonged to Plainfield. Elston M. French and others thought it would be better to call it Netherwood avenue station. The matter was referred to the committee on railroads.

A suggestion in this report was that the board should start a monthly paper to be called The Board of Trade Review. The scheme was to have some local editor print it gratis and have it circulated among the large cities. It was thought the Jersey Central Railroad would generously support it. The report suggested Harry H. Webb as a good man to take charge of it. The question of the paper was referred to the committee on statistics and publication.

FEARS FOR HER LIFE

MRS. LOUIS SPRAGUE HAS HER HUSBAND ARRESTED.

Claims That He Threated to Kill Her—Sprague Told Chief Marshal Wilson That He Intended to Kill Himself If He Could.

Louis Sprague, of Howard street, was arrested yesterday on a complaint of his wife, who charges that her husband has repeatedly threatened to kill her. She claims that she and her family are unable to live home owing to his actions. They think that his mind is affected and are desirous that the authorities take some steps to have the man taken care of.

Sprague was placed in the borough lockup and he will be examined as to his sanity. This morning Sprague told Chief Marshal Wilson that he was going to kill himself if he had an opportunity. During the past few years, it is said, Sprague has acted queerly and his family on more than one occasion been obliged to leave him. He becomes violent and makes all sorts of threats. The case will be acted upon today and it is likely that Sprague will be taken to Trenton.

THE OLD CRESCENTS TO BE RIVALED NOW.

A Strong Baseball Team To Be Put in the Field.

CRACK PLAYERS SELECTED.

GAMES WILL BE PLAYED ON THE CRESCENT OVAL.

Manager Mumford Full of Vim and Enthusiasm Over the Prospects of a Season of the Best Article That the Cranks Long For—Season to be Opened May 7th With Seventh Regiment Team—Best Semi-Professional Players Have Been Signed For the Season—John McLarty to be in the Box.

The prospects for a lively baseball season for 1898 are very bright at present. The unusual interest in scholastic baseball can be looked upon as a good sign. Now Benjamin A. Mumford, who so successfully managed the Plainfield Crescents last year, announces that the Crescents will reappear on the diamond during the coming season. The team will be strengthened and will give Plainfield a good game of baseball.

The question of a suitable ground has been an important one. Now Manager Mumford has completed negotiations with the present lessees of the Crescent Oval and that enclosed field will be converted into one of the best diamonds in the State. A fast diamond will be made enabling the infield to play a deep field. The outfield will also be put in perfect condition. The present grandstand and bleechers, which are capable of caring for several thousand people, will be overhauled and made comfortable.

Every attention will be paid to the convenience and comfort of patrons of the game. The grounds will be policed by the city force, ensuring the best of order. Stages will run to and from the grounds at frequent intervals, connecting the grounds with the central portion of the city. The fare will be small.

The season will open Saturday, May 7th, with the real Seventh Regiment team from New York city, composed entirely of members of the Seventh Regiment. It is a very strong aggregation, with the famous Discsway in the box, that has met the West Point Cadets, the Orange Athletic Club and other strong teams successfully. Among other well known teams that have been scheduled for the season are the Riverdale Field Club, Williamsburgh Field Club and Murray Hill Athletic Club. Arrangements are also being made with the Orange Athletic Club. Games will be scheduled for every Saturday afternoon and two games for all legal holidays, excepting Labor Day, in the afternoon of which day the police and letter carriers will play their annual game for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

The personal of the Crescent team has been settled upon, subject of course to minor changes. Michael Cavanah will be a starter at first base, Clarence Vroom, of the Staten Island Athletic Club, who pitched for the Crescents on one occasion, last year, will cover the second bag. He is a particularly strong batsman. John Kuhn who played third base so successfully last year and was such a favorite with the audience, will be seen at his old place. At short, Manager Mumford has signed William Steinmetz, who is considered one of the best semi-professional short stops in this part of the county. In the field, Arthur Lederer, captain of the Plainfield High School and a member of last year's Crescents will play at right. Collins, of the Fordham College team, will play centre and Hollister, of the Newark Athletic Club, leftfield.

John MacLarty will be found in the pitcher's box again. To alternate with him there will be a celebrated pitcher from the Princeton 'varsity team. Vroom will fill his old position behind the bat. Edward Eriksen, who gave such general satisfaction as an umpire last year, will officiate in that capacity during the coming season. As last year, the official score of the games will be published in The Daily Press.

Manager Mumford will soon begin a canvass of the city for the sale of season tickets which will entitle the holders to a reserved seat at all the games of the season. With a generous support from the townsfolk, Mr. Mumford will be able to give the people of Plainfield a good quality of baseball. It is his aim to rival the famous season of 1892 when the old Crescents made their memorable showing.

—Mrs. Frank J. Smith and others have been secured to entertain at the Park Club on the evening of March 24th.

DOOM OF TRADING STAMPS IS SOUNDED.

Bill Prohibiting Them Favorably Acted Upon By Senate.

REED KEEPS HIS PLEDGE.

THE SOMERSET'S SENATOR'S REPORT WAS ADOPTED.

Majority of the Judiciary Committee Made an Adverse Report on the Bill, But it Was Rejected—More Trouble Over the Game Law—Measure Changed Again So That Farmers Can Trap Rabbits—Senator Reed Thought That the Farmers in this State Were Getting But Scant Courtesy—Senator Johnson Presented the Report.

Trenton, March 23.—Senator Reed, true to his promise made to the Plainfield Board of Trade, that he would do all in his power to suppress the trading stamp business by legislative enactment, yesterday carried the anti-trading stamp cohorts to victory in the upper house.

Senator Johnson presented an adverse report from the majority of the judiciary committee on the anti-trading stamp bill, which was immediately followed by Senator Reed, a member of the committee, presenting a favorable report from the minority.

Senator Francis, introducer of the bill, moved that the minority report be substituted for the majority report. He said the measure was demanded by ninety-eight per cent. of all the people in the State who have any interest in the matter. The giving of gifts, he said, was a pernicious practice to which the retail storekeepers, almost to a man, were opposed.

Senator Johnson said he did not desire to be understood as favoring the practice aimed at in this bill, but it did not seem to be a lottery or to come within the range of the law. The bill appeared to the committee to be unconstitutional.

Senator Francis's motion to substitute prevailed by a viva voice vote. Senator Johnson being late in calling for the yeas and nays. The bill then passed the second reading. Senator Francis presented a petition favorable to the bill.

Senator Martin had Senate No. 41, the Game bill, returned to second reading. He then moved for a reconsideration of the amendment prohibiting the trapping of rabbits by farmers. He did so because, since the adoption of that amendment, the Assembly had killed the bill providing for compensation to the farmers for injury to trees sustained from rabbits. Senator Reed supported the motion. Senator Stokes said he understood that the Assembly defeated the compensation bill loosely, and he hoped to have it revived. It was his bill.

Senators Martin and Reed thought they detected a purpose on the part of the Game Commission to give the farmers scant courtesy or consideration in the matter. The amendment was reconsidered and defeated.

Senate No. 56, prohibiting trespassing by gunners or fishermen on any lands owned or leased without the consent of the owner or lessee, was ordered to a third reading after being amended to require a stated public notice.

Senator Reed had Senate No. 178 brought back to second reading. This bill provides for the employment of a clerk by the State Hospital Board at a salary not to exceed $500 a year. Senator Reed moved to amend by making the amount $250, on the ground that the clerk's only duty was to keep the minutes of the board's twelve meetings annually. It has reference to the hospital at Trenton. Senator Vreeland and Senator Skirm thought the board ought to fix the amount. The amendment was carried, and then, on motion of Senator Vreeland, the bill was recommitted.

A Dusky Beauty.

Lizzie Thompson, a dusky beauty of the West End, was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza yesterday on the charge of quarrelling and fighting on West Third street. She pleaded guilty and was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 or go to the county jail for 30 days.

To Preach in Trinity.

Rev. S. P. Simpson, pastor of St. Stephen's Episcopal church of Netherwood, has been honored by a request to preach the sermon in Trinity church, Broadway, New York, this noon. The Doctor has accepted the invitation.

At St. Mary's Church.

Rev. Walter Leahey, of Swedesboro, preached the Lenten sermon in St. Mary's church last evening.

HUGE MASTIFF DOGS THREW A HORSE DOWN

Fanwood Startled Over the Ferocity of the Canines.

ATTACKED IN PUBLIC STREET

THE EQUINE GRABBED BY THE NOSE WITH BAD EFFECT.

The Dogs Owned by Charles Apros, a New York Business Man, Who Lives on Park Avenue—The Animals Swagger About the Village, Crowding People Off the Sidewalks—Other Dogs Take a Back Seat When the Newcomers Appear in Their Midst—Mrs. Cole's Pet Felt the Power of Mastiff.

Fanwood, March 23.—Two huge mastiff dogs owned by Charles Epros, of this place, made a fierce attack yesterday afternoon upon a horse owned by A. D. Beeken. The horse was being driven along Park avenue, the principal street of the borough, when the dogs rushed forth to the attack. One of the huge beasts sized the horse by the nose and brought it to the earth. The shafts of the wagon were broken and the horse was considerably injured. The colored coachman drove the dogs off after a hard fight.

The inhabitants of Fanwood are excited over the occurrence, which they claim is but one of a series of similar escapades in which the dogs of Mr. Epros have figured of late. The family moved to Fanwood last fall and took up their residence in a house on Park avenue owned by Augustus D. Shepard. The huge canines which they brought with them commenced to roam and swagger about the village to the terror of all the inhabitants, who were often forced to give up the sidewalk to the animals.

The other dogs of the place were all made to take a backseat by the newcomers, and one rash canine, the property of Mrs. John Coles, was eaten up when he refused to recognize the rule of the mastiffs.

The dogs also developed a weakness for chickens. Their latest exploit in this line was at the house of Mrs. Daniell Allen where, it is said, they invaded the chicken yard and ate several of the choicest fowls.

NEW PRESIDING ELDER.

Changes That the Methodist Conference Will Probably Make.

The New Jersey Methodist Ministers' Conference, which will meet April 1st, will make some changes which will be important to the churches in this district. It is stated upon good authority that Rev. Dr. George W. Smith, the present presiding elder of the Elizabeth district, will be promoted to the position of presiding elder of the Jersey City district, which is the most important district in the State. He will succeed Rev. Dr. Faulkes, whose term will expire this spring.

The successor of Dr. Smith as presiding elder of this district, will be Rev. William H. Ruth, who is just closing a successful pastorate of five years in Westfield.

DECISION FOR BOTH.

But One of the Litigants Had His Claim Reduced from $90.50 to $47.50

One week ago yesterday the contract cases of Johnson vs. Nanson and Nanson vs. Johnson were tried before Justice Mosher. Irving L. Brady represented Johnson, and W. K. McClure was Hanson's attorney. Chas. Johnson had sued Jas. Hanson for $26.50, and Hanson brought suit against Johnson for $90.50, and the cases being of a similar nature they were tried together. The Justice's decision, rendered yesterday, allows the full amount of Johnson's claim, but reduces Nanson's claim to $47.50. The case will probably be appealed.

A Musicale.

This evening a musicale will be given in the Seventh-Day Baptist church by the young people of the Christian Endeavor society. The excellence of their former musicales is to be fully equalled by this, as among those who assist are Miss Alice Pieh, of New York city, Walter McElroy, tenor in the Garden City Cathedral, Long Island, and Prof. P. Ludwig Conde, of this city. A silver offering will be received during the evening.

Death of A. Lusardi's Daughter.

Miss Carrie Lusardi, daughter of A. Lusardi, the North avenue fruit dealer, died at an early hour Tuesday morning of brain fever, at the home of her parents on North avenue. She had been sick about one week.

On Monday next, the Waite Comedy Company make their first appearance.

AWAKENING INTEREST.

CATHOLIC BENEVOLENT LEGION HOLD AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING.

Speeches by a Number of the State Officers, Father Smyth and Others Prominent in Local Catholic Circles.

The members of Plainfield Council, Catholic Benevolent Legion, No. 241, together with a large number of their friends and the State officers of the Legion, met at the Parochial School last Tuesday and enjoyed an entertainment, including speeches by the State officers. President Henry Lutz, of the local council, was in charge, and introduced the several numbers on the programme, the first of which was a recitation by Miss Daley. This was followed with a song and recitation by Miss Lena Barrell. Miss Fanny Hillman was the accompanist.

Mr. Fogarty, of Brooklyn, was introduced and entertained the audience with witty sayings and the singing of popular songs. A laughable feature was the remarks by Mr. Keeler, of Jersey City, who told some very funny stories. The balance of the programme was devoted to speeches by Deputy State Chancellor John Gilfoil, of Jersey City; State President James Thornton, of Newark; Vice-president Schreiner, of Orange; State Chancellor J. A. Laing, of Jersey City; State Orator J. E. Dunn, of Boonton; A. E. Kuney, of North Plainfield, and Rev. Father Smyth, of St. Mary's church.

All of the speeches were along the line of explanation of the objects and benefits of the Legion, and was for the purpose of securing new members and awakening an interest. There were about 150 people present, and after the entertainment refreshments were served by those in charge of the affair.

SURPRISED MRS. BRAKER.

Young Endeavorers at Scotch Plains Arrange a Social Affair.

Scotch Plains, March 23.—A birthday surprise was given to Mrs. J. S. Braker, wife of the pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Tuesday afternoon, in the parlor of the church by the members of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society. Miss Cora Miller was appointed as a committee to escort Mrs. Braker from her home to the parlor, where all the members joined in a chorus and Miss Louise Bettman, president of the society, read the following speech:

"My dear Mrs. Braker: It devolves upon me, as the president of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, to make the speech of this happy occasion. First of all, we wish you very many happy birthdays, and hope that the sunshine of God's love will grow brighter with each coming year of your life. This pleasant little surprise to you was suggested by one of our number and we all counted it joy to further it. We hope our little gift will last till the grey mingles with the chestnut locks that crown your head today."

She was then presented with a beautiful comb and brush tray. Mrs. Braker was so genuinely surprised that she could only express her gratitude in silent, though eloquent tears.

Among those present were the following: Miss Lydia Hayes, Miss Carrie Bettman, Mrs. C. W. Brown, Mrs. G. W. Marsh, Miss Addie Johnston, Mrs. J. S. Braker, Miss S. E. Reger, Mary Westcott, Louise Bettman, Henrietta Raymond, Mary Jahn, Janet Raymond, Lola Dorwart, Buren Braker, Victoria Brown, Hazel Marsh, Verna Braker, Will e Schick, Hervey Marsh, Bryant Johnston, Gertrude Smalley, Harry Brown, Elsie Cook, Gladys Marsh, Anna Jahn, Louise Brandt, Gere Paff, Marjorie Brown, Gussie Frentz, Barry Lyons, Henry Winters, Frankie Hand, Cora Miller and Ethel Marsh.

READING CLUB EXPLAINED.

Housekeeping Enthusiasts Hear an Interesting Talk by Mr. McKeever.

As recently stated, a meeting of several men interested in the formation of a reading club met Tuesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. building. The meeting was simply a preliminary one and those present discussed plans for the starting of such a club. Mr. McKeever, of New York city, who has charge of the Central Park Riding Club, was present and gave a very interesting talk on the subject. He related his experience in starting clubs and told of the many pleasant features of such an organization. Nothing definite was done at the meeting, but another meeting will be held soon when it is expected that an organization will be effected. There were about fifteen men present including many prominent persons.

SPEED OF THE ENGINE BEAT PIQUETTE'S LEAP

Death Overtook Him While He Was at Work.

AN OLD CENTRAL EMPLOYE.

HORRIBLE FATALITY AT DUNELLEN LAST NIGHT.

While Engineer John R. McCall Was Switching Cars the Faithful Old Car Cleaner Got in the Way of the Steel Steed and Was Run Down and Instantly Killed—He Was a Spaniard by Birth and Was Well Known and Popular in Dunellen—Burial Permit Granted by County Physician Long.

Dunellen, March 23.—After fourteen years of faithful service as an employe of the Central Railroad, Fidelle Piquette, aged 45 years, car-cleaner at this place, met his death yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock in a terrible manner.

The train of which John R. McCall is the engineer had pulled into the station, and after the passengers had alighted the engineer backed his cars on another track. Piquette was on the car next to the engine and when the cars reached the tool house he jumped off. By this time the engine was backing up on another track, for the purpose of going to the roundhouse. Engineer McCall saw Piquette crossing the tracks, but had no idea that he intended crossing in front of the engine. He blew the whistle to warn Piquette. It was too late. Just as the man was about to leap across the track on which the engine was coming, the tender struck him and before the brakes could be applied the engine had run over Piquette and cut his body in half. It was a ghastly sight that met Engineer McCall's eyes and it almost unnerved him.

The shrill shriek of the engine whistle brought several employes to the scene of the fatal accident, where they saw their dead comrade. Undertaker Walter G. Runyon was notified and he removed the body to his establishment. Coroner Physician Long, of New Brunswick, was informed. The latter came to Dunellen early in the evening and gave a burial permit.

Piquette, as stated above, had served the Central Railroad Company for fourteen years. He was a Spaniard and had served so well that he was liked by all who knew him. He was accommodating to all and was a well-known character about the places. He leaves a widow and five children. The oldest of the children is about fourteen years. Just previous to the time Piquette was killed he went on duty for the night. Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

Methodist Home and Foreign Societies Elect Their Officers.

Tuesday afternoon St. Vincent chapel the members of the Woman's Home Missionary and Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies held their annual meeting for the election of officers. The foreign missionary society met at 3 o'clock and selected the following women to serve as officers for the ensuing term: President, Mrs. Winter; vice-presidents, Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass, Mrs. Cokefair; recording secretary, Miss Sharp; treasurer, Miss Jackson; corresponding secretary, Miss Day.

At 4 o'clock the members of the home society met and the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. L. M. French; first vice-president, Mrs. Daniel Davis; second vice-president, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins; third vice-president, Mrs. P. M. French; recording secretary, Mrs. Pike; treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Jackson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. I. N. Miller; librarian, Mrs. J. M. McNaughton; mite-box secretary, Mrs. I. L. McVoy; literary committee, Mrs. Daniel Davis, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins, Mrs. P. M. French.

On the evening of March 31st an entertainment will be given in the chapel under the auspices of the home missionary society, at which time a celebrated boy harpist will appear.

It was also announced that May 3d the Elizabeth district meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society would hold an all-day session in Vincent chapel. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

Justice Crosley in His Old Place.

Owing to illness in the family of Recorder Long, of the borough, Justice Crosley is now acting recorder. This morning Charles Barry, of the borough, was arraigned before Justice Crosley, who imposed a fine of $2 on Barry for allowing his horse to remain untied.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

REVIVAL OF THE BUSTLE DID NOT MEET POPULAR APPROVAL.

Blue and Red Are the Colors for Spring—Skirts Are Long, Many to the Ground, and Have a Siege to the Back—Other Frills That Must be Met.

Velvet is now puffed, waved, box-pleated, and accordion-pleated by machine processes, and the result is anything but elegant. It is like painting the rose or perfuming the violet to thus maltreat so beautiful a material as velvet. The rich, lustrous surface of the fabric is spoiled, and its value lessened by such manipulation. As well starch point lace or cut up sable into minute fancy bits to trim a gown. If ever beauty unadorned is adorned the most, it is in sparing the scissors and withholding every sort of "decorative" from either silk, velvet, or costly fur.

A Theatre Blouse.

Theatre waists and those for house wear are even more varied in style than the shirt waist. They may be of any material and style according to the occasion for which they are to be used. One of the reigning styles is the bodice with neck cut low and long sleeves, a collaretts of velvet or as is being worn around the throat.

A Neat Style.

The coming summer promises more variations in the styles of shirt waists than were ever seen, and there will certainly be no reason to complain of monotony. The heavier materials will be most popular for early spring wear, and gingham and madras make up dainty and serviceable waists.

A simple shirt waist is made with the yoke extending well over on the shoulders, being rounded in the back. The material is brought to a point at the waist-line and the fastening down the center is trimmed on both sides with ruffles of white lawn. Regulation shirt sleeve, finished with narrow linen cuff.

Handsome Theatre Gown.

A most becoming and beautiful costume was worn in a box at the Vaudeville the other night by a handsome woman, considerably past her youth

The gown was of black mousseline de soie, accordion-pleated, and glittering with lengthwise rows of jet bands. Over her shoulders was thrown a long boa of black ostrich plumes, in a way to outline the square decolettage, and about the throat was a very full, yet very light, neck-ruche, of black gauze, fastened with a diamond buckle. A big jet butterfly on the head made the nearest excuse for a theatre bonnet. In France it is quite common to see well-dressed women wear a small theatre hat with a low-necked corsage.

To Keep Baby's Ears Flat.

Mothers cannot very well endow their children with shell-like ears, but by the judicious use of a proper cap they can do a great deal towards improving the appearance of the ear. No matter what people say, prominent ears are a disfigurement, and no one is more conscious of the fact than the owners. And the pity of it is that no one need be disfigured in such a way, thanks to an ear-cap, which can be worn without the slightest discomfort. This boon is in the form of an open-meshed cap fitted with tapes and elastic, and so arranged that, when in position, a uniform and elastic pressure is maintained. This pressure causes the growing cartilage of the ear so to mould itself that the ears are prevented from standing out. Not only does the ear-cap prevent the ears of a child crumpling forward, but it keeps the hair tidy.

Potato Fritters.

Mash three large, mealy potatoes very lightly, add three well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of cream, a little lemon-juice and some grated nutmeg. Beat all well together for about a quarter of an hour, or until the batter is very light. Drop spoonfuls of it into a deep pan of boiling fat, and when they become a nice brown color take them out and drain them upon soft butter muslin. Serve them with sifted sugar sprinkled over them and with or without wine sauce, as may be preferred.

A LITTLE BOY'S SUIT.

SUPERSTITIONS.

Mehemet Ali Signed the Treaty Because Victoria Was a Lucky Queen.

The London Truth gives the following inside view of a great historical event, said to have been hitherto unpublished:

When Sir Charles Napier had conquered Mehemet Ali, he found it impossible to force or coax the wily Egyptian into signing the treaty which only would make his victory effective. He had nineteen interviews with Mehemet, in which the Englishman by turns argued, flattered and threatened his antagonist, who listened day after day with the same immovable, smiling countenance.

One day Sir Charles, in speaking of England, said casually that it "was governed by a lucky woman." A strange flash passed over the Pasha's countenance, but he made no answer. As soon as Napier was gone, Mehemet sent for the English Consul, who was an Egyptian, and demanded:

"You were in London when the English Queen was crowned. Were the omens bad or good?"

"All good."

"You think that good luck is written on her forehead?"

"I did not think upon the matter before, but now that you ask me, I believe that it is. When she asked Allah to help her in her work her eyes ran over. Allah loves the innocent."

"No doubt of that," said Mehemet, anxiously. "She must be lucky."

Early the next morning he sent for Sir Charles and signed the treaty. English power and English cannon be could brave, but not "the luck" written upon the forehead of a good woman whom he had never seen.

FOR AND AGAINST THE X-RAY.

A Farmer Used It to Determine the Layers Among His Chickens.

There seems to be no limit to the use to which the X ray can be put in revealing the true inwardness of things. It is now being used by poultry farmers anxious to discover the laying capacity of hens. One enterprising man, finding the percentage of eggs was not what it should be considering the size of his poultry yard, hit upon the idea of examination by the Roentgen rays, and was thus able to weed out the non-producers. The birds were examined at the rate of thirty per hour, and the "non-efficients" were soon plucked and sent to market. Recent X-ray tests are said to have an extremely injurious influence on the action of the heart, causing that organ to palpitate violently, and some of the leading doctors in Paris have issued a warning to medical students and others to exercise great caution in the examination of the action of the heart by the rays. Ill effects have followed the use of the rays after many surgical operations where it was desirable to observe the process of the healing of the tissues, the knitting of the bones and the action of various parts. These effects have usually partaked of the nature of burns, and in nearly every instance were caused by placing the exciting tube too near the part under inspection, or making the exposure too long, the tube should never be less than 14 inches from the object, but the time of exposure will vary according to the strength of the apparatus.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A PRINCE WHO BECAME A PRIEST.

He Chooses to Work in London So That His Power May Not Be Known.

There is a priest living in the Whitechapel district in London, a poor, devout, earnest mission priest, who is a prince and within easy reach of the throne of Saxony.

He began a military career suddenly, and great was the surprise thereat. His relatives and his friends supposed that, having entered the Church, he would be content with his orders and satisfied to accept such ecclesiastical preferment which would give him a religious rank consonant with the loftiness of his birth.

Prince Max of Saxony is made of sterner stuff. Directly after he was ordained in Dresden he went to London and established himself in the poorest and most miserable quarter. Since then he has devoted his whole life to those about him. They know nothing of the high place in the world that he forsook that he might do mission work.

It was because he knew that he would be treated as a mere mission priest that Prince Max or rather Father Max, as he prefers to be called, chose London as a field for his work. In Germany the authorities as well as the poor would never succeed in blinding themselves to the fact that he was really a royal prince.—New York World.

A Deep Laid Scheme.

Higgins—You say that Muggins is a miserly man when it comes to furnishing his tables. Why, I have taken dinner at his house several times, and it beats any place I ever ate at for nice, large pieces of pie.

Wiggins—Yes, but that's one of his shrewdest games. You see, the children are in such a hurry to get to pie that they don't eat half a meal.—Truth.

"Are you in pain, my little man?" asked the kind old gentleman.

"No," answered the boy. "The pain's in ma."—Indianapolis Journal.

Mrs. Newlywed—Henry, you always said a husband should tell his wife everything. But you will not tell me the secrets of any of the societies you belong to.

Mr. Newlywed—Carrie, it is best I shouldn't. If you knew them I'm afraid you wouldn't have much of an opinion of your husband's intellect.—Boston Transcript.

HE CORNERED WHEAT

METHODS OF YOUNG JOSEPH LEITER OF CHICAGO.

He Went Into the Wheat Deal to Help a Friend and Became Interested—Several Old Timers Done to the Tune of Hundreds of Thousands, P. D. Armour Was Among Them.

If a story told in Chicago club circles is correct, Joe Leiter's entrance into speculation on the Board of Trade was with no thought of undertaking operations which have made him an international figure. George French came here broke and went to work for a railroad company. He exchanged his job for that of a solicitor of business for a firm on the board, where there was a chance of doing a little better.

In that capacity he met Leiter. Both men are young and congenial, and Joe is generous and more to help French got his commissions. The deals won a little money and Leiter got interested.

Now Joe Leiter is possibly a little peculiar for a young man who is so rich that he has no incentive to labor. He has a habit of studying things and deciding for himself. His father is heavily interested in the Edison Company and the City Railway Companies and in gas and manufacturing companies, and for two or three years Joe has looked after his interests. He looked into them so deeply that he mastered the technical details of each company's physical plant. He can tell anybody all about electric lighting or street railroading or gas making from the ground up. There is no detail which he has not examined and weighed to such good effect that probably Mr. Leiter could step right in and run any of the companies in which the Leiter family's money is invested.

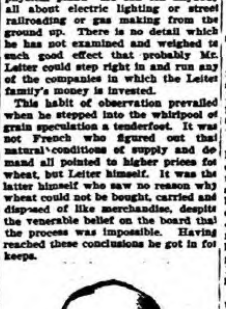
This habit of observation prevailed when he stepped into the whirlpool of grain speculation a tenderfoot. It was not French who figured out that natural conditions of supply and demand all pointed to higher prices for wheat, but Leiter himself. It was the latter himself who saw no reason why wheat could not be bought, carried and disposed of like merchandise, despite the venerable belief on the board that the process was impossible. Having reached these conclusions he got in for keeps.



P. D. ARMOUR.

The story of the deal, with its turns and twists and collateral parts, such as the expedition for wheat P. D. Armour sent out need not here be retold. There have been others on the board where the quantity of wheat involved was immense. Cudahy was long 28,000,000 bushels in 1893, but he did not take it. Armour in his deal of 1883 took in 6,000,000 bushels. The Harper and the Keene deal all included prodigious quantities. In every big deal that failed the causes were much alike. The manipulators conducted them with practically the same end in view, namely, to make their profits out of the shorts, calculating it would be heavy enough to easily to make good the loss they expected to sustain the marketing the cash wheat they were obliged to take.

L. Z. Leiter has backed his son, by the latter's own confession. L. Z. Leiter is one of the richest men in America. His real estate in Chicago is worth more than $10,000,000. He owns blocks of the choicest local stocks and bonds, besides railroad and industrial securities, land and mines. No matter how rich, no man keeps an amount of cash on hand sufficient to carry 10,000,000 bushels of wheat, which Joe Leiter is supposed to own stored in Chicago, Buffalo, Duluth and Liverpool, besides 8,000,000 bushels of options. But it has been much easier than to ordinary mortals for these financial heavy weights to supply and borrow the round sum of $12,000,000 that has been used to take care of the deal. The figures are given on the strongest authority. The sum, immense as it is, was got easily, and the entire deal has been financed here it was no strain whatever.

THE RAILROAD KING.

William K. Vanderbilt Proves a Worthy Successor of the "Commodore."

William Kissam Vanderbilt, who in one day stepped into the center of the American railroad stage, and is now the most important railroad official in the country, is perhaps the only member of the descendants of the old Commodore who has the ability to take the place of the late William H. Vanderbilt. Mr. Vanderbilt will relieve Chauncey M. Depew, it is said, of the presidency of the New York Central, and will unite in one corporation that great road with all the roads the Vanderbilt wealth controls. His plan is to form a continuous land across the continent, and his single hand will be on the lever that will control the movements of this grand industrial mechanism. In all the empire of railroads there is nothing to compare with this man's scheme. Mr. Vanderbilt is the second son of William H. His father left him less of the stupendous fortune than fell to the share of Cornelius, the eldest son. But Cornelius is not strong, and oesn't like enterprise, while William Kissam has abundant health, and lives industrial sway. He is already in substance, the controlling power of the Vanderbilt wealth. He is now about to show the world something of the marvelous capacity that accumulated that wealth. The new Caesar of railroad empire is 49 years old, and active as a man of 30. His new career will be watched with intense interest.

HABITS OF THE FUR SEAL.

How Animals That Have Many of the Traits of Sheep.

"Never mind, father, blindness shall not interfere with my success in life," said the young law student, Henry Fawcett, when his father reproached himself for carelessly destroying all his son's prospects of advancement.

"One pleasant day in 1858 the two had gone hunting together. A flock of partridges flew over a fence where the father had no right to shoot; but as he was moving forward, they flew back toward his son. The father, so eager to bring down a bird that he did not think of his son's danger, fired. Several shots entered Henry's breast, and one went through each glass of a pair of spectacles he wore. In an instant he was stone blind for life.

"But within ten minutes from the time of the accident which deprived him of eyesight forever this boy of iron nerve had determined that even blindness should not swerve him from his purpose.

"'Will you read the newspaper to me?' were his first words to his sister when they carried him home.

"He was obliged to abandon law, but he began a study of political economy with a zeal only equaled, meanwhile having friends read to him in his moments of leisure the works of Milton, Burke, Wordsworth, all of George Eliot's novels, and a wide course of general reading. Then it was determined that his blindness should not limit the breadth of his culture."—Orison Marden in Success.

Good to Kick with.

There is a wooden-legged steer at a livery stable in Bowling Green, Ky. Some time ago the steer's leg was broken by a falling tree, while on a farm. A veterinary surgeon was sent for, and he amputated the leg just below the knee. It healed in twenty days, and the doctor then made a wooden leg, which he strapped on. Since being furnished with the wooden leg the steer walks with no signs of awkwardness, and can run almost as swiftly as before. The wooden leg is a blind one, and the steer uses it by preference to kick with.

Insect Chewing Gum.

A strange insect discovery has been made in California. The vegetation in this district is infested with an insect, which, on being removed from the twigs of oak on which it thrives, and compressed in quantities by the hand, becomes a more or less pliable lump, somewhat resembling rubber. The substance makes admirable chewing gum, as it takes and retains flavors better than any other gums, although doubtless many people would not care to chew it. It has other valuable commercial uses.—Chicago News.

THE REAL KING OF NORWAY.

Traces His Descent from "Harold the Fair-Haired."

Few people are aware, save those who know the country well, that there is another King besides Oscar.

His name is Ivar Tofte, and he keeps what is called a "station" in the Gudbrandsdal, a valley beyond the Romsdal, on the way to Christiania, where many very old Norwegian families live. A "station," it should be explained, is a house where horses and carriages can be hired. Where there are no railway routes in Norway there are those "landskyds," some fast and some slow. Here a certain number of horses and carioles, stolkjaerres or trilles, must be kept for the use of travelers.

Old Ivar Tofte then—he is an elderly man—keeps a station. But for all that, he traces his descent straight down from Harald-harfager—Harold the Fair-haired—and says he is really King of Norway. This Harold's date is so remote that it is "wrapped in mystery," but the chronologers give it as from 860 (?) to 933. In his own district Tofte is considered King and disputes have been brought to him to be settled, just as if he were King, disputes which would not be taken to the real one. It is asserted that on one occasion King Oscar and Ivar Tofte met, and Tofte, patting Oscar on the back, exclaimed: "Ah, old fellow, if every one had their rights, I should be where you are, and you should be some where else."

Tofte is not without evidence of his royal lineage. He possesses a glorious service of gold plate, besides other relics of bygone splendor, and, rumor has it, keeps the best store of aquavitae in Norway. Aquavitae is the national spirit, and it is only here and there in recognized shops that it is for sale. You cannot buy either it or whisky at most of the hotels, for the sale of spirits is very rigorously legislated for in the two kingdoms, and as for public houses (so-called), there are none.—Montreal Star.

THE ORIGIN OF CHESS.

A Peculiar Story Regarding the Introduction of the Game.

To-day it is the accepted belief that India was the original home of chess, and that it was transplanted thence to Persia, in the early history of our era. Firdusi, the Persian poet, tells, in his great epic, "Shah Nameh" (the Book of Kings), a curious story about the introduction of the game. There came one day to the great king, Naushirawan, an envoy from his tributary, the king of Hind, bearing a costly present, a handsome chessboard and the strangest letter ever sent to overlord, proposing a riddle to his almighty majesty, and insisting on a solution to it. Naushirawan was to set his wise men to discover, from the board and the pieces the principles of the game. If they succeeded, then the king of Hind would dutifully pay his tribute as heretofore. If they failed, then clearly wisdom did not dwell with them, and he could no longer demean himself by paying tribute to the lord of such ignoramuses rather would he claim tribute himself. Naushirawan was sorely perplexed. He handled the pieces and examined the board; he tried to bribe the envoy to reveal the secret; at length he begged seven days' grace. Then he summoned his wise men from far and near, and put to them the puzzle. They were as nonplussed as the Egyptian wise men were to interpret Pharaoh's dreams. They pulled long faces and consulted the stars; they wrangled and argued; but all was in vain. At length a Joseph appeared in the person of the king's chief counsellor who had hitherto held aloof in regard for his dignity, but who now promised that, given secrecy and seclusion he would read this riddle. In a day and a night he returned from his study, and expounded to the court the mysteries of the game of chess, to the king's great joy, the envoy's chagrin, and the salvation of the revenue.

A Fence Seventy Miles Long.

The longest fence in the world is probably that one which has just been finished by the Erie Cattle Company along the Mexican border. It is seventy-five miles in length and separates exactly, for its entire distance, the two republics of North America. The fence was built to keep the cattle from running across the border and falling easy prey to the Mexican cow-punchers. Although it cost a great deal of money it is estimated that cattle enough will be saved in one year to more than pay for it. It is a barbed-wire fence, with mesquite and cottonwood poles, and for the entire length of it runs as straight as the crow flies.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Feeding Elephants.

Elephants in the Indian army are fed twice a day. When meal time arrives, they are drawn up in line before a row of piles of food. Each animal's breakfast includes ten pounds of raw rice, done up in five two-pound packages. The rice is wrapped in leaves and then tied with grass. At the command, "Attention!" each elephant raises its trunk and a package is thrown into its capacious mouth. By this method of feeding not a single grain of rice is wasted.—Golden Days.

When the poor law was first introduced a Dublin beggar woman whom a gentleman referred to the poorhouse said: "This poor law's a grand thing for the sowls of the gintlemen." "Why so?" Because now when we go to the alms they only say go to the poorhouse, but before there was a poorhouse they used to say 'Go to the divil!'"

A BRIGHT BOSTONIAN

IN TWO YEARS SHE BECAME AMERICA'S GREATEST EGYPTOLOGIST.

From Just an Ordinary Denominational Woman with a Sunday School Class She Advanced to the Front Rank of Our Scholars in a Very Short Time.

Mrs. Marie N. Buckman, an unassuming little New England woman, was teaching a class of boys in Sunday school one day when the subject of the Egyptian influence upon the Israelites was taken up. At once she felt an awakened interest in the lesson that seemed strange to her. She grew enthusiastic at the thought of the rich life of the people who lived along the banks of the Nile ages ago and left such enduring witnesses of their skill and art for the instruction and enjoyment of the nations that were yet to be born.

The grandeur of their civilization and the sublimity of their history touched her as nothing ever had before. She announced to her class that during the week she read everything she could concerning the Egyptians feeling all the time that it was strangely familiar to her, although she knew that she was reading it for the first time.

MARIE N. BUCKMAN.

Sunday after Sunday, whatever the lesson they would take up the subject for further study the coming Sunday, and formal topic of the lesson might be something of the lore of Egypt would creep in, and the boys in Mrs. Buckman's class gained a wider and deeper knowledge of ancient history than is usual in the conning of the routine Old Testament Sunday school lessons.

In an almost incredibly short time after Mrs. Buckman had first followed the children of Israel into Egypt she was ready to measure swords with the most erudite Egyptian scholars of the present day. Her studies and investigations brought her in contact with Dr. William Copley Winslow and Professor Charles H. S. Davis, as well as with famous Egyptologists from all of whom treated her opinions with the utmost respect.

Certainly no woman, perhaps no man, in this country has done so much doing as much practical and effective work in the cause of Egyptology as she. About a year ago she was appointed the secretary for the United States of the Egypt Exploration Fund, of which Sir John Fowler is president and Charles Dudley Warner, honorary vice-president.

Mrs. Buckman is as Oriental in her personal appearance as in her mental trend, and the art students in the Museum noticing her, a pale, spirit-like creature, with dark eyes in which mystery seemed to dwell, named her the reincarnated Egyptian princess. She is not a learned woman in the ordinary sense of the term. She was never drilled in the classics and no outside influence was brought to bear upon her to turn her mind in this direction. It was a natural and almost irresistible impulse, for which she is no more able to account than any one else.

She states as a simple fact that when her interest in Egyptology was first awakened she used to be asked the meaning of certain cartouches and hieroglyphics and would answer without hesitation, never stopping to think that she had not ascertained it for herself, but in looking the matter up she invariably found that she had given the correct interpretation.

The language, too, which would naturally be supposed to be difficult for one to acquire who was master of no tongue but the English, came to her with rare facility. "It is so simple and so musical that one cannot help remembering it," she explained on being asked how it was possible for her to commit to memory the long selections which she has ever ready at her tongue's end.

Theosophists would doubtless explain her intuitive knowledge of every thing pertaining to Egypt, as well as her physical personality, by the reincarnation theory. Mrs. Buckman neither accepts nor rejects it. She is an orthodox Christian and merely smiles when asked about the possibility of her having lived a previous existence in a palace by the Nile.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

To Dry Children's Shoes.

When the little ones have finished their play, they should be taught to remove their shoes and stockings and put on dry ones. House shoes of soft leather or felt are inexpensive and comfortable, and they last a long time, besides being a great saving in mud and the nerve irritation that is often harder to bear than fae laborious work with which the housemother has to struggle.

As soon as the shoes are taken off they should be filled to the very tops with dry oats. It is a custom of one of the most provident women we ever raised a family to prepare stocking feet of the sizes of the various shoes worn by the children. These are numbered and hung on a nail in the entryway, where the little ones keep their wrappings. These stocking feet have short tops; in fact, they are shaped more like a baby's sock than anything else. They are filled with oats and sewed up at the top. A couple of inches of extra room is allowed at the top, and when the shoes are to be filled, the oats are shaken loosely through the stocking; then it is put into the shoe and adjusted nearly in the form of the human foot as posible. A few gentle raps will settle the oats into the shoe; then a strong cord is tied around the stocking top as close to the grain as possible. The oats being perfectly dry occupy a given amount of space. As they absorb the moisture, which they begin to do immediately, they swell a little and keep the leather from shrinking.—Buffalo Express.

How to "Look Indian."

When you drop a small object on the floor, "look Indian," and you're sure to find it. Here is the modus operandi, according to a Pittsburg exchange.

Somebody dropped a stickpin in the hall the other day and had hard work to find it. She hunted high and low and on her hands and knees, and with a candle specially procured for the purpose, but it was no use; the pin was very tiny and unperceivable, its value being that of association rather than size or brilliancy. The somebody, after a final shake of the rugs, was about to give it up forever, when one of the children chanced to come along. "Why don't you look 'Indian' for it?" he asked. Before the somebody realized what was meant, down dropped the youngster on the floor, his head and his whole body lying sidewise and feet as near to the dead level as possible. In this position his eyes roved rapidly over the floor. "I have it," he shouted presently, and sure enough, right in the middle of the floor, in so plain a place that it had escaped notice, was the missing stickpin. The youngster then explained that "looking Indian" meant putting the head to the ground in order to catch sight of the smallest object between himself and the horizon. "They do it on the plains all the time," he said. "That's why they can always tell who's coming. But it works in houses just as well as on the plains. Why, we never lose anything in the nursery now adays; we just 'look Indian' and find it right off."

The Sin of Worrying.

It is care that kills. One who deliberately cultivates a disposition to throw care to the winds soon becomes an indispensable person to his friends. Care is worry, pure and simple. The burden that causes us to worry is heavy enough to bear, all problem, without adding to it that of all-engrossing care, which never lets the mind rest for an instant. Suppose you do "have troubles of your own." Can you cure them by worrying? Once the best efforts to overcome the ills and tribulations of this life is all that is demanded. If that effort surmounts the difficulties, well and good. If it fails, the fret that wears wrinkles in one's soul, the worry that makes us hated by our friends, the care that wears deep furrows on the brow do not help one out of the slough of despond, but rather bury us the deeper. The world gets very tired of men and women who placard their woes on their faces and moan it in their voices in hourly conversation. But the world dearly loves those people who are merry and companionable. We owe something to society, to the world of people about us, and have no right to make ourselves public nuisances because the clouds obscure our sun.—Washington Star.

Veils Considered Injurious.

Paradoxes are in fashion—a woman pays $7 for a dotted veil and $70 to her oculist to to correct astigmatism. An oculist once said that every dot in a woman's veil was worth $5 to the gentlemen of his profession. The eye is being constantly strained to avoid these obstacles in its way, and, of course, it is weakened and tortured. Think of a woman paying $1.50 for something that will, in time, destroy her eyesight. Just as sure as fate. But women do these things in spite of everything—except when the overworked eyes begin to pain, and then they're glad enough to do most anything for quick relief.

A Suggestion for Corn Bread.

Put the milk that the recipe calls for on the stove, and when it is hot stir in the cornmeal and let it cook for ten or fifteen minutes. An easy way to prevent it from burning is to set the dish on an asbestos pad. Then proceed with the mixing in the usual way. The extra cooking removes the raw taste of the meal and greatly improves the flavor of the bread, besides making it entirely digestible.

LACE APPLIQUE TO HAVE ITS REIGN

Sashes of All Kinds, Both for the Neck and Waist in Favor.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun)

Dame Fashion always presents some disturbing elements, or suggestions like the bustle, crinoline, or long trains on street gowns, each season, just to excite interest and the spirit of opposition in women, and this time it is the sloping shoulder, which no one can contemplate with any degree of satisfaction. The long shoulder seam reaching down to the arm hampers our movements and is altogether un comfortable, but it is safe to assume, from previous revivals of old-time modes, that when this condition does come about modern ingenuity will have devised some means of giving the appearance of sloping shoulders without the discomfort. We have been threatened with the bustle, too; but while the skirt is so close fitting around the hips it cannot materialize in any very extensive proportions.

In all the details of dress we can indulge our fancies to the utmost, as trimmings of every sort are to be worn, and the advance importations show a variety in colors and kinds never surpassed. Black braid, black satin, and velvet ribbon are to be very much used for trimming the new spring gowns of wool and net; and garnitures in the form of yokes, bole

ros, and skirt panels are shown in a great variety, made of silk and mohair braid, silk and jetted net and chiffon, and progressively jewelled lace. Bands of Honiton lace applique, on chiffon and net foundation, studded here and there with tiny spangles, are among the novelties. Lace appplique of any sort is the vogue, and, if properly applied, it is sure to be an artistic trimming. Applique sprays are sewn on velvet, satin, and silk, as well as chiffon and net, of which yokes and vests are made, and the one point to be considered in the use of applique lace is that the material to which it is applied shall be fine and handsome. Wide Cluny lace insertion is used to trim fancy waists of white chiffon, and there seems to be a preference for the Honiton variety of lace this season. Yak laces have also put in an appearance again.

Sashes of all kinds and conditions are well to the front in fashion, and the new ribbons are more beautiful than ever. There are Roman stripes, checks and plaids, with satin bordered edges, and flowered, corded, and watered ribbons of all kinds. Net, chiffon, and lace sashes will continue in favor; but it is not alone sashes for the waist that swell the list. The sashes for the neck are quite as conspicuous and more generally worn, for all women seem to like the long silken cravats around their throats. They are made of liberty gauze, chiffon and thin silk, or of Swiss, with hemstitched and lace-trimmed ends. The newest of these neck sashes is a scarf of net with an elaborate lace pattern at the ends and an edge all around. They range in price from $4 to $15, and are really very elegant. In smaller things for the neck there is unlimited variety, short bows and knotted cravats of pure white lawn, with knife-plaited frills on the ends, are added to an array of lace knots and neck frills, which are beyond description.

THE WOMAN'S WORLD

When She is Most Fascinating.

When 30 years of age woman is most fascinating. All the women famous for power over the hearts of men, from Cleopatra to Helen Mathers, were neither 40 than 20 when at the zenith of their power.

At a literary salon in Paris Balzac was once asked by a pretty little miss of 17 why it was he liked women she would call passe. "Why, monsieur, even when they are as old as 40 you seem to enjoy their society!" Balzac looked at her earnestly for a second and then laughed heartily. He bent over to explain matters and remarked in a serious voice as though weighing every word he said: "Perhaps the secret lies in the simple fact that the woman of 20 must be pleased, while the woman of 40 tries to please, and the older woman's power consists, not as has been so often said, in understanding and making the most of her own charms, but in comprehending and with happy tact smoothing out and hiding the most of the good qualities of the man whose favor she seeks."

There is no doubt that a man always admires a clever woman, yet he enjoys himself better with a woman who makes him feel that he is clever. Of course all the men like being entertained for a while by a well-informed woman, but man is essentially vain, and he enjoys much better the happy tact which makes him believe that he is entertaining the well-informed woman.

The woman a man likes best is not always the smartest or most brilliant. No, indeed. A pair of brown, sympathetic eyes, a sweet voice, will do away with all the logic and philosophy of a man's brain has ever entertained. Of course the woman must have the happy knack of discovering what subject the man talks about best. Then she must listen quietly and in an interested manner. Perhaps it would be a good suggestion for her to draw him out with happy queries until he is astonished at his own brilliancy.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Amateur Book Cover Making.

Who that is at all aesthetic has not tried her hand at an original poster. A variation of this particular talent is the latest fad in polite society for making book covers. Of course the finishing is left to the binder. The amateur is supposed to make a suitable design, which must be drawn upon a fine piece of leather. The designs most in favor are those rich in color, which are carried out in a most incrustated, mock gems. Only favorite authors are thus honored. The bejeweled volume when finished is left in some conspicuous place to show the taste as well as the accomplishment of the possessor.

Magazines, instead of being left loose, are bound between two stiffened covers, held together by silk elastic. For these covers, chamois skin is used. The chamois is first handsomely embroidered in original pattern, or grewsomely hand-painted in poster fashion. Cabochons, spangles, silver and gold thread and jewels are eccentrically combined in the adornment of the new poster book covers. They are unique and charming, and can be made as individual as heart could desire.

Black and yellow dragons, strange scarlet serpents, showers of golden rain and white-faced maidens exceedingly thin and with dark black hair, are some of the nightmarish themes that are worked into the uncanny effects that writhe under the misnomer of "artistic productions." As a rule the poorer the artist, the more delightfully dreadful is the result.—Chicago Times Herald.

New Style of Haircut for Boys.

There's a new cut to little boys' hair. The Lord Fauntleroy style has went out some years ago, since when there has been an era of close-clipped heads. Ringlets and fluffy manes and poodle-dog effects, and all else that made boys look like girls, were tabooed. Even "snappered," "shingled" and "sheared" cuts that made a head look as though it had been treated by a razor or a lawn-mower was not uncommon. The new cut continues to scorn anything like curl or fluff, but it makes concessions as regards length. Parted in the middle, the hair hangs down in straight, uncompromising lines until it grazes the shoulders, where the mass is hacked off, whisk-broom fashion. There is no hint of fringe or bang, or even of shingling. The ears are completely covered, and only a narrow slit of little face peeps out between the curtaining locks. The effect, on the whole, is mediaval, and that it is now and then out of keeping with the wide-awake face of the average American youngster is not to be denied. The average mother is no more dismayed by this incongruity, however, than she was by that confusing time when she set out to Fauntleroy her little lad.—Harper's Bazar.

Salt and Scabby Potatoes.

Salt will not prevent or cure potato scab unless used in such quantities as to destroy the potatoes also. Applications of corrosive sublimate or flowers of sulphur at the time of planting the seed are the best remedies in use.

Among suggestions to book lovers by a lover of books are these: "Books are neither card racks, crumb baskets, nor receptacles for dead leaves." "It is better to give a book than to lend it." The last seems to be a distinction without a difference.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning March 30. Comment by Rev. N. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—The evils of intemperance.—Prov. xxiii, 29-35.

Intemperance is one of the greatest curses of humanity. Its evils are innumerable and indescribable. It destroys men bodily, mentally, morally and spiritually. It debauches a man absolutely and completely. It has been doing so for centuries, and yet it still finds those who are willing to be debauched. It is one of the greatest mysteries of modern civilization that intemperance has not been stamped out of existence either by legislation or by the voluntary actions of men in giving up that which has only proved a curse and ruination to man the world over. But progress is being made in the cause of temperance. More and more the drink traffic is being outlawed. More and more men who persist in surrendering themselves to strong drink are being considered unfitted for responsible duties in life. The time when publicly drunk could openly display their drunkenness with impunity, but that time has happily passed forever. It's a dangerous as well as a disgraceful thing today for a public man to have the charge of drunkenness proved against him. In many places for many years the conscience is being aroused, and the cause of temperance is advancing. The Christian Endeavor society should use all its influence to destroy this evil in our land.

Solomon in the verses quoted points out some of the evils of intemperance.

1. Intemperance brings poverty. "Be not among wine bibbers, among riotous eaters of flesh, for the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty" (verses 20, 21). How many have learned by an awful experience that this is true? Drink brings thousands to poverty. It impoverishes body, mind and soul. It robs homes of furniture and the comforts of life; it robs husbands of the love and care of husbands; it robs children of their clothing and of daily bread. It numbers in its poverty stricken hosts more than were ever impoverished by war, famine or pestilence. How can a man take that liquid himself which robs him of reason, of wealth, of home, of love, of honor, of position, of friends, of God? Poor indeed is he who has lost all these.

2. Intemperance brings countless evils, woe, babbling, wounds without cause, redness of eyes. Into what countless woes and babblings one deprived of reason by drink comes! How many wounds he receives that would not have been dealt but for drink!

3. Intemperance leads to nearly all other sins and crimes (verses 29-35). Were it not for drunkenness our prison doors might almost be closed.

4. Intemperance alienates from God and separates from heaven (Gal. v, 21).

The Parting of the Paths.

We can be good—a way that may have to be reached through fights with tempests on the mountain top, but which, when reached, is a path of pleasantness and peace. We see the wrong—a way too often adorned with specious promises and fair flowers, which leads at last into doubt and disappointment and despair. We see the human soul here on this earth placed forever at the parting of these paths, where it must choose its way and abide the consequences of its choice. Neither angels may plead or demons may cajole. We see these paths reaching out into an endless future, and, though we dare not predict to what depths of infamy and woe the one course may or may not at last descend, we dare say that whoever, through the way of sacrifice, has climbed the heavenly steeps shall receive as his reward gifts worthy to be carried throughout eternity with solemn gratitude and sacred awe.—Christian Register.

The Sunday School Army.

Rev. Dr. James A. Worden, superintendent of the Sunday school department of the northern Presbyterian church, is endeavoring to secure 500,000 more Sunday school scholars before April 1, 1901, and thus celebrate the opening of the twentieth century. The Sunday school army of this church already numbers 1,000,000.

Song of the Armenian Shepherd.

One by one the stars arise
In the meadows of the skies.
One by one, all white and still,
Rest on Ararat's holy hill.
Now I lay my crook away,
Toil is over with the day;
Kneeling at my frugal hoard,
Break the bread and bless the Lord.

Lord, look on me and on us all
And make us blest
And bless the rest.
At this and every eventfall.

All the day afar from me
They have wandered wild and free.
All the day I followed still,
Rock to rock and hill to hill.
Calling down the gorges deep,
"Come ye back, my wandering sheep,"
Till at eve I brought them home,
Safe in fold, no more to roam!

Lord, do thou much for me and all,
And when we stray
Thy good way,
Oh, fetch us home at eventfall!

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

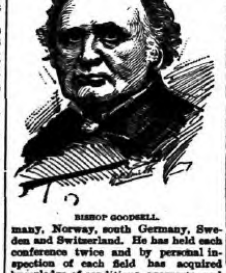
Lesson For the Week Beginning March 30. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Strange Ways In Which God Leads Us.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Acts xiii, 42-49.

It is not in human nature to enjoy pain or to be pleased when troubles and dangers bedge in our path. Yet we often see, for we have passed through difficulties and trials, that they have been great blessings to us and that in no other way could we have been so benefited.

It seemed strange that the Jews of Antioch in Pisidia should refuse to listen to Paul and Barnabas. It was a trial to patience and faith and must have sorely tested the charity of heart and judgment of these Christian messengers to be so rejected by their own countrymen and coreligionists. But it led to the preaching of the gospel to the heathen and to the establishment of the Christian church on foundations of breadth and depth impossible if Jews alone had remained the influential ones in the work. The persecution of Paul and his sufferings in this region, especially at Lystra, where he was almost killed, must have had a deep effect upon the young man Timothy. He became converted and for many years was Paul's traveling companion and most intimate friend. The last message ever given by the apostle from his place of imprisonment in Rome was to this faithful helper and son in the gospel.

Pleasant paths are not always the most beneficial. When God seems to lead us in ways that are difficult and filled with peril or pain, it is wise to cling closely to Him in patience and faith. Some great blessing never before realized is often in waiting at the end of the pathway so narrow and hard.



BISHOP GOODSELL.

Bishop D. A. Goodsell.

Special interest has attached to the work of Bishop Goodsell during his two years of residence in Europe. He has had oversight of the work of the Methodist Episcopal church in Bulgaria, Denmark, Finland, Italy, north Germany, Norway, south Germany, Sweden and Switzerland. He has held each conference twice and by personal inspection of each field has acquired knowledge of conditions, prospects and needs which will be of great value in planning the future operations of the church in these fields. He consummated the union of the Wesleyan Methodist missions of Germany with our own as one of his most important official acts. This was done after full debate and the consent of the Wesleyan conference and our own general conference as well as of all the churches and ministers connected with the mission. One of the most interesting exercises possible for the League is to have a series of evenings devoted to the representation of the various missions of our church.

Be Still.

Our modern life is full of hustle and rush and bustle. But noise is not an index of work done. The best machines often work most quietly. No soul can grow unless it takes time for quiet thinking alone with God. One can be too busy. There is such a thing as attending too many meetings and doing too much work for others. Whoever neglects to cultivate intimate acquaintance with God in quietness and retirement of heart fails to use the means for growth in grace given to us. Stop the talking and doing for a little while; be still and know God.

The Joy of Service.

To be at work, to do things for the world, to turn the current of things about us at our will, to make our existence a positive element, even though it be no bigger than a grain of sand in this great system where we live—that is a new joy of which the idle man knows no more than the mole knows of sunshine or the serpent of the eagle's triumphant flight into the upper air. The man who loves, indeed, what it is to act, to work, cries out, "This alone is to live!"—Phillips Brooks.

Harsh Judgments.

Those was when I believed that wrong
In others to detect
Was part of genius and a gift
To cherish, not reject.

Now, better taught by Thee, O Lord,
This truth dawns on my mind,
The best effect of heavenly light
Is earth's false eyes to blind.

How Thou canst think so well of us,
Yet be to God Thou art,
Is darkness to my intellect,
But sunshine to my heart.

Yet habits linger in the soul;
More grace, O Lord, more grace!
More sweetness from Thy loving heart,
More sunshine from Thy face!

We paint from self the evil things
We think that others do,
While to the self despising soul
All things but self are fair.

I need Thy mercy for my sin,
But more than this I need—
Thy mercy's likeness in my soul
For others' sins to bleed.

All bitterness is from ourselves,
All sweetness is from Thee.
Sweet God, forevermore be Thou
Fountain and fire in me.

Why Dehorning is Advisable.

Dehorning is to be recommended because dehorned cattle are more easily cured for than those with horns. The best time to perform the operation is during cold weather, when there will be no trouble from flies. To dehorn mature animals use clippers that will remove the horn perfectly at a single stroke and in a moment of time. With suitable clippers properly used, the operation is simple and very quickly performed. Animals do not give evidence of great suffering as an effect of dehorning. The tissues injured in dehorning are not very well supplied with nerves, and they quickly cut through. Good evidence that dehorning is not very painful is the fact that cattle will resume feeding immediately after being operated on, and the yield of milk in cows is not perceptibly affected. Those who are familiar with the operation and the results of it are its most enthusiastic advocates.

In the past efforts have frequently been made to prevent the practice of dehorning with the ground that it caused needless pain. It would seem to us that efforts can now better be expended by endeavoring to have the last relic of a horn removed from our domestic cattle, who ceased to need them when they came under the protection of man. Horns may sometimes be ornamental, but it is evident that they are usually useless, expensive and dangerous luxuries.

Care in Picking Strawberries.

When the fruit begins to ripen and the picking of strawberries commences, handle the vines with extreme care, being careful not to break the leaf or fruit stems. Pick all the ripe fruit, as any left on the vines is an injury to the perfecting of the remaining berries. Use picking stands with legs holding from four to six boxes. Set these in the path between the rows ahead of the pickers. When boxes are full take to the packing room or shade, where they can be cooled off and any surplus berries be removed, leaving them rounded up well to be put into the crates. Do not turn the berries from the boxes if they have not been carefully picked. Do not top the baskets with the finest berries. When the season is advanced it is well to sort the berries while picking, making the fruit in the smaller to be sold for canning purposes. Strawberries should not be picked while the vines are wet, either with dew or rain, if it can be avoided, but if necessary only partly fill the boxes, allowing the berries to dry off, after which they can be filled by turning from one box to another.—American Agriculturist.

Making an Asparagus Bed.

Asparagus roots may be planted in spring, or fall, provided the ground is moderately dry; otherwise it is better to plant in the spring. The land must be well prepared and can hardly be too rich. Good strong one-year-old plants are by many preferred to older ones. For garden culture the rows should be one foot apart and the roots planted two feet apart in the rows. In field culture, where horse cultivation is practiced, three to four feet of space is given each way. The easiest way of planting is to make furrows with the plows, ten or twelve inches deep. Level and mellow the bottom of these, and if the ground is not already very rich, spade in some decomposed manure, filling up the furrows so that the crown is about six inches below the surface of the land. Plant the roots in these, covering them with three inches of soil, and as the shoots grow, fill in the trench gradually until it is level. The ground is to be kept mellow and clear of weeds throughout the season. After two years a few stalks may be cut off each year, but a full crop should not be cut before the third year.

Cutting Up a Hog.

After the hog has been killed and cleaned, cut down on each side of the backbone with a sharp hatchet, then with a few cuts with the knife at the lower part loosen the leaf lard, pull it upward and take it out. Begin at the breast bone and with the aid of a knife take out the ribs. Run a knife down between the lean and fat meat of the backbone. By the aid of splints spread the hog to its full width and allow it to hang until it has thoroughly cooled. If the animal is a very heavy one cut the sides apart, then take off the shoulder, then the side meat and finally the ham. By taking it down in pieces in this manner one man can handle a heavy hog alone.—E. Esterley, Illinois.

Harvard Manure Increases Corn Smut.

Fresh manure, which is a favorable breeding place for corn smut, should not be applied to corn land, especially on damp soils. By proper care in this respect and burning as much as possible the smut in the field, the disease can probably be kept within limits in which not more than 2 per cent. damage will be done. The expense of doing anything more would be greater than the saving, and is considered impracticable.

Full Blooded and Thoroughbred.

These terms are often used interchangeably to designate a pure-bred animal. In the strict sense of the terms, and the one in which it is advisable to use them, throughbred should refer only to running horses or that class which descends from the old Arab stock. Full blooded should refer to any pure-bred, recorded animal of any of the different breeds of live stock.

Truth About San Jose Scale.

Here is what a California man says of the San Jose scale and the treatment it should have. In California we have run the course of the San Jose Scale and as Artemus Ward might say, now regard it as a "harmless little cuss." It was introduced here without our knowledge and had made itself at home with us before we were aware. We did all we could to help ourselves against its ravages, and put our trust in Providence, which never deserts good Californians. As a result nature provided a remedy and the little parasite (Aphelinus fuscipennis) soon overtook the intruder, and to-day we laugh at the San Jose scale and its threats, for we have a friend that is working night and day and we know that our orchards are safe. We did not destroy our orchards, cut down our trees or do any of the other foolish things that are being urged on some of the eastern orchardists.

If you know my case is afflicted with the terrible pest give him the following instructions in regard to it as coming from one who knows. In the first place, if any one advises him to cut down and burn his trees tell him to go to Klondike or some other place where he will have wider field for the display of his abilities. Then he should cultivate thoroughly and keep his trees in as vigorous a condition as possible. This will give them powers of resistance against the San Jose scale and all other troubles. Burn all prunings. Spray thoroughly with some good strong wash, either the salt, sulphur and lime wash, or kerosene emulsion, and having done the best he can, leave the rest to nature. It might assist nature somewhat if he could get some conscientious entomologist to secure twigs from California with parasites upon them, breed out the parasites and introduce them in the infested regions.

There is really no cause for all this hullaballoo about the San Jose scale. It is a bad pest to be sure and should not be encouraged, but care will prevent its spread and lessen its ravages and nature in time will look after it. The scheme of destroying trees in the orchard because they have the scale is as rational as it would be for a poultry raiser to kill off all his fowls because one of them had vermin.—John Isaac in Agriculturist.

Getting Rid of Wild Oats.

This plant after it once becomes well established is somewhat difficult to get rid of. It is however an annual and if prevented from seeding for a few years and measures adopted to induce the germination of seeds that are already in the ground, it will soon disappear. Possibly the best method is of seeding the land to field oats in spring, these as soon as the crop of grain has been removed, plow to a depth of three or four inches.

Just as soon as the wild oats have well started, go over the ground with some shallow going instrument, such as a small toothed cultivator. This will kill the plants already growing and bring to the surface seeds that have not already sprouted. These will germinate and before the plants are old enough to mature seed they will be killed by frost. In autumn seed the land to winter grain if this can be grown, and after harvesting the following season plow the ground and give the same treatment as recommended for the oats fields. Two years' treatment of this kind if carefully performed, will kill almost any annual.—American Agriculturist.

Cultivating Horse-Radish.

Horse-radish is grown from small pieces of the root four to eight inches long. For cultivation in the garden, the ground is prepared as for other crops and the pieces of roots are planted in rows from two to three feet apart and 15 to 18 inches apart in the row. Mark off the ground and make a small hole with a dibble or planting stick and set so that the upper end is slightly below the surface. Press the soil firmly about the root, keep the ground free from weeds, and cultivate as beans or cabbage. The soil should be rich and in good condition. The horse-radish is dug in the fall during the cool moist weather after other crops have been taken care of. The earth is all shaken from the roots and these are stored in houses or pits, to be marketed during the winter.

Preventing Sore Feet in Horses.

When horses' feet have become tender from being driven over rough roads, they will often continue them a long time after being shod. In this case, have the blacksmith remove the shoes and place a piece of strong, soft leather, preferably calfskin, between the shoe and the foot, letting it cover the entire sole and frog. Then heat some pine tar so it will be warm, but not hot, and pour a small quantity between the leather and the sole of the foot. This will prevent the horse going lame, even if driven over roads that are very rough.—L. O. Follow, Minn.

Ensilage Crops.

Although corn is the principal crop used for ensilage in the United States, there are many other plants suitable for this purpose. The first experiments in this line were made on the continent of Europe with sugar beet leaves. In this country millet, rye, sorghum, oats, peas and other crops have been ensilaged with satisfactory results.

ENFORCING SUNDAY OBSERVANCE.

A hypocritical religious attitude has been assumed by sundry persons in various parts of the city as a means of arresting the ordinance providing for a proper observance of Sunday, until the practices have become a burlesque on the intent of the law. The intention of the city authorities, as evidenced in the numerous raids made by the police yesterday afternoon, to suppress these violations, is to be commended and supported by every good citizen of Plainfield. The existence of these establishments is a strong contributory source of poor morals, and at times a direct cause of crime. The sanctimonious excuse by which they have made a pretense of complying with the purport of the law is so shallow, and such a reflection on Christianity, that their eradication from local life cannot be accomplished too quick for the consistency and good reputation of the town. The culprits who were made to feel the strong arm of the law yesterday were mostly inferior offenders, but we understand that the authorities will prosecute all violators, irrespective of their standing or influence, before they finish the campaign of arrests To do otherwise would be hypocrisy even worse than that practiced by the men arrested Sunday. There should be no distinctions nor exceptions in the crusade.

IN CASE OF WAR.

It is denied that the rumors of war will interfere in any way with an adjournment of the Legislature. Should occasion for declared after adjournment the Governor has power to call the Legislature in extra session to meet any emergencies which might be created. New Jersey can at a few days' notice muster 4,000 trained troops, and in a week's time thousands of volunteers would offer their services. As the State is without a public debt it could raise at least a million dollars on short notice for the equipment of its troops. The members of the Legislature would be in hearty accord with any appropriation to strengthen the right arm of the Government. All party lines would be obliterated, and patriotism alone would be the ruling power.

A TIMELY WARNING.

City Judge DeMeza made an announcement from the bench Saturday that is deserving of commendation. The only pity is that it was not made before. He instructed the police force to notify those persons who do not have solid, substantial bottoms to their ash wagons to make a change at once. Many of the ash wagons are so filled with cracks and openings that they scatter their trademark along the streets that they pass through. If the ashmen do not comply with the ordinance that provides for the kind of wagons that they shall have, it is within the power of the city to revoke their licenses.

LOWER TAX RATE.

Unless there is an increase in the county and State tax this year, the tax rate in Plainfield for the year 1898 will be five points lower than last year. This statement is made on the authority of a prominent Councilman who stands close to the administration. It can therefore be looked on as semi-official. The administration has been doing some figuring on the appropriations and the assessments of the property in the city and they have reached the conclusion that the hoped-for reduction of the rate of taxation will be possible. While some of the appropriations have been increased over last year's, the Councilman said there was sufficient retrenchment in other places to allow the reduction. If this be true that the tax rate is reduced without any but the natural increase in valuations, the new Council will have accomplished one of the things for which it was elected.

UP TO THE TIMES.

A year ago the Trenton Evening Times was "just behind the times." Today, under its present aggressive management, it is right up-to-date. The latest improvement made by The Times is the installation of a telegraphic news service by direct wire. The present prosperous condition of The Times is highly flattering to the business and editorial ability of its young editor, who, as a receiver, took the paper when, to use a trite phrase, it was on its last legs.

GAS FOR THE STREETS.

There is a strong inclination on the part of the city council to adopt the Welshbach light for street lighting in place of the electric light. Several of the members have witnessed exhibitions of the light in New York and express themselves pleased with the result. In case the light should be introduced in Plainfield the Welshbach Company would have full charge of the operating of the system. The only part the city would have to do would be to pay for the lighting. It is said that most of the Council men are not pleased with the exhibition of the arc lights at the corner of Front street and Park avenue.

MILITARY DEPARTMENT.

The new arrangement and division of the military departments are of interest as showing the future attitude of the United States toward other nations. The rearrangement is a result of the complications and possible war with Spain. That prospect impelled the president and his advisers to look around at our national defenses and see what was lacking. They saw so much that they began energetic measures to supply the need, and one of the first of these was the redistricting of the country's military departments and the creation of two entirely new ones, so that there are now eight of these departments.

The new shuffle and deal were made with a view particularly to our coast defenses. Of the two newly created districts one is composed of the states fringing the lakes and will be known as the department of the lakes, headquarters at Chicago. The other is to be called the department of the gulf and is composed of the states bordering the south Atlantic beginning with South Carolina and following the ocean and gulf coast around till it ends with the southwestern border of Texas. Its headquarters are at Atlanta, which will delight the citizens of that ambitious town. The department of the east, headquarters Governor's island, New York city, includes the Atlantic states north of South Carolina.

On the Pacific coast the department of Columbia includes all the coast line from the farthest corner of Alaska to the northern boundary of California, headquarters at Vancouver barracks, Washington. The rest of the Pacific coast line belongs to the department of California, headquarters San Francisco.

It will thus be seen that of the eight military departments into which the country is henceforth to be divided five are along our coast lines, north, east, south and west.

It is to be noted that the house committee on election of president, vice president and representatives has reported in favor of a joint resolution amending the United States constitution so that representatives will be elected every four years instead of every two years. If the resolution should pass the house, it would have to pass also the senate. Then it would be submitted to the legislatures of the states to vote whether they would have it or not. If it were submitted to the people at large, they would be unanimous in its favor. If a congressman were elected for four years instead of two, he could spend all the first half of his term learning the business instead of planning to get in a second term, as he now does. Congressional elections in that case should come in the off year from presidential contests.

THE COAL QUESTION.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

Now a war is raging.
Blood is in the eye.
"We are selling cheapest,
Come to us and buy."

Thus the mighty chieftains
Advertise their wares.
Sometimes speaking honestly.
Sometimes laying snares.

While the price is out to cost.
Buried with the profits
Patrons saving dollars.
Dealers losing sense.

They have changed their principle.
Do not sell for gain.
But each one sells for the profits
To cause his neighbor pain.

Comic actors are these men.
Plainfield is their stage.
Her people are the audience
Whom they would engage.

"Authentic," the word from play.
Is lacking quite in truth.
For the talent—only loss.
For the people—fun.

When the game is over.
When they stop the fight.
Tell me what the actors gain.
I can't see it quite.

But the mighty chieftains
Surely we extol.
Their most philanthropic act
In giving us our coal.

HYPNOTIC SUBJECTS WERE FUNNY ACTORS.

The Sages Made Music Hall Ring With Laughter.

POWER OF THE INFLUENCE.

MANY PHYSICIANS AND CLERGYMEN WERE IN THE AUDIENCE.

Prof. Sage Gave a Short and Interesting Oral Exposition of the Science of Hypnotism and Dispelled the Queer Ideas Some People Have of the Power —Twenty-five Young Men Volunteered Their Services and Only Two Were Unable to Feel the Influence to Some Degree—Laughable Incidents Occurred.

If Music Hall ever contained more hearty laughs to the square inch than were evidenced by the audience that witnessed Prof. Sage's hypnotic performance Monday, it is not within the memory of the oldest habitue of that thespian temple. On the programme the entertainment was termed "Le Grand Hypnotism," a French inscription. In a colned praise of the language of these parts it would be translated "It is to laugh." True, tears were shed during the performance, but they flowed not as a result of grief but of laughter.

The audience was a fair sized one and contained a number of physicians and clergymen, and liberal number of those who move in fashionable circles.

The curtain rose to show Prof. Sage standing in the centre of the stage. For fifteen minutes he gave an oral exposition of the science of hypnotism—a talk that was clear in its explanations and entertaining in a general way.

The idea that anyone could come under the influence of a hypnotist unconsciously, as illustrated in the case of Trilby, was pure fiction, he said. Some little difficulty was encountered at first in securing subjects, but finally about twenty-five young men were seated upon the stage. A few of these were members of the company, but after last night Prof. Sage explained that only townsmen would be used in the exhibitions.

The first test was simple, but none the less wonderful to the uninitiated, and humorous to all. The subjects were asked to stand still, close their eyes and concentrate their thought on falling backward. Prof. Sage—and, in fact, his wife and two assistants, who seemed able to exercise a certain amount of influence—made a few passes across the foreheads of the subjects. Then using a hypnotic ball—a simple glass globe—they pressed the object to the base of the skull and at slight intervals drew it away. Some of the subjects were so susceptible to the influence that in a few seconds their bodies wavered and then fell backward, to be caught by the operators. In a few instances it took two or three minutes to bring the spell over the subjects, but there were only two who failed to succumb. For a second or two some of the young men seemed to be dazed when caught and aroused out of their reverie, then a mystified look came over their faces and they walked to their seats with solemn visages denoting puzzled thoughts as to just how the semi-trance was induced.

Several tests of a similar nature followed, such as clasping the hands and being unable to open them and revolving the palms and being unable to stop, until the spell was broken.

The hypnotic influence was acquired by producing sleep, then waking the subjects and impressively telling them to do whatever was to be demonstrated. As for instance, the scene where the subjects were made to believe that a small stick was a red hot rod of iron. The young men were asked to close their eyes and think hard about going to sleep. Prof. Sage and his assistants, after they became apparently unconscious, rubbed and opened their eyes. They were told that the stick was a red hot iron. Prodding them with the harmless piece of wood, they assumed tortured expressions and ran helter skelter over the stage to escape the touch of the stick. Their antics were realistic and ludicrous and the audience simply howled with delight.

To bring them out of the spell the operators spoke sharply the words "wake up, wake up," and snapped the fingers in their faces. The influence was different in nearly every instance. Some came out of the trance forthwith while with others it took half a minute or more.

Then followed scene after scene which the subjects participated in with humorous effect. One was the belief that bees were down their backs, another in which two were selected to impersonate a dentist and a patient suffering with toothache, a bicycle race in which chairs were used for wheels, a quartette who labored under the delusion that they were comic opera singers, and two who impersonated a gallant young man and his best girl out sleighriding.

The parts were gone through so earnestly and correctly in movement and manner that a description of its humorous features would be impossible. It is enough to say that the audience could not control its risibilities.

One of the best features of the entertainment were the hypnotic tableaux, in which three subjects were chosen and robed in Grecian gowns. They were posed in an alcove of black drapery, thrown in a cataleptic state and the lime light turned on. Their bodies were perfectly rigid for several minutes, or until Prof. Sage broke the spell. The posing represented the works of various artists, and were beautiful, dramatic and an innovation.

NO RECESS FOR PUPILS.

BOROUGH SCHOLARS AND TEACHERS WANT A CONTINUOUS SESSION.

Board of Education Find That the Prevailing Sentiment is Against a Recess—Board Was Organized For the Year.

The regular monthly meeting of the Borough Board of Education was held last Monday at which time the organization of officers was effected. S. St. John McCutchen was chosen president, and R. M. Fountain, district clerk. The old committees were reappointed.

The committee of which Henry Wells is chairman, which had in charge the matter of ascertaining the advisability of instituting a medical examination among the scholars in the school, similar to the one held in this city, reported favorably. Mr. Wells and Mr. Honeyman were appointed a committee to investigate the matter further and ascertain the cost of such work, and report at the next meeting of the Board. It is understood that the members are heartily in favor of the proposed examination.

Regarding the question of a recess during school hours, the members stated that they had learned that the superintendent, teachers and many scholars were opposed to the recess. The scholars are opposed for the reason that it lengthens their school hours. The officers of the school do not think it advisable to have the recess. The board agreed to stand by the present system, and recommended that the superintendent experiment with a few of the lowest grades by giving the scholars a recess. The scheme will be given a fair trial.

The board will meet again next Monday evening for the purpose of formulating and determining upon a report to be presented to the voters of the borough regarding a new school. No other matter will be considered at the meeting.

SCHOOL ATHLETICS.

A Conference Held in Newark Attended by Plainfield Representatives.

Representatives from the faculty of all but one of the schools in the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association, held an informal meeting at Newark Academy, Newark, last Saturday. The Plainfield High School was represented there by Ira W. Travell and Albert B. Meredith. The New Jersey Military Academy, of this city, was represented by Percy Colwell, one of the instructors. Several schools who could not send representatives replied by letter.

The meeting was called by Principal Farrand, of Newark Academy, who acted as chairman. There was an informal discussion of the needs of the different schools in the way of athletics. There were two questions that were principally discussed and which resulted in the following amendments to the constitution and by-laws of the Interscholastic Athletic Association being drawn:

Amendment to Article 4 section 2. There shall be an advisory committee consisting of the principal of each school represented in the association or a teacher appointed by him.

Amendment to Article 6, section 2 of the by-laws. No one shall act as judge, referee, umpire or starter at the annual field meeting or at any champion contest who is or has been a teacher or student in one of the competing schools.

These amendments are merely suggestions of the members which will be submitted to the members of the association. There is little doubt but that they will be adopted, however, as they are designed to do away with troubles that have bothered the association in the past.

Their Friends Were Surprised.

The marriage of Miss Fanny F. Creveling, of North avenue, this city, and Samuel F. Tinsman, of Dunellen, occurred last Sunday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at his residence, West End Park. Both of the contracting parties are well known, popular young people, and when the announcement of their marriage was made known their friends were not a little surprised. Mr. and Mrs. Tinsman will reside in Dunellen.

COUNTY TROLLEY BILL PASSED BY ASSEMBLY.

Delegation of Union County Men Urged Its Passage.

AMENDMENTS TAKEN OUT.

THE PLAN FULLY EXPLAINED TO THE MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE.

The Measure was Sent to Third Reading Unanimously and Later was Passed by the House by a Vote of 33 to 19—Result Greeted With Applause by the Union County Delegation—Advocates Will Try to Convince Senators Now so That the Measure Will Surely Go to the Governor for Approval

Trenton, March 22—The most important measure for Union county pending before the Legislature—the Bergen county trolley bill—was passed last night by the Assembly, as was predicted in this correspondence last week. Now the advocates will turn their attention to the Senatorial end of the Legislature in the effort to have the bill go straight to the Governor.

A large delegation of Union county men was present last night and did considerable missionary work in favor of the measure among the Assemblymen who had not become thoroughly convinced of the merits of the bill. The delegation was headed by Mayor John C. Rankin, of Elizabeth; ex-Mayor Peter Bennett, Judge Gilhooley, ex-Mayor John J. Howell, of Roselle; ex-Congressman Dunn, Director Hubbard, of the Board of Freeholders; City Clerk Manning, City Controller Carlton and J. E. Martine.

The delegation did some hard work in the House before the measure came up, and then they divided up into committees and made personal calls upon individual Senators, to whom they set forth the merits of No. 125.

To aid the lawmakers the better to understand the benefit to Union county from the passage of the bill each Legislator was given a draft of the proposed boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield, which showed a highway twelve miles long and one hundred feet wide, with sidewalks the entire length of the boulevard on both sides, and next to the sidewalks a bicycle path, and next to the path a macadam road. In the centre is to be a double-track electric road, and on the north side of the track a dirt road. Beneath this draft are these words:

"This is the plan of a boulevard from Elizabeth to Plainfield, one hundred feet wide and twelve miles long. It was prepared and recommended by a committee of citizens of Union county. The cost of this great improvement can be obtained from a street railroad company in exchange for a franchise under the provisions of Assembly Bill No. 125."

That the delegation did effective work was shown later, when the House took up the Squire measure, and straightening out the parliamentary tangle in which it was left last week, when the House inserted a twenty-five year limit clause and one providing that a certain percentage of the gross receipts of the company should annually be paid to the township through which the road passed.

The amendments were stricken out and the measure was sent to third reading unanimously. Later Mr. Squire had his bill brought up and it passed the House by a vote of 33 to 19, without discussion, amid applause from the Union county delegation.

A QUIET MARRIAGE.

Harry Coddington Takes a Brooklyn Belle for His Wife.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Rev. Cornelius Schenck, West End Park, Saturday afternoon, when Miss Lillian A. Mercready, of Brooklyn, and Harry H. Coddington, of Mountain avenue, were united in marriage. While it was known that the young people were engaged, their marriage was somewhat of a surprise to their friends. Mr. Coddington is a popular young man of the borough, and is in the employ of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, of which his father is one of the principal stockholders.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE.

Lung Troubles and Consumption Can be Cured

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist Makes a Free Offer to Our Readers.

The distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, demonstrating his discovery of a reliable cure for Consumption Pulmonary Tuberculosis), bronchial, lung and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affections general decline and weakness, loss of flesh, and all conditions of wasting away, will send THREE FREE BOTTLES (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of this paper writing for them.

His "New Scientific Treatment" has cured thousands permanently by its timely use, and he considers it a simple professional duty to suffering humanity to donate a trail of his infallible cure.

Science daily develops new wonders, and this great chemist, patiently experimenting for years, has produced results as beneficial to humanity as can be claimed by any modern genius. His assertion that lung troubles and consumption are curable in any climate is proven by "heartfelt letters of gratitude," filed in his American and European laboratories in thousands from those cured in all parts of the world.

The dread Consumption, uninterrupted, means speedy and certain death.

Simply write to T. A. Slocum, M. C., 98 Pine street, New York, giving post-office and express address, and the free medicine will be promptly sent direct from his laboratory.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATED.

THE NEW YORK BASKET BALL TEAM WON THE GAME.

The Game was Fiercely Contested By Both Sides—Rough Play was Very Noticeable—Plainfield is Hard Luck.

One of the fiercest games of basket ball ever contested in this city was played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last Monday between the local team and the second team from the Twenty-third Street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A. The visitors won by a score of 28 to 12. The audience that thronged the gallery was given an exhibition of how they play basket ball in New York. It was by far the roughest game ever played in the gymnasium. Both sides played well, but the visitors need notice that somewhat resembled those of football. Despite the repeated instructions of Physical Director Heywood, the visiting umpire refused to call them down for the rough play. As a consequence, the game was a decidedly lively one.

The first half was decidedly in favor of the visitors. They threw goals very accurately and gave a pretty exhibition of passing. They used tactics, however, that were certainly not according to the spirit of the rules. The score at the end of the first half stood 16 to 4 in favor of the visitors.

Then the Plainfield boys braced up and played a pretty game. They were very unfortunate in throwing goals, for time after time the ball rolled around the edge of the goal, but failed to enter.

Egan could not play on account of illness and G. P. Smith took his place at centre. Bonny played forward with Long and the Moraler Brothers acted as guards. The loss of Egan was severely felt, although Smith played an excellent game.

The visiting team was composed of Wilson, Grief, Moir, Baumgard and Steiner. Wilson and Grief distinguished themselves by their fine goal throwing. The goals on the Plainfield side were divided among all the team. Four fouls were called on the home team and none on the visitors.

Mr. Heywood refereed and Messrs. Ginters and Robertson, of New York, umpired.

PROFESSOR VAN INGEN'S LECTURE.

An Interesting Talk on the Dutch School of Art Before Club Women.

Professor Henry VanIngen, of Vassar College, gave a most charming lecture on the Dutch School of Art before the Monday Afternoon Club Monday afternoon in the Casino. Stereopticon illustrations of many pictures gave force to Professor VanIngen's descriptions and gave a clearer understanding of the realistic school founded by Dutch artists. Truth to nature, to home life and homely things and fidelity to common subjects, as shown in the perfect painting of a broom stick were the characteristics of the Dutch painters. Representative pictures of Rembrandt, Paul Potter, Buysdale and many others were thrown upon the canvas and described in a manner as naive and charmingly natural as the pictures themselves.

Resolutions of Condolence.

WHITE RIBBON ARMY'S TRIBUTE OF SORROW.

Memorial Service For the Late Miss Frances E. Willard.

EULOGISTIC WORDS SPOKEN.

W. C. T. U. MEMBERS ACKNOWLEDGE HER GREAT LEADERSHIP.

Pulpit of the First Baptist Church, Where the Service Was Held, Distinguished by a Picture of the Great Temperance Leader—Mrs. Emma Bourne, State President of the W. C. T. U., Delivered an Address Appropriate to the Occasion—Remarks by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Who Had Charge of the Service—Other Speakers.

There was a mark of impressiveness evidenced at the memorial services held in the First Baptist church last Sunday in honor of the late Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the National W. C. T. U. The large number of people present testified strongly to the high regard and esteem felt for the departed woman.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, superintendent of the Union County Union, was in charge of the services, and Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church, assisted by reading the Scriptures and offering a fervent prayer. In the prayer Dr. Yerkes mentioned lovingly the departed woman, in whose honor the services were held.

Directly in front of the pulpit there was arranged a large picture of Miss Willard, surrounded by bunches of lillies and white ribbon.

The selections by the choir were impressive and appropriate, while the solos by Miss Harris and Mrs. Ward were rendered with strong effect. After the opening exercises the congregation sang "Gently, Gently, Lead Us Lord," which hymn was sung by Miss Anna Gordon to Miss Willard just before she died.

Mrs. Tomlinson made a few remarks at the opening, in which she expressed the feelings and sentiments of many regarding Miss Willard's life and character. She was acquainted with Miss Willard and her remarks were fully enjoyed. In part she spoke as follows:

"Miss Willard was very strong in her purposes, and so lovely in her character. We all loved Miss Willard. Her name was a household name at home and abroad. I was much impressed a few years ago, while visiting an Indian settlement in Rhode Island, with a picture of Miss Willard. When asked what the picture was doing there, the inmate replied, 'We all love Miss Willard.'

"Miss Willard was a recognized leader. We shall miss her face and her cheer. We cannot tell why she was taken away, but we know that God never makes any mistakes. We know God will lead us on to victory."

Mrs. Tomlinson then introduced the State president of the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark, who spoke impressive words of the late Miss Willard. In part she talked as follows:

"When the names of many prominent persons are forgotten, the name of Miss Willard will be remembered. She had a peculiar faculty of setting in motion many forces.

"From early childhood Miss Willard had a great desire to relieve suffering humanity. Many times she has breathed the prayer, 'Lord help the crowd.' In a few years the Lord helped her to answer that prayer. She accepted the position of president of president of the Chicago W. C. T. U., in preference to taking a high-salaried position. Later she was selected as National president of our large body of white-ribboners.

"Wherever Miss Willard went and whenever she spoke, she was always received grandly and cordially. She never forgot to thank anyone who did anything for her or the cause she represented.

"At one time in Chicago a reporter called on her and asked her if she had a motto. Miss Willard replied in the affirmative, and said her motto was 'My Life a Vow.'

"There was something about Miss Willard that drew about her the best men and women. Her annual address was watched for eagerly by the world at large. We are glad that for so many years we had this matchless leader. We are glad she had the desire to uplift humanity.

"While we realized that we were bereft of our leader, we also realized that we still have a heavenly leader who will lead us safely through this life. We don't need to be anxious about dying if we only live right. This glorious temperance work will go on for it is God's work."

At the conclusion of Mrs. Bourne's remarks, Dr. Yerkes spoke briefly concerning the beautiful life and character of Miss Willard. He said that it was the idea of the W. C. T. U. to name the Union Temple in Chicago the Willard Hall, and he asked the congregation to contribute liberally toward helping to raise the amount of indebtedness now on the building. In response a liberal collection was received. The service closed with the singing of a hymn, after which Dr. Yerkes pronounced the benediction.

Those who acted as ushers at the service were Harold Serrell, Herbert Case, John MacLoughlin, Samuel Case and George F. Brown. Each one wore a bow of white ribbon.

The members of the local W. C. T. U and members from nearby towns were present and occupied seats together in the main part of the church. Each one wore a piece of white ribbon tied with a piece of black ribbon.

TURNERBUND MET HERE

IMPORTANT GATHERING OF GERMANS IN SAENGERBUND HALL.

Delegates Present From Many Places in the Metropolitan District—Will Contest for Prizes in Paterson in July.

Delegates from the Independent Turnerbund, including societies from Paterson, Passaic, Newark, Williamsburgh, Brooklyn, Union Hill, Hoboken, Elizabthport and Plainfield, met Sunday in Saengerbund Hall on Somerset street. Each society was represented by three delegates who arrived early in the forenoon and remained until 5:30 in the afternoon. During the above hours the delegates were in session. On their arrival they were given dinner at the Crescent Hotel.

One main feature of the meeting was the consideration for adoption of the new constitution. The matter was generally discussed and adopted. Several resolutions were adopted signifying the desire of the members to take part in the prize Swiss Turner bund tournament of the United States to be held at Paterson July 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th. At this tournament members of the society from Switzerland will be present and take part. There will also be representatives from all parts of this country.

Another important matter discussed was the advisability of giving an excursion next fall. The plan suggested is to give an outing at Fort Lee and to have the members walk from Passaic to the former place, as was the customs years ago. The matter was left to a committee to arrange and report at a later meeting. The other business transacted was of a routine nature chiefly.

PASSING COMMENT.

Many fruit growers are beginning to grow apprehensive of a bad season for fruits, on account of the mild weather setting in so soon in March. They argue, from past experience, that whenever spring is unduly advanced it means a snap of frost toward the end of April or in the first part of May, and a consequent impairment, if not complete blight, of the fruit crop.

Peter Pfinger, proprietor of the Washingtonville Hotel, has just completed a walk from the rear of his garden leading to the top of the mountain. In the steep parts stone steps are placed, making it easy of ascent. On the top of the mountain is located a fine spring, benches, etc. School teachers taking their classes for a day's outing and others will find this a desirable spot to spend a day. No charges will be made for use of the grounds, and nothing will be allowed to be sold.

In the recent spell of warm weather, there was no man in Plainfield brave, or rather foolhardy, enough to venture among his fellowmen in a straw hat. Several small boys, however, startled their friends by announcing their intention of going in swimming last Saturday afternoon. And swimming they went in the Green brook near Clinton avenue. They shivered somewhat when they plunged in the chilly water but they declared that they had a lovely time. Luckily, for the mortality of the place there are but very few boys who care to go swimming during March in this climate.

RIVAL WATER AND LIGHT COMPANY.

A New Corporation to Be Formed to Serve Cranford People.

Cranford, March 22—A movement is on foot in this place to organize the Cranford Electric Light and Water Company, to act as a rival to the Suburban Electric Light Company, whose contract with the Cranford Township Committee will expire July 1st. The new company will also prove a competitor to the Union Water Company for the patronage of the town. The new company applied to the Township Committee at its meeting Saturday night for a franchise to carry on its operations in the town for a period of 99 years. The ordinance granting the franchise was passed to its first reading. Its further consideration will be continued at the next meeting of the Committee, Thursday evening. The new company is backed entirely by citizens of Cranford.

Getting Open Cars Ready.

The open cars of the Plainfield Street Railway are now being prepared for summer use and will be put in service by the first of May. The contract for the painting and varnishing of the wood work of the cars has been granted to Marsh, Ayers & Co.

CONSULTATION FREE.

For 10 Days Only by the Physician in Charge of the Boy Phenomenon.

ALSO PRICE OF TREATMENT GREATLY REDUCED FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE SICK.

An Unprecedented Opportunity Offered the Afflicted to be Examined Entirely Free and Treated at Very Small Expense by the Famous Boy Phenomenon Now at the Revere House.

In order that none will be denied the privilege of learning their true physical condition, and that all may have the opportunity of being cured at a greatly reduced price, the Boy Phenomenon has decided that his physician will give consultation, examination and a thorough diagnosis of each patient entirely free of charge the rest of this month commencing today.

The same careful and thorough examination will be given each patient during this free consultation period as is in vogue at all times when the dollar consultation fee was charged, which is now withdrawn for 10 days in order to become more quickly acquainted with the sick and suffering and at the same time to accommodate those wishing treatment who are aware of their affliction, but object to paying for consultation.

If the case is incurable or not amenable to magnetism, no fee is high enough that will tempt him to accept it.

Those who have previously called, were examined, and received an envelope, but were unable to pay the price named, are especially invited to return with their envelopes and take advantage of the greatly reduced prices.

The fact of his having discharged 127 patients as permanently cured during the past 6 weeks, accounts for this very generous offer of reducing the price of treatment because having discharged so large a number he has more time now to devote to new cases.

Reference will be given to those holding envelopes, showing they have previously called and been examined. By presenting the same to the ushers in the reception parlors on arrival, they will be admitted at once.

It is not necessary to dwell at length on the meritorious work done by the Boy Phenomenon since his advent in Plainfield. The many miraculous cures he has accomplished have been seen and witnessed by thousands of our best people, and testimonials have been published and are on file in his office from many of our prominent citizens that have accumulated until they are overwhelming in their force and directness, proving beyond the possibility of a doubt that his power is in behalf the sick is certainly unquestioned, and little less than miraculous.

Compared if you will, the discharge of 127 patients, who declare they were cured by the Boy Phenomenon in less than six weeks, by that of any or all other healers, and then ask yourself which method has made the largest number of permanent cures, and then, if you are sick, act as your judgment dictates.

If you intend securing the services of the Boy Phenomenon, you must act quickly as this month ends the free consultation.

While he will remain here two or three weeks longer, no new cases will be taken for treatment after Saturday, April 2d. Office hours at the Revere House from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., daily except Sunday.

AT THE GATE TO RICHES.

A Plainfield Woman Writes Her Experiences in the Klondike.

Several weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. George R. Musgrave, of this city, left to seek their fortune in Alaska. A letter from Mrs. Musgrave, dated at Saguay, Alaska, has just been received by Mrs. R. F. Hazard, 422 East Sixth street, which contains a number of interesting references to the country and the hardships of travelers in that portion of the globe.

The letter, which was written Feb. 27th, said that the vessel bearing the party had just reached Saguay, and the men had gone ashore to find a place to pitch the tents. The sickness there had been very great. There were at that time eleven bodies on a boat about to start for Seattle. Juneau, the writer says, is a thriving place. The party had spent five hours there the day before. The visit of the party to an Indian village, and the living customs of the natives, are described at length.

The party, at the time the letter was written, were making preparations to start for Dawson City, sending the luggage on pack animals. Exorbitant prices were being charged the travelers for every necessity of life.

The natives in the region from which the letter was written are spoken of as a simple people, with rude customs. They have nearly all been Christianized of late years.

MAYOR'S RAID TO BE FOUGHT IN CITY COURT.

Margentino Will Defend His Right to Sell Hard Cider.

LAWYER HETFIELD HEARD.

CULPRIT DETERMINED TO DISPUTE THE COUNCIL ORDINANCE.

Mr. Hetfield, as a Lawyer, will Try to Break the Law for Which as Councilman He is in a Way Responsible for—Trial to be Heard Next Saturday—A Non-support Case Dismissed—Business Suspended on a Distributor of the Fumes and She Was Put Under Bonds for Good Behavior.

The raids, engineered by Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Sunday, March 19th, promise to make things lively for the city for a time at least. While one of the alleged offenders pleaded guilty and departed with a fine, the other, Donatio Margentino, whose little establishment is conducted at 128 Park avenue, is determined to make a strong fight for freedom. His lawyer, Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, has laid out an active campaign for his defence.

The trial of Margentino was to have been held this morning. Court was called at the City Court room in the jail and after the cases of minor importance were disposed of the Margentino case, for the alleged sale of "hard cider" on Sunday, came up. Owing to the crowd, the court adjourned to the Council Chambers.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was present to represent the city while Mr. Hetfield was in attendance for his client. As soon as the case was called Mr. Marsh asked the Councilman to admit the cider ordinance from the printed slip that he had. Mr. Hetfield said he would admit nothing and so the City Clerk was sent for to prove the ordinance. Then it was discovered that the City Clerk was out of town and so Mr. Marsh asked for an adjournment. Mr. Hetfield would not agree on any time for the trial so the Judge set the trial down for next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. It will be held in the Council Chambers.

The trial of Wm. Sanderson, colored, for using improper language to John Scott, came before the City Judge this morning and was adjourned for a week.

The case against Charles Drake for non-support was dismissed by the City Judge.

Mrs. Rosie Ritter, who was charged with making trouble up in the Eight Row, was arraigned before City Judge DeMess. Her counsel, Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, made a plea of non vult in her behalf and asked for a suspension of sentence. S. S. Swackhamer appeared for John Richards, the complaining witness, and asked that she be severely punished. Mrs. Ritter was ill and hardly able to appear in court. The Judge suspended sentence on her, but compelled her to give $100 bonds to keep the peace. He warned her that any future trouble on her part would secure for her the full penalty of the law.

CLOSE OF THE THIRD TERM.

A Pleasant Social Affair Given in Vincent Chapel.

The closing of the third term of the Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church took place Friday, and was marked by a pleasing entertainment and social time. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Miss Mabel Smith, chairman; Miss Lillian Hope, Miss Florence Symons, Miss Beulah Waters, Miss Lucy Jennings and Charles Lyman. Everybody worked hard and energetically to make the entertainment a success. Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor, was in charge and his pleasant remarks were a source of enjoyment to all present.

The programme consisted of recitations by Alice Barker, Fred Lynn, Eva Webster, Beulah Waters, Edna Kennedy, Gertrude Tier, Jennie Addis, Maude Disborough, Mabel Symons; vocal solo, Mabel Symons; violin solo, Clarence Mills; piano duet, Florence Symons and Grace Webster; vocal solo, Carrie Mulford, accompanied by Mrs. J. M. Lewis.

The entertainment was given under the direction of the literary department of the League, of which Mrs. J. Wier is the adviser. After the entertainment, which was very creditable, refreshments was served by the committee and a general social time enjoyed.

Thinks He is in Danger.

Edward Allen, Jr., who lives on the extension of Johnston's Drive, went before Justice of the Peace Speer Friday and swore out a complaint against William Calloway, of North Plainfield township, charging the latter with making threats against the plaintiff. Calloway was arraigned and after a hearing the Justice placed him under $100 bonds to keep the peace.

—The catch basin at the corner of Washington avenue and West Front street has been repaired.

CAKE WALK THE FEATURE.

MRS. HARNED'S PLEASANT AFFAIR.

Entertained Friends in Honor of a Wedding Anniversary—Guests Who Were There.

One of the pleasant events of the season was the salamagundi party given Friday evening by Mrs. Harned, of Craig place, to a number of her friends. The affair was given in honor of the sixteenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Harned.

The early part of the evening was passed in playing games. One of the most enjoyable was the spider-web game. Mrs. Walton was awarded a prize. At the card table, Mrs. Will F. Williams and Mrs. Edgar D. George were presented with the first and second prizes for the women, while John H. VanWinkle, Sr., and Eugene Laing were awarded the second prizes for the men. Edgar D. George secured the consolation prize.

A decided feature enjoyed later in the evening was a cake walk which was participated in by all present. The artistic swing and grace displayed was greatly admired. At the conclusion of the performance it was unanimously agreed that T. S. Armstrong and Miss Sydenham were entitled to first prizes.

Intersperising the above programme were piano selections by Miss Mabel Force, Mrs. J. H. VanWinkle and Mrs. Walton, while a vocal solo was given by Mr. Caldwell. The last part of the evening was devoted to dancing and it was rather early when the happy event came to an end.

As a pleasant reminder of the event, Mr. and Mrs. Harned received from Mr. and Mrs. George a beautiful bunch of Jack roses. Those who were present included the following: Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Needham, Mr. and Mrs. Harned, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar D. George, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. John H. VanWinkle, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Laing, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moore, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Devoll, Mrs. D. H. Devoll, Miss Mabelle Force, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Ebie, Miss Tantum, Miss Sydenham, Mrs. Walton, Miss Helen Harned, Miss Helen Walton, Allan Laing, Mr. Caldwell, Ephraim Vail, J. H. VanWinkle, Jr., Bert Moore.

A WOMAN JOURNALIST.

Death of Mrs. Lucy C. Benedict, a Talented Worker.

Miss Lucy C. Benedict, who died at the St. Could Hotel in New York March 15, and whose funeral was held in Plainfield last Thursday at the residence of her mother, Mrs. George Benedict, 72 Summit avenue, was one of the pioneer newspaper women of New York. Miss Benedict was born in Marietta, Ohio. Her specialty in writing was agricultural reporting and kindred subjects. For the last eleven years she has been agricultural editor of the American Press Association. She had practical experience in these matters, having participated in a number of agricultural experiments.

SUMMER DRINKS

A Practical Discussion Indulged in by W. C. T. U. Members.

Thursday afternoon at the regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. the subject for discussion was "Summer Drinks." There was a large attendance of members and the subject was quite thoroughly discussed. Some of those present advocated the use of oatmeal water, while others strongly urged the drinking of lemonade as a healthful beverage. None of the members advocated the use of root beer, as there is a feeling of doubt about its healthfulness. Although the subject was very generally discussed, no one drink was decided upon as the chief drink for summer.

Driver Badly Cut Up.

The horse driven by William Coriell became frightened on West Fourth street last Saturday at a trolley car and overturned the rig. Mr. Coriell was thrown out and his head badly cut. The wounds bled profusely. Lawrence Green and another man picked up the injured man and took him to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where his injuries were treated. The wagon was badly demolished.

Funeral of Jacob Shepard

The funeral services of the late Jacob Shepard were held Thursday afternoon from the house at 1 o'clock and from Warren chapel at 1:30. Rev. Mr. McKelvey officiated. The members of Warren Engine Company, of which the departed was a member, attended the services in a body. Interment was in the cemetery at Somerville.

Recited in New York.

Miss Mary Adelaide Luckey, of this city, recited last Friday at an entertainment given under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's P. E. church, of New York city. She was well received and her selections heartily encored.

—The work on the Berkeley avenue sewer is now completed under the management of Contractor P. Christmas, of Scotch Plains.

TRIFLED WITH TROLLEY.

A LITTLE GIRL'S CAPRICE CAUSED HER TO BE HURT.

Little Daisy Titus Ran in Front of the Somerset Street Car and Was Struck and Knocked Insensible—Soon Recovered.

Little Daisy Titus ran in front of the trolley car once too many times. As she ran across Somerset street, Thursday afternoon, the fender of the car struck her and she was thrown to the ground unconscious.

Daisy is a bright little girl of nine summers living with her parents at 10 Howard street.

Car No. 5, under the charge of Motorman William Garno, of Newark, was going toward the mountain at a rapid rate. Suddenly Daisy sprang toward the car. She passed in front of it but could not clear the path of the fender before it struck her. There was a shriek and the girl fell headlong.

The car was at once brought to a standstill, and the prostrate form of the child was carried to the home of her parents. Dr. J. T. Fritts and Dr. Long, who were hastily summoned, found after making a careful examination, that the little girl's injuries were not of a serious nature. They administered restoratives and dressed the few slight wounds about the child's head.

The little playmate of the child, who was with her at the time the accident happened, could not be found afterward, and it was thought that the child was so frightened by the accident to her playmate that she hurridly made her way home.

George F. Randolph, of Somerset street, was an eye witness to the accident, and he says that the motorman was not to blame in the least. Mr. Garno, the motorman, is an expert electrician and he assisted in constructing the trolley in Plainfield.

FREE MUSIC FOR MASSES.

CHORAL ORATORIOS MAY BE GIVEN.

A Plan to Educate the People to a Taste for Really Fine Music.

A project is now on foot among the old members of the Choral Society looking toward the rendition of some of the oratorios for the Plainfield public. The object is to give the people a chance to hear good music free of charge. The chances seem very good that the project will be carried to a successful termination.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards was the originator of the plan. He brought it to the attention of some of the Choral Society people and it was received with great favor. The oratorios have already been sung and the members are sufficiently acquainted with them as to be able to pick them up again with a very few rehearsals. The concerts, it is proposed, are to be held in the Crescent Avenue church and are to be free to the public.

The cost of the concerts would be small as the members still have the music and the cost of securing Mr. Fitzhugh to lead would be small when divided among all the members.

No action has been taken on the matter as yet but the members, or some of them, will probably hold an informal meeting in the near future, when arrangements will be made for the concerts.

The object is to educate the people to a love of really good music and place it where everybody can hear it. It is understood that the Crescent Avenue church could be secured for such a purpose.

THE JUNIORS WIN.

Exciting Bowling Game at Park Club Friday Night.

The active bowling season at the Park Club practically came to an end last Friday, with a match between the Seniors and Juniors of the club. The Seniors were really the members of the team that represented the club in the Central Journal Bowling League. To make the games exciting it was arranged that the Juniors were to receive a handicap of 50 pins on each game. As a result, the Juniors rolled so well that their handicap enabled them to win two of the three games. In the first game both teams rolled the same. The individual scores were as follows:

SENIORS.
Sandford	149	187	155

A Malicious Practice.

Friday night some persons with evil intent called at the business place of J. E. Townsend & Co. on Somerset street and caused considerable trouble by upsetting some of the headstones and monuments. Many of the stones were thrown over and pieces were broken off. So far as can be learned no stones were taken away from the place. Thus far there is no clue as to who committed the deed.

HIBERNIAN BALL AT NIGHT.

NO PARADE IN THE DAY BECAUSE DUTIFUL IRISH WERE TOO BUSY.

The Dance Held in the Crescent Rink, Which was Decorated in National Colors and Those of the Emerald Isle—A Large Number of Dancers Glided and Whirled to the Inspiring Strains of Delightful Music—It Was the Twenty-Fourth Annual Affair—The Committee in Charge of the Happy Event.

Good old St. Patrick must have looked down and smiled at the festivities held in honor of his name throughout the land Thursday by the wearers of the shamrock and the green. All the good times would have rejoiced the heart of any patron saint, more especially he of the Emerald Isle. Plainfield had no parade in honor of the day, for most of St. Patrick's dutiful sons and daughters were busily employed during the day. In the evening, however, they made up for lost time at the great ball given at the Crescent Rink in honor of the day by the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

The day was a real St. Patrick's Day. Rain and sunshine alternated, but the sun triumphed in the end, and then in the evening the stars came out to light the revelers to the ball.

Although in the midst of the Lenten season, the Hibernians' ball was a great success. The Blues and Stripes and the green of Ireland were prominently displayed about the hall. On the stage where the orchestra held forth, the two flags hung side by side with the emblem of the ancient lodge between them. Prof. O'Beilly and his complete orchestra occupied the front of the stage. Partitions of green hid the rear of the stage where the tables were arranged and supper was served to nearly two hundred. Caterer Rand furnished the supper.

Early in the evening the crowd began to assemble and soon the music started. Then the couples glided and whirled to the inspiring strains of the orchestra until way into the morning hours. At 10 o'clock came the grand march, led by Martin Kane, with Miss Mary Motley as his partner. They were followed by Mr. and Mrs. James McCarthy and then sixty-three other couples. As is the annual custom at the grand march at the Hibernians' ball, the couples made the initials of the order, A. O. H. in their march. Then they "cut the shamrock" in their evolutions. The figures were well executed.

It was the twenty-fourth annual ball of the order and by far the most successful. There were fully six hundred sons and daughters of Erwin who assembled to do honor to their patron saint. The committee has been hard at work preparing for the event for some days and their efforts were very satisfactory. P. Casey was chairman of the committee of arrangements, with James McCarty as secretary and John Casey as treasurer. Of the ball, Martin Kane was general director, James McCarty as floor manager. The other members of the floor committee were Sylvester Gaynor, Samuel Goff and Patrick Cullen. The reception committee was composed of J. Loughlin, W. Smith, P. Casey, F. Gunning, E. Ryan, M. Cullen, J. Traynor and J. Casey.

CHANGED COURSE OF BROOK.

Improvements Now Being Made Near Scott Place and South Avenue.

A great improvement has been made near Scott place and South avenue. The fields have been improved and are being prepared for building lots. Cedar brook, which used to run diagonally across the fields, has had its course so changed that it will make the division of the land much easier and greatly facilitate building operations. The brook is now confined in a new channel with heavy abutments on either side.

G. A. R. Encampment.

Chief of Staff W. C. Smith and E. C. Morse, members of the Council of Administration, of the Department of New Jersey, G. A. R., went to Newark Thursday and attended a meeting of the Department Council of Administration. The meeting was held at the rooms of Lincoln Post. It was decided to hold the next encampment of the Department at Long Branch June 23d. and 24th. After the transaction of the business, the members of the council adjourned to the rooms of Phil. Sheridan Post, when the members of the Post entertained the officers in grand style.

A Fagot Social.

The Friday night meeting at the Monroe Avenue church took the form of a fagot sociable. The attendance of young people was large. Speeches were made, a guessing contest was held and a number of songs were sung.

IRISH BALLADS SUNG.

FASHIONABLE ST. PATRICK'S DAY CONCERT IN THE CASINO.

Hall Trimmed in Commemoration of the Emerald Isle—Fine Singers Rendered Ballads Popular in the Land.

A large audience composed of Plainfield's most fashionable set gathered in the Casino last Thursday to enjoy the Saint Patrick's Day concert of Irish songs.

The stage was prettily furnished to represent a drawing room, with the tint of the Emerald Isle everywhere in evidence.

The songs were old, well-known pieces descriptive of the beauty of Ireland, and the sentiment and pathos which cling to her memory in the heart of her children.

The greatest hit of the evening was scored by Gwilym Miles, who sang in a splendid bass voice and with an amount of expression that bordered on dramatic talent. His solo selections were "The Minstrel Boy," the words by Thomas Moore and the air "The Moreen;" and Rory O'More, the words and music of which were by Samuel Lover. Among the number of encores which this popular singer gave was a little song entitled "I start for Philadelphia in the morning" which scored a great success.

Miss Edith J. Miller, contralto, made a pleasing impression on the audience, rendering in winsome fashion "Killarney," Balfe, and Kathleen Mavourneen. As an encore she sang "The Wearing of the Green."

Madame Anita Rio displayed a soprano voice of fine quality in her first selection, "The Meeting of the Waters," to the air "Old Head of Dennis." Later in the evening she sang "Angel's Whisper," a song written in accordance with the Irish superstition that a baby, when it smiles in its sleep, is conversing with angles. She received an enthusiastic encore.

Dr. Ion A. Jackson was the tenor, and proved a most popular artist with the audience. With Mr. Miles he sang a duet "Lily of Killarney" as the opening selection of the evening. His other pieces were "Lament of the Irish Immigrant," the music of which was by J. L. Dunster and the words by Lady Dufferin; and "Believe Me If All Those Endeavoring Young Charms," the familar lines of Thomas Moore. As an encore he sang "Oft in the Stilly Night." His voice was remarkable in its compass and strength.

The entertainment closed with two quartette selections by Madame Rio, Miss Miller, Dr. Jackson and Mr. Miles. They were "Erin the Tear and the Smile in Thine Eyes," and "The Last Rose of Summer." Both selections were sung with sweetness and expression. Much of the success of the performers was due to the excellent work of Frank J. Smith who acted as accompanist throughout the evening.

The patronesses were:

Mesdames Frederick H. Andrews, Albert H. Atterbury, John T. Baker, Irving H. Brown, Josiah Browne, Charles L. Case, George A. Chapman, Charles J. Fisk, Howard Fleming, George H. Goddard, Samuel Huntington, James R. Joy, William T. Kaufman, Leander N. Lovell, Robert Lowry, Joseph P. Mason, Frederick G. Mead, S. St. J. McCutchen, George P. Mellick, Isaac L. Miller, John Doull Miller, Edward C. Perkins, Charles A. Reed, W. R. Richards, William L. Saunders, Augustus D. Shepard, Howard C. Tracy, John M. Whiton.

THE TOWN IS GROWING.

Numerous Residences Being Erected on Various Streets.

A. A. Stryker, the contractor, is erecting two new houses on West Fifth street, between Grant and Monroe avenues.

Councilman Henry Liefke, of West End Park, is erecting a house on Fifth street, between Grant avenue and Lee place.

Mr. Mellor, of Norwood avenue, has purchased a handsome piece of property at the corner of Hillside and Highland avenues, and will erect a dwelling house for himself.

P. McDonough, of West Third street, has just purchased a lot 100x200 on South avenue, opposite the residence of Mr. Willis, and he will erect a shop thereon to carry on a blacksmith and horseshoeing business.

Another Mock Trial.

Another mock trial was held at the Borough Public High School Friday, and this time the jury was able to agree. The jury was selected from the 10th, 11th and 12th grades. The case was for arson and Mr. Bach, the defendant, was charged with setting fire to a building. The same lawyers that officiated last Wednesday acted yesterday, and the same witnesses were used. The jury brought in a verdict that the prisoner was not guilty, as he was under hypnotic influence when he committed the deed. At the trial one of the witnesses, a professed hypnotic, attempted to hypnotise one of the jurymen. The attempt, although very amusing, was not successful.

JEWS FAR FROM THE TRUTH.

STATEMENT BY A FORMER RABBI.

Rev. Samuel Frender Became a Christian After He Read the New Testament.

"The Hebrews of Today" was the subject of an address given in Vincent chapel Thursday under the auspices of the Epworth League by Rev. Samuel Freuder, of New York, a converted Jew. There was a good-sized attendance and the address was profitable and thoroughly interesting. During the evening Mr. Freuder gave illustrations of Jewish customs as to dress, worship and eating. He also sang several hymns used in Jewish services. He quoted words of the late Dr. Gordon, of Boston, as to why people should love the Jew. In part Mr. Freuder spoke as follows:

"We often wonder why it is, after eighteen centuries, that the very people who have a right to say 'Unto Us a Child is Born, Unto Us a Son is Given,' should fail to believe in Christ and His teachings. Fifty years ago there was only 15,000 Jews in this country. Today there are 250,000 in New York alone. The Jews, in part, are no nearer the truth today than they were years ago. They think that at some future time the Messiah will come. The reformed Jew has given the idea that his people will return to Jerusalem. There is, however, today, a better feeling on the part of the Jews toward Christ and Christianity.

"This Jew has become prejudiced against Christianity. He has been abused by everyone, and it is not strange that he should have such feelings. The New Testament is rarely read by Jews. Up till eight years ago I had never read it, although I was educated in college and was a Rabbi. As soon as I read it my mind was not prejudiced as before. A Jew that accepts Christ adds much to the faith and principles of his father. In this country the Jew has been treated fairly and with credit to the Nation. The Jew is a living example of the truth found in the Bible. He is evidence of the providence of God." At this time Mr. Freuder sang the Psalm and gave the translated version. In conclusion the speaker said he looked forward to the time when there would be one flock and one Shepherd. He also prayed that the Gospel might speedilybe carried to the Jews and to all nations, and for the time when Christ would be crowned King of all. After the address Mr. Freuder exhibited samples of the unleaven bread and all present were given pieces of it to take home. A collection was taken for the speaker and a goodly sum was realized.

A FINE OLD CHINESE GENTLEMAN.

A fine old Chinese gentleman
Of most exemplary mind,
Who wears a flowered robe of silk
And long pig tail behind;
Who worships his dead ancestors.
As pious heathen ought,
And tries to mind his business
As good Confucius taught;
Is sad, ah! very sad today—
Because from East to West
His privacy's invaded so
He never can find rest.

This wise old Chinese gentleman
Lives on a grand estate,
And in his soul considers all
The world within its gate.
He scorns pollution, rush and noise.
And loves to contemplate
The lives of his forefathers, and
Their ways to emulate.
But, sad to tell, because he is
Not fully up-to-date
A grabbing mob is hastening
His land to confiscate.

This oriental gentleman,
Who loves not strife but ease,
Manifestly views with gifts
This grabbing mob to please.
And asks, alone, with tearful eyes.
The right to meditate.
In silken robe, behind the bars
Of his ancestral gate.
But ah! how sad, the air resounds
With naught but jibes and jeers
Alarming to the sensitive
Tympanum of his ears.

Some say this Chinese gentleman
Has "darkish tricks and ways"
Which might appear "peculiar" if Examined by X rays.
But, don't you see, his ancestors
Ne'er saw this dazzling light.
So, obviously, what it shows
Could never be called right.
"Where ignorance is bliss," 'tis hard
That wisdom should be thrust:
And, after all, to wear out may
Be sadder than to rust.

COLLECTOR'S BOOKS TURNED OVER.

H. N. Spencer Transfers Borough Records and Monies to G. F. Brown.

Friday evening the books of former Collector H. N. Spencer were formally turned over to Collector George F. Brown. Among those present to witness the event were Borough Counsel Reed, Councilmen Valiant, MacLaughlin, Rogers, School Commissioner H. A. McGee, and W. W. Rowley, the delinquent tax collector. There were thirty-three books turned over and $8,690 56 on account of school fund; $1,396.03 borough fund, and $350.59 on account of Watchung avenue assessment fund, making a total of $10,437 18. For the above Collector Brown gave Mr. Spencer a receipt. The books were transferred to Collector Brown's office on Somerset street. Mr. Brown will be ready to receive taxes commencing with next Monday. Mr. Brown will have regular office hours to receive taxes.

DOCTORS WANT BOY PHENOMENON TO GO.

Complaint Made to State Board of Medical Examiners.

THREATENED WITH ARREST.

BUT MANAGER SHERMAN WILL STAY AND FIGHT PROSECUTION.

Two Local Physicians Notified the State Officials and Charge That the Boy Phenomenon is Practicing His Powers in Violation of the Laws—Officials Warn the Manager of the Healer to Leave the State—Manager Sherman Writes an Explanation of His Methods Which Will Be a Defence.

The New Jersey medical authorities are now arrayed against the Boy Phenomenon and threaten to use all their power to compel him to give up his lucrative practice in this city and depart from the State. The initiatory steps against this wonderful young healer were taken by two Plainfield physicians, who claim that the young man has no right to attempt to use his alleged power and receive compensation for it. The reason they give is that he is not a practicing physician, has never passed any examination for the same, and is altogether not to attend to the ills of the people of Plainfield.

Charles Dwinell, of New Hampshire is the real name of the Boy Phenomenon, as he is called. He came here over a month ago, and after giving a free exhibition of his so-called "animal magnetism," by improving the condition of the subjects brought upon the stage, he opened private offices at the Revere House, where he has been ever since. The story of his remarkable cures have attracted many to him for treatment. Some, it is claimed, he has cured; others he has improved, while some have been beyond the reach of his treatment. At any rate, his practice has been large, and the local physicians have suffered in consequence.

Monday, Mar. 14, Mr. Sherman, his manager, received an official notification from Dr. Godfrey, of Camden, secretary of the State Board of Medical Examiners, informing him that complaint had been made against the Boy Phenomenon by two practising physicians in Plainfield. The substance of the complaint was that he had no right to attempt to cure anybody without being a regular physician, which he is not.

Mr. Sherman responded with a complete description of the methods used. Wednesday there came another communication from Dr. Godfrey saying that if the young man did not stop practicing in Plainfield or any other city or town in the State and leave at once he would be prosecuted by the State Board.

To a reporter Friday morning Mr. Sherman was very free to speak. They intend to remain in Plainfield, he said, as long as there was a demand for the healing powers of the young man. They also intend to fight any attempt to drive him out of the State.

Mr. Sherman's defence was very simple and ingenious. The Boy Phenomenon is accompanied by a physician who has right to practice anywhere. This physician examines all the patients and prescribes the magnetic rubbing by the Boy Phenomenon. This, Mr. Sherman claims, is no different than prescribing a pill or tonic. Then doctors frequently recommend massage treatment.

Looking For Work, He Had a Fit.

Harry Lamont, aged 52 years, of New Brunswick, was found on Prospect place last Friday in a fit. Chief Marshal Wilson was telephoned for and he responded and took charge of the man. Medical aid was given and in a little while Lamont was able to walk. Mr. Griffin, of Prospect place, assisted Lamont to the North Avenue station, where he left for home. Lamont told Chief Wilson that he was subject to fits, and that he had been looking for work without success.

What is Scott's Emulsion?

It is the best cod-liver oil, partly digested, and combined with the hypophosphites and glycerine. What will it do? It will make the poor blood of the anæmic rich and red.

It will give nervous energy to the overworked brain and nerves. It will add flesh to the thin form of a child, wasted from fat-starvation.

It is everywhere acknowledged as The Standard of the World.

RED MEN THIRST FOR SCALPS OF SPANISH.

Miantonomoh Tribe on Record in the Present Crisis.

WILL FIGHT IF THERE IS WAR.

PATRIOTIC RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

Fervent Addresses in Support of the Resolutions Made by a Number of the Braves—Say the Country is in a Crisis That May Culminate in War With Spain—In the Case of War They Tender Their Volunteer Services to the Call of Governor Voorhees—Governor to be Notified Personally in a Short Time.

If war is declared by Spain, then the scalps of all the members of the Sagasta ministry may be expected to hang in the wigwams of the Miantonomoh Tribe of Improved Order of Red Men. Last Friday, at the meeting of the tribe, the braves decided to don their warpaint and feathers if the necessity arose and offered themselves to Governor Voorhees in defence of this land.

There was one adoption at the meeting and two propositions were received. The degree team received an invitation to visit Indianola Tribe at Bound Brook Thursday to work the adoption degree. The invitation was accepted.

The event of the meeting was the introduction of the resolutions tendering the services of the members of the tribe in the event of war with Spain. The resolutions were unanimously adopted and there were fervent addresses by Past Sachems Magus, Westphal, Newcorn, Leahy, Holdstein and others. The special committee to present the resolutions in person to the Governor was composed of Past Sachems Newcorn and Westphal, and Brother David Mladonvick.

The resolutions were as follows:

WHEREAS, Our country is passing through a crisis that may culminate in war with Spain and

WHEREAS, The Improved Order of Red Men is strictly an American organization, having been conceived and nurtured in the war for American independence, therefore be it

Resolved, That Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 110, Improved Order of Red Men, tender the voluntary services of its members to his excellency, the Hon. Foster M. Voorhees, Governor of the State of New Jersey, in case of war with Spain; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, under the seal of the tribe, be presented in person by a committee of three appointed by the tribe, to his excellency, Hon. Foster M. Voorhees.

Done in His Name.

Last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Howard A. Pope, West Fifth street, the members of the King's Daughters of the First Presbyterian church, held a cake and candy sale for the purpose of securing a sufficient amount of money to purchase flowers for the church for Easter Sunday. The sale was in charge of Mrs. Pope, assisted by the members of the society. Everything was disposed of during the afternoon and the result was most encouraging to the workers, who think that they will have almost enough to accomplish their object.

Surprised Their Employers.

Last Thursday evening the clerks in the employ of Woodhull & Martin, the dry goods merchants, called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin, of Putnam avenue, and gave them a surprise. The evening was passed in a very pleasant social manner. The event was strong evidence of the good feeling existing between employes and employer.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

Justice Newcorn has issued summons in a number of cases in which Irins & Company are the plaintiffs. The defendants are Isaacson, Goff, VanName, Mattison, Warnock, Van-Horn, Pond, Volkman, Adams, Stankle and Rogers. The cases are all returnable March 29th.

At the Park Club.

A delightful entertainment is being arranged at the Park Club for Thursday evening, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. Frank J. Smith will recite, Mrs. William L. Saunders will sing, and it is expected Fletcher Halbak will give banjo and mouthophone solos.

A Ministerial Honor.

The Rev. S. P. Simpson, rector of St. Stephen's church, has again been honored by being appointed one of the select Lenten preachers in Old Trinity church, New York city. He delivers the address at 12 o'clock, Thursday, the 24th. inst.

Quarantine Removed.

The young daughter of Rev. and Mrs. P. S. Gibson, who has been ill with scarlet fever at their house, West Third street, is now fully recovered, and the health authorities have removed the quarantine from the house.

Looking Towards Easter.

Most of the Plainfield churches are now making great preparations to celebrate Easter, and the chances are that the programmes will eclipse anything heretofore given.

BEST TO TRY TO REFORM.

REV. A. C. NICKERSON'S IDEAS OF DEALING WITH CRIME.

In His Lecture He Takes a Stand Against the Death Penalty and Says Effort Should be Made to Stop Small Crimes.

The subject of Natural Selection and Crime was discussed in an interesting manner by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, in the fifth of his series of lectures on the subject of Evolution, in the parlors of the Public Library Friday evening.

The audience was a large one, and showed the increasing popularity of the course. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall presided.

To the ancient Greeks, the lecturer said, evolution was known as destiny, and by the more modern school of Calvinistic theologians it is called election. Both doctrines are now obsolete. The modern doctrine of heredity is not that men are either altogether good or altogether bad; but that criminals can be reclaimed and socially reinstated, according to the power of each individual to recuperate morally and cooperate with the saving enironment in which he may be placed. To a deranged nervous system is undoubtedly due much of the emotional excesses, the vices crimes and general degeneracy that inflict the race.

Is crime increasing? The common opinion is in the affirmative, but I do not believe that it is. There are many explanations for the apparent increase which statistics display. In the first place we should not forget that the methods of compiling statistics have improved to such an extent that the returns of today cannot with justness be compared with those of past years. Moreover, today the law notices more smaller offences than formerly, and the number of arrests is larger for a given number of offenses. To this greater care to arrest criminals, resulting in a greater jail population, is due the apparently rapid increase of crime in the western States.

The death penalty should be abolished and greater attention should be paid to the prevention of small crimes. The criminal should be dealt with in a reformatory spirit. Reformatories should be substituted for prisons. The reformatory is designed to combat the bad hereditary traits of the individual. The efficacy of the system is shown in the work accomplished by the Elmira Reformatory. It is said that over 90 per cent. of the inmates of this place have, after being released, established themselves as law abiding citizens in their communities. The criminal cannot always of himself change character, but he can attach himself to recuperative moral forces and persons.

Better than reformation, however, is the prevention of crime, and to this end the children of the slums and all inclined to criminality should be given an intellectual, moral and religious training that will act as a deterrent to crime. The kindergarten method is the most happy and natural one for the training of children.

GOOD FOR NINETY-NINE YEARS.

Cranford Committee Advances the Westfield and Elizabeth Ordinance.

Cranford, March 21.—The Township Committee held a special meeting Saturday evening to consider the ordinance granting a franchise to the Westfield and Elizabeth trolley road. There was a large attendance of the citizens, and much interest was taken in the proceedings. Ex-Sheriff Hine, of Newark, was here, representing the company.

There was considerable discussion as to the length of time for which the franchise should be granted. Many citizens and members of the committee advocated a period of fifty or seventy-five years. It was finally decided to make the limitation ninety-nine years. In this form the ordinance was passed to its second reading.

Death of A. W. Crooker's Father.

Aaron W. Crooker, of West Second street, an employe at Rogers' seafood market, received a telegram last Saturday telling him of the death of his father, 80 years of age, which occurred at his home in Brooklyn. Mr. Crooker left at once for Brooklyn. The interment was in Massachusetts. Mr. Crooker returned to Plainfield Wednesday.

Came Awheel.

Sunday afternoon the members of the bicycle section of the National Turnerbund, of Newark, rode their wheels to Plainfield and for a few hours were the guests of the Germania Turn Verein, of the borough. They enjoyed themselves immensely, and after partaking of some refreshments started homeward on their wheels.

A Thrilling Talk.

Sunday morning at the First Baptist church, Rev. George W. Taft, missionary from Japan, gave a thrilling talk on the work being carried on in that country by the Baptist denomination. At the close of the service a collection was taken for foreign missions.

Collector Ready for Work.

Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, is now ready to receive taxes at his office on Somerset street.

SHOPPING BY COPS, THEN ARRESTS.

POLICE DETERMINED TO ENFORCE THE SUNDAY OBSERVANCE LAW AGAINST THE LOCAL VIOLATORS.

Three Squads Went in as Many Different Directions, Made Purchases Ranging From Cigars to Doll Babies, and Then Swore Out Warrants and Made Arrests When They Went Out on Their Beats—Culprits Before City Judge

There was weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth among those of the small store keepers who kept "open house" Sunday. The mighty arm of the law was stretched forth and gathered them in without regard for nationality or religion. According to the ordinance relating to the morals, peace and good order of the community, only the sale of milk, drugs and other necessities are allowed on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday. Under this law, the police raided eleven small establishments in every corner of the city and haled the proprietors before the City Judge. The same ordinance provides that any person who habitually observes the seventh day as the Sabbath may carry on his business Sunday in such a manner as not to disturb the religious observance of Sunday as the Sabbath.

The raid against the alleged "cider joints," which was inaugurated by Mayor Fisk last week, was really the preliminary start toward the movement that was begun Sunday. It is claimed that these stores have had a bad influence against the good morals of the city when open on Sunday. A conference between the Mayor, City Judge and the Chief of Police was held and a wholesale raid was decided.

Three details of officers in citizens clothes were sent out in search of the necessary evidence for raiding. Sergeant Kiely and Boundsman Frederickson went in one direction. They visited the stores of Jose Carbone, 126 North avenue, and Vito Ferero, 224 West Front street. They purchased cigars, cigarettes and tobacco at the places for the varied amounts of 25 cents and 20 cents respectively.

Boundsman Flynn and Patrolman McCarthy made a trip visiting the stores of Augusta J. Gold, 653 West Third street; Morris Hedenskie, 236 South Second street; Fred Huff, West Front street and Jefferson avenue; Fortunato Margentino, 128 Park avenue. These stores are all small places where tobacco, candy and soft drinks are sold. The officers purchased small articles, principally cigars, the sales amounting to 63 cents in all.

The third detail was composed of Patrolmen Mattox and Totten. They went to the stores of Joseph Riggi, 401 Plainfield avenue; Tony Oregan, 621 West Third street; Mrs. Catherine Goeller, 219 Plainfield avenue; John Wilson, 310 Liberty street, and Pasquoliseo Daruso, 711 Park avenue. Oregan has a little grocery besides a small assortment of various other lines. There they bought a can of salmon for 15 cents. At Riggi's they bought cigars and a bottle of bluesing; at Mrs. Goeller's some candy, and at Wilson's a top and cord and a doll baby with fluffy hair and a very scanty wardrobe. Their purchases amounted to sixty cents in all.

The details started out on their rounds at 1 o'clock and made their purchases. Then they returned to the Mayor's office, where they were examined and the warrants sworn out before the City Judge.

When the night squad came on duty at 7 o'clock last Sunday they were given the warrants to serve, and the prisoners were brought to the station house at once. The visits of the officers to the different stores were received with dismay. Some of the victims were indignant and expressed their ideas in no measured terms. There was weeping by the families as the husbands were marched away. One poor man, thoroughly frightened at the course events had taken, dropped on his knees and begged the policemen for mercy.

City Judge DeMeza and Mayor Fisk were both present at the station house when the excited prisoners were brought there. With their friends and followers, they soon crowded the little courtroom.

The alleged offenders were arraigned one after another before the City Judge and given a chance to plead. Mrs. Augusta J. Gold was the first to appear. She was indignantly tearful. She did sell Sunday, she said, but she did not sell Saturday.

"I won't break my religion," she exclaimed. "I didn't sell yesterday. I don't want to sell yesterday." The Judge considered that a plea of guilty and entered it as such.

Huff pleaded not guilty and explained that he did not own the place, but was running it for the proprietor. He was held in $200 bail for trial next morning. Margentino pleaded guilty without debate. Hendeskie declared that he had never heard of the law before and was not guilty. He was held under $200 bonds for trial. Riggi pleaded not guilty.

Daruso entered a plea of guilty, but begged the Judge to remember that he only ran the place for Judge Nash who, he said, everybody knew as a "Seventh-day." Wilson also pleaded guilty, but said his wife ran his store. Carbone entered a plea of guilty without discussion. Ferrero declared that he was not guilty. Oregan admitted his own guilt.

Councilman Walter L. Hetfield appeared for several of the prisoners, and after consulting with them asked the Judge that Carbone and Margentino be allowed to retract their pleas as they did not understand. Justice William Newcorn made the same request for Mrs. Gold. The Judge decided to think it over.

The other three who pleaded guilty, Tony Oregan, John Wilson and Pasquoliseo Daruso, were then each sentenced to pay a fine of $5 or go to jail for twenty days. Wilson would not pay at first, but a short acquaintance with one of the cells soon decided him in favor of paying the $5 to the city. The other two paid.

The trial of the rest was set for last Monday at the Council Chambers. Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh was present to represent the city. Justice Newcorn acted as attorney for Mrs. Gold. Councilman Hetfield was lawyer for Huff, Margentino, Carbone, Ferero, Riggi and Mrs. Goeller. Mrs. Goeller was unable to be present on account of illness, but her husband appeared for her. Mr. Hetfield entered a plea of guilty for her and asked for a suspension of sentence on account of extenuating circumstances. Mr. Marsh made no objection. The Judge reserved his decision.

After a consultation on the part of the three lawyers, it was announced that the old complaints would be dropped and new ones started so that the correct names might be used. The attorneys for the prisoners entered pleas of not guilty on all the other cases and the time set down for the trial for Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

It can be stated on good authority that there were several other places visited for evidence besides the eleven stores that were raided. Other arrests may follow.

Trolley on East Front Street.

Notwithstanding that several of the prominent property owners on East Front street are working against the plan of the Plainfield Street Railway to use that thoroughfare for their extension to Scotch Plains, instead of East Second street, it is said on good authority that the company have already enough consents to guarantee the right of way. It is expected that application for a franchise for the extension will be made before the Common Council this spring.

Music for the Conference.

Agreeably Surprised.

Henry Rummell, of Grove street, was agreeably surprised last Saturday evening by a number of his friends from the German and Swedish sections of the singing societies of the Saengerbund. The occasion was the anniversary of Mr. Rummell's birthday and he had no knowledge of the intended surprise. The guests met at Saengerbund Hall and marched to Mr. Rummell's home where they found him. The members of the singing societies serenaded their host after which dancing was indulged in and continued until a late hour. Music was furnished by Claus Wallander.

Singing in New York.

Alfred E. Holmes, of East Fifth street, is now singing baritone at Madison C. Peters' church on the Boulevard, New York. Miss Mary Dunavan is the soprano and Miss Katheryn Krymer, who is well known in this city, is the contralto. The tenor has not yet been selected. It is to be one of the best quartette choirs in any of the New York churches.

WARRENVILLE SCHOOLSTRIFE.

Friends of Young Fred Sage Rally to Support of the Teacher.

Warrenville, March 21—The story of the strife at the annual school election over the question of employing a man or woman teacher, as tersely exploited in The Daily Press, has made gossip for this rural community for several days. Friends of Fred Sage, the young man who has taught the school for the past year, say that the school under his direction was complimented by the County Superintendent Rev. J. Mets as one of the best in Somerset. Young Mr. Sage was so well thought of, it is said, that he was invited to make an address before the county teachers' association which will meet in North Plainfield next Saturday. He has had a number of offers of schools to teach the ensuing year, and it is probable will accept one of the offers as he has decided not to teach at Warrenville any longer.

ANOTHER'S VIEW.

Would we could see another's soul
As we can see our own,
'Twould save us many sad mistakes,
'Twere such a power known.
How often we misjudge someone.
Because we cannot see
Their hearts, but as we feel our own,
And think, so their's must be.

Could we but step right in their place
And feel as they would feel,
Our sympathy would be aroused.
Their souls would seem more real.
We would learn to understand,
And other's hearts we'd know.
A sympathetic cord would bind,
And other's feelings show.

HAD TEARS AND HUNGER

PLIGHT OF SMALL BOY WHO WANDERED AWAY FROM HOME.

Found by the Y. M. C. A. Janitor and Turned Over to Justice Mosher—Parents Alarmed and Notified the Police.

Janitor John Gettleson of the Y. M. C. A. found a six year-old lad adrift on East Front street last Sunday as darkness began to come on. The little fellow was badly scared, and at first inquiries as to his name and the location of his home only brought forth tears.

Justice Joseph E. Mosher was present at the men's meeting in the Y. M. C. A. and the janitor turned over the diminutive piece of humanity to the Justice's care.

To him the lad confided the information that his name was John Connolly and that he was hungry.

The lad's parents, who live at 338 East Third street, had in the meantime sent word to the police that their son was missing, and the Justice turned the lad over to Policeman Totten. The latter knew at once where the boy belonged, and restored him to his parents.

Early in the afternoon John had gone to St. Mary's Sunday-school in company with his sister. When the school was dismissed John became separated from his sister and attempted to make his way home alone. He became confused and the approach of darkness made his plight a hopeless one until help came.

BIBLES FOR MINERS.

Novel Plan for Spreading the Gospel in the Klondike.

The Yukoners who outfit in Seattle will not go into the cold, frozen north without a small copy of the New Testament tucked securely in their packs, if the plan of the members of the Westminster Presbyterian Church succeeds.

Rev. Gilchrist, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, said:

"The Westminster Presbyterian Church has subscribed money to purchase hundreds of Testaments for the men of the Yukon mines in the gold fields of the north. A number of young ladies of my congregation will prepare the books for packing. They will write a little personal note and sign their name to it on the fly leaf of the book. It will then be securely wrapped up and turned over to the outfitter. A number of the prominent houses of this city have been approached on the subject of putting the Testaments into the packs they fit up, and all so far have agreed to do so. We will endeavor to get one of the Testaments into the pack of every man going north from here, and expect to do a great deal of good by it."

The Testaments are of the smaller size, well bound and printed on good paper. The type, while small, is very clear, and the book weighs practically nothing. This point was one that was considered in purchasing.—Seattle Times.

FOUGHT SNAKES FOR LIFE.

The Result of a Practical Joke Played by Pupils on a Teacher.

Some mischievous pupils in a school in Palme Sola, Fla., played a practical joke on their teacher the other day, which came near causing her death. The teacher, Miss Jenkins, is much afraid of snakes. Some of the boys in the school captured several large blacksnakes and after killing one placed it in the teacher's desk.

When Miss Jenkins opened the lid she saw the snake and fell to the floor screaming. A moment later she saw two large snakes glide in through the door. They were evidently mates of the dead one.

They sprang toward the teacher, one of them wrapping itself around her arm and the other about her waist. The teacher fought it desperately, but was barely able to keep them from crushing her.

The unequal contest went on for several minutes when Miss Jenkins's screams attracted the attention of a girl pupil, who killed the snakes with a knife.—New York World.

"Well, my child," he rejoined, "that's all there is of the art of conversing agreeably."—Chicago Record.

OUR RIGHT TO MEDDLE IN CUBA'S SUFFERINGS.

Uncle Sam Pictured in Role of Good Samaritan.

DUTY OF THE U. S. JUST NOW

SYMPATHY SHOULD BE CHARACTERISTIC OF A CHRISTIAN NATION.

State of Affairs in Cuba at the Present is Almost Beyond Description—We Would Wild Over Persecutions and Suffering of the Armenians and Yet Within 130 Miles of Our Coast is a Much Worse Condition—Thinks We Ought to Fight If Necessary to Fulfill Our Duty as a Christian Nation Toward a Suffering People.

Rev. C. E. Herring preached a rousing sermon on "Christian Interest in Cuba" to a large audience in the First Presbyterian church, Sunday evening.

The substance of the pastor's remarks was, that as a Christian nation the United States is justified in interfering to prevent the present terrible suffering in Cuba. After reading the parable of the good Samaritan, the speaker called attention to the fact that the Samaritan was a meddler, while the priest who passed by on the other side minded his own business; yet the Smaritan received Christ's commendation. Minding one's own business may be quite landable at times, but the plain duty of the United States at this time seems to be that of the Samaritan. Sympathy should be a characteristic of every Christian nation.

The state of affairs in Cuba at the present time is almost beyond description. We go wild over the persecutions and sufferings of the Armenians, and here, within 130 miles of our coast, is a much worse condition of affairs.

The population of the Island of Cuba was at the beginning of the late war about 1,600,000. Of that number fully 480,000 have died of starvation, and Spain is no nearer a conquest of the island than three years ago.

This condition of affairs is a disgrace to Christianity. In the interest of humanity, whether the Maine was blown up from the outside or the inside, it seems that the barbarous Sahaffist should come to a close. I am not a jingo, but there are times when war is necessary and advisable, and I think we should be willing to fight if necessary to fulfill our duty as a Christian nation toward a suffering people.

Senator Proctor, who has made a cool and careful investigation of the conditions, outside of Havana, says: "This is not a question of peace or war, but of desolation and starvation, and the only hope for Cuba is America." Here is our privilege. Christ was a man of war as well as of peace. I believe God will be with this nation if we decide to interfere in behalf of Cuba."

COUNCILMEN ECHOED A PRESS EDITORIAL.

Endorse Action of Police in the Sunday Raids.

MR. HETFIELD VOTED ALONE

HE WANTED THE RESOLUTIONS TABLED, BUT WAS DEFEATED.

The Action of Councilman Andrews Stirred up a Lively Discussion, and Some Caustic Remarks Were Passed —Annual Appropriations—Street Committee Get $20,000 for Their Work, Police $14,500 and Firemen $16,000—Petitions from Liquor Dealers who Would Like to Have More Liberal Laws.

At the adjourned meeting of the City Council held last Monday Councilman Andrews offered the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the Council of the city of Plainfield do most heartily endorse the action taken by the Mayor, Police Board and City Judge in enforcing the laws and the observance of the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and that the City Council recommends the further enforcement of the laws until the illicit trading is stopped."

It was this resolution that caused a breeze in the Council Chamber. Mr. Hetfield at once moved that the resolution lie on the table and to substantiate his motion he stated that there were many ordinances on the books that referred to Sunday selling, and most of the places complained of last Sunday had been running for five years, and the proprietors had never been asked to close. He said that in his opinion he thought the men had a right to sell, and he proposed to defend some of them. Mr. Hetfield admitted that he was in a peculiar position, but he had no doubt of the result. A vote was then taken and every member voted against laying the resolution on the table except Messrs. Hetfield, Liefke and Newman.

Continuing, Mr. Hetfield said: "Your police make purchases, serve the warrants, draw the jury and assist in convicting these men. It is an outrage! This is not the place to create sympathy. These men who were arrested believe they are right, and I don't think that this is a case to try before the Council. Are we to commend the Mayor and sergeant of police in creating a sympathy against these men among the people?"

Mr. Barrows responded somewhat as follows:

"Heretofore we had no Mayor or Police Board who had the courage to take this matter up. The members of the Seventh-day Baptist church have repeatedly come to the Mayor asking him to do something, as these people were simply masquerading under the law. The thing is a farce and the Mayor should receive our support."

Mr. Newman was pronounced in his remarks. He said: "I do drive one day as Sunday. I don't go to church but rarely, but if I smoke a cigar, or drink a glass of beer, which I frequently do, it's nobody's business. The second day I was in Plainfield I took a walk out in the country and I saw people cutting down trees and plowing the fields. I asked if people were allowed to do that sort of thing, and was told that they were Seventh day people. It was the first that I heard of that sort of people. I think that everyone has a right to observe any day they see fit, but in order to support the Mayor and Council I shall vote against laying the resolution on the table."

On the second ballot the only one to vote for laying the resolution on the table was Mr. Hetfield. Mr. Liefke asked for the privilege of changing his vote, and Mr. Newman also changed his vote.

Mr. Andrews stated that the resolution was not offered to create sympathy, but that there are a large number of people in Plainfield who are in favor of the Mayor and officials in this work and he thought it no more than right that their action should be commended. Mr. Barrows told Mr. Hetfield that he should have read the editorial in last evening's Press and he would have noticed the sound of alarm. To this Mr. Hetfield said that the press of the country or Plainfield was not trying these men, neither the Council.

The discussion was quite unexpected and consumed considerable time in the meeting. After the discussion the regular business was continued.

A communication was received from B. G. Wood, of New York, offering to settle the assessment on the Ophelia G. Reilly property, at 1328 Watchung avenue, if the interest charges were deducted. The liquor dealers of the city asked the Council to amend the liquor ordinance so that the saloon could be kept open until 12 instead of 11 o'clock in the evening, that a transfer could be made from one person to another on the payment of a small fee, and that it not be necessary for an applicant to secure the signatures of freeholders, unless they have been convicted of violations. The matter was referred to the police committee. The Board of Health asked for an appropriation of $681 45, and later President Newhall of the Board asked that an additional $318 55, making $1 000 be granted. This was also referred to the finance committee.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, in a communication, asked the Council for the privileges of opening certain streets and laying their wires under ground in accordance with an ordinance adopted sometime ago. The same was granted.

Mr. VanHerwerden offered several resolutions, all of which were adopted One was that the dog license fee for the coming year be $2 Another one was that the $12 000 for streets be certified by the clerk and sent to the Mayor so that it could be included in the tax ordinance. Other resolutions were that E H Bird be appointed delinquent tax collector and that the city judge be empowered to execute warrants for the collection of the taxes from the sale of property. The resolution appropriating $1 000 for lights was referred to Assessor Hubbard before it was included in the tax ordinance. The following appropriations were then made: General fund, $37 000; lights $12 000; sewer bonds, $4 400; interest on sewer bonds and extension of system, $5 000; public library, $3 800; poor fund, $1,000; fire department, $16 000; police department, $14,500. Of the $16,000 for fire department work it is only just to state that $4 000 comes out of that amount for hydrants. For street work $18,000 was appropriated and $2,000 was appropriated for storm sewer work. The opinion of Corporation Counsel Marsh was that $20 000 could not be appropriated for street work, and the above method was adopted to overcome the technical point.

Mr. Barrows offered an ordinance providing for the construction of separate sewers for the drainage of surface water, and the date of April 4th at 8 o'clock in the evening was set as the time for adopting the ordinance.

Mr. Barrows also spoke regarding an old bill of Michael Powers for laying crosswalks, etc., which contract had not been properly carried out. He said that the corporation counsel had advised the committee to settle the bill of some $300 for $125, if possible, and the committee was now able to do so. Mr. Barrows moved that the matter be referred with power to the finance committee for that purpose. This being done it concluded the business of the evening and the meeting adjourned.

BOARD OF TRADE.

The last suggestion was to the effect that the Board make an active plea for the new east bound station in this city. A special committee, composed of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and H. G. Runkle, was appointed to wait on the railroad officials and hurry up the building of the new station as soon as possible.

The committee on membership reported favorably on twelve applications and the applicants were all elected to membership. Two new applications were received and were referred to the committee. G. Q. Packer made a report for the special committee on insurance. They had investigated the question of rates and had been ready to meet representatives of the Middle Department, but the latter were not ready to confer. They reported that the rates had been changed very decidedly of late and were now so unsettled that the committee could not yet decide what was to be done.

An amendment to the constitution setting the third Wednesday in January as the date of the annual meeting, was passed.

Harry C. Runyon introduced the subject of the proposed opening of Madison avenue and stated it was W. M. Stillman's wish that the Board of Trade take a hand in the matter to keep it moving. A lively discussion followed in which L. B. Wilson explained the situation that $4 000 was needed to purchase the property in the borough. Mr. Stillman had given $1 000, Mr. Vetterlein had collected another $1.000 in the borough. He thought the borough would give something, possibly another thousand The matter was referred to the committee on streets, roads and bridges to look into the subject and take a hand in making the movement a united one by all interested parties.

President Lounsbury opened a discussion by a very severe criticism of the present building ordinance and the recent Board of Health of Plainfield. He pronounced them oppressive and declared it his belief that they were seriously hurting Plainfield He compared them to two big load stones that were dragging the city down. The building ordinance, he said, was a hundred and fifty years ahead of the times. That opened a general campaign against the building ordinance and the Board of Health in which most all of the members took a hand.

The building ordinance was criticised for various things but it seemed to be the opinion of a majority that the Common Council would be only too glad to make such corrections as were needed. The members by no means agreed as to what needed correcting and the discussion took a lively turn The principal objection to it was in regard to the extent of the fire limits. Some wanted things left more to the discretion of the inspector. The matter was finally left to a special committee of three to confer with the Common Council.

Then the Board of Health was unmercifully pulled to pieces and its methods criticised. It seemed the general opinion that the Board had too much power and was over zealous in its work. The committee on sanitation was instructed to inquire into its work.

There was a lull and Charles H. Hand remarked:

"Well, when we get everything right, we'll be pretty smart people."

There was a general laugh and the meeting adjourned.

PYROGRAPHY THE FAD.

It Succeeds China Painting With the Ladies.

The revival of Pyrography or poker work, has caused this pretty art to find its way into almost every fashionable home. It has certainly much to recommend it to the homeworker who likes to employ her time in beautifying her rooms. In the first place the tools and materials for working upon are not expensive; secondly, the work is not difficult, and, finally, the results are speedily obtained and are highly satisfactory from an artistic point of view.

When first starting, all that the novice will need are the materials that are supplied in the box in which the etching machine is sold. The student should begin with any bold simple designs, and practice straight lines and "touches" upon spare pieces of wood.

As the worker improves, it will be found that a finer "point" than that provided is required for the more delicate outlines. The most useful for all round work is the simple cylindrical-shaped point, which will be found essential for etching clean straight lines —one of the difficulties of poker work. For chairs, tables, brackets and other drawing-room decorations, the ordinary white wood answers all purposes.

If a table be selected, a good choice would be a three-legged one, with an upper and lower shelf, shaped in around. This kind of table, besides being cheap, is strongly made and has the advantage of taking to pieces, so that each round can be worked upon with perfect ease. Such a table specially lends itself to armorial designs, which can be made exceedingly effective by the use of oil paints. A narrow circle of white should be left at the end of the round, and a neat free-hand design on a dark surface background should be etched inside. In the centre of the table, supported by the design, the coat of arms must be emblazoned. On the lower shelf the same scheme can be carried out, though it is advisable to have a different design, and the coat of arms may be substituted for a monogram, a regimental crest, college arms, and so on.

The actual painting presents no difficulty, and only requires neat and careful work. Ordinary oil paints, used with pale drying oil, answer the purpose admirably.

Then as to finishing off a piece of poker work. First, all pencil marks and outlines must be taken out with indiarubber and bread-crumbs, and the whole work thoroughly well cleaned. Any mistake in burning should then be taken out as far as possible with glasspaper (No. 0 or 1), and a badly-bitten error remedied with the aid of a fine etching tool. On no account should a knife be used, as it roughens and splinters the wood.

At last comes the "toning." One method of producing a rich soft tone is by scorching the wood through the escape hole in the platinum point. This should be held near to the surface of the work, carefully avoiding touching it with the point, when, by blowing the bellows, the heat rushes out and scorches the wood. A much easier way, however, is merely to rub a small quantity of linseed oil into the wood, which takes away the very white look from it.

Lastly, a word must be said on compound burning. This is used when any portion of the wood appears too dense when finished. A cool point should then be traced over the ground, producing a lighter and more delicate tone.

When the touching up has been done the next and final work is polishing The best effects can easily be obtained by the simple method of wax polishing. This is inferior to French polishing only in its inability to withstand wet. The ingredients are ordinary beeswax and turrentine. When these have been melted and stirred up to the consistency of a thick oil a small quantity is rubbed into the wood with a painter's brush, and then another about twice the size of a nail-brush, is used for polishing. The secret of success is "elbow grease." and if this be duly remembered and acted upon failure will be found impossible, and very artistic and effective results will be obtained.

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

A Little Chat About Things too Small to Interest the Lords.

That women age—that is, become old in appearance—more quickly that the members of the sterner sex, is a matter of everyday observation; it is a matter of such common knowledge, that very few of us stop to ask why it is so. Yet it is surely a question which deserves more general attention, seeing that it touches us all very nearly. The son regrets to see his mother, who has lavished such care upon him, looking "old before her time"; and the husband naturally likes his wife to preserve the freshness of youth as long as possible.

What, then, are the causes of this rapid ageing, and can they be removed?

The most important factor in this fading of the bloom of youth among women is worry. Woman is more delicately constructed that man, her nerves are more highly strung; hence the effect of worry upon her organization is always greater than upon the man. And woman has far greater opportunities for worry than the lord of creation.

Speaking generally, a woman has to depend upon a man for her living. A man, if he be worried, has to throw it off and turn his attention to current business duties; the wife's duties are confined to the household, and are chiefly mechanical, thus leaving her mind free to occupy itself with any subject of uneasiness that may strike.

For instance, the wife at home—confined within the four walls of her dwelling—worries over the fact that her husband's business is not prospering; whereas he, although just as much interested, has his mind occupied with the transaction of current affairs and has not the same opportunity to indulge in disquieting reflection. Moreover, the worry acts more disastrously on her finer nerves than upon his. It is women, rather than men, who "go round the corner to meet trouble," as someone has expressed it. Everybody knows that worry kills more people than work does.

Another reason why women fade more quickly than men is that they develop more speedily. Take a boy and a girl of the same age and watch them; you will find at the end of a given period that the girl has learnt more and is developed to a greater extent that the boy. The natural result of this rapid development is a correspondingly earlies loss of freshness.

Physical inferiority is another cause of early decay; the wear and tear of existence tells upon her sooner than upon a man.

Of these three causes, it is possible to do something to counteract two at least. It is possible to increase their physical strength and to find mental occupation which will prevent them from worrying so much. Both objects may be attained to a great extent by the same means.

If a woman is to protect herself from the ravages of worry, and so retain her youth for a longer period, she must come into more frequent contact with other people—as her husband does—and read good books; she must relieve the monotony of her duties and the benumbing influence of confinement within four walls by taking outdoor exercise—a walk every day or a spin on a bicycle; in short, she must exercise the body and mind in a healthful manner, and she will find the bloom of youth and health remain with her for years after it has faded in other women of the same age.

"The ordinary woman," says a celebrated physician, "leads such a monotonous existence that her mind has no occupation but worry; she is almost made up of worry upon worry. What she needs is to come out of herself much more than she does. She must have intercourse with more people and take more exercise. This can be done without neglecting the home, and a sensible woman will do her best to secure for his mother, or his sister, or his wife these aids to the retention of youthfulness of body and mind."

Confirmed the Unspoken Verdict.

As women grow manly, men accordingly take on the airs of femininity. Ten years ago one never saw a man calmly stop to survey himself in any mirrow the way all men do now without a trace of a blush.

Men have been seen to adjust their ties in the reflection of a plate-glass shop window, or to brush specks of dust off their collars as they pretended to be looking at the contents of a showcase, when, in reality, they were looking into the glass itself; and if there is not a large glass in the men's dressing-room at a dance or reception there is a growl.

A man pretty far advanced in the downward path of vanity got on an elevator the other day that was certainly intended for a big store instead of a business office, inasmuch as it was mirror-lined on three sides. There was a young woman also in it, but he did not pay very much attention to her.

He stood and looked at himself interestedly, critically, anxiously. He smoothed out eyebrow, twisted his moustache, and wiped the dust off his forehead; then he turned his head to one side and examined his face; a frown appeared between his eyes, and he started nearer the glass. He had forgotten there was anyone else on earth.

"Yes," spoke up a sweet, small voice at his elbow, "it is really too bad, but you are right in your surmise—your nose is set on a little crookedly!"

CARBONE WILL APPEAL TO HIGHEST COURT.

Right of Sunday Selling Will Be Bitterly Fought For.

OFFENDER WAS FINED $25.

THE HEAVIEST PENALTY THE CITY JUDGE COULD IMPOSE.

Councilman Hetfield, Carbone's Lawyer, Will Certiorari the Conviction to the Supreme Court, Where Strong Argument Will be Made to Have the Verdict Set Aside—The Carbone Case Will Settle The Whole Contention—Seventh-Day Baptists Not Affected—They Will Maintain Their Rights.

For the time being, at least, the city won in regard to its interpretation of the Sabbath observance ordinance. Tuesday the first of the alleged offenders was tried for the second time and found guilty by a jury composed of eight commuters and four local business men. Of course the case will be carried to the Supreme Court of the State.

A detailed account of the trial of Jose Carbone appears in another column. It was the re-trial of the case for the first jury disagreed and the case had to be tried again before a new one. The composition of the new jury, which was empaneled, was the subject of considerable comment. It was conceded that with such a jury, if the city did not win its case, victory for it would be impossible.

The second jury was charged at 1:15 o'clock and was locked up under the charge of Patrolman McCue. Once the jury sent for City Judge DeMeza and asked instructions on some technical point. An hour and forty minutes after it had retired to consider the case, the jury announced through its foreman, Marion S. Ackerman, that it had agreed on a verdict.

At 3:05 o'clock the jury marched into the Council Chambers, where the trial was held and announced that a verdict was ready to be given. The prisoner, his counsel, the Corporation Counsel and the reporters gathered in the court room to hear the verdict. It was guilty.

Then the jury was dismissed and went homewards for their dinners. A consultation was held between the City Judge and the Corporation Counsel regarding the punishment to be inflicted. According to the ordinance the extent of the fine that can be imposed is $25.

At 3:30 o'clock a small crowd again assembled in the Council Chambers to hear the verdict. Judge DeMeza made a short speech to the prisoner, who stood unmoved before him. He then sentenced Carbone to pay a fine of $25.

Carbone took the sentence very stoicly and resumed his seat without a word. His lawyer, Councilman Hetfield, immediately rose and asked that the city allow his client to enter into bond to give him opportunity to apply for a writ of certorari to carry the case into the Supreme Court. Mr. Marsh objected as he said there was no statute that provided for anything of that kind. He announced his willingness to accept Mr. Hetfield's personal guarantee to pay the fine or produce the prisoner by next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock if the writ had not been secured by that time. Such an agreement suited all and the prisoner was released in the custody of Mr. Hetfield.

The Carbone case is of special importance, as it has been agreed by the city and the alleged offenders to allow the one case to settle the whole matter. It will be carried to the highest court and there reviewed. If the verdict of the city court is sustained then the five storekeepers who are represented in the matter by Mr. Hetfield will make no further attempt to fight the city.

This does not apply to such of the members of the congregation of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, who were notified to transact business on Sunday behind drawn curtains and closed doors, and threatened with arrest if they did not comply. The Seventh-Day Baptists have decided to keep their establishments open as usual, and will make a determined fight if any attempt is made by the city to prevent them from doing so.

An Out-of-Town Wedding.

An out-of-town wedding announced for Easter week is that of Miss Ada D. Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jennings S. Cox, to Robert C. Fisher, of New Rochelle. The wedding will take place April 12th in Trinity church, New Rochelle. Miss Cox has been a frequent visitor in Plainfield and has many friends, to whom this announcement will be of interest.

AN EASTERN KLONDIKE.

GOLDEN WEALTH FOUND ON A PLAINFIELDER'S POSSESSIONS.

While Workmen Were Excavating a Cellar on Morris Abrams' Property in New Brunswick They Found Old Coins.

New Brunswick, March 30.—Morris Abrams, the Plainfield shoe merchant, who runs a branch store in this city, seems to have struck a veritable Klondike while having a cellar excavated on Peace street for the purpose of enlarging his store. The building was formerly occupied by a photographer. Joseph Raymond, one of the workmen, was the first one to unearth this eastern Klondike. His eyes opened with wonder when he turned up an old coin about the size of a dollar.

It was a Spanish piece, and bore date 1749. Other workmen also found silver pieces. In all twenty-five gold coins, of varying sizes, from about the size of a silver quarter to the size of a silver half, and 110 silver coins, all of the same size as the first were found.

The coins were divided among the workmen. They were all well preserved, and bear dates ranging from 1748 to 1777. How they got where they were found is a mystery.

The building is one of the oldest in New Brunswick. Shortly after the Revolutionary War a bank was located there known as the Merchant's Bank, and the coins may have been the property of that institution, but as they are all Spanish, this theory is hardly more likely than the generally accepted one that the coins are part of Capt. Kidd's treasure, buried in what is now the site of New Brunswick, when the pirate sailed up the Raritan to get out of the way of some pursuing ship.

DONE IN HIS NAME.

Practical Charity Given by the King's Daughters.

During the past three years Mrs. Martin Gaghen, of Lee place, has been afflicted with mercury poisoning of the hands and she was unable to use her hands at all. In fact she was helpless in that respect. Through the kindness of the King's Daughters and Dr. Carman, she was taken to the hospital for treatment. At that place she was confined for nine weeks. A few days ago she was discharged almost cured, being able to open her hands and use them. Mrs. Gaghen is very grateful to those who were so kind to her. She was not charged one penny for the treatment and it was given gratuitously.

White's Opening.

The spring opening of fine millinery at White's is one of the important events of the store, and is looked forward to by all lovers of beautiful hats. The display this season is far superior to former openings in many ways. A description of the hats to be seen is impossible, but all visitors to the department Tuesday and yesterday were well pleased with the style and taste that has been displayed by Miss Daly in the trimming of the hats and the arrangement of the department, as every hat shown is her own design and style, as she buys no stock or ready-trimmed hats. The opening will continue today and Friday.

Work at the Hospital.

The monthly meeting of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital was held Monday night. Routine business was transacted. The report of Dr. J. B. Probasco, medical director for the month, showed that 18 patients had been admitted, 14 discharged cured, 3 discharged, improved. The total number treated was 34. There were 34 dispensary patients and 73 visits made to that department.

Floral Setting for a House.

The lawn in front of J. F. Parker's house on Grove street presents a very pretty appearance for this time of the year, being dotted with innumerable crocuses and hyacinths of all colors. Fixed the Counsel Fees.

In the Orphans court of Union county, yesterday, the court fixed the counsel fees in the Rachael Clark will case, in which the will was sustained. Governor Voorhees represented the legitees, John H. Vanwincle, of this city, the executors and James O. Clark, of Westfield, the caveators.

Teachers' Primary Union.

The Teachers' Primary Union was held in a class room of the Y. M. C. A. building Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. J. A. Powlison conducted the opening exercises. The lesson, "The Woman of Canaan," was taught by Miss Shreve. A praise service concluded the meeting.

THE IDEA WAS NOT POPULAR

THE UNCHRISTIAN SENTIMENT HEARD IN ESSEX COUNTY.

Miss Hamilton, a Noted Mission Worker, Told Plainfielders About the Incident at a Conference of Union County Christian Endeavorers Last Night—She Told How to Do Excellent Mission Work—Mrs. Alice S. Runyon Offered Ideas as to Work—Suggestions to Interest Endeavorers.

The members of the missionary committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union held a conference Tuesday evening in the ladies' parlor of Trinity Reformed church. Owing to the stormy weather the attendance was small, but the conference was helpful and many valuable suggestions were advanced along the lines of mission work.

Miss Hamilton, of Newark, who is a noted mission worker in the Essex County Union, led the discussion and she not only asked many questions concerning the work in Union county, but told of the excellent methods used in her Union. Miss Hamilton said that in selecting a committee she thought it best to choose one trained worker, one-half trained worker and three inexperienced workers. In doing this the best work could be secured. She thought the missionary committee ought to meet at least once a month and take up the subject of one single foreign country.

One idea advanced by a person not wholly in accord with foreign missions was that if China should be Christianized the people in that country might manufacture and sell such goods as are made in this country be low our market rates. This was considered to be a detriment. Various suggestions were offered to incite an interest among Christian Endeavorers in mission work.

Mrs. Alice S. Runyon, of this city, interested those present by giving a brief talk on mission work. She offered several valuable suggestions as to how Endeavorers could be interested in missions. The conference was a very informal one and all talked freely on the subject of missions. Not all of the Plainfield societies were represented at the meeting, although there were several representatives from other parts of Union county.

TO BE LOCATED IN SOMERSET.

Governor Signs the Law to Establish a Village for Epileptics.

Trenton, March 30.—Governor Voorhees has affixed his signature to Senate bill No. 80, which provides for a village of epileptics, to which no person under five years of age shall be eligible to admission. The bill provides that the Governor shall appoint six trustees without salary who shall select a site from State lands and shall provide a building. Thus far the Governor has not decided upon the persons whom he will have as trustees. The appointments will probably be made this week. It is probable that the site for the new village will be a large farm in Somerset county, ownership of which the State recently acquired through the foreclosure of a mortgage.

Dealing in Forged Paper.

Within the past few days the discovery has been made at Mount Holly that a well known farmer living in the county had been dealing rather extensively in forged paper, which he had succeeded in having discounted without any trouble until an accidental discovery. It was stated Tuesday, however, that all the paper had been taken up and that no prosecution would follow.

Attachment Set Aside.

The attachment suit of Quinn against Smith was set aside in the Burlington county court as the affidavit was deficient. Murphy & Blatz represented the defendant, George E. Smith, of New York, formerly of this city. The suit was for $1,356.

THE SEIZURE NOT RIGHT.

NOTABLE TROLLEY FIGHT DECIDED IN COURT OF CHANCERY.

Chancellor McGill Renders an Opinion That Cross-State Line Had No Right to Lay Their Tracks Near Somerville.

Trenton, N. J., March 30.—Chancellor McGill yesterday filed a written report upon the suit of the township of Bridgewater against the New York and Philadelphia Trolley Company. In 1894 the township, which is in Somerset county, granted a franchise to the company with the provision that the line should be completed between Bound Brook and Somerville within one year. The work was not completed and little, if any, work was done. The company asked for an extension, but it was refused, the township demanding better terms. In the fall of 1897 the company brought a gang of workmen from Baltimore and began to lay the tracks. There was a battle between the workmen and the authorities. The workmen won. It being a Sunday, no legal action could be taken. The company said its sudden activity was to shut out its rival, the Brunswick Traction Company. The township had previously obtained an injunction and the case was pending in the Chancery Court.

The Chancellor holds that the seizure of the road was illegal. The restraint imposed by the original injunction was standing and still stands, and the case shall proceed as though no action had been taken by the company.

SIXTEEN SOCIAL SISTERS.

Entertained at Whist by One of Their Number, Miss Eva Wilkins.

The Sixteen Social Sisters' Whist Club were entertained at the home of Miss Eva E Wilkins, of East Fifth street, Tuesday evening. The game was enjoyed, as usual, by all. The first prize was awarded to Miss Grace Uhlrich and the second to Miss Dora Uhlrich. After refreshments were served the rest of the evening was devoted to the laughable game of Pillow Dex.

When it was time to bid farewell to the hostess, the sisters declared they had gained several pounds from laughing.

Thursday Night Euchre Club.

The members of the Thursday Night Euchre Club were entertained Tuesday by Miss Clara Williams, of Madison avenue, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, of Central avenue. The full membership of the club was present and a very delightful time was enjoyed by all. Miss Etta Krymer and Miss Mabelle Force were awarded first and second prizes for the women, while R. M. Clark and George Neumann, were presented with first and second prizes for the men.

Benefit for Disabled Firemen.

A benefit entertainment for the disabled members of the Exempt Firemen's Association, of this city, is being arranged for Tuesday evening at Washington Hall. The programme for the occasion will be an elaborate one. Both the Plainfield Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club and the Queen City Band will take part in the programme. There will be an exhibition of moving pictures and selections by a phonograph. Councilman William N. Runyon will sing. The admission is 25 cents.

NASH WILL NOT BE PLACATED BY G. O. P.

He Declined an Honor From the Republican Machine.

REGULARS WERE UNHAPPY.

SEVERAL OF THE FAITHFUL WERE DISPLEASED WITH THE OFFER.

Though the Judge Was Prominently Identified With the Citizens' Movement, Which Defeated the Regular Republicans, He was Appointed an Alternate Delegate to Represent the Machine at Trenton, but He Immediately Declined—Leaders Criticised for Their Attempt to Harmonize the Second Ward Manager.

A real lively blaze of indignation started up among the machine politicians of the G. O. P. in the Second ward last week, when the announcement was made that the city executive committee of the Republicans had attempted to reconciliate the erstwhile leader of the ward, who looked after the interests of the Citizens' ticket in the last campaign. The attempt at reconciliation came in the appointment of Judge Vincent W. Nash as alternate to represent the Second Ward at the convention of Republican League Clubs at Trenton tomorrow.

It will be remembered that the appointment of the delegates and alternates to the convention was left in the hands of the chairman of the city executive committee, Former Assemblyman W. B. Codington. When his appointments were announced, W. H. Drayton was named as delegate from the Second ward with V. W. Nash as alternate.

Now Judge Nash's status in the political arena at the present time is well-known to a majority of the citizens of Plainfield. He is not in favor of the present administration and did his best at the last municipal election to turn down the regular Republican ticket and elect the Citizens' candidates. His efforts were so far successful in that ward that Councilman Frost was defeated in his run for re-election and John VanHerwerden elected to the Council. Judge Nash also assisted in the direction of the campaign throughout the city. He stood at one time as the Republican leader in his ward and was a hard worker for the G. O. P. At present he is known to the Republicans as a "kicker."

The announcement of his appointment was received with incredulity. While there was nothing particularly important in the position of alternate, yet there was a chance that he might represent the second ward before the Republicans of the State. The other positions were distributed among the workers in the different wards and the fact that Judge Nash, a distinct opponent of the present administration, should be similarly honored, was looked on as decidedly pointed.

A howl came from the workers in the Second ward at once. While the appointment was made by the chairman, it was known that there was some influence behind that wished the appointment to be made. The workers wanted to know who had brought the influence to bear. There were plenty who had done much for the party in that ward, they said, that deserved recognition.

Judging from Judge Nash's position, it appeared very evident that the appointment was made to conciliate him and draw him back into the fold of the Republican party. It had not the slightest effect on the erstwhile leader of the Second ward. He declined the honor without delay and informed J. B. Coward, secretary of the city committee, that he would be unable to accept the appointment. No reason was stated.

A reporter called on Judge Nash at his office yesterday morning, but the Judge had nothing to say in regard to the matter. He had declined, that was all. He was free to say, however, that he was not in accord with the present administration of city affairs.

A Teacher Called Away.

Miss Maud Acock, of Craig place, one of the teachers at the North Plainfield Public School, was called to her home at Trenton yesterday by the sudden death of her brother-in-law. He went through an operation and it was thought he would live. He died very suddenly Tuesday night.

Changed Its Time of Meeting.

The Plainfield Board of Health held a meeting last Tuesday. Only routine business was transacted. The Board adjourned to meet again next Tuesday evening. The regular meeting of the board has been changed from the last Tuesday to the first Tuesday in the month.

ROAD SEEMS TOO NARROW

ONLY OBJECTION TO CHANGE OF ROUTE IN FANWOOD.

The Matter of Permitting the Change Left in the Hands of Township Committee—New Plan of Getting to Newark.

Scotch Plains, March 30.—A meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee was held last evening in the town hall for the purpose of giving the people a public hearing concerning the proposed changes in the trolley route as offered by the Elizabeth and Westfield Traction Company. Mr. Gaddis, representing the company, offered the franchise to the Committee, and after Chairman Nichols read the proposed changes the meeting was thrown open for discussion.

About the only objection offered by the property-owners along the proposed route, was that Westfield avenue is too narrow for a double track railway, the road being only fifty feet wide. The township map, Mr. Gaddis said, called for sixty-six feet, but that owners in setting their fences had gradually encroached upon the roadway, consequently narrowing it. He said that if the franchise was granted the company would do all necessary grading in widening the road. This seemed to be the only point raised. A motion was then made that the matter be left in the hands of the Township Committee, they to do as they think best for the best interests of the township.

The committee decided to hold a meeting later to discuss the question. A representative of The Daily Press asked Mr. Gaddis if the Bergen plan would in any way interfere with the plans of the Elizabeth and Westfield Company. He replied that if the franchise was granted the road would run to Scotch Plains and if possible go to Newark by a route that is several miles shorter than the one offered by the Bergen plan.

Owing to the stormy night there were not many people present to discuss the situation. W. B. Codington, counsel for the township, was present to look after the legal side of the question.

MAYOR IMPOSED FINES.

Mr. Wilson Deals Severely With Three Borough Offenders.

Herbert Willett and a Mrs. Bearsford, the latter of Grandview avenue, were arrested by Marshal Wise at 1 yesterday morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. At the home of the woman the two managed to walk to the porch of the house, where they fell off on one side. Marshal Wise was nearby and arrested them. They were placed in the lock-up with difficulty. The woman's screams could be heard for several blocks. Yesterday a. m. they were arraigned before Mayor Wilson who, after hearing the evidence, imposed a fine of $10 on each.

About the same time Clara Conover, of Paradise alley, was arrested on Somerset street by Marshal Schenck. She was under the influence of liquor. She was in company with a young man of the borough, but the latter escaped in the darkness when he saw the officer. The girl, who is about 16 years of age, was taken in custody and placed in the lockup. When she appeared before the Mayor a choice between $5 or thirty days was given. Up to noon the fine had not been paid, although a young man promised to call and put up the necessary amount.

SETTLED THE CLAIM.

A Dispute That was Threatened With Arrests.

On the 25th day of January, Constable VanHorn made a levy on goods belonging to Mrs. Rosa Blimm, corner of Pearl street and Watchung avenue, at the instigation of Pope & Runyon for Norton & Fletcher, New York grocers, who held a claim against the party. Some of the goods were moved out of the county at the time, and yesterday some more goods were moved. Constable VanHorn protested, and the above law firm threatened to make arrests if the goods were not brought back. Mrs. Blimm produced a document from her lawyer, H. C. Runyon, giving her permission to move the goods. Tuesday Pope & Runyon issued warrants for arrest and were about to serve them when Mr. Blimm called and settled the claim.

$65,000 WORTH OF DELINQUENT TAXES.

Martin Act Commissioners File Their Report.

SOME WHO ARE AFFECTED.

THE FINDINGS FILL TWO GREAT BIG BOOKS.

County Judge Will Soon Set a Day for Hearing for All Those Who Think Their Taxes Are Unjust—The Estate of the Martines in Debt to the City Over $12,000—There Are Many Prominent People Who Are on the Delinquent List—Some of the Names and the Amounts Fixed.

Elizabeth, March 30.—After several months' work the commissioners appointed by the Supreme Court to act under the provisions of the Martin Act in the collection of delinquent taxes in Plainfield, have completed their work, and their findings were filed in the county clerk's office Tuesday by Wm. J. Hubbard, secretary of the board. The report comprises two large volumes, 8x4 feet, and are filled with a world of figures. The first part of each volume deals with figures and the last pages are made up of fine maps, showing the locations of the various properties affected. Volume No. 1 contains the properties affected in the First and Second wards, and Volume No. 2 properties in the Third and Fourth wards.

Over 400 properties are affected, owned by 200 different people. While it is not stated what the amount of the original delinquencies are, it understood that with interest they would foot up to a good deal over $100,000. The total amount which the Board decided should be collected is between $65,000 and $66,000.

The report is now virtually in the hands of the County Judge and in a few days he will set a time for hearing before deciding on either approval or rejection of the findings. The time for the hearing will be advertised for ten days in the Plainfield papers. If the Judge approves the report it will be sent to the Collector in Plainfield and the work of collecting the delinquencies under the Martin Act will immediately be commenced.

It would be utterly impossible to give a detailed review of the report in this paper, owing to its voluminous character, but a few of the most prominent cases can be referred to as showing the general character of the work.

The largest delinquent in the report is the estates of Daniel and Anna M. Martine and the properties of James E. Martine, the total sum of which is $12,109.79.

In the First ward the following are some of the largest sums: Estate of Martha Suydam, $638.75; estate of O. Bolce, $1,197; estate of Franklin Willey, $3,503.71; estate of Elias Cole, $4,646.08. Other prominent delinquents are the Scotch Plains Baptist church, Y. M. C. A., George W. DeMeza, W. L. Hetfield, W. A. Coddington, Rev. J. P. Taylor, J. T. Vail, A. D. Thompson, First National Bank, Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, C. H. Hand, J. B. Coward, Aaron M. Powell and Warren Marsh.

In the Second ward some of the prominent delinquents are are Charles Hyde, Emma Jones, Dr. J. T. Fritts, George P. White, William Palmer Smith and C. P. Ralli.

The Third ward shows W. J. Leonard for various properties $9,147.65, Mrs. E. M. Leonard, $609 98, and T. O Doane, Craig A. Marsh, W. R. Coddington and Mrs. E. P. Williams.

In the Fourth ward the heaviest delinquents are F. H. Loundsbury for about $500 and Charles McCarty for $561.03. Others are James E. Martine, V. W. Nash and J. B. Coward.

It must be remembered that in many instances the owners of properties upon which taxes are found delinquent are not morally responsible for the debts, as when they bought them they were supposed to be clear of encumberances, but since which time it has been unearthed that the taxes accumulated under former holders and were not properly recorded so that the present purchasers knew of their existence.

In an interview with one of the commissioners the following information was gained: "The tax books of the city back of 1881 are all right, and in every case where the property owners produce receipts they have found it so marked paid on the city tax books. Those cases have been marked off. We found that some taxes were not followed up as closely as they should have been, but in some cases

THE ROCK-A-BYE SHIP.

The Rock-a-bye ship sails every night
To the haven the Port of Dreams,
While at the mast-head shines the glowing light
Of love's far reaching, cheerful beams.

The Rock-a-bye ship meets never a Storm
On its way to the Port of Dreams,
The heart of the captain with love is warm—
There never was warmer, it seems.

The Rock-a-bye ship makes several trips
To the fair Port of Dreams each night;
The first at six, when a fond mother's lips
Kiss two eyes that are big and bright.

The Rock-a-bye ship next sails about eight,
When a youngster clambers aboard.
Then the good ship starts with its precious freight,
By the captain fondly adored.

I own an interest in that good ship,
And I love to witness it start;
So I watch it make each separate trip,
Guided on by a loving heart.

For the Rock-a-bye ship is mother's arms.
The passengers our babies dear!
They sail not to think of nor entertain harms,
Nor the bogie man do they fear.

May time pass lightly over that good ship,
And the years on its softly lie,
And kind heaven guard well it makes each trip
May I always be watching nigh.

A Brave Soldier Girl.

"Oh, if I were only a man!" exclaimed Rebecca Bates, a girl of fourteen, as she looked from the window of a lighthouse at Scituate, Mass., during the war of 1812, and saw a British warship anchor in the harbor.

"What could you do?" asked Sarah Winsor, a young visitor. "See what a lot of them the boats contain, and look at their guns!" and she pointed to five large boats, filled with soldiers in scarlet uniforms, who were coming to burn the vessels in the harbor and destroy the town.

"I don't care; I'd fight," said Rebecca. "I'd use father's old shotgun—anything. How still it is in the town! There is not a man to be seen."

"O, they are hiding till the soldiers get nearer, then we'll hears the shots and the drum."

"The drum!" exclaimed Rebecca, "how can they use it? It is here. Father brought it home last night to mend. See! they are going to burn father's sloop! Where is that drum? I've a mind to go down and beat it."

As flames began to rise from the sloop, the ardor of the girl increased. They found the drum and an old fife, and, slipping out of doors unnoticed by Mrs. Bates, soon stood behind a row of sand hills.

"Rub-a-dub-dub, rub-a-dub-dub," went the drum, and "squeak, squeak, squeak," went the fife.

The Americans in the town thought that help had come from Boston, and rushed into boats to attack the redcoats. But they paused in their work of destruction; and, when the fife began to play "Yankee Doodle," they scrambled into their boats and rowed in haste to the warship, which sailed swiftly away—Architects of Fate.

The Strange Lighthouse Tree.

Among the world's curiously formed trees the Asiatic star tree is not conspicuous, but among nature's freaks in the tree class it stands alone. Its properties are entirely peculiar to itself. Its history is clouded, its attributes unlike anything seen in other trees.

Enormously tall, a man of ordinary height is dwarfed into nothingness beside its trunk. Bare from the ground up to a distance of about forty feet, it puts forth at that place a hundred tangled limbs. From the latter there shoot out great clusters of long pointed leaves, which, bunching themselves together, exude a kind of phosporescent light at night, giving a strange spectral appearance to the big tree. Travelers on the desert, descrying this tree at night, frequently mistake the giant-leaved thing for the illuminated window of a house or some lonely tower. The light is not brilliant; it is subdued, but voluminous, and lasts until daybreak.—New York Journal.

Why She Wanted a Pint.

Ethel is small, but extremely sober-minded, and, therefore, to be trusted to run on household errands.

The other day her mother called her from her play and said: "Ethel, I want you to run over to the grocer's and get me a quart of vinegar."

Ethel looked thoughtful and hesitated. "I'd rather get a pint, mamma," she answered.

"Why, Ethel, dear?" exclaimed her astonished parent. "I need a quart which you must get."

Again the little girl paused. "No," she said, "I'll get you a pint."

"I'm surprised at you! Why should you buy a pint, when I wish a quart?" insisted the mother.

"Because," answered Ethel, the tears beginning to come, "I can say pint, and I can't say a krort!"

Delights of Growing Up.

Aunt Gertrude—And what will you do when you are a man, Tommy?

Tommy—I'm going to grow a beard.

Aunt Gertrude—Why?

A LITTLE BOY'S LAMENT

I'm going back down to grandpa's,
I won't come back
no more
To hear the remarks about my feet
And daddy's up the floor.

There's too much said about my clothes,
The soldin's never done—
I'm goin' back down to grandpa's,
Where a boy has some fun.

I dug up half his garden
A-gittin' worms for bait;
He said he used to like it
When I had a pet snake;
He said that pie was good for boys,
An' candy made 'em grow.
But I can't go to grandpa's,
I'll turn pirate first you know.

He let me take his shotgun,
An' loaded it for me
The time the girl went in the barn,
The hens flew up a tree.
I had a circus in my yard
With forty other boys—
I'm goin' back to grandpa's
Where they ain't afraid of noise.

He didn't make me comb my hair
But once or twice a week;
He wasn't watchin' me for words
I didn't say to speak.
He told me stories 'bout the war
And Injuns shoot out West.
Oh, I'm goin' down to grandpa's
For he knows wot boys like best.

He even run a race with me,
But had to stop an' cough;
He rode my bicycle and laughed
Because he tumbled off;
He knew the early apple trees
Around which it is safe.
Oh, grandpa was a dandy,
An' was "in it" all the while.

I bet you grandpa's lonesome,
I don't care what you say;
I seen him kinder cryin'
When you took me away.
When you talk to me of heaven,
Where all the good folks go,
I guess I'll go to grandpa's,
An' will in time, I know.

The Peacock at Home.

The ears of insects are found in very peculiar places. We are so accustomed to think of the ear as an organ of the head that to find it is sometimes located in hind legs or behind wings is decidedly queer.

In the majority of insects the ear is found in their antennas or feelers, but in some of the most common insects it is found in more surprising places.

In grasshoppers and crickets the ears are situated in the anterior pair of legs. If the hind legs of a grasshopper be examined, two (one before and one behind) shining, oval, membranous disks, surrounded by a marginal ridge, will be at once observed. These are the tympana or ear-drums of the ear of that leg. Where the trachea or air tube enters the leg it becomes enlarged and divides into two chambers. These chambers unite again lower down in the shaft of the tibia.

The trachae of silent grasshoppers are much smaller than those of sound-producing grasshoppers. In grasshoppers and crickets the drums [illegible] bathed in air on both sides—the open air on the external side and the air of the air tube or trachae on the inside.

The ears of common horse flies, and of most of other flies, are situated behind the wings. This peculiarity is most easily studied in the horsefly.

Immediately behind the wings of flies two curious knobbed organs are to be observed. These are now recognized to be organs of hearing.

They are also organs of balancing or equilibration, and in this respect serve a similar purpose to the ears of man. Any derangement or disease of these canals interferes with equilibration.

If the balancers of a [illegible] be removed, the insect at once loses its equilibrium and almost direct its flight, but plunges headlong to the ground.—New York Journal.

Queer Places for Ears of Insects.

The real home of the peacock or peafowl is in India. There they were and are hunted, and their flesh is used for food. As these birds live in the same region as the tiger, peacock hunting is a very dangerous sport.

The long train of the peacock is not its tail, as many suppose, but is composed of feathers which grow out just above the tail, and are called the tail coverts.

Peacocks have been known for many hundred years. They are mentioned in the Bible: Job mentions them, and they are mentioned, too, in 1 Kings, x. Hundreds of years ago, in Rome, many thousand peacocks were killed for the great feasts which the emperor made. The brains of the peacock were considered a great treat, and many had to be killed for a single feast.

BRAVE TARS OF 1848.

HOW JACK CAPTURED MEXICO AND LET IT GO AGAIN.

Uncle Sam in Those Days Went Around with a Chip on His Shoulder, and Inquiry Boards Rendered Verdicts Before They Slept.

One day, in the year 1842, Captain Thomas ap Catesby Jones, then at Callao in command of a strong squadron, which had been sent to the Pacific coast by the United States to prevent the seizure of California by the British, picked up a newspaper and read therein an article which declared that Mexico had just ceded California to England. Before the close of the day a British frigate came into view, and, stopping only long enough to take a brief look at the Yankee squadron, sailed northward. The appearance of the English warship and her apparent haste to join her consort, seemed to Captain Jones to substantiate the newspaper story he had just read. If the British were taking possession of California he had work to do. Up went his anchors and the prows of his ships were turned toward California. He reached Monterey harbor, and at once landed and took possession of the town. The next day, very much to his chagrin, he learned that the newspaper story was a fake, and that he had taken forcible possession of a town belonging to a nation with which the United States was at peace. He promptly surrendered the town and made what amends he could.

This is an interesting fact because it shows that the warlike act on the part of the United States against Mexico was made by a naval officer some four years previous to actual hostilities, and illustrates the distrust with which England was regarded by the United States at this period.

The official declaration of war was made four years later, on May 13, 1846; but it was not until the 8th day of the following June that Captain John Drake Sloat, commander of the Pacific squadron, then stationed at Mazatlan, Mexico, learned that war had been declared. He at once headed his ship, the frigate Savannah, for Monterey, California. When he reached this place he found the United States ships, the Warren, Cyane and Levant at anchor in the harbor. Two hundred and fifty men were ordered to land and take possession of the town, which was accomplished without opposition on the part of the Mexicans.

Captain Sloat passed on to Callao, and the more active Captain Robert Field Stockton was ordered to take his place.

Stockton proved to be the right man in the right place. He at once moved against the Mexicans, with two hundred and fifty men, and, on August 13, 1846, he entered the city without opposition. Here he organized a state government with John C. Fremont at the head. The Mexicans rallied and attempted to retake the town. Los Angeles and Monterey were retaken and Santa Barbara threatened. The Mexicans in the country far outnumbered the Americans; but the superior courage and skill of the Yankees eventually carried all before them. Brigadier-General Stephen W. Kearney came from Sante Fe, New Mexico, with one hundred men, and, reinforced by two hundred and fifty men, marched to the city. An army of seven hundred men was raised for another attack, on Los Angeles, and that city was re-captured on January 15, 1847.

Captain Stockton now returned to the east, and the command of William Bradford Shubrick, with Lieut. Jr. Selfridge and the brig Preble, and Commodore Biddle came to the coast. In a short time every Mexican port north of Acapulco was blockaded. The custom-house at Mazatlan was administered by the Americans and nearly $300,000 collected on imports.

An incident will illustrate the character of the naval warfare along the Pacific coast. During the blockade at Mazatlan, Lieutenant G. W. Harrison was out with three small boats on the watch for blockade runners. In his zeal he wandered far from the protection of the guns of his ship. The Mexicans, observing this, determined to capture him and his men; and, manning four big barges with at least three times as many men as Harrison had, started after him. Harrison's men could easily outrow the Mexicans; but flying from such an enemy did not suit the bold Yankee officer, and he headed the boats straight for the Mexicans. The Mexicans' courage evaporated, and they turned about and fled for their lives the moment the American rifle balls began whistling in their ears, and this, too, when they were supported by field guns on the beach. Another of the Yankee sailors felt themselves vastly the superior of the timid Mexicans.

The first work of the navy in the Gulf of Mexico was at the battle of Palo Alto, when Commodore David Conner, commander of the Gulf squadron, landed five hundred men to help protect the garrison left by General Taylor at Point Isabel. An attack was made on Alvarado, an important port south of Vera Cruz, also on Tuspan, and a second attack on Tabasco; but these all failed. Captain Calibraith Perry, brother of Oliver Hagard Perry, commanding the Mississippi, was sent against Fontera. This is the same Perry who afterwards won distinction for capturing the ports of Japan to American commerce. He had with him two steamers, the Vixen and Spitfire, and four schooners, with two hundred marines and ample crews for all the vessels. A short distance above the mouth of the river, which empties into the Gulf at Fontera, was a considerable fleet of Mexican merchant vessels. Captain Perry dashed over the river-bar, with the steamer Vixen and two schooners; and surprised and captured the shipping. The forts and town surrendered; and Perry ascended the river seventy-two miles and took the City of Tabasco.

But the most important work of the navy in the Gulf was the assistance rendered in the capture of Vera Cruz. In March, 1847, there were seventy ships and transports before Vera Cruz, with General Winfield Scott's army of 12,000 men on board. A combined naval and army attack was planned. The contest began on March 9, 1847, with the landing of General Scott's army. On March 22 the land forces opened fire on the city; and the next day an attack was made on the Castle, the main fortification of the city, by the navy. At 8 o'clock on the morning of the 25th the Mexicans requested that the bombardment of the city be stopped, and on March 28, 1847, the city of Vera Cruz was surrendered.

No longer a field of importance was done by the navy in the Gulf during this war.

The war with Mexico gave the navy few opportunities — Mexico had no navy and there was no real naval battle but, in accomplishing the little work it was called upon to do, it showed that the same energy and courage which had made it famous in 1812 still animated its officers and men.

SHADOWGRAPH.

A New Name Given to an Old Time Amusement.

Shadowgraphs, a new and coined name for our old friends, Shadows on the Wall, with which our grandfathers and great-grandfathers used to delight their grandchildren when the fire was closing, and the candles were alight. These shadows, indeed, have lived through centuries, but in late years have been very much improved upon, so that now they form a most fascinating amusement for both old and young, at entertainments, at home, at school, bazaars, etc.

Now, if my readers wish to appear as entertainers with this most innocent and mirthful amusement, and they follow out the instructions here given, taking a careful survey of the drawings illustrating this article, I can assure them, as a professional entertainer, that they will succeed; but practice they must, for without it nothing can be accomplished.

First and most important is the light. The stronger the illuminant the better. For ordinary use the magic lantern comes in handy, as it gives a strong and steady light, and leaves the apartment in darkness. Then, we can recommend the bull's-eye lantern; and lastly, even a good candle will answer the purpose very well.

Whatever light is used, it must be placed at the back, and nearly opposite the centre of the screen. The distance therefrom you must determine for yourself, as it will depend on the size of the screen and the space you wish to cover with light.

By referring to Fig. 1, you will see the performer at work. For a screen or sheet to project the shadows on to, here is shown a wooden hoop, such as young ladies use for mild exercise at a certain season of the year, and which can be purchased cheaply in various sizes from most toy-shops.

Having got your wooden hoop, next procure a piece of calico sufficient to cover it and turn over at the edges of the hoop, and then, as you stretch it carefully, knock in small tacks to fasten it on. You may support it in any manner that pleases you; but here is illustrated a simple support, which explains itself. The performer is casting the shadow of an elephant's head upon the sheet.

Meaning of Thumb-Prints.

It is curious to notice that while a great deal of importance is laid on a scientific spirit of the value of thumb-prints as a means of identification, no one has yet found out what these lines in the thumb mean, or what they may indicate in determining character. The various lines have been traced, and the rest has been noted—from the two thumbs show precisely the same lines.

The lines in the palm of the hand have been studied, too, for centuries, and the believers in the possibility of reading character from the lines in the palm are numerous, even among the educated. But the gifted scientists and the palmists stop here. The thumb, they know, contains lines as remarkable and as varying as the palm. But what it all means no one knows, nor has any one attempted to guess.

When we hark back to the mystical knowledge of the ancients, it is marvellous that they, too, in many ways wiser than we, should have been baffled in reading the thumb. And at the same time they used thumb-prints as seals.

The American Girl.

American girls in good social positions are allowed more freedom than the girls of any other nation. The Europeans are shocked at the way unmarried women in America are permitted to go out alone with young men, or receive them alone at their homes, but it is not recorded that the morals of American women are any the worse for the liberty allowed them. In the European countries a young lady must be under the wing of a chaperone at every turn. Ultra fashionable society in this country is taking up the chaperone idea, and more every year—but the mass of American girls are still free to go and come as they please, and nowhere on earth are the girls so self-reliant or more virtuous.

STRICKEN HAVANA.

THE LABORER GIVES WEEKLY DOLE TO THE BEGGARS.

Funerals at the Colon—The Jewellers Are All Pawnbrokers and None Too Scrupulous—No One Learns to Speak the English Language.

Almost every jewelry store in Havana is a pawn shop. The traffic is done openly, and there are no side doors to dart in and out, and the loan is asked and made in the most matter-of-fact way. These jewelers, when doing a pawnbroking business, like to deal with Americans, or for that matter, any foreigners. What they lend on the personal effects they expect to multiply at least five times, realizing, as is frequently the case, that the chances of the visitor ever returning to Havana or being able to redeem his pledge through a resident friend are very remote. In so doing they are secure in the fact of jewelers that the property left in trust will never again be claimed by its rightful owner, that there are instances on record where the very same goods have been exposed for sale in the window the day following their arrival. What they do when an owner suddenly reappears on the scene to claim the property that has been unlawfully sold can be imagined. Since this war broke out many wealthy Cubans have been compelled to sell their jewels, and in this way the pseudo pawnshops have been enriched.

The custom of burying the dead is perhaps one of the most striking features of the city. Last Sunday, while out to the Colon cemetery, I saw that the Maine victims are interred, a visitor counted 112 coffins enter the main gate inside three hours' time. Thirty of these were carried there in dead wagons of the Alfonso XIII. and San Ambrosio hospitals. The remainder, or were ten cases of smallpox, the average deaths from the last-named disease during the last few weeks being 203. The records kept by the United States sanitary inspectors stationed here show that the average for the year is 61-2 per cent., or equal to that of the whole State of New York. Havana has a population of a quarter of a million. This statement is merely made to show what a busy place the Cemeteric de Colon really be.

There are two degrees of funerals, usually, the very poor or the most gorgeous. Spaniard or Cuban must be in very straitened circumstances indeed when he has no means to defray the service of a hearse, and many did last Sunday. The cemetery is on a hill, a really fine site, and, so far as its elaborate and expensive ornaments are concerned, approaches the magnificence of Mount Auburn or Greenwood lawn. The hill is steep, and was quite dusty the day mentioned, and the temperature was about 75 in the shade. Altogether about sixty bodies were carried up the hill on the big hearses without the customary formalities of a hearse or even a carriage.

The majority of the coffins were white, and contained the bodies of children, and in most cases these coffins were slung with an ordinary clothesline with four loops, one for each hand held by the relatives, who walked far apart that the coffin at the other end of the taut rope might not bang against the ground more than was necessary. Many of the mourners were in their shirt sleeves. The hearses, which I depicted last week, are used on Sunday, and then, as you stretch it carefully, knock in small tacks to fasten it on. You may support it in any manner that pleases you; but here is illustrated a simple support, which explains itself. The performer is casting the shadow of an elephant's head upon the sheet.

fact considering the locality and slowness of the remainder of the population who, because of the climate, believe in taking their time in everything. The laborers, however, begin work at sunrise, work until 9 o'clock, when coffee and fruit are served. They continue until 11 o'clock, when they breakfast. The meal consumes an hour, and upon returning again the men work until sunset, about thirten or fourteen hours in all. The laborers have a club here called the Centro Dependiente, which has a membership of 15,000. The men pay monthly dues of $1.50 and support a hospital for the exclusive use of their members. The best mechanics get only $2.50 a day, and are taxed for everything, living or dead. The tax sometimes amounts to 50 centavos a day. The merchants of the city never dream of doing busines after the offices or stores close. They go to their clubs or cafes, but seldom talk business. The hackmen are about the best paid, and receive $1 for the average ride, and there are no side doors or back exits for importers to run away they never lose a fare. The customary fare is 20 cents for two persons for any drive within the city limits and ten cents extra for every additional call. Weather signals are unknown in Havana.

It frequently rains when the sky is perfectly clear and the sun brightly shining, but the latter dries up the streets in a few minutes once the rain ceases. Spaniards and Cubans when they met friends do not shake hands. Instead, they embrace each other and clap each other on the back.

THE PALMETTO WAS SAVED.

The Honorable Action of an Ohio Soldier at the Capture of Columbia, S. C.

Judge Thomas J. Mackey, formerly of South Carolina, gives an incident of Sherman's march to the sea which is not recorded in the war histories. "South Carolina was the first State in the Union to send a regiment to the front to participate in the war with Mexico," said the Judge to a coterie of friends at the Metropolitan Hotel. "The people of the State subscribed and erected in front of the Capitol in Columbia a monument to the memory of the brave boys of the 1st South Carolina Regiment who lost their lives in that conflict.

"The monument is made of pounded brass, and represents a palmetto tree. When Sherman's army entered Columbia and his soldiers were destroying everything that came in their way, several of them made a rush for the shaft. With the butts of their muskets they began the work of demolition. They had not proceeded far when a man on horseback rushed up to them and commanded them to desist.

"'Not another stroke!' he cried.

"Several of the soldiers paid no attention.

"'The next man who dares to assault that shaft I will kill!' he thundered.

"The men saw tears in the eyes of the one who thus addressed them; they also saw that he had weighed his words carefully, and meant every one of them.

"'Soldiers,' said he, 'the boys who sleep beneath that palmetto loved their country as much as you or I. They fought as valiantly.'

"And the palmetto still stands in the old town of Columbia." The man who caused it to be preserved was Colonel Paine, of the 124th Ohio Regiment, and the people of South Carolina owe him a debt of gratitude they can never repay."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

GRUDGE AGAINST A PORTRAIT.

Cyclone Comes Along and Scatters It All Over Town.

A Georgia farmer so pleased a patent medicine firm with a certificate he had given as to the merits of the particular nostrum that they offered to have his picture painted with the certificate on the town hall. The farmer was tickled with the idea, and regularly sat to the artist until the work was completed. He then forwarded his rugged lineaments to the weather boarding of the most prominent building in the town. The picture was full length.

Shortly afterward a cyclone strolled by and struck the town hall to the four corners of the country. People in different localities picked up sections of the farmer's portrait which had been blown their way and one man, knowing how the farmer deplored the disaster, wrote him as follows: "I'm sorry the cyclone blowed yer pictur' so far, but I've got some good news fer you: Bill Jinkins found yer left leg, Mart Wilkins is got a hunk o' yer back, Dan Jones found yer right arm, an' I understan' Jedge Mosely has been given a t'other arm, likewise yer right leg. All the pieces I seen fit ter gether good. What I wants ter know now is, how much will you give fer yer head?"

THE POET AND HIS PIPE.

Tennyson Grew Captious When Deprived of His Smoking Privileges.

Some of his friends taunted Tennyson that he could never give up tobacco. "Anybody can do that," he said, "if he chooses to do it." When his friends still continued to doubt and tease him, "Well," he said, "I shall give up smoking from tonight." The very same evening I was told that he threw his pipes and tobacco out of the window of his bedroom.

The next day he was most charming, though somewhat self-righteous. The following day he was moody and captious, the third day no one knew what to do with him. But after a disturbed night I was told that he got out of bed in the morning, went quietly into the garden, picked up one of his broken pipes, stuffed it with the remains of the tobacco scattered about and then, having had a few puffs, came to breakfast, all right again. Nothing was said any more about giving up tobacco.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The disaster to the Maine in the harbor of Havana resulted in as great a loss to the crew of that vessel as ever occurred in the most serious sea fights in which the navy of the United States has been engaged in the past. It may, however, prove to be only a forerunner of what is to be expected of naval engagements in the future, for the modern hull, constructed of steel plates, when they come in contact with modern projectile capable of such terrible damage as that which can be buried from a thirteen-inch gun, have nothing like the resisting qualities of the old wooden frigate and three-decker manof-war. Still, officers of the navy take pride in telling of what was accomplished by their predecessors in the old days, and do not hesitate to say that in a square fight, when they know what they have to meet, they can maintain the reputation of the navy in the past.

The greatest of all naval victories during the war of 1812 were not won on the high seas but on the fresh water lakes of Erie and Champlain. In the former battle for the first time in English history a British naval squadron struck its flag and surrendered to the enemy at discretion. The two fleets were as nearly equal as it was possible to get them. Both had been built on the lakes with great difficulty during the year 1812. The American fleet, commanded by Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry, then twenty-seven years old, was composed of nine vessels of 1,671 tons, with fifty-four guns, the principle of these a broadside of 928 pounds of metal, of which 288 pounds could be fired at long range. The Lawrence named after the unfortunate commander of the Chesapeake, was the flagship. It and the next vessel, the Niagara, were the heavier vessels, the other seven were of slight construction, without bulwarks, but armed with heavy long guns.

The British commander was Captain Barclay, one of Nelson's veterans, and he was perfectly confident of victory. Perry moved out of Put-in Bay on the morning of September 15, 1813, with his entire squadron. The fleets approached each other at about 11 o'clock. The bugle sounded from the British flagship and the men of the British line gave three cheers. The long guns of the Detriot opened on the Lawrence at a distance of a mile and a half. By noon the battle was in earnest. The Lawrence and Detroit were to the Detroit and the Lawrence the latter was reduced to a hulk. Perry took his flag, which bore as a motto Captain Lawrence's dying words, "Don't give up the ship," manned it and went to the front through the smoke and the volleys of the enemy to the Niagara, and, boisting his flag on that ship, renewed the combat.

Fortune now favored the American commander. The Queen Charlotte, carrying in her hull powder, fell afoul of the Detroit. The Niagara poured volley after volley into the entagled vessels, which the Kentucky riflemen in the rigging picked off every Britisher visible in either vessel. At 3 o'clock the British fleet surrendered. Perry sent a short account of the victory to the Secretary of the Navy, and then sent to General W. H. H. Harrison, commanding the land forces, the famous lines: "We have met the enemy and they are ours."

Commander McDonough's victory on Lake Champlain, won the following year, was almost as complete as Perry's. A British army advanced along the shores of the lake, accompanied by a squadron consisting of fourteen vessels, carrying eighty-four guns and about 850 men. The battle occurred on September 11, 1814, the British fleet came in sight, and by 8 o'clock the battle was on. Firing was begun by the Americans, who remained at anchor. The two vessels, the Saratoga and Confiance, Captain Downie's flagship, and the Saratoga, McDonough's fought a duel, lying about 300 yards apart. The first fire of the Confiance killed or wounded about forty men on the Saratoga, nearly a fourth of the entire force. The engagement became general. In an hour the whole starboard battery of the Saratoga was silenced. But McDonough had taken the precaution to lay hedges from her bows so that she could be winded. This being effected she was able to fight her other battery. The Confiance had suffered severely and Captain Downie had been killed. After an attempt to perform the evolution successfully carried out by the Saratoga, the battle ended at the end of two hours and a half of hard fighting, struck her flag. The remainder of the fleet was either taken or put to flight. The British loss was 200, exclusive of prisoners. The American lost 113 in killed and wounded. The British lost seventy-five of the ninety-five guns they brought into action McDonough replied to an English officer, who asked him how he had won the fight, by saying: "By hard fighting, sir."

SENATOR.

He Didn't Really Mean It.

A JOURNALISTIC PHENOMENA.

From over the hills and dales of Piscataway township comes a rumble from New Brunswick way that sounds like a peaceful trumpet. The rumbling echoes that from time immemorial the editor of the New Brunswick Home News and the editor of the New Brunswick Times have fought each other bitterly—been at dagger points, in fact—but today the white emblem of peace and goodwill waves triumphantly over the scene of the aged and acrid journalistic strife. And it all came about this way: The Times took upon itself the patriotic resolution of raising sufficient funds to erect some memorial mark for the brave New Brunswick boys who met their fate when the battleship Maine blew up in the Havana harbor. To the credit of New Brunswick people let it be said that they responded nobly and liberally to the appeal for funds, and today the amount raised for the purpose reaches almost a thousand dollars. It appears now that the Home News editor has some patriotic blood in his being—always had, no doubt—and yesterday The Times editor received a letter from his rival, donating $25 to the fund, one of the largest personal subscriptions received. The action of Editor Boyd is commendable under the circumstances, and in a way must "heap coals of fire" upon the conscience of The Times editor.

A CONSCIENTIOUS GOVERNOR.

Governor Voorhees has proved that whatever his ideas might have been before he was inducted into the office of chief executive of this commonwealth, those sentiments do not influence his official action in determining a matter upon which public sentiment is pretty well defined. The instance under observation is his signing the Squire bill embodying the ideas of county trolley as projected by Frank Bergen. In this particular section it is a well-known fact that while practicing law Governor Voorhees was closely identified as counsel with the company who are bending every energy to outwit the Bergen proposition, and his legal talent was devoted to the private capitalists' interest. Mr. Voorhees even went so far at one time in Westfield as to state that he considered that the Bergen proposition would never become a law, but now through the irony of political advancement and a conscientious mind Mr. Voorhees' own act brands his former sentiment as ill-timed and poorly said.

ELIZABETH'S CITY ELECTION.

Elizabeth—always a hot bed of politics—promises a Mayoralty campaign this spring of decided activity, but with an elimination of the disgraceful issues that entered into the election two years ago, when the present Mayor Rankin was accused of pretty nearly all the crimes on the calendar. Two years ago ex-Senator Marsh was the Democratic candidate against Mayor Rankin, but the latter won by a small majority. Mr. Rankin entered into the campaign for the express purpose of receiving a vindication at the polls, and he received it. Thus satisfied he will not be a candidate again this year. But Mr. Marsh will; in fact, is. His chances of election are much improved this spring. Though the Republican opponent has not yet been selected, it will probably be Dr. Mack. Mr. Marsh, however, has not a united party at his back. John T. Dunn is opposed to his election, and has made charges against his record in the Senate.

FIGHTING FOR TRADING STAMPS.

The men vitally interested in the profits accruing from the trading stamp business are not going to give up to the Legislative edict without taking advantage of every effort that will possibly prevent the suppression of the traffic. Tomorrow they will appeal to Governor Voorhees, at a hearing arranged for that purpose, to veto the bill. Prominent lawyers will bring their best argumentive talent to influence the Governor to nullify the measure passed by the Legislature. If the Governor lends only a deaf ear to their appeals, then the matter will be carried to the highest courts of the State in the endeavor to have the law declared unconstitutional. And meanwhile the thifty housewives will watch the contest with great interest and hopes of the same brand that fill the trading stamp promoters.

GIRLS AGAINST BOYS.

The athletic girls of Plainfield have demonstrated that the healthy exercise of basket ball can be played with due modesty and propriety among themselves, even though it attains considerable roughness and sometimes engenders a spirit of animosity not in keeping with good nature with the contests indulged in by the sterner sex. But the vigorous young women of Elizabeth go their Plainfield sisters, to use a sporting term, one better in the playing of the game. The fair contestants have met a team of young men and have conquered the older followers of the game. A veracious chronicler of the game says:

For a time the playing was spirited, the girls more than holding their ground with their sturdier adversaries. While many clever plays were made by the boys, the game was finally won by their opponents by a good goal amid much applause. As an example of physical development Elizabeth's young women are proud of themselves. Prouder still are their parents, who unhesitatingly declare athletics for girls about the proper thing.

Now there is a hint, as well as a precedent to urge them to follow it to the end, for the Plainfield young women of gymnastic abilities, to challenge a team of young men for a friendly game. From the performances the girls have already shown in passing, dodging and goal-throwing, as well as in all other details of the exercise, there is every reason to believe that they can make a creditable showing and add great glory to their achievements in the athletic world. Let the girls show their courage by issuing a challenge.

THE CURFEW BELL AGAIN.

Remembering the fruitless agitation of the good women of the Town Improvement Association for a curfew bell in this city, and the apparent popular sentiment displayed against it in the thought that the notion was too prudish and behind the times for Plainfield, the recommendation of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction at New York, submitted to the Legislature yesterday, proves interesting. In that report the superintendent strongly urges the enactment of a law that will bring about the curfew bell. The report says:

The curfew ordinance in many cities is attracting attention. Over three hundred cities and towns in the West have adopted the ordinance, which requires all children under fifteen years of age, unless accompanied by parents or guardians, or absent with leave, to be at home at 8 o'clock in the evening in the summer and at 8 o'clock in winter. The result has been a decrease of from 50 to 75 per cent. in the number of arrests of children. Kansas has had a reduction of from 50 to 100 per cent. in commitments of youths to reform schools. The curfew is opposed by those who consider it an infringement upon personal liberty, but it must be satisfied whether society and the State should not have the power to protect themselves against vicious tendencies in street education. Statistics tell us that there were 179,000 arrests of children under sixteen years of age

PUPILS' DEFECTIVE EYESIGHT.

The Orange school officials have been conducting the same kind of a medical examination of pupils that has been underway in Plainfield for the last few months, and with very much the same results. Dr. Thomas F. Phelan, the chief health inspector of the Board of Education, reports that twenty per cent. of the school children in Orange have defective eyesight. According to the doctor the condition is caused or enhanced by the improper manner in which the school rooms are lighted. The new report which tells of the examinations conducted in Orange does not state whether the examiners notify the parents of their children's defects, as has been done in all Plainfield cases, with the additional advice that they consult a physician to remedy the ills, but it would seem that such action would naturally be commended in good judgment.

HONORING TRADING STAMPS.

Hundreds of New Jersey housewives have been stirred to indignation since Friday over the action of the trading stamp companies in not honoring their coupons with the premiums offered, and none more so than the Plainfield women. The counsel for the New Jersey Retail Merchants' Association, which was instrumental in passing the anti-trading stamp bill, gives the opinion that the holders of the books of stamps can compel the merchants who gave the stamps to redeem them in accordance with their promise. He further says the trading stamp companies clearly avoid any responsibility to any one to redeem the stamps in any way, and that it is not unlikely that the merchants giving out the stamps will be proceeded against to oblige them to redeem the books.

SABBATH REFORM.

The first issue in each month of The Sabbath Recorder is to be a special Sabbath reform number. This change has been made since Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis took the editorship of The Recorder. This number will take the place of The Sabbath Outlook, a monthly publication, edited by Rev. Dr. Lewis, and considered one of the strongest publications of its kind published in the United States. The first of the Sabbath reform numbers of The Recorder will appear April 4th, and will touch on the Sabbath observance question that is now being agitated in this city.

WHAT WAR COSTS.

War is not such a fine thing as some of those who want it believe. "A war would make things hum," is the headline in a recent journal.

Would it? Let us see. During the civil war vast fortunes were made by those who staid at home and traded while the soldier boys went out and fought. Trade was lively; never so brisk, those who had things to sell to the government declared. It was all very fine, truly. The peddlers of shoddy and hard tack danced while the war lasted and when it was over they retired and let the people of the United States pay the piper. They have been paying him ever since. The government had left on its hands a huge lot of old iron that went to the junkshops, and thousands of horses, wagons and mules that were worth not a hundredth part of what they had cost.

At the beginning of the year 1861 the debt of the United States was less than $60,000,000. Aug. 1, 1865, it was $2,756,431,571. We have been paying that debt ever since, we the people of the United States. The lowest point it reached was in 1891, when it was $1,546,961,455. Then it began to ascend again until at the close of 1897 it had climbed to $1,808,777,643. Yet it has been 33 years since the war closed and we have been paying taxes to scale that debt down all this time. In interest we have paid it over and again. This interest, with the awful load of pensions that have to be paid because of the war, keeps the United States government so poor that in this land of plenty and prosperity it is frequently hard put to it to meet its expenses. We have made in this count no mention of the loss to the genuinely productive industries, those which add to the world's wealth, of the labor of each of the 4,000,000 of men on both sides who were fighting in that four years' war.

Do we want any more of that particular kind of "humming" in this country? No, we don't, not if we can help it honorably.

So far from being a benefit commercially in any sense war is the greatest of destroyers of real wealth, greater than all other agencies put together. For that reason millionaires and rich men turn cowards at the mention of a contest which will undoubtedly bring down the price of their vested interests. But rich cowards are as far wrong as the jingoes who want war because they have nothing to lose. If war cannot be escaped without dishonor, let us have it, and we will fight it to the victorious end like patriots who would give a hundred lives each for their country if they had them.

While congress was appropriating money for big battleships to be completed in four or five years it should in the place of at least two of them have ordered small fleets of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers. It has been known to all the world for the past half dozen years that torpedo fighting was the kind to which modern navies were tending. The coming of Spain's flotilla to the vicinity of our shores finds us without a single torpedo boat destroyer in our navy or anything that can be turned into one. In this respect Spain has a decided advantage in the beginning of hostilities.

In ordinary times the opposing political parties of this country appear ready to fly at each other's throats and eat each other. It is their way of amusing themselves. At the first signal of danger to the country, however, every difference vanishes and Republican, Democrat and Populist alike unite to uphold the hands of the president of this Union—may it live forever! The unanimity with which congress without regard to party supports President McKinley is the real sign of how Americans love their country.

The two new battleships Kearsarge and Kentucky, launched at Newport News, are among the most powerful naval vessels in the world. The great steel hull of one of these ships weighs 5,000 tons. They are sister battleships, built exactly alike. They would not be available in time for the war with Spain, however, if there were to be one soon. Modern wars do not last long, except the terrible system of murder system which Spain carries on in Cuba.

The old Pennsylvania railway station in Washington where Garfield was shot has witnessed many a thrilling scene, but few more dramatic than that presented on the arrival of Lieutenant Marix and his party when they brought to the capital and took it in carriage through the streets with their hands upon their loaded revolvers.

If the McKinley diplomacy shall be equal to the achievement of indirectly forcing Spain, apparently of her own accord, to let Cuba go, that, too, without war or without greatly hurting Spanish pride, it will have accomplished a splendid victory of statesmanship.

It was right that President McKinley should lay the full report of the Maine inquiry before congress and ask their help in this crisis. The president can depend on the common sense as well as the loyalty of both congress and the American people.

A flotilla is a fleet of small boats.

Schemers should not be blabbers.

LOYAL TO NETHERWOOD.

The movement of the Board of Trade looking toward changing of the name of Netherwood station to Belvidere Avenue station is meeting with decided opposition on the part of some of the wealthy residents of that portion of Plainfield. They have always been very particular that they live in Netherwood, which they prefer to characterize as a suburb of Plainfield rather than a part of it. While they have taken no action as yet, it is probable that they will start a petition asking the officials of the Jersey Central Railroad to allow the name to remain as it is.

RIGHTS OF THE CREED.

That pungent writer on Jersey themes, "Freeholder," in the New York Press, has this to say of the attempt to enforce Sunday observance in Plainfield:

It may be that the closing of all the stores in Plainfield Sunday is a restraint on religious liberty. There are several hundred Seventh Day Baptists in the northern section of Union county, and while they may have a wholesome veneration for their folk's Sunday, they are not required to observe it without the necessaries of life on the day when a majority of their neighbors abstain from the pursuits of business.

CITY OF THE FUTURE.

One of those rare souls who yet believe it possible to abolish poverty and make the human race healthy, handsome, comfortable and well behaved has a practicable plan for relieving the overcrowding of cities, equalizing the value of property therein and at the same time obtaining municipal revenues so ample that a low rate of taxation will be all that is needed.

Suppose, says the planner of the city of the future, that Chicago should purchase as a municipal investment a 10,000 acre tract of cheap land lying within 20 miles of its center. Such lands there are at a very moderate price in the vicinity of all the large cities. Then let the municipal authorities divide the tract into city blocks and lots, pitting streets through with sewers, gas, water and electric lights and convenient and pretty parks at frequent intervals.

The next step would be for the city to connect this new suburb by rapid transit with the heart of the old town, whether by steam or electric road, in the way that was most effective. Let then the city lease to a householder for a small sum, say $15 to $25 a year, one of the newly laid out town lots. The householder could erect upon the ground such building as he pleased, and all the rent it would cost him would be the moderate sum paid to the city in perpetuo for use of the land. Or if the householder were too poor to build his own home, as is usually the case with the city dweller, landlords could easily lease the ground from the city and erect single houses or flat buildings thereon and rent them to tenants precisely as such buildings are now rented. There would be no difference, however. The rent to the tenant would be cheaper because the city owned the ground.

Another admirable point in the scheme is that transportation on the city's rapid transit line should be free. This would do away with the vast expense of ticket sellers, gates and collectors and facilitate getting upon and off trains rapidly. The sum charged for the rent of building sites could easily be made to cover the expenses of the rapid thoroughfares.

The result would be that a new and finer Chicago would quickly be built adjoining the old one. Everybody would want to live in it. The enormously inflated values of properties in the thickly populated part of the city would decline rapidly. The aims of reformers like Henry George would be peaceably and quietly attained without doing wrong to anybody.

The performances in New York by of the submarine torpedo boat invented by Mr. Holland have been so remarkable as to attract general attention. The vessel is lowered or raised in the water by means of metal ballast and compressed air. It is designed to move along under water till it comes beneath a ship. Then a torpedo is launched, and so soon as the small under sea craft is from 60 to 100 feet away the torpedo is exploded and the ship is blown into fragments as the Maine was in Havana harbor. The boat at the surface of the water looks like a raft. A flat surface and low turret are all that are visible. By manipulation the bow of the boat begins to sink in water, then the middle, then the stern, until the raft entirely disappears from sight. A release of compressed air under the water enables the crew to breathe comfortably, and they are supplied with electric lights. The inventor of the Holland submarine torpedo boat will exhibit it to the governments of Europe as a commercial enterprise.

PRICE OF STONE WALKS AND CURBING RAISED.

STONE CUTTERS IN A COMBINE.

Competition Has Reached the Point Where There is Little Profit for Contractors.

An informal meeting of the stone cutters of Plainfield was held Monday in the office of John McIntyre, North avenue. There were present John Lannon, Michael Powers, A. Kane and Harvey Whitemore. It was practically decided at the meeting to raise the price of laying stone walks and curbing. Most any price is now charged, but the usual rate is from 48 to 50 cents per foot.

It is the intention of the dealers to raise the price a few cents but not enough to bring outside dealers into the city. Next Thursday evening a regular meeting will be held and the scale of prices will be determined upon. In the meantime all contracts made will be carried out at the old prices. J. T. Vail was not present at the meeting, but sent word that he would agree to the change.

PASSING COMMENT.

Gov. Voorhees and other members of the board of pardons visited the State Prison Monday last and they questioned a number of the prisoners who had applied for pardons, paroles or investigations of sentence, so as to be able to act in reference to the many cases before the board.

Among the number question was a man who had been in the United States service, and who appeared to be bright, active and very anxious to get out.

Gov. Voorhees talked to this man and was quite impressed with his statement of his case, and finally suggested to him that the navy was in need of men to man one of its war vessels, and asked him if he would enlist in case he were pardoned.

"Aboard what vessel," asked the prisoner.

"The monitor Montauk," said the Governor. "They wish to take her from the League Island navy yard to Portland, Me. Would you like to go?"

"No sir," exclaimed the prisoner. "I know what the Montauk is. I'd rather stay in State Prison."

Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Seventh street, has returned after a sojourn at Palm Beach, Fla. While stopping there Mr. Ackerman tried his hand at shark fishing and captured one of the heaviest of that species of the finny tribe that has been taken at Palm Beach. Mr. Ackerman fished off the end of a long pier which reached out into the ocean several hundred feet. After he had hooked his sea's monster, it took fifteen men to hold the line. After a half hour's fighting, the shark was finally beached. It measured eight feet in length and weighed about five hundred pounds. Mr. Ackerman brought home the head and jaws of the fish which are so large that he can place his own head and shoulders inside the month.

Manager Maze Edwards, of Stillman Music Hall, has returned a good paying contract for Good Friday night as he has decided that there will not be any threatrical performance in Plainfield that night. He is to be commended for such action. He hopes in another year to have no performances at all Holy Week.

MUSICAL SURPRISERS.

A Delightful Social Visit Received Unexpected by Joe Hawkins.

The birthday surprise tendered to Joseph M. Hawkins, of LaGrande avenue, last Monday, was complete and the guests to the number of about twenty-five enjoyed themselves immensely. At first, Mr. Hawkins was unable to account for the assemblage of people but he soon grasped the situation and joined heartily in making the affair successful. During the evening, Councilman Will N. Runyon sang a number of favorite selections. Frank O. Bristol was another favorite, and gave several recitations and impersonations. Arthur and Clinton Mosher, of Brooklyn, cousins of Mr. Hawkins, delighted the audience with selections on the violin and piano. The music throughout the evening was a rare treat for all. At the close of the entertainment a delightful supper was served. Mr. Hawkins received the hearty congratulations of his friends for many happy returns of the event celebrated.

—W E MacClyment will not leave the First Presbyterian church until May 1st.

—The bids for the new supply of coal for the public schools will be opened at the meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education Monday evening.

Get More and You Get Less

Why is it every sarsaparilla which tries to sell itself, ranges itself against Ayer's as the standard? Why is it that all have to offer extra inducements — bigger bottles, fancy wrappers, cheaper price — anything, everything, but the one inducement of quality?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

has never been equaled by any cheap imitation of it, and quality tells, just as blood tells.

It is the Standard.

"I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla for more than twenty-five years, and have never heard anything but words of praise from my customers; not a single complaint has ever reached me. A preparation must possess great merit to maintain such a reputation. I believe your sarsaparilla to be the best blood purifier that has ever been introduced to the general public. I often hear other manufacturers say that this is "as good as Ayer's," but no one ever yet heard it said that Ayer's was "as good" as any other kind. They always set Ayer's up as the standard of excellence."—S. F. Bowes, Duluth, Minn.

IN A STRANGE LAND THEY WERE DESERTED

Pitiable Condition of a Young Married Couple.

CARED FOR BY CHIEF GRANT

TEARFUL AND DISCONSOLATE THEY STROLLED AIMLESSLY ABOUT.

Henry Euler's Father Persuaded Himself and Wife to Find Them Work in His Perambulations; But Sunday Morning He Left Them Penniless at Benner's Roadhouse—Chief Grant Raised Enough Money to Send the Girl Wife Home—Young Husband Will Try to Sell His Horse and Wagon.

Deserted by an unnatural father, Henry Euler and his young wife wandered about the streets of Plainfield in the rain, tearful and disconsolate, Sunday. Without funds or friends they had abandoned all hope and helplessly awaited the course of events But Plainfield has a kind-hearted Chief of Police. He gave them lodging in the city jail and then raised sufficient funds to send the young wife back to her home in Philadelphia.

Henry Euler was formerly employed as a clerk in a store in Philadelphia. He was twenty-one years of age. Last June he married a young German girl of the same city who was two years his junior. Euler's father is a traveling vender of fancy baskets. He travels about the country with his stock in trade in a little wagon. Several months ago, young Euler lost his position through illness. He recovered but was unable to find work. When his father started out several days ago, he persuaded the young couple to come along in a little one horse gig, promising to find work for Henry.

Saturday night the little party put up at Benner's roadhouse on South avenue. Early Sunday morning the elder Euler departed with his wagon, leaving the couple behind. When the young people discovered his departure they were heartbroken. They came to Plainfield where they were found by Chief Grant and allowed lodging in the jail. They spent the night there while the Chief raised sufficient money to send the girl wife home. She went on the 8:44 train Monday. Euler will sell his horse and cart if possible. If not, he will drive home.

Death of a Baby.

Sunday morning occurred the death of Susie May Graves, six-weeks old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Graves, of Liberty street. Death was due to pneumonia. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 from the house and the interment was in Evergreen cemetery, Plainfield avenue.

Law Firm Dissolved.

Articles of dissolution of the partnership of McNabb & Clark, attorneys at law, were signed Saturday to take effect at once. Charles J. McNabb will occupy the offices of the late firm in the Marsh building, while Robert M. Clark, the junior partner, will move to the Dunham offices on East Front street, over Schwed's clothing store, April 1st.

Baptized at St. Mary's.

Last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at St. Mary's R. C. church the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William Feiring, of East Front street, was baptized by Rev. Father Smyth. Miss Margaret Rafferty and Frank Blatz stood up with the parents. The name given to the young son is Francis Clifford Feiring

GREAT SOPRANO HEARD

MME. CATHERINE HILKE THE STAR ATTRACTION IN A CONCERT.

She Has a Powerful Voice of Great Compass and Sweetness—Other Participants Pleased the Audience Present

Mme. Cather n Hilke, the well known soprano from New York, was the star attraction at the entertainment given by the Athletic Club of the New Jersey Military Academy in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Saturday evening. There were other attractions on the programme, however, that made the entertainment altogether a very delightful one. The threatning weather kept many away, but the hall was comfortably filled. The Stars and Stripes were largely used in the decoration of the hall, giving it a very patriotic appearance.

Mme. Hilke appeared three times and was well received on each occasion. Her selections were the waltz song. "Romeo and Juliet," and "Blue Bell" and "Spring's Awakening." The last was particularly adapted to her powerful voice and showed its reach and sweetness.

The opening instrumental trio by Lindley M. Hillman, violin, Walter Serrell, flute, and W. E. MacClymont, piano, was of particular excellence. The banjo duet, "Berkeley March," by Fred G. Smith and Fred VanEps, was well received and the audience demanded an encore. Two encores were demanded to the banjo solo by VanEps.

The reader of the evening, Miss Annie D. Cooper, of Westfield, found favor with the audience at once. "Behind the Curtain," her first selection, was delightfully funny. "Nell" was of a more sober character but was well given.

The second part of the entertainment consisted of a lecture by L. Jay Tompkins, of the University of New York, on "The Early Essayists." Mr. Tompkins was thoroughly conversant with his subject. Although he had no time to go deeply into the subject, he enlarged on such parts as seemed the most important and told all with a clearness and ease that made him an interesting speaker.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB AFFAIR.

Successful Sale of Sweet Things on Saturday Evening.

A very successful cake and candy sale was held last Saturday afternoon and evening at the Young Woman's Club, corner of Watchung avenue and Fifth street. The rooms were prettily decorated in a tasteful manner which made them appear attractive. During the afternoon and evening there were many callers and everything was disposed of before the hour of closing. Tea and chocolate were also served and a large number availed themselves of the opportunity of indulging.

Those in charge of the sale were Mrs. H. Bigelow, Jr., Miss Clawson, Miss Oakley, Mrs. Stiles and Miss Stiles, and they were assisted by many others who are interested in the welfare of the club. The proceeds from the sale will be used to further the interests of the club.

Something in a Name.

The past reputation guarantees the future. It takes years of excellence in any manufacture to win a name, and it is won through public confidence in the article manufactured The Fischer piano, as an instrument of the highest grade, has founded its reputation and record upon its acknowledged merits. Its name is a guarantee of perfection in tone, action, staying-in-tune power, workmanship and durability. A statement made, without foundation in fact, will mislead. Facts prove all that can be said about the Fischer piano. It is the result of practical, skilled workmanship, and the best materials. These have made its name, and its name is its guarantee in the future as it has been in the past. The Fischer pianos have merited and received the endorsement of artists, musicians and musical people everywhere. Since many over 103,000 Fischer pianos have been the output of their manufactories, it will readily be seen that there is something in a name.

A Missionary Address.

It was missionary Sunday in Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school Sunday, and an interesting and instructive address was delivered by Rev. A. S. VanDyke, at one time a missionary to China. The amount raised in the school for missions during the year was $116, an increase over last year, in the face of over $600 that the school had also raised for the recent church improvements.

Methodist Officers.

The annual election of trustees of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel last Monday. The polls were open from eight o'clock to nine. P. M. French and G. M. Rittenhouse were re-elected trustees and John Corey was elected trustee in the place of George R. Cornwell, who has left Plainfield

HOME MISSIONS MAKE A GLORIOUS NATION

What They Are Doing to Build Up the Country.

HEARD BY CHURCH PEOPLE

CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED TO BUY A MISSIONARY WAGON.

Rev. Charles W. Shelton, a Field Secretary, Told of the Work, That is Being Done by the Missionaries in the Western States—Home Missions Do Much Toward Solving the Problems of Ignorance and Immigration—Western Missionaries are Recruited From the Flower of the Clergy in the Eastern States.

The Congregational church observed Sunday as home missionary day, and in spite of the exceedingly damp atmosphere, the three services held were very pleasant and interesting ones. At the morning service, the desk was draped with a handsome American flag, and the stirring and eloquent address delivered by Rev. Charles W. Shelton, field secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, was of especial fitness at this day of interest in National affairs. "What have home missions done for our country, and what are they doing now?" might be taken as the subject of his talk, which considered the problems lying before our Nation, such as the problem of ignorance, the problem of immigration, and the problem of the city, and told what home mission work was doing to solve them. Mr. Shelton was a clear, logical, and forceful speaker, and fully informed upon his subjects. At the conclusion of his address a generous offering was made for the work of home missions.

In the afternoon the Sunday school held its annual missionary session. The school contributes regularly to both home and foreign missions, and reports from the various stations to which contributions had been sent were read. The offering was for the purchase of a wagon for a home missionary in Dakota, and more than the required sum was raised.

Mr. Shelton was present and told something of the uses to which such a wagon would probably be put. Collecting wheels, for the support of the missionary navy used by the American Board in the work among the Micronesian Islands, were distributed among the children of the school, who were each directed to obtain from their friends and friends the coins, amounting to $1, which would fill the wheel.

In the evening, instead of the usual Christian Endeavor meeting, Mr. Shelton gave an informal talk on "A Home Missionary at Home." He described life in a missionary home and the varied work that falls to the share of the missionary and his wife. Mr. Shelton dwelt on the fact that our home missionaries are not men whose ability is so small that they cannot find positions elsewhere, but that they are usually recruited from the flower of the eastern clergy. Neither do they consider themselves objects for pity, but think their position one of the highest privilege.

GIVEN BY HOME TALENT.

A Pleasing Musicale Held in Monroe Avenue M. E. Church.

A very pleasing musicale was given in the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Saturday evening before an appreciative audience. The church was well filled. While the different selections that composed the programme were given by home talent, they were well rendered and heartily enjoyed. Those taking part in the musicale were Miss Margaret Meredith, soprano; Miss Julia Jermain Ketcham, contralto; Augustus Rose, baritone; Joseph Sattels and Arthur Mosher, violinists; Miss Clyde B. Burnett, pianist. Stephen Haff acted as accompanist.

The programme consisted of two parts of five numbers each, which were all received with loud applause.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, O., by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

AN AGED FRIEND DEAD.

JUSTUS C. HAVILAND PASSES AWAY AFTER FOUR SCORE OF YEARS.

He was an Influential Elder in the Society of Friends—Had Resided Here for Nine Years Where He was Respected.

In the death of Justus C. Haviland, aged eighty years, of Sandford avenue, the Society of Friends loses a valuable member and Plainfield a citizen of rare worth Mr. Haviland resided in this city for nine years. He moved here from Poughkeepsie, where he was a prosperous farmer. He was born at Bethlehem, Orange county, N. Y., and was the son of Prince Haviland, of that place.

Mr. Haviland's death was due to chronic gastritis from which he suffered intensely for several years past. He held the position of elder in the Society of Friends and was active in a quiet way in all branches of the society. A wife, two sons and two daughters survive him One son is postmaster at Bellefontaine, O., while the other son has charge of the Homer Ramsdell Transportation Company at Newburgh-on-the-Hudson. Miss Haviland and Mrs. Justus H. Cooley, daughters, reside in this city.

PROSPEROUS LOAN ASSOCIATION.

A Local Financial Institution Closes Another Successful Year.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association was held last Monday, when the following officers were elected: President, L. E. Barkalew; vice-president, Henry Liefke; treasurer, W. R Codington; secretary, B. F. Cortell; finance committee, W. A. Woodruff James P. Homan, Jacob Voehl; auditing committee, Henry Liefke, Louis Klein, Jacob Voehl; board of directors, L. E Barkalew, Henry Liefke, W. R. Codington, B. F. Cortell, Louis Klein, Jacob Voehl, James P. Homan, W. A. Woodruff, C. H. Rugg, J. E. Flannery, E. W. Titsworth, John Hickey. W. R. Codington was appointed solicitor for the association.

The annual report was presented and showed the association to be in a sound financial condition. There are now five series in excellent running order, and the coming year promises to be one of the best in the history of the association.

THEY KNEW HOW TO ENTERTAIN.

Royal Arcanamites Had a Fine Time Among Themselves.

The members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, met last Monday and enjoyed a programme of music and recitations prepared by the entertainment committee. The recitations were given by Orator R. C. Baker, while F. S. Green entertained the members with some popular selections on the bones. Fred Smith, the popular banjo player, also entertained the audience with several selections. He was accompanied on the piano by Arthur Freeman. The last part of the programme consisted of excellent speeches by the members, who knew how to tell good stories. This Council is noted for giving its members a good time, and next Monday evening the programme will be very elaborate. This will be the last entertainment given until next fall, and all the members are asked to be present.

COP CANDIDATES.

Numerous Applicants for One Vacancy on Police Force.

There is now one vacancy in the police force of this city and there are six men who are all anxious to fill it A meeting of the Police Board was held last week when the candidates appeared before the members of the Board. They were all unknown to the members at the Board. They will be given the usual examination for fitness, and the selection will be made in the same manner as in the civil service.

His Eighty-sixth Anniversary.

Last Saturday Isaac P. Brown, of Watchung avenue, a prominent member of the Asbestos Club, celebrated the eighty sixth anniversary of his birthday. The members of the above-named club entertained Mr. Brown at their rooms on Front street in an appropriate manner. Mr. Brown looks well and hearty and he received the congratulations of all his friends.

Used a Cowhide.

An exciting incident was witnessed on Arlington avenue, near West Fourth street, Monday afternoon, when two colored women engaged in a quarrel over their husbands, and one of the disputants cowhided the other.

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and consequently am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the large portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am Yours respectfully,

THE ASBESTOS CLUB.

By Cornelius A. Leveridge.

It is but a few years that this association of well-known residents of our city have been known as the Asbestos Club. Prior to such limited organization its membership represented individually, varied and substantial interests in this growing city.

When we contemplate the genealogy of the four generations of early settlers that are numbered with the dead, and the original natives who roamed through these forests, who either disposed of their lands by purchase or forfeited them by sequestration and the fifth generation that lingers in neighborhood distances on the sides of highway, who find only here and there a few companions of their youth, while thousands have passed to the unknown, since this place was originally a settled community, we are circumscribing in brevity a vast amount of local and individual history. Of these early settlers we are just to say of them—that they were gentlemen of stalwart presence, sturdy and dignified in their demeanor, and affable in social intercourse. Many possessed with superior executive ability, and in all business relations manifesting sound judgment which made their opinion widely respected.

It was in the fall of the year of 1848 when the writer of this article became acquainted with this locality. Having been for a time in the capacity of a medical student on an island where yellow fever was prevalent—but without personal fear—yet he was forced to leave and directed to the mountains, but finally returning made the hostelry of old Abram Laing his stopping place—where now stands the magnificent monument of the enterprising and philanthropic merchant and inventor—the late Geo. H. Babcock. He found the little hamlet then contained about 1800 inhabitants, and surrounded by well kept farms with fine orchards and stocked with abundance of cattle. The roads were kept in good order, and in the pleasant evenings, equestrian and lovers of fine horses resorted from the cities to the many routes through this pleasant valley.

It was a frequent and familiar drive to the well known hostelry, and the landlord being manorborn, knew the finest drives and was versed with many local incidents and peculiar habits of the people. Upon one occasion, while on a visit to these pleasant surroundings, the writer was surprised by being accosted by an unusual shrill voice and a one eyed squinted face, whose possessor proved to be the sole and only real estate agent of the locality. Having in remembrance the farms that were advertised in the city papers by this enterprising gentleman, and the blunt way he introduced his business, saying: "Young man would you like some acres herebouts," it dawned upon him at once that this was the enterprising advertiser of farms, and the well known real estate agent, Steven Vail, with his well known buggy and cream colored horse, ready to show up the whole country.

The offer could not be resisted, and the first offer was sixty acres for $8 5 0 on very "easy terms," belonging to the late Benjamin Stelle, upon part of which now stands the First Baptist church. At this time few lots were selling, but the New York market was having its influence upon adjacent New Jersey and small parcels were increasing into lot prices, and in my visits to the office of the then only lawyer, late Cornelius Boice, I found much of the transfers of both farm and lot property fell into his hands. This well known and highly-respected lawyer died September 16, 1864. About the year 1863 there was an unfortunate railroad accident near the adjacent town of Westfield. Among the injured was the late Martin M. Thorn, who then made daily trips to New York city. This occurrence compelled him to give up his business in New York, and he subsequently opened a small office near the corner of Park avenue and West Front street for the transaction of real estate and money loans on mortgage. His desk stood in the centre of the office and two long slab benches each side were the daily resting places for the many local investors and those interested in real estate and the loaning of money. The mention of this incident rallies at once to the minds of the frequenters of the now well known Asbestos Club, the incipient stages of the blade, the ear, and coin in the ear of the present organization. As they did then, so they do now—buying, selling, loaning, and borrowing on bond and mortgage. The daily habits are not confined to mere social assembly, but in their rooms on East Front street, over the Dime Savings Bank, brokers, lawyers, business men and occasionally a clergyman can be seen as frequent recipients of the club's hospitalities.

A transition of farms into lots and a hamlet into a city found a population of 7,000 people in 1869, the year of incorporation, and now estimated about 19,600 souls, including the borough. Such is the representation in a few years of the life and enterprise of a few denizens of a land office, and the dignity of a well-founded necessity—the Asbestos Club.

In 1873 a fire burnt the building occupied by Mr. Thorn and for a few days he occupied an office on Park avenue, and again being burned out he moved to North avenue opposite the railroad depot. He was very popular at large and quite so with his friends, who were daily with him in his office. If it was an inquiry for old John Simpson for instance—"You'll find him at Thorns." It was this well remembered and much loved of our number, who, in 1882 suggested we share the rent with Mr. Thorn. Then it was the back room was fitted for our express use. And daily could be found there Martin M. Thorn, Jasper G. Gadmus, Theodore A. Gillies, Levi Hetfield, H. P. Bronk, Ben F. Harriott, C. S. A. Davis, John Simpson, Jeremiah Manning, Daniel Marshall, J. B Clever, G. W. Rockafellow, William Hagg Jr., W. F. Markley, P. O. Button, James Brand, George H. Burgess, John Jones, Stebbias Martin, Capt. B. T. DePue, Lewis F. Wadsworth, Andrew Vanderbeek.

After the death of Mr. Thorn in California Mr. Markley occupied the rooms for some time, and the club continued to hire the rear, but subsequently moved to Love's building on Watchung and North avenues, and in about three years took the hall recently vacated by the Y. M. C. A. over the Dime Savings Bank, East Front street, which are neatly fitted expressly for their use. Daily the rooms are opened from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. and now number some of the oldest and respected representative residents of this city.

The following are the present members: James Merritt, Isaac Brown, A. B. Dunlap, C. A. Leveridge, Andrew Love, Wm. C Ayers, Wm. Campbell, F. B Stevens, John Ross, Col. John Johnson, Wm. H Brower, Noah W. Pike, Wm. H. Stanbery, Major Gen. W. E. Long, R. H. Cook, W. R. Cosgrove, Asa Collier, W. W. Cortell, B. Cosgrove, Harvey Moore, Frank M. Bacon, Henry D. Paul and others.

Hastily comprehending in a few facets the brevity this article is intended to convey, it will be readily seen that it has been condensed, and no effort put forth to make it in any sense more than a skeleton of history mention in connection with the names of both living and dead, and a pleasant reminder and memory of those former friends whom so many now past three score must soon follow to the great unknown.

SPREADING THE GOSPEL.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF A BAPTIST SOCIETY.

Record of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society Shows it to Have Accomplished Much for Christian Cause.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church was celebrated in a fitting manner Friday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. The rooms and platform were very prettily decorated with flowers, while an excellent likenness of the late Mrs. W. C. Butler, who, for twenty-one years, was president of the society, was given a prominent place over the platform.

Miss Linda Butler, president of the society, presided and at the opening made a few remarks concerning the society and its growth. However, the historical sketch of the society was presented by five different members who gave five years each. The society was organized in April, 1873, and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, who has always held the office of first vice-president, gave the report for the first five years. The officers of the society at that time were: President, Mrs. W. C. Butler; vice-presidents, Mrs. T. R. Howlett, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Theodore French; recording secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve; treasurer, Mrs. E. W. Runyon. Of these officers it has been said that they had great staying power. As stated above, Mrs. Butler held the office of president for twenty-one years, which was up to the time of her death. For two years afterward Mrs. D. J. Yerkes acted as president until Miss Linda Butler was selected for the position which she now holds. Mrs. B. J. Shreve has always held the position of secretary, and Mrs. Daniel Sohen that of a position as a member of the board of managers. Mrs Alex. Thorn, Miss Anna White, Mrs. Charles Smith have always held the positions of collectors for the society.

The second five years was reported by Mrs. S. T. Wilson. During this period the contributions reached the high-water mark. In each year nearly $1,000 was received. Among other large gifts was one of $100 given by Charles K. Francis in memory of his mother, Mrs. Hannah C. Francis, one of the founders of the first Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies in New York. He still continues to give $100 each year. In the third period, which was presented by Mrs. Bleeker, of Orange, there were many deaths. Among them were Mrs. Peter Balen, Mrs. French, Mrs. Manning Stelle and Mrs. Elston Marsh. During this period many annual gifts were started and are continued until this day. At this time the women of the Park Avenue Baptist church formed a foreign missionary society and withdrew from the above church society. Mrs. Geo. H. Batchelor presented the report for the fourth period, during which the Gold Dust Band was formed. The most notable work of the society occurred at this time when it decided to support Miss Ida Fay as a medical missionary in India. Mrs. Alfred Berry, Mrs. Isabella Sleight, Mrs. L. W. Serrell and Mrs. J. W. Vail died during this period. Mrs. B. J. Shreve presented the report for the last five years and her paper showed a decided progress in the work of the society. At present there are 80 life members and 61 collectors. There have been 75 visits from missionaries and 300 letters received.

Mrs. Reuben Knox, treasurer, presented her report, showing the whole amount received during the past twenty five years to be $18,560.97, and $1,525 has been received as memorial funds. On the side of disbursements $200 was appropriated for missions. Of this amount $75 supported two native girls in Japan. Two Bible women have also been supported, one in China and another in Burmah.

During the afternoon Mrs. Pettit, of Elizabeth, made a few remarks, and congratulations were extended by Mrs. Milliken from the Crescent Avenue church, and Mrs. Scribner from the Park Avenue Baptist church; also Mrs. Morgan Taylor, a member of the society in Colorado.

Interspersing the above there were recitations by Beulah VanWinkle, Jerry Manning, Jessie Clawson and Wallace Pierce, and a vocal solo by Miss Bessie Blair, accompanied by Mrs. H. E. Rider.

After the meeting tea and wafers were served by members of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society. Mrs. G. A. Chapman, Mrs. I. H. Biglow, Jr., and Mrs. Lowry poured tea.

The officers of the society for the ensuing term are, President, Miss Linda Butler; vice-presidents, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mrs. S. T. Wilson, Mrs. Wm. White; secretary, Mrs. B. J. Shreve; treasurer, Mrs. Reuben Knox. The society starts another year with exceedingly bright prospects for success.

Councilman's Frost to Go to Europe.

George H. Frost, former councilman, has rented his house on Watchung avenue, through the agency of Mulford & Son., to J. M. Dryden, of West Seventh street, for two years. Mr. Frost and his family will take up their residence in London. They will also travel considerably.

New Organist Engaged.

At a meeting of the music committee of the First Presbyterian church, held Thursday, it was decided to secure the services of the well-known composer and organist, Frederick Schilling, for the coming year.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL OFFICERS.

J. W. Jackson Chosen Superintendent by the Methodists.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel last Friday. The membership now amounts to nearly 400. while $250 were devoted to missionary purposes during the past year.

The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: Superintendent, James W. Jackson; secretary, James A. Stafford; treasurer, Arthur E. Crone; librarian, L. M. Dunavan. Dr. N. Y. Hull resigned from the secretaryship after a long period of faithful service and his assistant was elected to fill his place.

The missionary society of the Sunday-school held its election, which resulted as follows: President, S. A. Bingaman; vice-president, J. R. Joy; secretary and treasurer, Arthur E. Crone.

Maria Took a Drop too Much.

Maria Matthews, colored, of Race street, imbibed too freely Thursday afternoon while calling on some friends in the borough. She became so noisy and troublesome that it was found necessary to send for Chief Wilson and have the woman arrested. She was given a hearing later in the afternoon, and Justice Crosley gave her a choice between $15 and thirty days. She took the days.

To Enlarge His Restaurant.

J. H. McVey, of North avenue, has leased from D. I. Roberts, the store adjoining his restaurant recently occupied by Gee Wah, the Chinese laundryman, and will use the place in connection with his restaurant. The store has been leased for five years and is now being made suitable for the purpose for which it was leased.

ATHLETIC GIRLS IN LIVELY BASKET BALL.

Nearly Two Hundred People Witness the Game.

CHANCE FOR ROUGH PLAY.

BUT THE FAIR PARTICIPANTS ACTED WITH DUE MODESTY.

The Game Played Without Dividing Lines, Which was a New Departure for the Third Class Team and They Found the Game Harder to Play That Way—Juniors Played a Snappy Game and Did Some Accurate Passing—Game was Close—Juniors Won by One Point—Players and the Score

Basket ball, as played by the girls of the Plainfield High School, was again demonstrated to be a decidely popular game. The teams from the Junior and Third classes met in the gymnasium of the Girls' Athletic Association of the High School in the Whittier building Friday afternoon, and played a very interesting game. Nearly 200 people witnessed the game from the side lines. The play was close throughout and the Juniors won only by one point, the score being 10 to 9.

The game was played without the dividing lines. While the Juniors have always played that way, it was a new departure for the Third class team, and they found the game harder to play. While there was nothing immodest or rough in that way of playing the game, it did not appeal to the spectators as much as the game with dividing lines. It also opened the way for harder and rougher play.

It was, nevertheless, a very interesting contest. The Junior girls played a snappy game and did some accurate passing. They had been taught by their coach to play a more offensive game than the other teams and used their arms as well as their bodies in interfering with the progress of their opponents. The change in the manner of playing the game rather handicapped the Third class girls.

The score at the end of the first half was 3 to 6 in favor of the Juniors. Twelve minute halves were played. the teams lines up as follows:

JUNIORS.		THIRD CLASS.
M. Stirling	right forward	B. Miner
E. Krom	left forward	E. Pearson
J. Pruden	centre	K. Moore
S. Conant	right guard	M. Stewart
E. Demarest	left guard	H. Maxson

George Procter Smith acted as referee. The umpires were Miss Walter, Miss Jones and Miss Burdette Morse. C. E. A. Heywood acted as timer.

A VARIED PROGRAMME.

Ladies' Aid Society Arranged the Affair in a Successful Way.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Church of Disciples of Christ gave an entertainment in the church last evening.

The programme was composed of recitations by Beulah VanWinkle, Mabel Hand, Helen Woolley, Mrs. Ross; character song by six little girls; a dialogue, "A Postal Card," by Percy Davis, Miss Mabel VanMiddleworth, Miss Ella Fenner, Miss Anna Fenner and Mrs. Woolley; songs by the Misses DeMott, accompanied by Miss DeMott on the zither; a dialogue, "Burying Cæsar," Lloyd VanMiddleworth and Percy Hand; piano selection, Miss Mabel Thompson.

The last number on the programme was a dialogue entitled "Hannah's Visit to Boston, or the Boating Cure," which was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Woolley and John Staats.

Pastor Johnston Remembered.

The members of the Junior Epworth League of Grace Methodist Episcopal church met in the church Friday afternoon and enjoyed themselves with an excellent programme of songs and recitations. The affair was arranged for the benefit of Pastor Johnston and his wife, who will soon leave the church. The little folks acquitted themselves with credit under the direction of Mrs. A. A. Taft, superintendent of the league. After the rendition of the programme Pastor Johnston was agreeably surprised by a present from the league of a valuable and handsome book. Mr. Johnston thanked the donors for the expression of kindness and good will shown.

A Birthday Surprise.

A birthday surprise party was tendered to Mrs. Fred G. Welsh, of South avenue and Berekman street, Thursday when thirty of her friends called at the house and took her completely by surprise. Dancing and games were indulged in, and several selections were given on a phonograph by Whitney Frazee. Mrs. Welsh received many presents, including a handsome lamp from Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America. Music for dancing was furnished by Bert Naylor.

Business Block Sold.

Ira L LaRue, the real estate dealer, has sold for G. W. Force, the Park avenue business block now occupied by Schleif, the baker. The purchaser is Rev. J. P. Taylor, of Park avenue. Mr. LaRue has also sold for the Peter Wooden estate a lot on Somerset street to Vito Peraro.

WILD FLIGHT OF A TEAM

A CRASH NEAR WASHINGTONVILLE RESULTS IN A LAW SUIT.

Two Farmers Mixed Up on Their Way to and From Plainfield—Farmer Rebman Claimed Moffett was to Blame.

It was never intended that the public roads belonged to any one person. That is what Will Rebman, a young farmer from Mt. Bethel, contends and is determined to support in a court of law.

The trouble that brought about this stand on the part of Farmer Rebman occurred Thursday afternoon, on the road to Washingtonville. David Moffett was the principle character in the little occurance and is now the defendent in the law-suit that Rebman had started.

Last Thursday, Moffett left his home near Basking Ridge in his heavy spring wagon, drawn by his frisky team of bays. They came to Plainfield and here Moffett made a number of purchases. It is said that he purchased and made way with more strong drink than was good for him. At any rate, something went to his head and rather befogged his brain.

Moffett's team went galloping down the road through the Gap to Washingtonville without regard to the passing vehicles. The horses soon got beyond control of Moffett, who was driving and made their own way through mud and over rocks. Now Will Rebman had harnessed his grey mare to his light spring wagon and started to drive his wife and sister to Plainfield. They reached Washingtonville without misadventure. Then they spied Moffett's bays coming down the road on the run. Rebman claims that he did his best to avoid the approaching team Moffett is not of that opinion.

At any rate, there was a crash. Moffett's heavy vehicle struck the side of the Mt. Bethel farmer's wagon and upset it, throwing the occupants out The shafts and wheels were wrecked and the light wagon generally demoralized. The women were badly frightened by their sudden plunge into the mud of the roadside, but escaped without serious injury.

Now, according to the story that Rebman tells, Moffett behaved in a very disorderly manner. He is said to have sworn at the young farmer and his wrecked wagon, and to have insulted the other occupants of the disabled rig.

Rebmap was very indignant and appealed at once to Justice Speer for redress. He wanted to have Moffett arrested on the charge of using profane language and for insulting Rebman and his party. The Justice advised the more moderate course of bringing suit for the damage done to the harness and wagon. Rebman decided at length, to follow the Justice's advice and suit was immediately started against Moffett for $50, the amount to which the wagon was supposed to have been damaged. The case will come to trial in about a week.

HOW IS THIS FOR HIGH?

A Matrimonial Climax That Shows the Ways of Cupid.

The Westfield correspondent of the Elizabeth Journal says:

Miss Maggie Loughlin, the young lady who for a long time past has had charge of Voehl's bakery, has left her position and will shortly be married.

Her position at the bakery has been secured by Miss Ella McVay, also of Plainfield.

The story of Cupid's prank in this instance is peculiar. Anthony Martel, a machinist in the employ of the Pond Tool Works at Plainfield, at one time was engaged to Miss McVay, who was then a cashier in a Plainfield grocery store. For some reason the engagement was broken.

Anthony Martel still worked at his trade at Plainfield, but Miss McVay lost her position, after which she stayed at home and took care of her mother.

Anthony Martel met Miss Loughlin, and they became engaged, greatly to the surprise of their many friends, who have just become acquainted with the fact.

According to the above arrangement, Miss Loughlin secures the husband, while Miss McVay occupies the position of her former lover's intended wife at the bakery.

The wedding of Anthony Martel and Miss Loughlin will take place Easter Sunday at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church at Plainfield.

Many Floral Tributes.

The funeral services of the late Carrie Lusardi, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Lusardi, of North avenue, were held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 from the house and at 3 o'clock from St. Mary's church. Rev. Father Smyth, pastor of the church, officiated. There was a very large attendance of friends of the departed who had learned to love her for her many pleasant ways. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, again evidencing the esteem held by her friends. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, and six girl friends of the departed acted as pall-bearers. They were all attired in white dresses. The sight was very impressive.

BEN HEGEMAN'S COWS ESCAPED THE FLAMES

And the Borough's Former Mayor is Happy.

BARN BURNED TO GROUND.

A LIVELY BLAZE WHICH FIREMEN COULD NOT STOP.

The Blaze Discovered by Marshal Bagley—Mr. Hegeman's Family Was Awakened by Neighbors—Pride Milk Producers Saved and the Former Mayor is Happy as a Consequence—One Cow Tried to Rush Into the Flames—A Quantity of Park Club Property Burned—Loss Amounts to $3,000

It was about 1:20 Saturday morning when Marshal Bazley discovered a fire in the barn owned by former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and located just back of the Park Club. He immediately pulled Box 151 on Washington avenue, and soon afterward the fire department was on the scene. The fire by this time had made considerable headway.

Mr. Hegeman and his family were awakened by Mrs. C A. Reed, who resides next door. In the barn there was considerable of value. There was a landeau and sleigh owned by W. J. Boome, a quantity of material owned by the Park Club, and two valuable cows and a calf owned by Mr. Hegeman. Everything was lost except the cows and calf, for which the owner is very thankful, as he devoted a part of his suburban life to nurturing the animals and took great pride in their fine pedigree. They were rescued by Marshal Bagley. The neighbors were soon on the spot and they assisted in extinguishing the flames. There is a question as to which company secured first water. Both claim the honor.

Mr. Hegeman feels sure that the barn was set on fire from the second story. The barn was an exceptionally strong built one and the frame was standing next morning. The firemen performed excellent work in saving the adjoining property close by. Due to the first time that Box 151 has been pulled. There was considerable anxiety felt concerning the safety of Mr. Hegeman's cow and calf, and after they were saved from the flames they rushed back again and were again rescued.

Mr. Hegeman claims the loss to be about $3,000. The barn and contents were not fully insured. Elston H. French & Co., insurance agents, hold what insurance there was on the building and contents.

DECORATION DAY OBSERVATION.

G. A. R. Committee Arranging Details of Celebration.

Chairman I. L. McVoy, secretary C. B. Stephens, Captain Hubbard, Mason W. Tyler, E. D. Moffett and Wm. Day, composing the G. A. R. memorial detail, met March 23d, in the office of Justice Moffett on North avenue and made further arrangements to celebrate Decoration Day. The committee on hall reported that Music Hall could be secured for the exercises, and it was decided to take that hall if satisfactory arrangements can be made. The committee on music reported concerning a band of music for that day, and it was decided to hire the Queen City Band of twenty-two pieces. A communication was sent to the Sons of Veterans asking them to co-operate with the detail in making arrangements for Decoration Day

It is quite sure that the line of march for the parade will be the same as last year; also that I. L. McVoy will act as marshal of the parade. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested at the meeting, and another meeting will be held next week Wednesday evening, when still further progress will be made in the matter of arrangements.

An Interesting Talk.

The Parliamentary Club met Thursday morning at the Y. M. C. A. and listened to a talk by Mrs. Wm. Taylor, of Philadelphia, on the work of Ramabai, which has been so remarkable among the widows in India. Ramabai took the methods for work in her schools from the Plainfield public schools. Among the visitors at the meeting were Mrs. Burdick, of Ashaway, R. I.; Mrs. Price and Miss Hiscox, of Westerly, R. I.

Manager Moulton Coming Back.

George S. Moulton, who has been the manager of the Mountain Park Inn since its opening, has rented that well known hostelry, and will be the proprietor of it this season. He is now managing the Hotel Lakewood at Lakewood, and will come to Plainfield in time to open up the Mountain Park Inn June 15th.

Went Into a New York Hospital.

Edward Feiring, of Prideville, who sometime ago received an injury to his hand while working at the Pond Tool Works, has been obliged to go to a hospital in New York for futher treatment.

SOCIETY AT PARK CLUB.

A PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY LOCAL TALENT.

Mrs. Frank J. Smith Reads Both Serious and Humorous Readings With Great Effect—The Other Entertainers.

One of the most successful entertainments of the season was held at the Park Club last Thursday. It was for the edification of the members and their friends and was largely attended by them. The little hall at the clubhouse was packed to its limit by an appreciative audience.

Mrs. Frank J. Smith, the well known reader, was one of the entertainers. She had a complete list of new selections that proved very effective. Several of her selections were dialect pieces. Her manner of giving her humorous selections was irresistably funny and provoked much mirth among the audience. She gave the serious readings with equal success.

Mrs. William L. Saunders gave several soprano solos that were well received. Her choice of selections were very good. She was accompanied by Frank J. Smith.

Very enthusiastic was the reception of Fletcher Hallock. Always a favorite at the Park Club, he appeared at his best last evening. He gave banjo and mouthophone solos and played some of the latest pieces. He also sang a popular selection. He was accompanied by Mrs. E. T. Douglass. Through a misunderstanding, it was not understood that she was to accompany him until the last moment. Although she had had no practice, her accompaniments were all that could be wished.

DEATH OF MRS. BLISH.

Was an Active Church Worker—Engaged Much in Charity.

The death of Mrs. Rhoda A. Blish, of 895 West Seventh street, occurred Thursday afternoon at 3:30 after a severe and lingering illness with a complication of troubles. She was the daughter of the late Mrs. Adeline Metcalf, of New York, and wife of the late Henry M. Blish, who was connected with the Standard Oil Company. Five years ago Mrs. Blish moved to Plainfield and erected the house in which she died. She was an active member of the First Presbyterian church, and at one time a member of the auxiliary board of Muhlenberg Hospital. She was a person given to doing for others and her works of charity are well known. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Geo. O. Stevens and Miss Blish. The funeral services will be held next Sunday afternoon from the house at 4:30.

LITTLE GIRLS SURPRISED.

The Misses Manning Received an Unexpected Visit From Playmates.

A pleasant surprise was given to the Misses Bertha and Florence Manning, of Elm place, Friday evening, by their schoolmates, as a farewell visit before moving to LaGrande avenue. There were about thirty present and a good time was spent in playing games, singing, etc. Refreshments were served.

Those present were the Misses Jennie Addis, Bertha and Jessie Hill, Mabel and Susie Cardner, Deborah Winn, Anna Morrison, Henrietta and Emily Walsh, Mae Frazee, Anna Clayton, Edna Moore, Eva Ingham and Melissa Bird; Masters Vincent and Frank Meany, Harold Luckey, George McVoy, Harold Keller, Philip VanArsdale, Norman Hill, George Bailey, Leslie Palmer, Augustus Force and Louis Fisher. The committee in charge were Master Vincent Meany and Miss Jennie Addis.

Graduated to Main School.

A graduation service was held in the Sabbath-school of the Seventh Day Baptist church in connection with the review, last Saturday. A class of ten was graduated from the primary department into the main school. Mrs. J. P. Mosher, superintendent of the department, conducted the services. Mrs. Mosher presented each member of the class with a diploma, and bade them God-speed as they left the primary department for association with the older scholars; she likened them to the buds that had been carefully nurtured and had now reached the time of blossoming and fruit bearing. D. E. Titsworth, superintendent of the Sabbath-school gave them the hand of welcome for the school.

Concert in Bethel Chapel.

A concert was given in Bethel mission, on S. Griffin street, last Thursday. It was largely attended. Sattel's orchestra rendered several selections. There were songs by Charles Richardson, Miss Charlotte Allen, Miss Lane, Miss Clara Lane, Benjamin Sutton, Mrs. Tripp, Mrs. E. C. Irby, Miss Kenley, Miss Edith Johnson, Miss Daisy Dunham, Miss Lucy Smith, Mrs. M. E. Hall and Mrs. Lewis. There was also given a "gospel train" by a double quartette.

Gas Main Extended.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company have extended their gas main from Giraud avenue along Myrtle avenue five hundred feet so as to connect with James R. Joy's new residence just completed.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST RIGHTS ARE MENACED

Dr. A. H. Lewis Talks in an Emphatic Manner.

CIVIC RIGHTS TOUCHED ON.

MAYOR FISK'S ORDER FOR SUNDAY TRAFFIC IS CRITICISED.

Dr. Lewis Considers the Keeping of a Store Open for Six Days to be a Civic Right, and that Seventh-day Baptists are Entitled to Run Their Establishments on Sunday and the Business Open and Above Board, Despite the Edict Issued by the City Officials—Seventh-Days Did Business as Usual.

When the crusade against the "cider joints" was begun two weeks ago, it was supposed that it was aimed at only such Sunday sellers as portioned the juice of the apple among their customers. In such a move ment, the people of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination in this city were only too glad to aid. But when the scope of the crusade was extended to take in all who kept their places of business open on Sunday, the Seventh-Day Baptists took on it as a movement aimed directly against them.

The raids of a week ago Sunday portended more than the mere closing of the "cider joints." A direct action against the Seventh-Day Baptists came Friday when Chief Grant, acting under the instructions of the Mayor, notified them that they must pull down the curtains of their stores and transact such business as they did on Sunday behind closed doors They respectfully informed the Chief that they would do nothing of the kind. Then they were informed they would place themselves liable to arrest.

So it was that Sunday was watched with the keenest interest by those of the Seventh-day Baptist denomination. Then the principal business men of that denomination, W. H. Rogers, the bicycle dealer, on North avenue, James Clawson, who conducts a grocery store at the corner of West Second street and Madison avenue, and O. M. Dunham, dealer in men's furnishings, had all been notified to do business behind drawn curtains and closed doors. They opened up their establishments as usual, however, and the day passed without any happening out of the ordinary. No arrests were made, but the proprietors of the stores expected that they would be arrested Monday.

Of the victims of last Sunday's raid, those who pleaded guilty at their trial remained closed. Of those who pleaded not guilty, all but one remained open, but kept their curtains down and displayed no goods outside. The one exception was Ferero, who keeps a fruit candy and tobacco store on West Front street. He closed contrary to the advice of his counsel.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, now editor of the Sabbath Recorder, is one of the leaders of the Seventh-Day Baptist denomination in this settlement of that sect. A reporter interviewed him at his office in the Babcock building last Monday concerning the action that the Seventh-Day Baptists would take regarding the crusade that is now being made. Dr. Lewis explained that the people of his denomination were thoroughly in favor of the closing of the "cider joints" Sunday. They believed, however, that they had a perfect right to keep open on Sunday if they observed Saturday as the Sabbath and closed their stores on that day.

The State constitution, he stated, says that every citizen is entitled to all his civic rights, and that he shall not be deprived of them for reason of any religious belief. He considered the keeping open of a store six days in the week a civic right. So, he explained, the Seventh-Day Baptists felt that they had a right to keep their business establishments open on Sunday and do business freely and above board instead of behind closed doors as if they were committing a crime.

Dr. Lewis spoke further on the subject of the raids and said that the question of the guilt of those arrested was dependent on two questions touching on religion, one as to whether the alleged offenders of the Sabbath observance ordinance properly, and therefore religiously observed the Sabbath on Saturday, and the other as to whether they conducted their business so as not to interfere with the religious observance of the day by others. Then he spoke of the decisions of courts in other States in which these same questions had been declared unconstitutional as the State constitutions forbid any legislation, State or local, regarding the subject of religion.

The "Black Tea" Postponed.

The men of Trinity Reformed church who intended giving an entertainment in the lecture room of the church Friday evening, April 1st, have decided to postpone the affair to a later date, when more time will be given to secure talent and make it the success they intended it to be, socially and financially.

WITH MUSICAL TALENT.

A MUSICALE OF UNUSUAL MERIT GIVEN LAST WEEK.

Arranged by the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Christian Endeavorers—Those Who Took Part in the Programme.

A musicale of unusual merit was given in the Seventh-Day Baptist church last Thursday by the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. It was attended by a large audience that more than filled the auditorium and overflowed into the chapel.

The programme opened with the overture to "William Tell," by Mrs. W. C. Hubbard and Mrs. F. J. Hubbard at the piano and A. L. Titsworth at the organ. A ladies' chorus, composed of Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Mrs. F. T. Clawson, Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, Miss H. Elizabeth Allis, Miss Maude I. Mosher, Miss Mabel A. Maxson, Miss L. Ethel Williams, and Miss Nan Randolph, next rendered Strong's "Now is the Month of Maying."

While all the selections were well received, the tenor solos of Walter H. MacIlroy, of New York, were received with marks of special favor. His two selections, "The Violet" and "I Love Thee," were excellent. An alto solo, "A Message From Heaven," was sung by Miss Nan Randolph. Fred Berthoud, of Brooklyn, gave a mandolin solo He was prevented from completing his encore by the breaking of one of the bass strings on the instrument.

Miss Alice Fish, of New York, soprano solist, had a sweet voice which she used with effect. Her selections were well received. An instrumental trio by P. Ludwig Conde and J. L. Porte, violins, and Miss Jessie Utter, piano, concluded the first part. A silver offering was then taken by the ushers while A. L. Titsworth rendered an offertory on the organ.

The ladies' chorus next gave E. J. Fitzhugh's lullaby, "The Sandman." Two more selections by Mr. MacIlroy followed, "The Night has a Thousand Eyes," and "I'm Wearing Awa'." A vocal trio, "Ye Fields of Light," was sung by Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Miss Nan Randolph and D. E. Titsworth. Then violin solo by P. Ludwig Conde, a soprano solo by Miss Alice Fish and a mandolin solo by Mr. Berthoud. A selection, "The Wave Sweeps My Breast," by the ladies' chorus, closed the programme.

After the musicale, an informal reception in the church parlors followed when light refreshments were served.

The musicale was arranged by the following committee: Miss Jessie Utter, chairman, Mrs. W. C. Hubbard, Miss Maude Mosher, Miss Erpestine C. Smith, LaRue Bliss and Frank Maxson. The ushers were LaRue Bliss, Frank Maxson, Clarence Rogers, J. Stanley Mosher and Asa Randolph.

THE COUNTENANCE.

Mrs. Draper's Lecture on Practical Physiognomy.

Mrs. Clemence M. Draper's course of lectures on practical physiognomy, which have been delivered in the parlors of the Revere House, came to a close Thursday morning. This lecture was the most interesting of the four, as in it Mrs. Draper gave a complete description of the human countenance, its features, wrinkles, dimples, teeth, hair and skin, and the physical, mental and moral signs the scientific physiognomist reads in each. She also gave a description of the naturally thoroughbred person, the harmonious ness and high quality of whose make-up proclaims a healthy and refined ancestry. Many questions were asked at the close of the lecture by women who have become interested in the subject, and the usual personal readings were given. As a lecturer, Mrs. Draper is pleasant and easy in manner, and clear, logical and practical in presenting her subject.

Republican Delegates.

Former Assemblyman W. B. Codington, chairman of the city executive committee of the G. O. P., has appointed the committee to represent Plainfield at the gathering of the Republican league clubs at Trenton Thursday. The committee is composed of J. B. Coward from the First ward, W. H. Drayton from the Second ward, E. R. Ackerman from the Third ward and W. A. Westphal and Wm. Newcorn from the Fourth ward, and also the chairman.

Lectured the Boys.

Fritz Hansen, Willie Pawson, Peter Bowe, Willie Gaub, Edward Gaub, Otto Hansen and Eugene Kenney, of the borough, have been somewhat troublesome of late and have annoyed the neighbors in the vicinity of Greenbrook road. Thursday afternoon the boys were arraigned before Justice Crosley, who after giving them a good talking to let them go. The boys promised to be good and never annoy their neighbors again.

A Lecture on Birds.

The Audubon Society has engaged Prof. Witmer Stone, of Philadelphia, for an evening lecture on "Our Native Birds and How to Know Them," April 19th. Prof. Stone is a popular lecturer in Pennsylvania and illustrates his lecture with many lantern slides of birds and their nests.

FAREWELL TO PASTOR IN JOY AND SADNESS.

Reception Given to Rev. H. J. Johnston Last Night.

HELD IN GRACE M.E.CHURCH

THE RETIRING MINISTER PRESENTED WITH A HANDSOME GIFT.

The Church Handsomely Decorated With Flowers and Permeated With an Air of Sociability—Early Part of the Evening Taken Up With a Musical and Literary Programme—Dr. Carroll Made the Presentation Speech — Committee Who Were In Charge of the Affair—He Will Not Preach a Farewell Sermon.

The farewell reception tendered to Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Johnston at Grace M. E. church, last Thursday, by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society and Epworth League, was a complete success. Last Sunday was Mr. Johnston's last Sunday in Plainfield as pastor of Grace church, and the farewell reception was mingled with joy and sadness. Joy because of the glorious work accomplished by Mr. Johnston during his stay, and sadness because of his departure.

The pastor has been faithful and worked hard to build up the cause of Christ in his field of labor. The gathering last Thursday brought to the minds of many the numerous deeds of kindness and goodness of the spiritual leader. The pastor did not preach a farewell sermon, and what he had to say was said in person to each one.

The church was decorated with palms and choice flowers and presented an attractive appearance. There was an air of sociability prevalent and everyone joined heartily in extending to Pastor Johnston and his wife their best wishes for their success.

The fore part of the evening was devoted to a short programme given under the direction of the literary committee of the Epworth League, of which Miss Steiner is chairman. Several recitations were given in an excellent manner by Miss Aimee Emmons, while Clarence Mills delighted the audience with a number of violin solos, accompanied by Miss Carroll on the piano. Miss Grace Carroll rendered vocal solos in her usual pleasing manner. Each number received cordial support from all.

During the evening there were two surprises in store for Pastor Johnston and his wife in the shape of presentations. The members of the Epworth League and Ladies' Aid Society presented through Dr. Carroll, who made the presentation speech, an elegant banquet lamp. The members of the Queen Esther Band presented a hand some medallion picture entitled "Interrupted." Dr. Carroll also presented this gift in the name of the band to the doctor, in presenting the gifts expressed the good-will and fellowship of all and wished the recipients God-speed in their new field of labor. Mr. Johnston for himself and on behalf of his wife accepted the gifts with heartfelt expressions of appreciation, and he also wished the members of the church success.

After the rendition of the programme and presentations, refreshments were served by the social committee consisting of Miss Marguerite Schuck, assisted by the Misses Carroll, Miss Tingley, Mrs. Most, Mrs. Winckler and Mrs. Charles Hummer. The whole affair was in charge of Mrs. Valiant, assisted by members of both the Ladies' Aid and Epworth League. The decorations were in charge of Mrs. Vermeule.

READING AND LECTURE.

Entertaining Affair Given in First Presbyterian Church.

Last Thursday at the First Presbyterian church a large and delighted audience listened attentively to an illustrated lecture on "Evangeline." The story was illustrated with pictures shown on the canvas by Rev. C. E. Herring, and the story was read by Mrs. E. V. Waldorf, of LaGrande avenue. The pictures were very fine and the reading of the story was admirable. Following this part of the programme Mr. Herring gave a large number of views of Nova Scotia, also of local places. Mr. Herring's explanation of the pictures as they were shown was much enjoyed and frequent applause was accorded. Mr. Searing manipulated the stereopticon and gave entire satisfaction.

The programme was opened with a soprano solo by Miss Bessie Blair and there was also a piano selection by Miss Mabelle Force. Both numbers were greatly enjoyed and added to the pleasure of the occasion.

Arrangements for Graduation

The arrangements for the graduation exercises at the Plainfield High School are already being made. The speaker for the occasion has now been settled upon. Dr. Hamilton W. Mable, associate editor of the Outlook, will deliver the address of the evening. Dr. Mable is considered a very strong speaker.

MAYOR CHANGED MIND.

APPOINTMENT OF OVERSEER OF THE POOR EXPLAINED.

How it Came About That Councilmen Hetfield and Lietke Voted to Have Hansen's Nomination Laid on Table.

Facts have now come to light regarding the appointment of the overseer of the poor of Plainfield that explain the actions of certain Councilmen of this city that seemed rather strange at the time. It will be remembered that the Mayor's appointment of Christian Hansen to that coveted position was backed by Mr. Andrews, chairman of the alms committee, under whose special control the overseer comes. The other two members of the committee, Councilmen Lietke and Hetfield, wanted the appointment laid on the table.

Several days before the meeting of the Council, there was a conference between Mayor Fisk and the members of the committee. The appointment was considered at that time. It was then deemed advisible that the Mayor should appoint one of the candidates at a nominal salary to the position of overseer of the poor. Then the committee was to meet and make a contract with the same man to become manager of the Industrial Home and take charge of it with sufficient salary to make up for the salary that it was originally to pay the overseer. The advantage of this arrangement was that, while the overseer holds his position for three years, the committee could terminate his connection with the Industrial Home should he prove unfitted for the position and the committee wish him to resign for any other reason. Appointed as the overseer alone, he will hold the office for three years whether satisfactory or not.

This was the course that the other members of the committee supposed was to be pursued. When the Mayor made his appointment and named Hansen, who had not been considered by the entire committee, the members were surprised. They then wanted the matter laid on the table until they could understand what the reason was for giving up the old plan.

SUMMER HOME FOR GIRLS.

A WORTHY ENDEAVOR MOVEMENT.

Poor City Girls, Twelve at a Time, To be Given a Chance to Breathe Country Air.

The executive committee of the Christian Endeavor Local Union met March 23d at the home of Miss Florence Hawkins, of LaGrande avenue. Among the important items discussed was the advisability of establishing in Plainfield a summer home for city girls. It is the intention of the union to lease a suitable house just on the outskirts of the city and there establish such a home. It will be in charge of a matron, to be secured later. The plan is to select about twelve girls at a time and give them a brief outing at the home. In this way a number of girls can be helped. In connection with this movement it is expected that sewing and cooking will be taught and frequently religious meetings will be held.

It was decided at the meeting to add a social committee to the list of union committees. Miss Hawkins will appoint a superintendent for this committee. The rest of the evening was devoted to routine business, after which a social time was enjoyed.

A NEW DRUG STORE.

John Powers to Go Into Business for Himself Next Month.

Another popular and enterprising Plainfield young man is to go into business for himself in the person of John Powers, who will open a drug business in the store now occupied by Frank Rowley at the corner of Somerset street and Craig place. Mr. Powers has been engaged in the pharmacy of H. P. Reynolds and T. S. Armstrong for five years where his accommodating manner and pleasant disposition have made him many friends, and he has altogether three years' experience in the drug business. He is a graduate of the New York College of Pharmacy, class of '93, and passed a creditable examination before the State Board of Pharmacists.

The store will be opened April 5th, with an entire new stock of drugs and modern fixtures. Mr. Powers will make a speciality of the prescription department, and we predict for him all the success that he so well deserves.

Both Horses Dead Now.

I. A. Connett, of 203 Watchung avenue, who runs a meat route in the suburbs of Plainfield and who was so unfortunate as to lose one of his horses by death about a month ago, has just met with another loss in the death of his other horse, Wednesday night. Mr. Connett's second loss is a very severe blow to him.

Collector Brown's Office Hours.

Tax Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, has established office hours for the collection of taxes, when he will be sure to be in his office. They are 8 to 10 in the morning and 4 to 6 in the afternoon. This is something taxpayers will no doubt appreciate.

WORK OF BAPTISTS IN TWO CHURCHES.

Annual Meetings of First and Park Avenue Societies.

BOTH SHOW PROSPERITY.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS ON CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE AND FINANCES.

First Baptist Society's Deliberations Presided Over by Deacon L. W. Serrell and the Park Avenue Society Presided Over by Its Pastor—East Third Street Mission Chapel Will Cost $7,000—Sunday-Schools in Both Churches are Very Prosperous, as Well as All Other of the Auxiliary Societies—Some Other Interesting Items.

The members of the First Baptist church held their annual church business meeting March 23d and listened to the reports of the various societies and departments of the church. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, Deacon L. W. Serrell, presided, and Clerk O. B. Leonard filled his position.

The first order of business was the reception of three persons to membership. They were Miss Margaret McCutchen, Miss Ethel B. Crane and Miss Florence Maud Crane.

Deacon J. B. Probasco presented the report of the deacons, showing the receipts to be $331.45, disbursements $253.53, leaving a balance of $127.54.

The Ladies' Aid Society reported through the president, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, that $125 had been paid out for relief. O. B. Leonard reported for the beneficence committee, which showed the receipts to be $2,826 81 including a balance of $702. The disbursements were about the same, leaving a balance of $753. Mr. Leonard also reported for the Baptist Home for the Aged. This report showed that $4,000 had been received for the Home during the year. Mrs. O. B. Leonard, Mrs. Mary Thickstun and Mrs. White represent the society on the board of managers, and the term of Mrs. Mary Thickstun having expired she was re elected for three years.

Superintendent R. K. Case reported at present 421 scholars in the Sunday-school, with an average attendance of 277; 12 officers, 41 teachers, with a gain of 29 during the year.

The receipts from the school for the year were $2,389.94 and there is a balance on hand of $256.15. At the Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday-school the average attendance is 116.

President L. H. Biglow, Jr., reported for the Christian Endeavor Society that twelve new members had been added during the year, with an average attendance of 75. In the Junior Society there are 43 members with an average attendance of 25.

L. W. Randolph, superintendent of the East Third Street mission, gave a report of the work at that place. He explained the entire cost of the new chapel would be $7,000. The lot cost $2,150 and the cost of the building about $4,551. Subscriptions to the amount of the cost had almost been received.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society reported that $608 had been received during the year. The home society received and expended during the year about $479.75. Frank Jones, for the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, reported the receipts to be $331.42 and expenditures $221.42. Mrs. Walter McGee, for Miss Ella Harold Serrell, presented a report for the Gold Dust Band.

This report showed that $25 had been received. For the Temple Builders, Frank Jones reported a balance of $12.60.

The beneficence committee suggested that there be a change in the schedule for the collections for stated objects, and the following schedule was adopted: Third Sunday in January, Sunday-school; third Sunday in March, Foreign Missions; third Sunday in May, State Convention; third Sunday in September, Baptist Publication Society; third Sunday in October, Ministerial education; third Sunday in December, Home Missions.

Park Avenue Church.

The annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held in the church parlors March 23d. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, presided, and Thomas A. Cuming acted as secretary.

The annual reports were received. The treasurer's report of the benevolences was made by the treasurer, E. Fenton Haynes. The benevolences amounted to $308.78, which was distributed among the home and foreign missions. About $20 was given to the Plainfield Relief Association.

The Sunday-school report was made by its secretary, T. A. Cuming. It showed the Sunday-school to be in a prosperous condition, with a membership of 172, a net gain of 11 over last year. The financial condition was good, nearly $200 having been devoted to benevolences. The rest of the expenses amounted to about $200 and a small balance was left.

The work of the Christian Endeavor Society, especially in sending flowers to the slum missions in New York, was described in the report from the society presented by the secretary, Miss Myra Runyon.

Excellent reports were made from the other auxiliary societies of the church, telling of the work accomplished and that each had devoted a goodly amount to the work. These reports were as follows: Women's Home Mission Circle by Miss Emma V. Fish, Women's Foreign Mission Circle by Mrs. A. W. Rand, Whatsoever Circle King's Daughters by Miss Margaret Rand, and Ladies' Aid Society by Mrs. A. Haynes.

The report of the visiting committee was made by Mrs. W. A. Freeman, chairman, and the report of the social committee by its chairman, Mrs. J. W. Johnson. The report of the deacon's fellowship fund was made by T. L. Runyon, who also gave a report of the state of the church register. The membership of the church is now 278, a net increase of the year of 12.

The election of officers was held and resulted as follows: Clerk, T. A. Cuming; treasurer, E. Fenton Haynes; deacons, for two years, C. A. Haynes and W. M. Tallman. The committees for the year were appointed by the pastor.

COLORED VOTERS WANT TO IMPRESS G. O. P.

They Will Assert Their Rights For Proper Recognition.

TALKED TO BY JESSE LAWSON

HE TELLS HOW THEIR BRETHREN ARE REWARDED IN WASHINGTON.

The Former Plainfielder Pushes Congressman Fowler and Senator Sewell for the Interest They Have Manifested in the Colored People on Various Occasions—White Leaders, He Said, Would Recognize the Colored Man When He Showed Himself Worthy of Their Just Recognition.

The colored Republicans of this city have come to the opinion that there is truth in the saying that in union there is strength. Monday night they held a council of war in the G. O. P. headquarters on East Front street and talked of asserting their rights and presenting a united front to the machine leaders with the hope of securing proper recognition. They also planned for recognition from the State Republican leaders.

The meeting was held in the Republican headquarters, as has already been stated. The interested ones were rather late in gathering, so it was nearly ten o'clock before the meeting was in full blast. There was a good attendance of the colored voters, and almost all of the leaders of the race, whether from the machine or of independent politics, turned out to see what was to be done.

Edward M. Maynard was made chairman and Richard Norwood secretary of the meeting. Jesse Lawson, a colored man born in Plainfield and now employed at the Treasury department at Washington, had been invited to be present and address the meeting. He at once urged the potency of united action and said the party leaders of the State were ready to recognize the colored man when he presents a united front. He spoke in the highest terms of the Congressional delegates from New Jersey and paid special tribute to Congressman Fowler. He maintained that General Sewell, the recognized leader of the Republican party in the State, had always regarded the interests of the colored people in every movement. In the appointment of Judson W. Lyons as registrar of the Treasury, he contended that President McKinley had recognized the younger element among the colored voters. The colored men of Georgia had received the greatest recognition, he explained, because they presented a solid front. There is a disposition among the white Republicans of New Jersey, he said, to recognize the black man when he shows himself worthy of recognition and has the necessary votes to back him up.

There was a strong sentiment among those present at the meeting for a united action by the colored voters of Plainfield. It was the general sentiment that the little differences among the colored men should be laid down and all should unite in one club to steadily press their claims for recognition until the Plainfield machine saw the wisdom of granting their wishes and giving them the wished-for recognition. Among those who urged this plan were William J. Douglass, William A. Kline, Edward M. Maynard, Rev. James W. Mitchell, William Mayhew, Richard Norwood, Spencer Conway, William Connett, James Connett and William K. Manning, all colored men of high standing in the community.

While the real object of the meeting had been to talk over the question of unity, the ostensible object was to elect delegates to the Republican Legislative Convention, to be held by the colored men of the State at Trenton, March 31st. The following delegates were then elected: Edward M. Maynard, William J. Douglass, James Scott, William D. Johnson, Spencer Conway and James Connett. It was midnight before the last of the interested ones departed.

FROM A VIOLIN CAME SOUL-STIRRING MUSIC.

PATRIOTIC IMEDLEY WAS PLAYED.

When Prof. Conde Sounded the Notes of "Star Spangled Banner" There was Great Applause.

Plainfielders have read with considerable interest of the outbursts of enthusiasm evidenced at several of the New York theatres when patriotic airs were played, and last Monday a similar demonstration was witnessed in this city. It was at the Y. M. C. A. Star Course entertainment, and P. Ludwig Conde, the popular violinist, occasioned it.

One of his selections was a medley of his own arrangement, comprising a number of patriotic airs. As each selection was given it could plainly be seen that the audience was being enthused. The climax was reached, however, when Mr. Conde rendered the "Star Spangled Banner." The burst of enthusiasm was soul-stirring. Several times during the rendition of the selection the audience burst into applause and it was scarcely possible for the music to be heard. Mr. Conde never played better and his selections throughout were features of the evening. On one occasion he was accompanied by G. Z. Petrie on the violin.

The other features of the programme were Miss Edith Norton, whose talent as an elocutionist is well known. Her work last evening was superb, as was also the Scotch ballad singing by Miss Blackwell. Her selections were the choicest of the Scotch airs and they were greatly appreciated by all. Bert Harold was the accompanist of the evening and his work was first-class in every respect.

the commissioners did not ask interest and in other cases the principal was reduced. Very few cases of back taxes work hardships, especially where present owners purchased their property since 1881 in good faith. The amount was reduced in almost every case."

—A. Kane, the stone dealer, has just received a contract from the city to lay 1800 feet of crosswalk in the city. Mr. Kane has also received the contract to lay a sidewalk on Liberty street from the Parochial school to Seventh street, for Mrs. D. F. Randolph.

COMMUTER JURY IN CARBONE'S RETRIAL.

Eight New York Business Men Chosen to Serve.

TESTIMONY WAS REPEATED.

ONLY FOUR PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS ON THE JURY.

It Took Almost an Hour to Select the Jury—Two Jurors Were Excused on Account of Being Clerks in Mayor Fisk's Banking House—Former Councilman Frost Per mptorily Challenged—Same Line of Defense as Made Last Friday — Same Witnesses Were Also Called to Testify as Before.

The city made its strongest effort Tuesday to convict one of the alleged violators of the Sabbath observance ordinance. It was at the re trial of Jose Carbone, who keeps a little store at 128 North avenue, where he sells tobacco, candy, fruit and the like. As the readers of this paper will remember, Carbone was tried before City Judge DeMeza and a jury of twelve men last Friday morning and after being out eight hours the jury failed to agree and was discharged. The time set for the re trying of the case was Tuesday morning.

The trial was held in the Council Chambers. A large crowd assembled and soon occupied all of the room on the audience benches, while the members of the legal profession and the reporters filled the vacant space inside the railing. As before, Corporation Counsel Marsh appeared for the city, and Councilman Walter L. Hetfield for the prisoner.

The examination and selection of the jury was conducted in a much more elaborate fashion than ever before in a City Court trial. It lasted for nearly an hour and was the occasion for frequent tiffs between the lawyers, who were not particularly complimentary to each other in their remarks. From the personnel of the jury it was evident that Roundsman Flynn had kept his word and been very careful as to whom he selected for the jury.

Marion S. Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, a well known New York business man, was the first called. He was questioned very closely by Councilman Hetfield as to whether he had read the account in the local papers of the first trial. He had not. He was asked if he had formed any opinion as to the innocence or guilt of Carbone, and then if he had any convictions against those who observed the Sabbath on Saturday. His answers suited the lawyer for the defence and he took his seat.

William T. Kaufman, of West Seventh street, was the next juror called. He said he was in the employ of Harvey Fisk's Sons, of which Mayor C. J. Fisk is a member. Mr. Hetfield wanted him excused on those grounds. Mr. Marsh declared that such a thing would be an insult to the man and the Judge sustained him. Mr. Kaufman was afterwards challenged preemtorially by Mr. Hetfield and retired.

Joseph A. Robinson, of East Fifth street, has not read the account of the first trial and was not objected to. George Griffin, a local business man, had not read account but had formed an opinion in regard to similar cases. He had no ideas in this, however. He did not believe that church attendance was necessary to Sabbath observance. He was received. Alfred B. Beers, of Watchung avenue, recording secretary of the Y. M. C. A., had not read the local papers and was received.

Fred W. Walz, of LaGrande avenue, was objected to by Mr. Hetfield because he was employed in the banking house of Harvey Fisk's Sons, of which Mayor Fisk is a member. The Judge would not sustain the objection and Mr. Hetfield afterwards excused Mr. Walz preemptorially.

Henry G. Runkle, of West Seventh street, usually read the local papers but he had not read the account of the first trial. He was accepted without dispute. Robert Rushmore, of West Eighth street, took one local paper, but had not read the account. He was a commuter. William A. Clinton, of West Eighth street, was another commuter. He had glanced over the headings in a local paper but had not read the account of the trial. Curtis M. Thorpe, a local business man, was received without objection. George H. Burgess answered all questions satisfactorily.

Former Councilman George H. Frost was challenged preemptorially as soon as his name was called. George L. Colgate, of the Bard Cycle Company, was received with a few questions. John M. Whiton, of Central avenue, was accepted after being questioned regarding his opinions in the case.

George J. Tobin, the local plumber, was the last man to be called for the jury. He was the only one of them all who had read the account of the first trial. He answered Mr. Hetfield's questions satisfactorily. Then Mr. Marsh asked for the first time during the trial if he was prejudiced against the Sabbath observance ordinance as it stood at present. He replied no, and took his seat.

Corporation Counsel Marsh opened the case as usual, and then foll. wed substantially the same testimony that was given in the first trial. Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson were placed on the stand and told how they purchased the goods on Sunday March 20th, from Carbone. The articles purchased were two cigars, chewing tobacco and chewing gum.

Mr. Hetfield did not deny that his client sold the articles mentioned on the day named. His plea as before was that as Carbone observed Saturday as his Sabbath by closing his store he had a right to keep open Sunday. To prove the good character of Carbone, he placed on the witness stand, Dan Roberts, Mrs. Jennie Bush, Eugene O'Reilly, Mrs. Henry Drake, Edward Reahume and W. H. Rogers. Their evidence was similar to that of the first trial. Irving L. Brady was put on the stand by Mr. Marsh in rebuttal.

The attorneys summed up and the the jury was charged at 1:15 o'clock.

At 3:05 the jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

BUT FOUR DAYS REMAIN

IN WHICH TO BE CURED AT GREATLY REDUCED PRICES BY THE FAMOUS BOY PHENOMENON

Whose Remarkable Record of Phenomenal Cures Has Never Been Equalled by Medical Science.

The large crowds which have besieged the office of the Boy Phenomenon, at the Revere House, the past 2 weeks, has again made it necessary for him to prolong his stay, and while he will remain here 2 weeks longer, no more new cases will be taken after Monday, April 4 as the following weeks will be entirely devoted to treating those who go under treatment between now and Monday night.

The great crowds of our very best citizens who have been compelled to give up their prejudices after witnessing some of his cures, have taken treatment, been cured and are now giving him their names to use in testimonials, shows the positive demand that is made on his time in Plainfield. If ever a great and good gift of nature was called to the fullest exercise, then surely he has performed enough cures among those who had been called incurable to fully justify those citizens for their efforts in inducing him to come here.

A new way to heal the sick without drugging the patient with medicine is what the invalid public is anxiously looking for, and it has been left to comparatively a young man to prove there is a much better way.

*The Boy Phenomenon is the young*est living Magnetist who publicly demonstrates the great power that Vital Magnetism has over disease, when properly developed and scientifically applied.

Magnetism is one of nature's wonderful forces, governed by natural laws. There is nothing miraculous or supernatural about it, although people unacquainted with its power, after witnessing some of his wonderful cures, declare it must be so, but he himself claims no such power.

Nature simply bestowed a superabundance of the vital magnetic fluid in his veins, by the aid of which he has been enabled to effect the most startling cures in an incredibly short space of time in nearly every large city in this country.

Being compelled to remain in Plainfield some weeks longer, and having discharged so many as permanently cured, he therefore is enabled to reduce the price of treatment to within the reach of all. Those who have previously called are especially invited to return and take advantage of the reduced prices before April 4.

Office hours at Revere House 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, except Sunday.

THE NAVAL RESERVES.

Instructions Received by Those Detailed for Duty.

Great interest is taken in Plainfield in the movements of the Naval Reserves. The following instructions were given those detailed for duty on the monitor Montauk:

"You will hold youself in readiness for twenty-four hours. When called you will report here with two suits of clothing, extra underwear and shoes, leggins, cap, pea coat and any articles of toilet you may require. Your seaman's bag will be furnished here. If there is any man who feels that he cannot report when called he had better say so now. When you are summoned get here as quickly as you can. Get your clothes ready at once and bring them here to the ship and place them in your lockers."

Illustrated Lecture.

The illustrated lecture given in Monroe Avenue church Tuesday p. m. by Prof. Smith, of New York, was enjoyed by an audience that was thoroughly appreciative. The views described an expedition to British Columbia, and were very fine.

LOVE LIT THE DARK WAY TO HYMEN'S ALTAR

A Romantic Episode of a Love Lorn Couple.

SURPRISED THEIR FRIENDS.

FARMER LAD AND LASSIE DID NOT IN DULGE IN FORMALITIES.

Edward Harring Won the Love of Miss Wiechnaer, Took Her Out for an Ostensible Pleasure Drive, Although It Rained, and When They Returned to Greet the Young Woman's Parents the Latter Had Then Changed Her Name—They are Happy in Young Mr. Harring's Farm House.

A little romance was enacted up in the north western corner of Somerset county, last week, that supplied food for gossip among the country folk of that region for some time to come. Edward Harring, a young farmer, living on the outskirts of Somerville, was the hero of the romantic episode. Mrs Harring, formerly Miss Anna Louise Wiechnaer, daughter of a well-to-do farmer of Adamsville, was the one who braved the fury of the elements to be joined in wedlock with the man of her choice.

Now it has been well known among the good people of that part of Somerset county that Edward Harring was keeping company with Anna Wiechnaer. The young women's parents made no objection as he was a young man of good repute and perfectly able to care for a wife as she should be.

While the course of true love was apparently smooth, the young people were not satisfied. Both were bashful about setting the date of the wedding for they dreaded the excitement that would attend the day of marriage. Then, too, they longed for a touch of romance to enliven the love-making. So it was that Harring drove his prancing bay horse down to Adamsville last Thursday night in the rain.

It was no uncommon thing for the two to start off together, even on a rainy night, for young Harring frequently escorted her to dances and entertainments in the vicinity. So her parents thought nothing of it. When once they had left the lights of Adamsville behind them, Harring turned his horse toward the range of mountains at their side that loomed up in the gloom. The rain fell heavily and beat against them but the sturdy horse made his way through the darkness of the chimney road gap, climbed the dangerous hill out of the valley and bore them safely until the lights of Warrenville appeared in the distance.

The young people had once heard Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, who is pastor of the Coontown Congregational church, preach in the little schoolhouse at Adamsville, and they had taken a fancy to him. They decided that he was the one they wanted to tie the fateful knot, and then the drive to his home offered all sorts of romantic adventures.

When Pastor Bowers learned the errand of the young people and found that there was no parental objection to hinder, he received them with open arms. There was no bridesmaid or best man to do honor to the occasion, but the kindly Mrs. Bowers acted as witness at the ceremony, which was performed in the pastor's cozy study.

Then the young people turned their faithful bay homewards and went out in the cold and storm again. There was some anxiety at the Wiechnaer homestead at the long absence of the daughter. The young couple returned in time to prevent a long continuance of it, however, and startled all with the announcement of their marriage. The parents were greatly surprised, but they saw the uselessness of objecting and bestowed the parental blessing. The young couple are now residing at the groom's home near Somerville.

Disputes Street Railway Claim.

A prominent resident of East Front street disputes the claim made by the officers of the Plainfield Street Railway Company to the effect that enough consents have been secured to guarantee the right of way for the Scotch Plains extension over that thoroughfare. This man says that the residents of the street between Richmond street and Watchung avenue will never permit the tracks to be laid there.

Baptisms.

Sunday morning at the First Baptist church Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor, baptized Miss Margaret McCutchen and Miss Crane. A sister of the latter who was to have been baptized was ill and unable to appear.

Harold Davis, of Kensington avenue, has gone on a trip to Detroit.

Miss Lizzie Herrmann, formerly of Orchard place, is now living at 517 East Second street.

Franklin E. Reese, of the reportorial staff of The Daily Press, is quite seriously ill at his home in Westfield. He is threatened with pneumonia.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Two ounces of blood will fill a small wine glass, and that is the quantity of rich, red blood which is daily added to your blood vessels when you take one of Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids with each meal three times daily.

No other iron medicine will do this, because all others are unnatural or acid preparations of iron, while Capsuloids contain natural iron identical with the iron already in your blood.

You cannot take any ordinary iron medicine, because it's acid, and injures teeth, stomach and bowels; but

You can take Capsuloids, or natural iron medicine, because it contains no acid, is perfectly natural, and perfectly mild.

Infants and invalids, as well as adults, take Capsuloids without feeling them in the slightest, even though they have never been able to take any other kind of iron medicine.

What are Capsuloids? They are the natural iron called Hæmoglobin, extracted from the blood of healthy young bullocks. This natural iron is just the same as the iron in the human blood. We then enclose this dissolved natural iron in little soft pointed globes of pure gelatine. They are easily swallowed, are free from taste and smell, and their contents enter the blood within from one to three minutes after they are taken into the stomach.

Capsuloids is the greatest of all tonics for the nerves, heart, lungs, bronchial tubes, mucus membranes, liver, bowels, kidneys, and especially for all monthly irregularities, when these organs are affected with blood diseases.

Capsuloids act entirely through the blood, enriching it and increasing its quantity two ounces daily. The effect upon the health, color, nerves and spirits is seen almost immediately. Think of the power and effect of adding two ounces of rich, red, new blood each day!

Many doctors have ceased using all other kinds of iron, and prescribe Capsuloids exclusively. Send for pamphlet, containing their testimonies, and local testimonials.

CONFERENCE ASSIGNS METHODIST CLERGY.

Only One Change in the Churches in Plainfield.

GRACE HAS A NEW PASTOR.

REV. GEORGE W. GARDNER WILL SUCCEED REV. J. H. JOHNSTON.

Rev. G. W. Smith, of Plainfield, Will Continue as Presiding Elder of the Elizabeth District—Rev. C. B. Barnes is Returned to Jersey City—Rev. Mr. Johnston Transferred to Another Conference—The Question of Sabbath Observance Vigorously Discussed—Plea to the Legislature to Stop Secularization of Day.

East Orange, April 6.—To the great majority of Methodists the Newark Conference yesterday transacted the most important and interesting business, that of appointing the pastors to to various churches for the ensuing year. Only one change was made in the Methodist clergy of Plainfield, and that was expected owing to the decision of Rev. J. H. Johnston to leave Grace church for a pastorate on Staten Is and.

As predicted exclusively in yesterday's Press, Rev. G. W. Smith, of Plainfield, was not transferred as presiding elder of the Elizabeth district.

Rev. C. B. Barnes, formerly pastor of the First M. E. church in Plainfield, was returned to the Washington church at Jersey City.

Rev. J. H. Johnston was transferred to the East New York Conference in order to become pastor of the church at Mariner's Harbor.

The appointments for the Elizabeth district are as follows:

Presiding Elder, G. W. Smith; Bound Brook, A. L. Wilson; Cranford, Alfred Evans; Dunellen, E. S. Jamison; Elizabeth, Fulton street, J. Howard; Park, F. Simonds; St James, J. A. Owen; Flanders and Darkestown, C. E. Walton; Glen Gardner, F. J. Tomlinson; Metuchen, C. W. Dommings; Perth Amboy, W. W. Trumbower; Plainfield, First, W. C. Snodgrass; Grace, George W. Gardiner; Monroe Avenue, W. C. O Donnell; Rahway, First, William M'Cain; Trinity, W. H. Ruth; Roselle, R. W. Elliott; Somerville, J. B. Bryan.

An important part of the day's discussions was in reference to Sabbath observance, which will be of more or less interest to Plainfield inasmuch as the question has become very prominent there.

The report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance was presented by Rev. William R. Kiefer. He deplored the increasing tendency toward Sabbath desecration by bicycle riding, hilarity, baseball, Sunday newspapers and excursions. The committee presented resolutions indorsing the efforts of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the American Sabbath Union, asking member of the church to abstain from reading the Sunday newspapers, from riding in trolley cars, or using bicycles for pleasure, and from transacting unnecessary business on Sunday. The committee thought that there was need of a legislative enactment to stop the increasing secularization of the day.

The New Jersey High School Teachers

The New Jersey State High School Teachers' Association will hold its spring meeting at Newark April 29th and 30th. The first session will be opened with a reception and dinner at the Continental Hotel, after which well-known speakers will address the teachers on "The Relation of the State to the High School." April 30th the session will begin at 9:30 in the Newark High School, when Frank P. Hill, librarian of the Newark Free Public Library, Miss Foote, of the Astor Library, Dr. Gunnison, principal of the Erasmus Hall High School, Brooklyn, and James L. Hays, President of the State Board of Education, will make addresses.

To Sell a Contract.

Gallia, April 6.—The Warren Township Committee will sell at Gallia next Saturday afternoon the carting of $1 000 worth of crushed stone, which was the amount voted for road purposes at the recent election. At the same time and place the grading of the hill leading from Gallia to Passaic will be a bid to the lowest bidder. All bidders will be required to give security for the faithful performance of the work.

Under the Bergen Plan

Elizabeth, April 6.—The Board of Freeholders of Union county will meet tomorrow afternoon to take preliminary action for the sale of the Dunellen-Plainfield line from Elizabeth to Plainfield, under the Bergen bill.

CIVIL LAW UNFIT TO MAKE A DAY SACRED.

Law Unable to Determine Religious Action of a Man.

DR. LEWIS' LAST ARGUMENT.

ACTUAL CHRISTIANS MUST BE DISTURBED TO CONVICT.

Under the Present Condition of Sunday Traffic the Person to be Disturbed Must Go to the Place Where the Selling is Going on and Witness it as a Part of His Religious Observance to Become a Competent Witness, and Dr. Lewis Does Not Think That It Will Ever Be Done.

The following testimony represents the second religious issue in the Carbone trial for Sunday selling, namely: "Disturbing the religious observance of Sunday as the Sabbath." It is from the official record of the first trial:

Irving L. Brady, sworn for the plaintiff in rebuttal. Direct examination by Mr. Marsh.

Q. Are you a member of the Bar? A. Yes sir.

Q. Are you connected with any religious body in this city? A. Yes sir.

Q. What? A. The First Baptist church, Third Street mission.

Q. Do you know the defendant, Carbone? A. Yes sir.

Q. Do you know where his place of business is on North avenue? A. Yes sir.

Q. Have you observed the manner in which he conducts his business on Sunday? A. Yes sir.

Q. Will you describe it to the jury? A. I have passed there quite frequently on the Sabbath and noticed that the doors were open; the place having the usual sign of being open for business; there were people about the door a d side, mostly young men—and older men; there w re glasses on the counter. Mr. Carbone was back by the counter, and it had every appearance that it has on a week day.

Q. Did you observe whether any goods were outside of the store, xp ed f r sale? A. I did not observe that fact, Mr. Marsh.

Q. Was there any attempt to make these sales that you have spoken of private, by having the curtains down, or anything of that sort? A. Not as far as I could see.

Mr. Marsh: I will ask this question subject to Mr. Hetfield's objection.

Q. What have you to say as to whether the business as carried on as you have testified, within your observation, by Mr. Carbone, was or was not so conducted as not to disturb the religious observance of Sunday as the Sabbath?

Mr. Hetfield: I object.

Mr. Marsh. That is all.

Not cross-examined.

Analyze. Sunday cannot be disturbed. A person or persons must be disturbed if any case is made out under the ordinance. The disturbance must be physical, mental, or spiritual The person to be disturbed must go to the place where selling is done and witness it by purchasing or trading by while another purchases. He must do this as a part of his religious observance of Sunday in order to become a competent witness. The above testimony was of no legal value, because it was only the general expression of opinion as to the right or wrong of selling on Sunday; yet we must believe that the city secured the best witnesses it could.

It is evident that the ordinance is so religious that it is impossible to make it operative. Before it can be permanently successful, the city must fix two standards for these religious tests.

1. How religious must a man be on "Saturday?" 2. How and to what extent must religious men be disturbed on Sunday? 3. It must be religious men who are disturbed. An irreligious man cannot be religiously disturbed. Under the second test the city must draw its witnesses from the ranks of religious men. If it does not fix the necessary standards each case will depend on the religious complexion of the jury and of the court. Confessedly, it is a difficult ordinance to enforce. In a word, it will neither hold water nor cider.

"Sabbath observance" as a religious question is brought into disrepute by every effort to determine the qual ity of religious actions by civil law. Aside from the theological irrelevancies on which the "Puritan theory" of Sunday is based Sunday laws have been the most powerful influence in prom ting Sunday holidayism. The result in Plainfield will follow in the same line. This is 1898.

A. H. Lewis.

Sale Will Not Be Enlarged.

Sheriff Applegate in town to-day decided by the advice of the sheriff in all this place to hold the sale of the property of Mrs. Lucy Ann Carpenter, which will be sold at public vendue, at the front door of the Court House, this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mr. Applegate, of North Plainfield, for Isaac Hicks, Henry Barcalo has the contract for transporting them. Another order for 20 0 0 bricks has been given and they will be used for the erection of a number of houses which the company will build. George Waht has the contract for constructing the dwellings.

RECEIVED STOLEN GOODS

THE CHARGE ON WHICH FRANK HAULENBECK WAS ARRESTED.

His Seventeen Year Old Brother-in-Law Confessed to the Thefts—Property Was Taken From the Central Railroad.

The police visited the storehouse of Frank Haulenbeck, the junk dealer, Tuesday. As a result, the proprietor was placed under arrest and held for a hearing, charged with receiving stolen goods. His brother-in-law, James Fillmore, was arrested on the charge of larceny.

For some time the employes of the Jersey Central Railroad have been missing various articles from the battery wells and supply stations. The strange disappearance of the railroad property led to an investigation on the part of the railroad detectives. For sometime Detective Dougherty has been working up the case. He had his suspicions but it was only yesterday that the necessary evidence was secured.

Frank Haulenbeck lives at 847 North avenue. With him lives his father in-law, John W. Phillimore, and the latter's son, James, seventeen years old. Yesterday, young Phillimore was suddenly confronted by the police and Detective Dougherty. He was charged with stealing battery copper and zinc from the battery yard between Plainfield and Fanwood on several occasions. He broke down and confessed the theft.

A complaint was then made against him by Detective Dougherty and a warrant issued by Justice Moffett. He declared that he had taken the stolen property to Haulenbeck who had allowed him three cents a pound for it. The value of all the stolen copper and zinc was placed at $5.

A warrant was then issued by Justice Moffett for Frank Haulenbeck on the charge of receiving stolen goods. The complaint was made by his father-in-law. Haulenbeck appeared before the Justice yesterday afternoon, and was held under $200 bail to appear for a hearing this afternoon. Haulenbeck once served a year in State prison on the same charge.

Phillimore was arrested by Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Flynn yesterday afternoon When arraigned before Justice Moffett, he pleaded guilty to the charge and was held under $100 bail to appear as a witness in the case against his brother in law.

NO MESSAGE FROM PRESIDENT UNTIL MONDAY.

STATE PAPER WILL NOT BE MADE PUBLIC TILL LATER.

The Reason is That Time is Wanted to Allow Americans to Leave Havana.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 6, 2:45 O'CLOCK.—IT IS ANNOUNCED THAT THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE WILL NOT BE SENT TO CONGRESS TODAY.

THIS POSTPONEMENT IS SAID TO HAVE BEEN CAUSED FOR THE REASON THAT SUFFICIENT TRANSPORTATION FOR THE AMERICANS AT HAVANA CANNOT BE SECURED TODAY.

Washingtog, April 6.—The President's message to Congress has been delayed.

The State Department is awaiting the departure of Consul General Lee and the Americans from Cuba.

The Americans cannot get sufficient transportation at present.

The following is a correct forecast of the important provisions of the delayed message.

The message will be firm and vigorous in tone.

It will recommend that the President be empowered to use armed land and Naval force to expell Spain from Cuba.

The qualification "at his discretion," so strongly urged by one element of Congress, will not be included in the message.

It will be left to Congress to say whether authority shall be exercised by the President immediately or at his discretion.

There will be no recommendation for the recognition of the Cuban independence.

The President is malterably opposed to such action at the present time.

The official announcement was brought from the White House to Congress.

Chairman Davis, of the Foreign affairs committee, stated the lives of the Americans in Havana, would be in danger if message was read today.

Beyond that they were unable to leave Havana today.

The Senate agreed to wait until Monday for the message.

They will take no action until then The Queen of Spain has taken the affair in her own hands and promises a peaceful settlement For these reasons President McKinley has decided to delay the message.

Havana, April 6.—Consul General Lee was ordered by the State Department at Washington to leave Havana at 1 o'clock this afternoon. He is still on the island.

Washington, April 6.—The ambassadors of Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy yesterday agreed to a joint note offering their services to avert war.

London, April 6.—One of the officials in the highest authority has made a statement that the British government assures the United States of her fullest and most cordial sympaty in the Cuban policy of the United States.

Washington, April 6.—The U S troops are being ordered to move south tonight Secretaries Alger and Long are sending messages direct from the White House

Hong Kong, April 6.—The American fleet at this port is now coaling and preparing to sail.

Key West, April 6.—The battleship Cincinnati is aground in the harbor.

New York, April 6.—Battleship Texas left Brooklyn Navy Yard at 2 a. m. this morning for Hampton Roads. She can be ready for combat in ten minutes.

Havana, April 6.—Anti-American riots are hourly expected at Mantanzas. Monday night two charitable visitors were obliged to board ship for safety.

Consul Brice yesterday requested Consul Lee to notify the State Department authorities that Americans cannot be protected in case of outbreak.

RESERVES NEWLY UNIFORMED.

The Entire Battalion of the East Equipped for the Montauk Trip.

Hoboken, April 6.—The entire Battalion of the East, Naval Reserves, was fully equipped with uniforms on board the ship Portsmouth last Monday night, after the general inspection order by Commander Washington Irving, for the purpose. The detail which has been ordered to take the monitor Montauk from League Island to Portland Me., was inspected first and every man whose uniform was wholly or in part not in good condition for actual service was fitted out with new goods.

When the officers were through with their work every man on the ship had had his kit inspected. There was no drill as had been ordered, the inspection consuming so much time that it was dispensed with.

It was announced that the Montauk was put into drydock at League Island and that it was estimated that one day's work while in drydock would suffice to put the boat in seaworthy condition The detailed men were told to inspect orders to go to League Island on Thursday or Friday.

W R SPIRIT AT THE PLAINS.

Young Men are Talking of Forming a Militia Company.

Scotch Plains, April 5.—The war spirit has reached Scotch Plains. The young men are now busily talking over the question of forming a militia company to take the field in case of war with Spain. E. L. Hand is at the head of the movement. While no steps have been taken toward the regular organization of a company, a number have expressed themselves as willing to go. It is understood that an inquiry will be made of the State authorities to find out if the company will be accepted if organized.

—A dance will be held in the Fanwood Club House on the evening of April 15th.

—The monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held as usual to-morrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock p. m. at 129 East Front street.

—VanEmburgh & Son are fully justified in thinking so much about the Jellewell cream soda water for they certainly have a handsome assortment.

—Mr. Brown, of Scotch Plains, was discharged from the county jail this morning by Hon. Garret D. Wall, having served the imprisonment part of his sentence.

—Frank Lloke, of West Front street, has received a license to sell liquor wholesale and retail in the building on what used to be known as the Augustus Moore property, Smalleytown.

SPANISH VIEWS WERE RECEIVED BY HISSES.

An Audience Showed Its Feeling in a Vigorous Way.

AT THE FIREMEN'S BENEFIT.

PICTURES OF UNITED STATES BATTLESHIPS RECEIVED WITH APPLAUSE.

The Views Were Shown on Canvas—Councilman William N. Runyon Was Master of Ceremonies, and Added Much to the Pleasure of the Entertainment—Boys Club Made a Great Hit, and Did Also Benjamin LaVere in His Cornet Solos—Committee in Charge Deserve Credit for Its Success.

Judging by the expression of feeling at the entertainment given in Washington Hall last Tuesday under the auspices of the Exempt Firemen's Association for the benefit of the disabled firemen of the city, it was plain to be seen that everyone present stands in favor of Cuba and against Spain. During the evening several pictures were shown on a canvass representing Spanish soldiers, ships, etc., and the outbursts of hisses showed conclusively where the audience stood. On the hand pictures of the United States battleships received the loudest applause, as did also pictures of Grant, Lincoln and McKinley. he audience was hardly able to control itself.

Councilman William N. Runyon was master of ceremonies and announced the various numbers on the programme He also favored the audience with a number of vocal solos. The appearance of the Plainfield Mandolin and Banjo Club was a great success Benj. J LaVere rendered two cornet solos, accompanied by his orchestra, and they received a flattering reception.

The projectoscope was manipulated by Thomas Schaffer and William Townley and the greatest satisfaction was given. "Take Back Your Gold" was illustrated on the canvas and sung by Alfred Springer with great effect.

During the entertainment Fred Van Epe and Mr. Smith, of the Mandolin and Banjo Club gave a banjo duet, accompanied by Bert Harold on the piano

The committee in charge of the affair consisted of T. O. Doane, Joseph Hubbard William A Woodruff, Edward Vermeule, D. W. Litteil, E. M. Laing, and to them is due great credit for the excellent entertainment provided.

JURY FOR MURDER TRIAL

ALLE ED SLAY RS OF FARMER PITTS TO B: TRIED AT MAY TERM.

An Extra Large Panel Drawn by Sheriff Kirk Yesterday—Judge Benj. A. Vail Presided for the First Time.

Elizabeth, April 6.—Judge Benjamin A. Vail made his first appearance on the bench of the county court yesterday at a special session held for the drawing of the panel of petit jurors for the May term.

Judge Vail was very prompt, and when he came upon the bench the only court officials present were County Detective Keron, Court Interpreter Schultbies and one or two constables.

The trial of George Manshanda and Louis Boesel, the murderers of Farmer James Pitts at Summit last summer, will take place at the May term, and accordingly Judge Vail directed that 84 jurors be selected instead of the ordinary panel of 48 jurors.

Sheriff Kirk drew the jurors, and they were accepted by the court in part as follows:

Plainfield—John T. Oliam, Peter W Mundy, William H Drayton, Bethuel T. Barnes, Lloyd D. Floyd.

Westfield—August Brown, Adolph Ganz I, Joseph A. Fairborn.

Cranford—George W. Westervelt, David Rankin, Jr.

Springfield—Charles F. Langenhan, George W French.

Clark—Fred Acken, John Stelle.

Fanwood — Louis E. Kennedy, George F. Carter.

New Providence—John R. Barnett, Sr., Leander D Osborn.

Linden—Samuel Oakford, Stephen Pope.

THE MULES RAMMED A TROLLEY CAR HARD.

A Hay Carter Who Declined to Vacate Street Car Tracks.

HE PAID $8 FOR IT IN COURT.

THE DASH BOARD OF THE TROLLEY CAR WAS BROKEN.

Charles McIntee Was the Man Who Guided the Gallant Mules Into the Car—Returning From Newark, Where He Had Delivered Hay, He Was in No Mood to be Trifled With by a Street Car—Claims He Had Not Drunk any Fiery Liquid—One Mule Was Badly Cut—Case Heard in Court

The hay carter opened the battle. He declined to vacate the tracks. The trolley car was not in a position to leave them. Then the hay carter turned his gallant team of mules at the approaching car and rammed it with the pole. The crash that followed signalized Charles McEntee's first acquaintance with the inside of the Plainfield lock up.

McEntee was in the employ of Ellsworth Johnson, the Dunellen hay-carter. Tuesday morning he drove a big load of hay over to Newark. He returned in the afternoon. It was 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening as McEntee's mules plodded steadily through the snow on East Fifth street bound for home

McEntee says he did not drink anything at Newark Neither did he partake at any of the road houses on the return, he says. He cannot explain, however, how he happened to be in the condition he was that evening. His only explanation for the accident was that he did not see the car as he was talking to a boy who had begged a ride from Fanwood.

The trolley car was bound for Netherwood in charge of Motorman John Powers and Conductor Philip McGuire. On East Fifth street the motorman noticed a team approaching on the track. He rang his bell. The team kept steadily on. Again he rang but with no better result. Then he yelled at the driver. The next moment the pole of the hay-rick struck the head light of the car, crashed through it and then demolished the dash-board of the car.

Powers fled within the car for safety.

The hayrick was drawn by a pair of mules. One of them was thrown down and badly cut by the collision. The other escaped. McEntee refused to move his share of the wreck from the tracks. Then Patrolman Higgins arrived on the scene and compelled the haycarter to take his mules and wagon out of the way of the car.

After going a short distance, the hayrick collapsed with a broken kingpin. Higgins took the horses to Coles' stable and the driver to the lockup.

Yesterday, McEntee was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and of reckless driving. He pleaded not guilty. The Judge heard the testimony and decided he was guilty. McEntee was given his choice between a fine of $8 and thirty days in the county jail.

TO PROTECT GAME BIRDS.

Commissioners Hunting for Men Who Kill Them Out of Season.

The State Fish and Game Commission has opened a war on the marketmen who are dealing in quail, partridge and other game birds which are now protected by the game laws of this State.

It is claimed that hundreds of quail are sold in violation of the law every day and that restaurant proprietors and others who purchase the birds are equally guilty with the marketmen.

The open season closed in New York State on Jan. 1, and the law makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $25 for each bird, for any person to kill or have in his or her possession any bird being killed after that date. The law provides, however, that these birds may be exposed for sale providing they shall have been killed three hundred miles out of the State.

The commissioners claim that many of the birds exposed for sale were killed within the prescribed limit and that some have been killed within the State. It has been ascertained that birds have been killed unlawfully and shipped to points south and west for consignment to New York in order to evade the three-hundred mile clause of the law.

Gas Company Elects.

The Plainfield Gas Light Company held the annual meeting Tuesday and elected the following directors: Harry G Runkle, A. G. Brunson, William Runkle, F. A. Pope and E. G. Pope.

WORK ON A WARSHIP

CONSTANT SUCCESSION OF DRILLS AND EXERCISES FOR THE MEN.

The Rapid-Fire Gun Practice—The "Ram Drill" and Its Uses—Ordered Below in a Hurry—Working the Big Guns Keeps Them Constantly Engaged.

Whether at sea or in port, there is no lack of daily work for the crews of the big warships. For the sake of discipline and training, as well as for the physical exercise, the men are kept jumping from one drill to another at a lively rate. A morning spent on board the monitor Puritan, lying at the Cob Dock, in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, is exceedingly interesting. No sooner does the active, hardy-looking Jack Tars finish one exercise than they are promptly summoned, by the clear notes of the bugle, to another of an entirely different character.

To an outsider the most striking and effective of them all is the drill with the rapid-firing guns, which include three and six pounders. At a bugle signal the men take their places, four or five to each gun. The first move is the sighting and taking aim. One man screws the gun into the desired position by rapidly revolving a wheel, while the others mean-while are getting out the ammunition and opening the breech. At the order, Drill cartridges—load!" a dummy cartridge of the same size as the real one is slipped into the open breech. This is then closed and locked by means of a crank. The firing, which is accomplished by the pulling of a string or the pressing of a button, is not practised, of course, in the ordinary drill.

The aiming and loading are repeated frequently, and the men who have been attached to the ship for some time work with the utmost swiftness and precision. The drill cartridges are kept in cases near the guns, so as to be handy, but in an actual engagement all ammunition has to be passed up from below through the ammunition-hoists. These are tubes extending from the hold, where the ammunition is stored, up to the gundeck. The gunners' mates and their assistants below feed the cartridges into the hoists, and they are carried up by means of an endless belt, which is kept constantly in motion.

Several times the gun practice is interrupted by a sudden signal ordering all the men below. This has to be done occasionally in an engagement, when the enemy's fire is too heavy, to prevent unnecessary loss of life. They then disappear below and reappear on deck again in marvelously quick time.

In connection with the firing of these guns the "ram drill" is practised. At a signal every man drops where he stands into a position in which his body is extended at nearly full length, but does not touch the deck, being supported upon the tips of the fingers and the tips of the toes. It is put into practical use when the ship is about to ram or be rammed by another vessel. If the men did not put themselves into a position of this sort, which lessens the shock as much as possible, they would be thrown down, and would be far more likely to be injured.

Another point of value in the ram drill lies in the fact that it is one more thing done according to orders and with a purpose. As such it strengthens the general morale. A promiscuous tumbling, on the other hand, such as would ensue if the men tried to stand during the collision, would certainly not have this effect. The ram drill is practised on only a few ships of the navy.

In an engagement the decks are cleared of everything which is not absolutely necessary as fighting material. Such articles as the mess chests and all superfluous woodwork, even the lifeboats in the davits, are all indicated by the word "Overboard" painted upon them. They are cut away ruthlessly and thrown over the side at the beginning of the fight.

From the deck nothing can be seen of the actual working of the four great twelve-inch guns. The machinery by which they are operated is all within the two revolving turrets from which each pair projects. The two guns are fixed parallel to each other, and as the turret turns they point successively in all directions. They act independently of each other in only one respect—it is possible to raise or depress the aim of one without moving its mate. From the outside the drill with them appears a slow process, for the guns cannot be moved rapidly.

Among the other exercises of the morning is a few minutes' rifle drill and the "settingup" drill—a series of calisthenic movements designed to improve a person's bearing and keep them agile. There are, in all, eighteen different exercises prescribed in the regulations. They consist of the best recognized movements for developing all the muscles of body and limbs and for strengthening the breathing apparatus.—New York Tribune.

A Beautiful Idea of the Indians.

Among the superstitutions of the Seneca Indians was one most beautiful one. When a young maiden died they imprisoned a young bird until it first began to try its powers of song, and then, loading it with caresses and messages, they loosed its bonds over her grave, in the belief that it would not fold its wing nor close its eye until it had flown to the spirit-land and delivered its precious burden of affection to the loved and lost one.—St. Nicholas.

A Modern Cradle.

A recent invention is a cradle that rocks by means of a clockwork mechanism, and at the same time plays baby tunes.

TOO GOOD AN IMITATION.

Story of a Stuffed Santa Claus and the Fate That Befel Him.

Miss Elizabeth Allerton and her sister Augusta had for years lived all alone in a big house not a thousand miles from Boston, says the Boston Transcript. It had been their pleasure on each successive Christmas to gather a company of children in the great, handsome parlors and join with them in having a gay time. But finally they planned to depart a bit from their usual custom and, placing the Christmas tree in a cambric-covered tub, and here they were, on Christmas Eve, surrounded by a lot of old garments that they had found among the trunks and boxes "up garret," making a figure to represent Santa Claus that should stand in the bay by the fireplace and clasp the well-filled tree in his strong right arm.

Miss Elizabeth was skilled in the use of paints, and upon the surface of an apoplectic-looking bunch covered with light flannel she was busily engaged in forming circles and dots and masks to represent human features. Augusta, meantime, was brushing up the copper-colored vest thickly bestrewn with green roses that was to appear from beneath the dressing gown, covering the deficiencies in the shape of broomsticks and switches that composed the form. A gray-squirrel muff that had not seen the light of day for many a year had been shaped into a hat, and was the crowning point, in every sense, of his home-made Kriss Kringle.

"Dear me!" said Miss Elizabeth when the sticks had been located and the curled hair pulled over the dressing-gown collar, "he looks amazingly like a real man. I do hope the children will not be frightened when they see him."

"I was thinking of that myself," said Miss Augusta. "I wish you had not made his eyes so staring and his cheeks so red. Let's set him down and put some flour on his face."

The sisters started for their room above. Miss Augusta pulled the door so closely after her that she shut half of her sleeve in. Her sister noted that she locked the door and put the key in her pocket. They both sat down in their room and said nothing for a few minutes, when the scurrying of a mouse between the walls made them each give a little nervous scream. Miss Elizabeth started up. "Augusta," she said, "I can't sleep a wink to-night with that man in the house. I'm just going down and take him to pieces." "I was just going to suggest that very thing myself," said the younger one, echoing, as she generally did, her elder sister. They stepped down once more, keeping very close to each other, and, creeping behind the rosy-cheeked effigy they reduced him once more to a heap of old clothes, which they thrust into the closet, putting the head into a handbox at the top shelf. Then they retired to peaceful slumbers.

A MOTHER'S GRATITUDE.

How Thanks as Expressive as a Horse Could Make Them.

Some time ago, as Mr. Niedlinger was approaching the place at which he was spending the summer with his family, he heard cries of distress. At the corner of a barn he found a colt wedged between the siding and a post which supported the ends of the wires of a barbed wire fence, says a writer in Our Dumb Animals.

The barbs of the wires of the fence were hurting the colt cruelly. But the cries which Mr. Niedlinger heard were not from the colt. They came from the colt's mother, a beautiful brood mare, who stood by with arched neck and wide eyes and quivering body, expressing her pain, her solicitude, and crying out for the help which she could not give herself.

Mr. N. hurriedly removed the staples which secured the wire to the post, the wires dropped and the colt went free. The mother, with every demonstration of joy at the release of her offspring rushed up to it, licked it, put her chin over it, and fondled it with low sounds. Pleased that he had given such great mother so much joy as was at that he had saved the colt, Mr. Niedlinger started along the path to the house, but he had not gone far when he was aware of hoof-falls behind him. He looked over his shoulder. There was the mother. He reached out his hand. She licked it with low whinnies of thankfulness. She followed him clear to the house, and still stood on the lawn thanking him for what he had done in the interest of one whose mother she was, and whom she loved with all a mother's love.

WHAT IS TRIPLE EXTRACT?

The Process by Which the Odor of Flowers is Obtained.

Flowers that are to be used in the manufacture of perfumes are always gathered at nightfall or quite early in the morning when the dew is upon them. Before they are gathered, however, receptacles are prepared for them in the shape of large frames, over which are spread cotton cloths well saturated with olive oil or almond oil. The cut flowers are brought in, and are lickly spread on a frame; then another frame is fitted over it, and that in urn is well spread with flowers; then a third frame is fitted over the second spread of flowers, and thus the work goes on until a huge pile of flowers is prepared.

This flower heap is left for two days, at the end of which time the flowers are removed from the frames and replaced by fresh ones. The frames are filled and emptied every two days until two weeks have passed. Then the cloths are detached from the frames and placed under great pressure, and all the oil is pressed out of them. The oil thus obtained is heavily charged with the fragrance of the flowers, and it is mixed with double its weight of pure rectified spirits and put in a vessel called a "digester," which is simply a porcelain or block-tin kettle that fits in another kettle. When in use the outer vessel is filled with boiling water.

In this vessel the mixture of oil and spirits is placed for three or four days; then, after having cooled, the spirit is decanted into another vessel holding the same quantity of fragrant oil, and the digesting process is repeated. After being thus digested three times the spirit is found to have taken up enough of the perfume, and it is then decanted from the oil for the third and last time through a tube, one end of which is filled with cotton wool to serve as a filter. The fluid thus prepared is called "triple extract."—Philadelphia Times.

Miss Mary Proctor.

Miss Proctor is a young woman, but when it is remembered that she is the daughter of the late Prof. Richard A. Proctor, and during the later years of his life was her distinguished father's colleague and assistant in his work, no one will be surprised at the role that she has assumed or that she is eminently successful as a lecturer on a subject that only very few men approach. Miss Proctor has obtained place and recognition among the astronomers of the world. She is a

His Ear a Clock.

George Henderson, a colored man, of Zanesville, O., was noted for a remarkable peculiarity.

He was endowed with a phenomenal power of being able to tell the time of day correctly by simply placing a finger in his ear. At such times he claimed that a light flashed through his brain, revealing to him the positions at which the hands of a correct watch were then pointing.

His powers were well known to residents of the city, and he was never unwilling to oblige any one with the time of day.—Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

TO BANISH WORRY.

SOCIETIES FORMED ALONG LINES OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

A Cousin of Lincoln's Secretary of State Promulgates the Rules Upon the Principle That Worry Never Has Done and Never Can Do Aught but Harm.

A cousin of Lincoln's Secretary of State promulates the rules upon the principle that worry never has done and never can do aught but harm.

Drive dull care to the winds! Away with worry! America is to be transformed into a perfect Utopia, in which every person will pursue the even tenor of his way, and in which there shall be neither worry nor the fruits of worriment. All you have to do is to buy a copy of Mr. Seward's little book, "Don't Worry; the Scientific Law of Happiness," join one of the circles and spend the remainder of your existence without a thought of the morrow, what you shall eat or what you shall drink, or wherewithal you shall be clothed. The secret of happiness shall be yours. If you are a tailor, and your patrons forget to pay their bills, and you will learn to get along without worrying about it. And if, as a consequence of the forgetfulness of your patrons, you are unable to meet your own obligations, you must get your creditors to join a "Don't Worry" circle, and then you will be all right.

The founder of this crusade against brain exhaustion and nervous prostration is a cousin of former Secretary of State William H. Seward. He is a musician by profession, and until recently taught music in the Teacher's College. He has long devoted his attention to Christian science, and in 891 organized the Brotherhood of Christian Unity.

Mr. Seward claims that Americans are a nation of worriers, and that above all others, he ascribes to the worrying habit—that it is a national vice, a disease which he calls Americanitis. If worry can be conquered nearly all the passions that destroy our happiness will disappear.

"The habit of worrying cannot be overcome," says Mr. Seward in his book, "without resolute and perserverging effort. But with such effort the habit certainly can be mastered. If the following suggestions are intelligently observed the habit will lose its power, and quietness and peace will take the place of the feverish anxiety, the undercurrent of restless feeling which robs the human heart of its natural happiness and raises the question so often heard, whether life is really worth the living."

1. Consider what must be involved in the truth that God is infinite and that you are a part of His plan.

2. Memorize some of the Scripture promises and recall them when the temptation to worry returns.

3. Cultivate a spirit of gratitude for daily mercies.

4. Realize worrying as an enemy which destroys your happiness.

5. Realize that it can be cured by persistent effort.

6. Attack it definitely as something to be overcome.

7. Realize that it never has done and never can do the least good. It wastes vitality and impairs the mental faculties.

8. Help and comfort your neighbor.

9. Forgive your enemies and conquer your aversions.

10. Induce others to join the Don't Worry movement.

Mr. Seward's earnestness is shown in a later work on the subject, which has not yet appeared. "A don't worry circle," he says, "may be large or small. Any family may agree to resolve itself into a don't worry circle, and many are doing so. On the other hand, members need not even live in the same place. There is one circle of three members, two of whom live in New York and the third in Michigan. They study the scientific principles of the subject and help each other by correspondence. Usually members live in the same town and have regular meetings."

It has been suggested that school teachers form circles and that the principle be applied to their work in the schoolroom.

Slightly Personal.

Mrs. Wallace—Did you read about that poor man who stole a loaf of bread and made the defense that he was starving?

Mr. Wallace—Was it homemade bread?

"What has that to do with it?"

"Because, if it was, he was lying. A starving man would not have the strength to run away with a loaf of homemade bread.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Theatrical Note.

"The stage," said the sallow minister, "should be exterminated, root and branch."

"You can do away with 'em root and branch if you want," said the florid landlord, "but I propose to hold on to their trunks."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A NUN LOST; A WIFE GAINED.

Pretty Romance of a Young Novitiate in a Sombre Ottawa Convent.

Mlle. Baudoin, who afterwards was known as Sister Bonsecours, was only sixteen years old when she professed herself a postulant of the Order of the Grey Nuns. She was the daughter of a narrow-minded, bigoted tradesman, who like many of his class among the French Canadians imagined that to have a son or daughter in religious orders was to have a sort of patent of nobility.

So Mlle. Baudoin started in on her probation—a probation of five years, the vows being made only from year to year. At first things went admirably. Every body loved the girl-they couldn't help it. She herself seemed happy. The penitude sublime in her nature had to find some outlet, and it bubbled out in music. The fame of Sister Bonsecour's skill and genius in music soon crept out beyond the convent walls. People in Ottawa and from a distance began to send their daughters to her for instruction. She became more popular than ever with her superiors; she grew to be a source of substantial money revenue to the convent. A brilliant musician, an accomplished artist, possessing a neat little wit of her own, Sister Baudoin became something the envy among the pious matrons of Ottawa, and quite the idol of the pupils the matrons sent her.

But in the meantime something was happening to Sister Bonsecours. It dated from the day when a handsome young physician called at the convent to see a friend. It was observed by the lynx-eyed sisters that the physician had occasion for a number of days after his visit to go by the convent very frequently, and further-more in connection with this fact a coincidence was observed. This was that whenever the physician was passing Sister Bonsecours was always playing the piano with a verve and dash which was remarkable even in her brilliant musician as she was.

Of course the Gray Nuns were scandalized at this.

Then came entreaties, threats, appeals to the bishop. But it was all in vain until the aid of Sister Bonsecaurs's father, Baudoin, was called in. Baudoin in substance pronounced sentence of parental excommunication upon his daughter unless she renounced her love and quietness.

Poor Sister Bonsecours had braved all the artillery of the Church; had endured all the humiliation and disgusting penances that were heaped upon her without once shrinking in her resolution. But under the paternal wrath all her fine spirit gave way. She continued in the convent, dragging out an unhappy, wearisome life until liberty at last came with the death of her father. Then she shed the gray gown forever and fluttered away like a bird out of a cage.

In Montreal she began giving music lessons, until by the strangest of strange chances that handsome physician reappeared upon the scene. And—well, they were married, and have been living happy ever afterwards.—New York World.

HAWAIIAN WOMAN 122 YEARS OLD.

Still Has Most of Her Faculties—Can Talk of Happenings 100 Years Ago.

The oldest inhabitant of Hawaii, and probably the oldest human being in the world who has retained most of her faculties, is a native woman residing in Honolulu the story of whose life became known through the efforts of Alatau T. Atkinson, editor of the Hawaiian Star and general superintendent of the census just completed. Her name is Kepoolele Apau, and her age according to her own reckoning, 124 years. This ancient specimen of humanity can chat intelligently about events that occurred more than a century ago, can see a coin in a prospective donor's hand clear across the room, and can patch clothing as deftly as any of her great-great-grandchildren. She is getting purblind, but her general health is good and her appetite fair. She volunteered the information that she remembered the digging of the well in Kau, and that she was a child at the time, similar to a child running about the house, a child of between 6 and 7 years. This event occurred in 1781, and is described in Fornander's History. This would make her 122 years old, according to exact calculation.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Why George Was Not First.

Scene—American schoolroom. Teacher—Who was the first man?

Little Boy (at rear of class)—George Washington.

"Why do you think George Washington was the first man?"

"Because he was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen?"

Another boy raises his hand.

"Well, Johnny, who do you think was the first man?"

"Don't know what his name was but I know George Washington wasn't the first."

"What makes you so positive?"

"Why, my history says he married a widow, so there must have been a man ahead of him."—Exchange.

A Darky-Proof Hen Coop.

A man in Cartersville purchased the gallows on which a man was hanged and built a henery of the lumber. He has never had a chicken stolen from it, and it is said that the colored brother won't go within a block of it if he can possibly avoid doing so.—Atlantic Constitution.

Pure Candy Good for Children.

The weight of opinion is in favor of a moderate amount of good pure candy eaten by children with or soon after their food, and that it is not only not in the least detrimental, but is positively beneficial. Many of the cheap sweets manufactured out of injurious compounds that have drawn upon the practice the odium of medical men. Pure sweets contribute valuable force to the human system, and need not be denied. Chicago physician claims that one can scarcely eat too much pure chocolate. Now, if this authority would only go a little further and tell us how we are to know the pure from the impure, a great burden would be lifted from many mothers who are anxious to do right and yet are equally anxious to contribute to their children's happiness.

Handsome Theatre Corsage.

The styles in theatre waists are even more varied than in shirt waists, and are as richly trimmed as ever. They have not taken the severe shape which was promised, so that the blouse and surplice effect still remain. Revers are also much seen, and enjoy the height of favor.

A novel treatment of bodice trimming is shown in the illustration. The corsage is made of silk, trimmed with lace. The simulated guimpe is of the silk, tucked on either side lengthwise, the center panel being of fine lace insertion and tucks. The epaulettes and revers are of the lace, stiffly interlined, and faced with silk. Sleeves of lace and silk, with silk puff at shoulder.

Airing Spare Rooms.

Rooms which are not contantly used often get too little fresh air, and they have, therefore, a somewhat unpleasant, close odor. When possible, the windows should be opened every day in fine weather, or at least twice a week; and occasionally the beds should be turned out, the mattresses being thrown back so as to allow of a free current of air through the bedding, and the blankets and pillows should be placed on chairs near the windows. The drawers and wardrobe in a spare room should be left a little open. This will prevent their getting a slightly musty smell, which is peculiar to furniture of this description when shut up for any length of time.

Old Gothoof (savagely): "What's that you mean to tell me that you love thy daughter for herself alone?"

Young Hardupp (tremulously): "Yes, sir; but I think I could l-learn to l-love you t-too, sir—in t-t-time, sir."

Golf can positively be traced in Scottish history back to 1457, and it is believed to have been played much earlier even than that date.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

With the advance of warm weather every body feels a desire to throw off the heavy winter wraps and furs and don some garment of lighter weight. The styles in capes and jackets for early spring wear are very fetching. The Russian blouse has been relegated to the background although the jacket with slightly pouched front and tight fitting back and sides is still with us, and is especially becoming to the slender woman. The coat-bodies which may be worn without an extra wrap is simply invaluable in warm weather, and can be supplemented when necessary by a fur tie or feather boa. An exceedingly dressy coat is of green velvet, and when worn with a skirt of green cloth or serge, makes a smart afternoon toilette, and admits of variation if made with a separate vest.

A striking coat for Spring wear which may be worn open or closed, or practically open, is of dark green cloth. When quite open the fronts are turned back, and the inside of green velvet, edged with guipure insertion, forms revers all down, while the square revers fall over the sleeves. A full jabot of lace is worn, with cascade running down in a point to the waist. The last to accompany it is the big rough straw, with full crown, and trimmed on the left side with three standing tips. A bunch of violets rest on the hair.

A handsome tailor made gown of gray faced cloth is stitched and trimmed with pipings of velvet of a darker shade. The old-fashioned pipings have been revived and are particularly effective used on pale cloth gowns. The skirt of this gown fits perfectly close over the hips, flares slightly at the back, being devoid however of the dust-gathering train which promises to be in vogue so much the coming season. The natty jacket is made quite plain, with the exception of the piping of velvet. The is small revers. The slashed Medici collar is simply stitched. Coat sleeves are tight fitting with a little fulness at the top.

Capes are less frumpy and coquettish, suggesting warmer days.

A new model is in black broadcloth silk, the back full, in cape form showing a yoke above; the front short and drawn into the figure like a bolero and fastening down over a vest of soft silk. The yoke is trimmed with fine cream insertion, and lined throughout with rose colored silk.

This is the most difficult time of the year to predict the fashions in millinery, although many striking styles are shown. As the pompadour style of wearing the hair is still so fashionable many modifications of the Napoleon models will be seen. The large hat with flaring brim will not be seen, but tulle and net promises to be very popular and flowers in many cases will constitute the sole trimming of the fashionable hat.

The shape of a first hat should not be so strange that it is remembered when once seen. So we are fast to face with the fact that a first hat must be much like those we are accustomed to seeing. Not turned or twisted fantastically at intervals, that is.

Of medium brim, not too high or aggressive as to crown and trimming. An allowable departure from the current in favor of the fashionable is this year's brim on some hats, which turns up at the back and then over for some way, the cachepeigne, thus, is less conspicuous.

I saw one first hat which was of black Yeddo (soft, coarse, pliable) straw, with two black wings, put on "shape in front, a cut-steel ornament between and a number upstanding loops of black velvet. Half a dozen bunches of black violets buried the crown. At the back, for a cachepeigne—that is, a depth of trimming so that there was no break between hat and hair line—there were two rosettes of stout net, the fulling wired.

Another first hat was of black Yeddo straw, rather broad brim, crown obscured with great pompons of white taffeta silk, wired and placed one at either side of the crown. A few black wings gave the modish contour, which involves considerable breadth and height.

Other first hats have facings of some bright color and the hat top all black.

That of the drawing is black liberty silk, shirred over white. The flowers—notice that they are composed of violets, with green leaves. The hat is faced with white straw and the body of it is black.

Dress high shoes, as usual, are of patent leather with cloth top. But the shape is as nearly perfect as the shoemaker's art has become. The heel not exactly military? "No, nor yet French. In other times," with a knowing look, "we should call it Spanish."

"What do you name it now?"

"Cuban."

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The long standing occupation of one of the White House clerks is gone. Back through several Administrations it has been the duty of one man to read the newspapers for the President. This man read and clipped and pasted. He filled scrap books with such articles on the Administration as he thought the President might want to see at some future time. But, besides this, he read with reference to what might be of immediate concern to the President. When he found anything he thought the President would like to see at once, he clipped it and pasted it on a sheet with the date and the name of the paper. These sheets were laid before the President as regularly as the mail requiring his attention. The reader for the President had a place on the White House staff as far back as Grant's time if not earlier. He went through all of the principal papers of the country. It was in this way that Mrs. Grant saw the beautiful tribute to her daughter at the time of the Sartoris wedding, written by the late John M. Edwards of Missouri, which she acknowledged gracefully as the expression which touched her most deeply. The reader for the President is a newspaper man, and believes he has a better way to accomplish the same purpose. Furthermore, the President has a select number of newspapers which he prefers to go through himself.

Mrs. Secretary Gage.

Mrs. Lyman J. Gage is fond of home life and simplicity. The erstwhile Gage house in Chicago was essentially an old-fashioned homestead. Not that it lost anything by not being modern and smart. Nothing yet has been discovered finer than a suite of apartments with southern exposure, wide verandas and broad lawn. Inside all was quiet in color and appointments, and most refreshing, even to the admirers of rococco.

MRS. GAGE.

Mrs. Gage's hospitality was generous, simple and dignified. Her surroundings in Washington show her taste to be the best, and she has already demonstrated her ability to keep the set pace in that city of large, lavish and continuous entertainments.

The Cabinet set is, of course, the centre of the social world of Washington, and among all the hostesses in the group there is none more popular than Mrs. Gage whose reputation as a hostess has followed her to the national capital.

Gun Foundries and Peace.

When Benjamin Harrison was President he was asked to address the ecumenical conference of the Methodist Church. Delegates were present from all parts of the world. What he said was peculiarly applicable to this immediate occasion, and is worth recalling in connection with the voting by Congress of $50,000,000 for national defense. President Harrison said:

"It is a curious incident that some days ago, and before I was aware of the theme or the occasion we have here this morning I had appointed this afternoon to visit the great gun foundry of the United States at the navy yard. There in that shop are cast their regular sequence. I am here at this arbitration meeting before I go to the gun factory. This subject is one that has long attracted the attention and I think I may say has, perhaps, as greatly attracted the attention, interest and adherence of the United States as that of any other Christian power in the world. Let me say simply this: That for myself—temporarily in a place of influence in this country—and much more for the great body of its citizenship, I express the desire of America for peace with the whole world. It would have been vain to suggest the pulling down of block houses or family disarmament to the settlers on a hostile Indian frontier. They would have told you rightly that the conditions were not ripe. And so it may be, and probably is true, that a full application of the principle is not presently possible, the devil still being unchained. We will have our gun foundries, and possibly will best promote the settlement of international disputes by arbitration, by having it understood that if the appeal to a fiercer tribunal we shall not be out of the debate. And it is a Christian sentiment, manifesting itself in a nation, to remove forever such causes of dispute; and then what remains will be the easy subject of adjustment by fair international arbitration. But I had not intended to enter into a discussion of this great topic, but only by the setting forth of which you have appointed those who have given it special attention."

SENATOR.

Had Done Her Share.

"What have you ever done for the betterment of mankind?" asked the scornful female person.

"Me?" answered the plump and widowly looking one. "I have been a better half to no less than three of 'em."—Indianapolis Journal.

Luck.

To pick up a horseshoe is said to be lucky, more especially if the front is worn to you.

To find a stone with a hole through it also considered good luck.

Black cats are said to bring luck to the house they stray into.

A mole on the side of the throat is good luck.

The tingling of the right ear is lucky, while the right eye itching is a lucky omen.

If the right hand itches it is said to mean money.

When the front teeth are set wide apart it is a sign of luck and that you will travel.

It is a very prevalent idea that those having much hair on their arms are born to be rich."

If the right cheek burns some one is speaking well of you.

Long joints denote generosity.

To sit cross-legged is said to bring luck.

When the big toe is joined or partly joined to the next one, as it sometimes is, it is said to denote luck.

To turn your apron before the new moon is to ensure good luck for the ensuing month.

An emerald ring is said to ensure purity of thought.

The Romans used to say that if lightning shot from the East and returned to the same quarter, after making a circuit of the sky, it was a favorable sign.

Swallows bring good luck when they built in the corner of your house.

To wear your boots at the heel is good luck, as it indicates that you will save a great deal of money.

Dainty Pincushion.

This is a good shape for an emery cushion, which is useful to keep needles free from rust, if their owners have lamp hands. A square of about five inches must be lined with strong and closely-made calico, into which the emery powder is tied. The corners must be cut off, and the top lined with silk of a contrasting color, and arranged to look like the petals of a flower. A little piece of silk worked with black silk to look like the interior of a poppy, finishes the cushion.

The Ideal Hostess.

She must make you feel individually that you are the favored guest.

She must make you feel perfectly at home.

She must see everything, and yet possess the art of seeming to see nothing.

She must never look bored.

She must know how to get congenial people together.

She must know how to keep conversation always going.

She must never let anyone be slighted or overlooked.

She must know when to ask the amateur musician to display his or her talents.

She must be perfectly unselfish about her own pleasures.

She must remember that nothing is so tiresome, so surely death to all enjoyment, as the feeling that one is being entertained.

Stockings.

Stockings should always be taken into consideration, for a great temptation for evening use. During the day pocket your vanity, and submit to protecting the feet from the cold by wearing them to wear thin ones at all times, especially if they are embroidered, for they look much nattier and prettier; but, my dear friends, keep these warm woolen stockings or thick ones of some description. In the evening the rooms are so much warmer than in the daytime that there is not the same likelihood of cold being taken then, and to wear thick stockings in the evening might make one feel uncomfortably warm. If unable to drive to evening entertainments, and necessity compels going on foot, something warm, such as gaiters should be worn, which will forever any chilliness from the night air being felt.

New Spring Coats.

The new spring coats are very jaunty and varied enough in style to suit every figure. They are close fitting in the back with loose box fronts or open with revers turning back, which are of satin covered closely with braid in straight rows. There are strapped seams and plain seams and coats with belts, and the prettiest linings are of liberty satin.

Plaid Popular in All Materials.

Plaids now appear in ginghams and claim a share of the popularity given to the same designs shown in wool and silk goods. Some pretty patterns are seen also in organdies and lawns, and in delicate tints of the same color as well as in the real tartan.

"I see the critics, almost to a man, are praising Pensmith's latest book."

"Then they must regard him as being too weak to be in any danger of getting to the top by their help."—Cleveland Leader.

Of the 20,000 Washington Government clerks nearly one-third are women.

New Sun's Veiling.

The new importation of nun's veiling is extremely beautiful this season, the qualities even more sheer than the dainty variety already familiar to us, and the colorings are lovely beyond description. These fabrics are invaluable to those who have to guard against sudden changes of temperature in our fitful climate; for, in effect, these textiles are as dainty as organdy or India mull, while yet being exceedingly protective against the influence of night air, or sea breezes of the summer. Another great point in their favor is, that they rumple less easily than cotton fabrics, or light silks, and they can, with care, be worn an entire season without a visit to the cleaner's. The newest weaves have handsome, fancy borderings.

The Latest in Skirts.

The newest imported models furnish a variety in skirts that is at least noteworthy as an exhibition of the dress designer's ingenuity, but whether or not they will on this side the water banish the plain sheath-fronted skirt, minus all decorations, from all but the several styles of tailor gown, remains to be found out later on, when dressmakers begin to busy themselves in earnest with spring gowns. One of the very old styles revived is the demi-trained evening dress, finished with long, slender pepplum points, the skirt of one rich material, the long points of another; these two fabrics are repeated on the bodice to complete the double effect. Silk braid put on cloth skirts on wide trella patterns, this trimming covering more than half the depth of the skirt, is a very popular garniture. This elaborate and stylish effect is carried out on the full blouse waist often front and back, or the crossing braids appear only on the front of a full blouse vest worn beneath an open jacket made of the cloth.

Fancy Dress. "Roses."

A pretty idea for a fancy dress would be an impersonation of roses, carried out with a white satin skirt, festooned with deep yellow roses and brown foliage, the bodice having a foundation of satin, over which gold braid should be interlaced and trimmed with roses to correspond with those on skirt. Another idea would be to have the white satin skirt festooned across with roses of all shades or any one color preferred, such as pink or red with green foliage, the bodice being interlaced with a green satin ribbon to give the basket effect; then a pink silk or satin skirt would look well with roses shading from pale pink to deep red, and the bodice of gold plaited gold or silver braid, or of green velvet or satin ribbon. Silk stockings and shoes to match dress, white, cream, or pink gloves.

Teacher—"What do you know about the law of gravity?"

Pupil—"Oh, if I snicker in church have to read two chapters in the Bible when I get home."

WONDERFUL MEMORIES.

A Man Who Could Repeat an Act of Parliament.

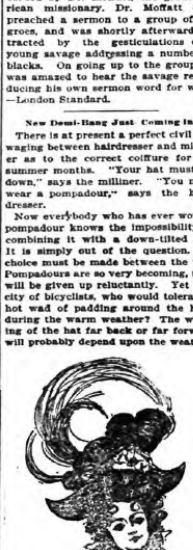
Scaliger, the philologist of the sixteenth century, who edited several of the classics, was so certain of his memory that he undertook to repeat long passages from Latin works with a dagger at his breast, which was to be used against him in the event of his memory failing; while Seneca, the tutor of Nero, could repeat 2,000 words exactly as he heard them. Pope could turn at once to any passage which had struck him when reading, and Leyden, the Scottish poet, who died in the early part of the century, was also remarkable for his memory. When congratulated on one occasion upon his aptitude for remembering things, Leyden replied that he often found his memory a source of inconvenience. Surprise was expressed at this, whereupon the poet replied that he often wished to recall a particular passage, but could not do so until he had repeated the whole poem from the beginning to where the passage occurred which he wished to recall.

Leyden is also credited with having been able to repeat an act of parliament or a lengthy legal document after having heard it once. The newspapers of January, 1820, contain frequent allusions to the case of a man named Thomson, who drew plans of a dozen London parishes, including every church, chapel yard, court, monument, lamp post and innumerable trees and pumps, without reference to a single book, and without asking a single question; and an English clergyman mentioned a man of weak intellect who lived about the same time, who could remember the names and ages of every man, woman and child who had been buried in the parish during thirty-five years, together with the dates of burial and the names of the mourners present at the funeral. That great memories are not the product of civilization is proved by an instance recorded by Dr. Moffatt, the great African missionary. Dr. Moffatt once preached a sermon to a group of negroes, and was shortly afterward attracted by the gesticulations of a young savage addressing a number of blacks. On going up to the group, he was amazed to hear the savage reproducing his own sermon word for word. —London Standard.

New Demi-Bang Just Coming In.

There is at present a perfect civil war waging between hairdresser and milliner as to the correct coiffure for the summer months. "Your hat must tip down," says the milliner. "You must wear a pompadour," says the hairdresser.

Now everybody who has ever worn a pompadour knows the impossibility of combining it with a down-tilted hat. It is simply out of the question. A choice must be made between the two. Pompadours are so very becoming, they will be given up reluctantly. Yet in a city of bicyclists, who would tolerate a hot wad of padding around the head during the warm weather? The wearing of the last far back or far forward will probably depend upon the weather.



THE NEW BANG.

Bangs are the next proposition. They are already being worn in Paris. And as the American woman accepts the Parisian unquestioningly as a model of modes, she will, as usual, follow the fad. It is merely a matter of time before the fashion will establish itself among us.

Really the new arrangement of the hair is a pretty and flattering one. The bang is not a hideous fringe, nor is all the front hair cut and frizzled in a woolley mass at the top of the head. Only a few irregular locks are shortened, and left to twist in loose natural curls at the sides, just above the temples. An evenly cut bang, such as was formerly the hideous vogue, is not at all the idea. There is no bunching of hair and the forehead will not be concealed, nor will the hair line about the face. Parisians have all learned to admire, be disfigured.

Weak-Hearted Mail Boy.

"Congressman Sulloway, of New Hampshire, tells a good one when he gets warmed on the civil service question," said one of the statesmen who came to help the Michigan Club to celebrate Washington's birthday. "Somewhere in the South a bright colored boy appeared before the commission to be examined for the position of letter carrier.

"'How far is it from the earth to the moon?' was the first question asked by those who were to determine the young man's fitness for the place he sought.

"'How fah am it from de earf to de moon?' echoed the applicant. 'My gracious, boss, of you's gwine to put me on dat route I don't want de job.'"

A pessimist would be afraid to get to heaven for fear his crown wouldn't fit. —Chicago News.

DRESSY GOWNS TO HAVE TRAINS.

Skirts Close Fitting Around the Hips Are Decidedly Fashionable.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun)

All the prophecies in regard to the close fitting skirt with flaring fulness at the bottom have materialized very effectually in the new importations. The flare is accomplished in various ways, one of which is to set a circular portion in at the sides, like a circular flounce, except that it begins on either side of a narrow front breadth and ends on each side of the back breadths. It is quite a little wider in back than in front, where it is not more than twelve inches. This is decidedly a new model and one which no doubt will be very popular, as the tendency of fashion is toward less fullness.

In all dressy gowns the skirt is cut with a slight train, and the silk foundation skirt is finished separate from the outer skirt, with the knife plaiting set in the edge.

There seems to be no doubt about the continued popularity of tiny frills of ribbon and ruches of all sorts and kinds. Bands of ribbon covered with lace insertion are also very much employed. Narrow double frills of chiffon gathered so that they have a puffed effect are used as a skirt trimming set in on the lower edge of a narrow bias band of satin. One or two bands, minus the chiffon, are added above, and the whole is very effective on sheer nun's veiling.

The diversity in every department of dress certainly furnishes a rich field for choice, and literally everything that can be applied to sartorial effects is to be worn providing the sleeves are small and the skirt scant around the hips. The secret of successful dressing, then, is in the choice, which should be determined by the style that best suits the figure.

Black and white effects and black and white gowns are to be very much worn. Black and white checked silks are made up into Spring costumes with black velvet ribbon edging the flounces. One of the prettiest silks for a dressy Summer costume is white taffeta, patterned rather gingerly with black polka dots about as large as a small pea. Shirt waists of black and white brocaded silk and also of black and white striped taffeta are also very fashionable.

A Useful Coat.

A light weight jacket is indispensable for early spring and summer, and one should be included in the wardrobe of every well dressed woman. A smart little coat is in cadet blue cloth, with the collar and revers braided all over with black. The front is double breasted, and faced invisibly with books, the left front being trimmed with large oblong buttons, while the edges are several times machine stitched. On either hip a slit is cut for the insertion of a pocket.

The neck is finished with a roll-over collar which forms small revers in front. The small coat sleeve is finished with three rows of machine stitching at the wrist.

Handsome Princesse Gowns.

The graceful lines of some of the new princesse dresses are certainly most exquisite. Drap d'etes, Henriettes, and some of the finer grades of cloth, are now the most used for these gowns, and one model of fawn gray drap d'ete is cut to cling rather closely to the figure on the front and sides, the front of the bodice so slashed that very often more of the handsome guimpe beneath shows than the drap d'ete, the guimpe being made of Persian brocade in a medley of soft, beautiful colors. On each side of the skirt front, the seam is opened and turned back, showing a V-shaped insertion of the Persian brocade. On a black drap d'ete, with guimpe of black moire, these inserted panlers in the skirt are omitted, but an old festure of the gown is a long scarf-like length of black net, heavily jetted, which goes over the shoulders and falls to the very hem of the skirt. The close-fitting coat sleeves have a tiny moire puff at the top, material with jetted lace straps, and at the wrist they are finished with a falling frill of pleated chiffon, with a ruffle of the lace above.

A Queer Fish.

In the Pacific Ocean among the islands of Santa Barbara and in the lakes of California there is a queer fish which spends a lazy life, floating on the surface for the most part of the time and basking in the sunshine, with part of his body out of the water. It is called the molamola by the natives, and the "mole" or "moon" fish by the whites. Unlike other fishes, it has no tail in the proper sense of the word, only a kind of fringe acting as a kind of rudder. It is sometimes over ten feet across the fins, and round as a bladder. Strange to say, it serves as a floating island for large numbers of sea birds, especially gulls and cormorants, to rest upon and have their plumage. When chased, the indolent moon fish dives like a duck, to re-appear further off. Nevertheless, it would be easily caught if the flesh were good to eat, but it is so excessively tough that it is really only fit to dry in the sun to form a substitute for india rubber balls.

For Afternoon Wear.

A dainty bodice is made up of a combination of pale green flowered silk and plain silk. It is arranged with a tight fitting lining, the neck of which, back and front, is covered with a yoke of plain material, set in plaits; back and front yokes to be cut without a seam down centre, and each of the folds or tucks run along previous to being laid on the foundation. The lining bodice hooks down the center, but the yoke is brought across and fastens down the left side.

The material is gathered to the yoke front and back, and over the shoulders is a piece of passamenterie, terminating at either end in a trefoil design, across the top being set on the yoke edge. The basque is worn inside the skirt and finished with a silk belt. Tight fitting sleeves, with three chiffon epaulets over the shoulder.

Ginger Pudding.

Cook two ounces of butter and three ounces of flour together for six minutes (taking care the flour does not acquire any color), then stir in by degrees half a pint of hot milk, and continue stirring until the mixture is thick and perfectly smooth; sweeten slightly with castor sugar and put aside until cool. Then add four ounces of preserved ginger cut into small pieces, two tablespoonfuls of the syrup (or more if not sufficiently sweet), the yolks of two well beaten eggs, and lastly the whites whisked to a stiff froth. Pour at once into a pie-dish lined with pastry and bake in a quick oven for from twenty-five to thirty minutes.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Some one has said that foreigners were loosing their love for American politics. Such is the case in New York if we may judge of Mayor Van Wyck's official family. We find among the most important members the names of Whalen, York, Holahan, Clausen, McCartney, Feitner, Straus, Nagle, and in minor positions the O's, the Macs and Burns by the score almost without number. Croker's plans for playing an active and important part in national politics during the next three years are developing rapidly. He has gone to work with all of his old-time energy and cunning to make the renomination of W. J. Bryan by the next Democratic National Convention an impossibility. Croker believes that the Democratic party can elect the next President on a platform less radical than the Chicago production if a strong and conservative candidate is nominated. He regards Bryan as a weak man and weaker candidate.

Mr. Croker was in Europe all through the campaign of 1896. He returned a few weeks after the election. A gumber of his political friends and several reporters met him down the bay, and had a friendly talk with him while the ship was coming up to the city. He asked many questions about the campaign, and seemed especially interested in Mark Hanna and Bryan. When told that the Boy Orator had turned lecturer Mr. Croker smiled, and said, quietly but firmly: "That will be the end of him in politics. He has talked too much already."

The Forty-Second Street Reservoir.

The water has been let out from its enclosures, the night guard has been withdrawn from its parapet, by other channels the floods of the aqueduct seek the down-town district, and the old Bryant Park Reservoir at 42nd street, its occupation gone and its glory soon to depart, has been surrendered to the Park Board for demolition. The twelvemonth that saw the grim Egyptian front, of the Tombs taken down, stone by stone, will see the even sterner majesty of this other Egyptian landmark of the old New York banished by the unreverencing hand of change.

The reservoir was completed in 1842, at a cost of about $500,000, and the ceremony of letting the water into it was celebrated on Independence Day of that year. A salute of forty-one guns was fired at sunrise, one gun for every mile between Croton River and the reservoir. In the civic and military parade 15,000 persons marched.

When the reservoir was first constructed complaint was made that it was too far away from the main population of the town. But in the half century the town has pushed far beyond it, and it is now near the centre of the district which includes the clubs, the shops, the great hotels, the noted restaurants and some of the most ornate private residences. The library which will succeed it will be more advantageously located than the Astor or the Lenox, and will fill that place in the wants of the immediate neighborhood which the removal of the Columbia Library to Morningside Heights has made.

Starving in New York.

A man and woman of refinement and genius came close to starvation in the great city of New York last week. Both are educated, both talented, both are energetic. The tragedy developed in six weeks.

"I came here from Montreal," said Mr. Barry. "My wife had been here two weeks and confidently expected a theatrical engagement. I am an expert accountant and have never found it difficult to get employment hitherto.

"We have walked these streets of New York all day on our different errands to save car fare. I have walked across and up and down and back home again. My wife has walked too. And then we came home at night to look to each other for comfort, but we wouldn't give way. Neither wanted to break the other's courage.

"But our money gave out and we had to let our position be known."

The newspaper stories brought the Barrys no end of sympathy. Mr. Barry has gained a good position, and Mrs. Barry is likely to do the same, as she has had several offers. Letters poured in on them from people who wanted to help. One man, a street-car conductor, came with a basket his wife had prepared with home goodies—two stuffed chickens, home-made bread, fresh butter and jelly. The conductor said he had "been there himself."

"People have been awfully kind," said Mrs. Barry with tears in her eyes. "And it is not so much what they did as the kind way they did it. This experience has taught us both that the world is full of kind hearts if one can only reach them." CYRUS THORP.

IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The annual report of the Board of Education and of the Superintendent of Public Instruction of New Jersey has just been received. It is an elaborate document, and of especially significance and interest to Plainfielders. First because it is compiled and shows the work accomplished by that represen.ative citizen, Charles J. Baxter, the State Superintendent, and further because it furnishes a concise and instructive review of the work of the Plainfield public schools for the school year ending June 30th, 1897, from the pen of Henry W. Maxson, superintendent of the local public educational institutions. Mr. Maxson's report opens with the statement that the year has been one of growth and accomplishments in the Plainfield schools. A tabular form shows the number of children of school age to be 3 226, and the enrollment 2,354. Mr. Maxson refers to the high standard of work which the public schools maintain in fitting students for collegiate courses, but supplements the observation with the statement that the principal aim is to give a good mental training and literary ground work to those pupils who finish their education in the High School. The Superintendent refers in a general way to the improvements made in the various school buildings, and the great advances secured through them, and closes with a worthy tribute to the ability of the teachers and their earnest efforts to improve the educational standard of the community.

THE POSTMASTERSHIP.

The appointment of a successor to Postmaster Hetfield is expected to be made by President McKinley about May 1st, inasmuch as Mr. Hetfield's commission expires May 11th. Republicans are becoming actively interested in the contest for this plum. The two principal candidates are Fred H. MacDonald and Elias H. Bird, both workers in the First ward, and with the latter now holding a city office in the Tax Collectorship. Both have strong support for the appointment and are bringing their best influences to bear on Congressman Fowler, whose wishes the President will follow in making the appointment. Mr. Fowler has not yet evidenced which one of the gentlemen is his favorite. It is politically understood that Mr. Fowler will probably favor the man in whom he sees the greatest assistance for a renomination as Congressman in the Eighth district. Mr. MacDonald has the support of a number of influential Republicans as well as a large number of business men with whom he is in favor as a merchant himself. Mr. Bird's principal sponsor is City Clerk MacMurray, who, when he withdrew from the contest for the appointment, threw his support to the former, and is understood to be urging his friends to advocate the candidacy of the Collector.

INSURANCE RATES.

It does not require much practical reasoning for any sensible person after reading the article in another colum reviewing the work of the local fire department for the past six years, to see that the rate charged on fire insurances risks in Plainfield are exorbitant. For a city the size of Plainfield a large sum is spent every year to maintain a fire department that is probably not equalled in another Jersey town of proportionate size, or even in places with several thousand more population, and one of the benefits which a practical application should bring is insurance prem iums that are as reasonable as the service of the fire department is good. But unfortunately for local property owners this is not so. If the assurances of insurance company officials are to be depended upon, however, a lower schedule of rates may be expected in the near future. That time can not come too quick to satisfy the people of Plainfield.

SEACOAST ARTILLERY REGIMENTS.

Peculiarly adapted to the present situation is the paper on the "National Guard and Our Seacoast Defenses" written for The Forum by Captain J. C. Ayres of the United States ordnance department, although it was published last December.

Captain Ayres calls attention to the fact that congress appropriated last year a greater sum than it had ever done before for permanent fortifications along our coasts. Then he asks a question very much to the point—Who is to man these fortifications when they are finished? To man them will require 50,000 artillerymen, including electricians and mechanical engineers. At the time the

COLORED MEN WANT RECOGNITION.

A hundred of the colored voters of this city have united to present a solid front to all political parties. While the organization is known as the Republican Southern League, the club does not, its members claim, owe special allegiance to any political party. Its object is to gain recognition for the colored men of Plainfield. Now, with a few exceptions, the colored men of Plainfield are naturally Republicans. So it comes that the club uses the name already mentioned.

Up to last Wednesday evening there were several organizations, most of which were in a torpid state, t hing so part in any of the political questions. On Wednesday a meeting was held and it was unanimously decided to unite all the organizations under the title of the Republican League of Plainfield. There are now a hundred members out of the three hundred colored voters in town and the leaders expect to double the membership in a short time.

The avowed purpose of the organization is to compel the recognition of the colored man in local affairs. The members hope that the Republicans will see their error at front and recognize them, al owing them some of the city patronage, otherwise they will appeal to the other political parties.

THE PROBLEM.

There is one problem confronting civilized man greater than issues of war or peace, greater than questions of government, political parties or even the existence of nations. It is a question of the existence of the human race.

What it is the readers of Walter A. Wyckoff's papers, "The Workers," in Scribner's Magazine, will know. The installments describing his experiences in search of work in Chicago are the most tragic, the most intensely suggestive of all. What everyday life is constantly to 50,000 men in Chicago and 80,000 in New York city the reader will perceive from discovering what it was to Walter Wyckoff. Let the millionaire lady who spends $30,000 on flowers for an evening party read the tale; likewise the gentleman whose pleasure yacht costs him on a cruise $1,000 a day; also the richly attaried city clergyman who enjoys every luxury in life and takes the annual rest tour to Europe. Most of all perhaps it is to be commended to those scholarly philosophers who sit at mahogany desks in bookshelf lined libraries and inform the world through tomes and newspapers that the trouble with us today is overproduction, that there is more of food and clothing than people can consume, and that is why so many lack those things. Again, the comfortable man about town, who steps each morning into his perfumed bath, where the floors are marble and the walls artistically tiled, let him read and ponder the incident of the sober, respectable, intelligent mechanic who missed a job because he had had previously nowhere to wash and comb and brush himself and whose despair uttered itself in the bitter cry, "Great God Almighty, I'd be clean if I could!"

The question of the right distribution of labor and of labor's products must be taken up and settled. It may be that in the future a great national labor bureau will be established. Its employees will know where labor is most wanted and will send to that place some of the workers who cause the fearful glut in the large cities. Its task will also be to distribute oversupplies to places where there is need for the same articles. Of those whom Wyckoff traveled with and studied it is rather surprising to find how few were actual worthless tramps.

If there is one thing clearer than another, it is that on this earth there are work, food and clothing for everybody. The right kind of organization would be able to make a proper distribution of all.

A curious true story illustrates the extent to which Emperor William guards his little majesty from being joked at even across seas and countries. A postal card received from Wales by a business house in Germany had written upon it in transit some stenographic characters. The German that received it handed it to a Welsh and an English man who knew stenography and asked for a translation. The stenographic characters condemned the emperor with a large "D," and we are told that the translation was "promptly and joyfully given" by the Englishman.

Thereupon the innocent man in Wales who originally sent the postal was ordered to hunt up the man that condemned the emperor stenographically on pain of having the matter made an international affair if he did not do so. Unfortunately for the Imperial German dignity the man in Wales scoffed at the request. William's majesty must be a very fragile and perishable article.

article was written the bill had not yet been passed adding two artillery regiments to the five constituting that arm of the United States regular army service. But even with seven regiments of artillery there would not be a sprinkling of men for the grim lines of forts around our ocean and lake shores, neither is it within the bounds of possibility that congress will ever authorize an army of 50,000 soldiers as permanent coast defenders.

Captain Ayres looks to a far different branch of the United States military service to supply the need of men. He would take them from the national guard. In time of peace only a few regular army artillerymen will be needed at each fort. But Captain Ayres recommends that plans be perfected whereby every summer regiments of the national guard in shore states be brought to the fortifications and drilled in the art of coast defended warfare. The instruction should pursue such fine points as finding the range of guns, the distance of vessels and following with the gun the track of a passing steamer or sailer. In such coast defending drill there will be work alike for soldiers, for machinists, draftsmen, engineers and electricians.

Many new and intricate problems in gunnery that even so late as our civil war we knew nothing of must be faced now. The high explosives, the tremendous guns and the fearful projectiles of today have come upon the scene since that war. Captain Ayres' recommendation that the militia of the coast states be taught how to man fortifications perfectly should be acted on.

STAY IN CARBONE CASE

HALT IN THE PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE SUNDAY MERCHANTS.

Until a Proper Plea Can be Made for a Writ of Certiorari Judge VanSickle Ordered all the Cases for Time Being.

A sudden halt has been called in the proceedings against Jose Carbone, the first of the victims of the Sabbath observance crusade to be tried. It will be remembered that at the conclusion of the second trial of Carbone last week, in which he was found guilty, the court released the prisoner on parole for five days in the custody of his counsel, Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, until the latter should have a chance to bring the matter to the attention of the Supreme court.

When the trial Councilman Hetfield has been trying to secure a copy of the testimony to present to Judge VanSickle, of the Supreme Court, to ask for a writ of certiorari As he could not get the testimony, he went before the Judge Monday morning and explained matters. The Judge then issued a stay in all proceedings relating to the case until May 7th.

WORDS FROM THE CROSS.

Ministers Who Will Speak at the Union Good Friday Services.

Next Friday evening in Grace P. E. church will be evidenced the good will and harmony that exists among all church denominations in this city. The Good Friday services will be then held and those who speak on the "words from the Cross" will be as follows: "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do," Rev. D J. Yerkes, D. D; Second word, "Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in paradise," Rev W. C Snodgrass; Third word, "Behold thy son, behold thy mother.," Rev. W. R Richards, D. D.; Fourth word, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me," Rev. Floyd Appleton; Fifth word, "I thirst," Rev. C. L. Goodrich; Sixth word, "It is finished" Rev. C. E. Herring; Seventh word, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," Rev. G. K. Newell.

It was a Woman who Objected.

It was Mrs Hester Winans, living near Cedar Lane, that objected to the opening of the boulevard from Lincoln to Bound Brook, and not Conrad Egel, as previously reported. Mr. Egle has always been in favor of the scheme and for sometime past has been endeavoring to secure the consent of Mrs. Winans This consent was obtained and the boulevard will now be opened very soon.

LOW FIGURES OFFERED.

BOICE RUNYON & CO. AND E. H. HOLMES LOWEST BIDDERS.

Anticipated Excitement Over Reception of Bids Did Not Occur—Board of Education Appoint School Census Takers—Report of Medical Examiners Show a Large Percentage of Unvaccinated Children in the Public Schools—Plans For Commencement—Editor of the Outlook to Address.

The anticipated excitement over the reception of the bids for the coal supply of the Plainfield High School did not reach the heights expected. In fact, there was no excitement at all. The bids were opened and read and then referred to the committee on coal for consideration.

The opening of the bids was the principal business of the evening. There were four. The estimates were all for short tons. George O. Stevens & Co. offered Lehigh coal, egg, stove and nut, for $3.99. His price for pea coal was $2.99. The bid of Boice, Runyon & Co. placed Lehigh and Honeybrook coals at $3.90 a short ton, Wilkesbarre coal at $3.80, and pea coal at $2.90. E. H. Holmes offered Lehigh coal, egg, stove and nut, at $3.90. His price for pea coal was $2.90. McDonough Brothers rated Lehigh coal, chestnut, egg and nut, at $4.25 a short ton, and pea coal $3 25.

The bids were referred to the committee on coal, composed of Messrs. Jenkins, Lovell and Abbott, for consideration.

The report of the city tax collector showed that school taxes to the amount of $778 31 had been collected, together with $47.83 interest, making a total of $826.14 which had been deposited in the City National Bank.

There was a letter from the state supervisor of the school census-takers in Plainfield. After some discussion, the following were appointed: First ward, E. J. Haines; Second ward, W. H. Haynes; Third ward, N. Y. Hull; Fourth ward, Abram Angleman.

The report of the medical inspectors showed a remarkable percentage of unvaccinated children in the schools. They have so far examined 1,114 children, of whom 430 have not been vaccinated, nearly forty per cent; 463 children were examined last month. Among them 27 cases of defective eyesight, heretofore undetected, were found, together with 27 cases of defective hearing.

A discussion of plans for the Commencement was held. Superintendent Maxson reported that Dr. Hamilton W. Mabie, editor of The Outlook, would make the address. President Probasco then appointed the following Commencement committees: Committee on music, Messrs. Lovell and Probasco; committee on police, Mr. Abbott; committee on ushers and programme, Messrs. Lounsbury and Clark. The Board then went into executive session.

THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE.

Lung Troubles and Consumption Can be Cured

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist Makes a Free Offer to Our Readers.

The distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, demonstrating his discovery of a reliable cure for Consumption Pulmonary Tuberculosis), bronchial, lung and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affections general decline and weakness, loss of flesh, and all conditions of wasting away, will send THREE FREE BOTTLES (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of this paper writing for them.

His "New Scientific Treatment" has cured thousands permanently by its timely use, and he considers it a simple professional duty to suffering humanity to donate a trail of his infallible cure.

Science daily develops new wonders, and this great chemist, patiently experimenting for years, has produced results so far beyond the humanity as can be claimed by any modern genius. His assertion that lung troubles and consumption are curable in any climate is proven by "heartfelt letters of gratitude," filed in his American and European laboratories in thousands from those cured in all parts of the world.

AN EARLY C. E. SOCIETY.

PRESIDENT OF FIRST ONE IN NEW JERSEY LIVES IN PLAINFIELD.

He is W. D. Williams, of Duer Street —Spoke in Trinity Church Last Night and Told of the Effort in Hackettstown.

It is not generally known by the Christian Endeavorers of Plainfield that W. D. Williams, formerly of Hackettstown, now of Duer street, in the borough, was the first president of the first Endeavor Society organized in New Jersey. The fact was lately discovered by Horace J. Martin, president of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity Reformed church, and he requested M. Williams to tell the story of that first society before the Trinity society, on the evening of their April business meeting.

The invitation was accepted and the business meeting was held last Monday in the lecture room of the church.

Mr. Martin introduced Mr. Williams who spoke informally and pleasantly of the organization of the first New Jersey Endeavor Society.

This Hackettstown society was originally a society for young men only, and when the question of admitting the young women was brought up many obstacles were in the way. It seemed impossible for the young women to speak in the meetings, until special meetings were held to pray that they might receive strength to overcome their timidity. The organization of this society, which was formed in 1892, was much less perfect than that of the present day societies, and the members found plenty of uphill work, at first, but the society grew in numbers and in spiritual power, developed beautiful Christian character in many members, and became the chief support of the pastor of the church. Miss Ida B. Stephens, the present secretary of the New Jersey State C. E. Union, was one of the early members of this society.

HYGIEA ICE COMPANY ASSORBS THE BUSINESS OF JOHN H. TIER, JR.

Mr. Tier Will Become Business Manager for the New Concern—Artificia Ice Plant Will Soon be Started.

A very important deal in the ice business has just been consumated between the Plainfield Hygiea Ice Company and John H. Tier, Jr. Mr. Tier has disposed of his entire business to the artificial ice company and has been engaged to act as manager. The ice now housed at Mr. Tier's place will be used by John H. Tier, Sr., to carry on the ice cream business.

Mr. Tier, Jr., will commence his new duties next week and he will have a general oversight over the new ice plant to be erected. It is expected that the work of building the new plant will be started very soon. Mr. Tier's experience for a number of years in the ice business makes him an exceedingly valuable man for the new company. His own trade will be held, no doubt, for the concern of which he is to be manager.

About the success of the new plant there seems to be no doubt, for all of the stock has been subscribed for and the capital for conducting the business is now assured.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS.

Seventh-Day Baptists the First in Plainfield to Adopt Them.

The annual meeting of the members of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was held Sunday, at which time an important step was taken in the decision to adopt the individual communion cups, the change to take effect immediately. The matter of individual communion cups has long been discussed in local church circles, but the Seventh-Day Baptists are the first to adopt them.

At this meeting, Rev. A. E. Main was engaged as pastor for another year and William Stillman was reelected trustee for five years.

Others officials were appointed as follows:

Auditing Committee, A. L. Titsworth and Charles H. Dunham; Subscription Committee, William R. Mosher and Arthur J. Spicer; chorister; H. E. Titsworth; organist, Miss Jessie M. Utter; ushers, Asa F. Randolph, Clarence Rogers, Nathan E. Lewis, Frank Maxson and Stanley Mosher.

At the Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

A very large and enthusiastic audience gathered at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 4:15 and listened with profit and pleasure to the musical selections rendered by the National Staff Band of the Salvation Army from New York. There were nineteen pieces in the band and the music was of a superior rendition. The speaker for the afternoon was William Carey, a converted engineer employed on the Central Railroad. His remarks were practical and were much enjoyed by all are the seat or the starting point of many maladies, all of them serious, all more or less painful, and all of them tending, unless cured, to a fatal end. No organs of the body are more delicate or more sensitive than the kidneys. When symptoms of disease appear in them not a moment is to be lost if health is to be restored. The best way to treat the kidneys is through the blood, cleansing it from the poisonous matter which is usually at the bottom of kidney complaints. For this purpose there is no remedy equal to

A WARM DARKEY NON EST

"CACK" CARTER LEAVES HIS TROUBLES IN PLAINFIELD.

The Colored Roustabout is Nowhere to Be Found, Though the Police Would Be Very Glad to Interview Him.

"Cack" Carter is no longer a frequent sight on the streets of Plainfield. He no longer "shoots crap" with the dusky sports on the corner. The police want 'Cack" and "Cack" is aware of the fact. Where he has gone no one knows.

The cause of all this trouble for Plainfield's "warmest" darkey occurred down at Mrs. Catherine Peterson's house at 235 West Third street, two weeks ago. Mrs. Peterson is an aged colored woman who has several daughters. They have frequent callers and the place has been made famous by several "pink teas." It has an unsavory reputation in police circles.

A week ago "Cack" Carter was arrested. After spending a day in the jail he was released on parole and has never shown his face since. Sunday Patrolman Cash arrested William Marsh, a young colored man who has heretofore borne a good reputation. Cash said that he saw Marsh fighting at Peterson's ou that eventful day.

When Marsh and the principal witness, Mrs. Peterson, told their stories, some new and exciting testimony came out. To quote Mrs. Peterson, "it was all 'Cack's' fault." "Cack" was happy that night and he suddenly evidenced a determination to show disregard for all superstitions by smashing Mrs. Peterson's looking glass. She called on Marsh to protect her property. He attempted to. Then "Cack," it is said, made a dash at little Willie Boroughs and threw him through the glass. "Cack" "drawed" a knife while Willie whipped out his razor.

At this exciting point, hostilities were avoided by the sudden action of the women. They seized upon "Cack" Carter and ejected him out the front door. Marsh was hustled out of the side door. New Patrolman Cash was coming down the street and saw the men leave in a hurry. Marsh had blood on his clothes, the officer declares. At any rate they hurried away and Marsh didn't fall into the hands of the police until Sunday.

The City Judge laid the matter over until Saturday morning when he promised to investigate the little affair with razor and the knife. He also expressed a hope that he might interview the alleged cause of all the trouble at the same time.

Took the Wrong Train.

Andrew Kalanski took the wrong train in Elizabeth Saturday night and landed in Plainfield instead of Perth Amboy, where he lives. The police found him wandering about in a drunken state and locked him up. His little three year-old daughter was with him. On account of the child, the Mayor granted a hearing to Kalanski early Sunday morning and released the man. He returned to Perth Amboy at once.

Death of Mrs. Albertson

Mrs. Arnae J. Albertson, widow of the late Samuel Albertson, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. C C. Cokefair, 119 Crescent avenue, last Sunday. Mrs. Albertson has been living with her daughter for some time past and has been in feeble health. The funeral services were held from the Union church, Hope, Warren county, Wednesday, April 6th, at 1 p. m.

BOUGHT CYCLES FOR TRIO OF POLICEMEN

Common Council Vote to Spend $150 For This Purpose.

TWO SOLONS OPPOSED TO IT.

THEY WERE COUNCILMEN HETFIELD AND MOFFETT.

Special Meeting Preceded the Regular Session, at Which the Ordinance to Construct Sewers for Drainage Water Was Progressed—Request for Help for Cuban Cause Was Not Heeded—Objections Made to Report of the Westervelt Avenue Commissioners—City Judge DeMeza Mans a Report—Money for Sewer Work in Netherwood

A special meeting preceded the regular April meeting of the City Council held last Monday, for the purpose of considering an ordinance which provides for the construction of sewers to carry off drainage water. After the reading of the ordinance an opportunity was given for remarks against the adoption of the same. There was no opposition and the ordinance was adopted on its second reading, after which it was ordered engrossed and advertised according to law.

After the transaction of the above business the regular meeting was held.

A communication was received from Stephen E Barker, chairman of the New York Cuban Relief Ship, asking for sympathy and assistance in helping the starving Cubans. The communication was filed.

Residents of LaGrande avenue asked for an electric light on the avenue between Richmond street and Scott place. A bill due the Plainfield Water Supply Company, on account of M. Hoban & Sons, was ordered paid.

Residents of Spooner avenue asked the Council to lower the grade of their avenue.

A communication was received from J. Manning and others, asking that Washington avenue, from Front street to the brook, be properly graded and repaired, that a crosswalk be laid across Front street at the head of Washington avenue, and that an electric light be located on the avenue between Front street and the brook. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

T J. Carey and others asked that a crosswalk be laid across West Front street just south west of Madison avenue. Friends of Lawrence Green asked the Council to appoint him as a special policeman. W. H. Morrison asked the Council for a license for Hotel Hunterdon.

The report of the Westervelt ave nue commissioners was presented and read by the clerk. There were several objections to the assessments, including one from F. W. Bird and another from T. N. Dyer. The whole matter was referred to the Street Committee, they to report at an adjourned meeting two weeks hence.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported twenty-two sewer permits granted and suggested that a competent assistant be appointed to inspect sewer connections, he to receive one-half of the fee charged. The matter was referred and later reported back with the recommendation that the suggestion offered by Mr. Gavett be adopted. It was so ordered. Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that twenty permits had been granted during the month.

City Judge DeMeza submitted his report from December 25th to April 1st, it stated that 112 prisoners had come before him. Of that number 30 were fined, 12 committed, 14 discharged, 44 sentence suspended, 4 under bonds and 8 cases were untried. From fines $193 was received, and Patrolman Mc Carthy received $61, half the fine imposed on Champion, who was arrested for keeping a gambling house. The sum of $133.79 was turned over to the city treasurer by the city judge.

The reports of the city treasurer and collector were received and filed. The bids of A. I. and N. B. Smalley to furnish crushed stone, and A. Kane to furnish crosswalks, were the lowest and they were accepted by the Council.

Mr. Buckle moved that the petition of the liquor dealers of the city asking for changes in the ordinance affecting them be referred to the committee on laws and ordinances. Mr. Buckle also offered a resolution that three bicycles be purchased for the police at a cost not to exceed $50 each. Messrs. Hetfield and Moffet voted against the resolution.

On a motion offered by Mr. Newman a light was granted for the corner of Berckman and East Second street. At the request of James Burke, his application for a liquor license was turned to him.

Mr. Van Herwerden offered a resolution securing $198 for the purpose of carrying on sewer work ordered last year.

The West Fourth street grade ordinance and the ordinance changing the name of Cemetery avenue to Belvidere avenue, were called up by Mr. Barrows and adopted on third reading. Mr Barrows also offered a resolution which provides for the resetting of curbs to the proper grades on certain streets in the city.

On a motion offered by Mr. Van Herwerden the amounts of $681 45 and $318 55 were appropriated for the use of the Board of Health.

Mr. Barrows moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet two weeks from last evening.

R G. Wood counsel for the Ophelia G. Reilly property on Watchung avenue, upon which there is a tax, asked the Council to accept the face value of the bill without interest, and the Council granted the request. After the auditing committee reported all bills correct, Council adjourned.

COULD NOT KEEP AWAKE

EXHAUSTIVE CONDITION OF MAN AND HORSES ON A MOVING VAN.

One of the Horses Fell by the Wayside and the Driver Went in to Sleep, and Was Aroused by Massage Treatment.

One of the effects of moving time was witnessed on the road leading from this city to Bound Brook Sunday afternoon. Frank Woodruff, of Westfield, sends his large moving vans all over the country, and four of them finished moving a family from Westfield to Weston Sunday morning about 3 o'clock. The horses and men had not been able to get more than an hour's sleep at a time during the past week, and consequently were completely exhausted. They got a few hours' sleep at Weston and started to return to Westfield.

At Somerville all of the men except one stopped for something to eat and let the horses rest. The other man was anxious to get home and he continued his journey alone. When opposite Fred Dunn's farm, about two miles from Dunellen, one of the team fell down from exhaustion. The affair attracted the attention of the members of the Dunn household who came out and helped to get the horse on his feet. They found that the driver was fast asleep.

A number of passing cyclists stopped, and together with the Dunns unhitched the team and got the fallen horse on his feet. After waiting two hours the other three vans came along, and after a great deal of work the drivers managed to awaken the sleeping driver. They found that he was exhausted and almost frozen. They adopted massage treatment to arouse him He was placed in the van and another driver was put in charge of the team, after which the men continued their journey homeward.

NEW GOLF CLUB OFFICERS.

GEORGE A. CHAPMAN PRESIDENT.

Reports Showed Club to Be in a Prosperous Condition, With 191 Active Members.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club held its annual meeting last Monday. Messrs. Sc S. Schoonmaker, George P. Mellick and Howard W. Beebe were elected as trustees for three years The club's annual meeting was changed to the first Monday in February. The report of the treasurer showed the club to be in a very satisfactory condition. There are 191 active members. A motion to change the club's name to the Hillside Golf Club was defeated.

A meeting of the trustees was held subsequently, at which the following officers were elected: President, Geo. A. Chapman; vice president, Albert H. Atterbury; secretary, John D Miller; treasurer, Josiah Browne; secretary for golf, Wm. T. Kaufman; chairman of the house committee, George P. Mellick; chairman of the golf committee, Wm. T. Kaufman.

The following were elected as associate members: Mrs. D. F. Ginna, Miss Elizabeth Ginna, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Miss Dorothy Fleming and Owen H. Fleming.

A large force of men are now engaged in constructing the new course, and it is expected to give out the contract for the new clubhouse this week.

SURE, WINTER LINGERS IN THE LAP OF SPRING

April Snow Drops Come Instead of Pattering Rain.

WHITE COAT FOR THE EARTH

A SMALL SIZED BLIZZARD IN VOGUE IN THE WEATHER LINE.

The Storm Produced a Wonderful Phenomena Monday Night When a Mock Moon was Visible, and Attracted Great Attention From Those Who Were Out to Witness the Display in the Heavens —Three Inches of Snow Now Covers the Earth, but Is Not Expected to Last Long —Will Do Damage to Budding Nature.

"Did you ever see the like of this?" moaned the steam roller last Tuesday from his temporary quarters near the corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street. "A snow storm in April." The chilling east wind blew the curtains that tried to cover his iron sides and entered his very steam pipes.

"My poor buds," wept the solitary maple tree near by, as she swayed to and fro in the wintry blast. "They were doing so nicely and now, alas, they are blasted. Ah well, such is life."

Still the snow that had started to fall at an early hour Tuesday morning continued while the wind carried it along in white waves that pelted the poor pedestrian as he tried to face them.

The steam roller, that had been puffing so cheerily for the last week, had assumed a mantle of white, for nearly three inches of the white flakes have fallen since the storm began The engineer never came to pilot the roller over the Watchung avenue extension. The storm put a sudden stop to all outdoor improvements in city and borough. The wheelmen and wheelwomen sorrowfully laid aside their cycling garb, carried their wheels into the attic again, and roused out their winter wraps to meet the decidedly unseasonable storm that brought such expressions of woe from even the steam roller.

Those who happened to be on the street, last Tuesday, saw a remarkable sight in the heavens where two "circles," or "rain bows" and three moons. One "circle," or half ellipse, to be exact, had the moon for its centre and arched above it at a distance of about 22 degrees. It shone in rainbow colors, red on its inner edge and blue without. Clear around the horizon and rising as the moon rose, was the second "circle." It kept the moon on its circumference.

Where the horizontal and vertical "circles" cut were two brilliant spots, "Mock moons" most persons called them, but a learned man termed them "parasclenae."

"Tis a sign of war," declared some of the Plainfielders who stopped on the street to witness the remarkable phenomenon. The superstitious ones were sure that it presaged some great event in the history of the world Others were not satisfied with this belief, and there was a searching of precedents and authorities. It was found that the portent is usually one of a severe storm. And now the severe storm has come.

"Mock moons" and halos, the meteorologists say, are caused by the reflection of moonlight from the particles floating in the air. The halo at 22 degrees from the moon originated from the moon itself. The horizontal "circle," the geometrical explanation of which is somewhat complex, is caused by the other halo.

This display was not visible in either Baltimore or Philadelphia. Earlier in the day phenomenia, but not so vivid, were observed about the sun. These were "sun dogs."

After such promise of an early spring, the storm was a great surprise to everybody. It remains to be seen whether it will do any serious damage to vegetable life. Some of the tree buds are blasted but it is hoped by the farmers that the peach orchards have escaped. Most of the early vegetables will not be seriously injured by the storm.

The storm affected the running of the trolley cars during the morning. The cars were then run on fifteen minute headway instead of twelve minutes as usual —The members of the police department had a drill and inspection last Saturday afternoon at the Crescent rink. The men showed up in fine style and the members of the police board were much gratified with the showing.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.
I keep constantly on hand Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.
I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.
I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.
Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

GOLF ALL THE GO IN PLAINFIELD SOCIETY.

Two Clubs in Existence and a Third in Prospect.

HILLSIDE LINKS NOW OPEN.

TH IR NEW CLUBHOUSE WILL SOON BE UNDER WAY.

Port Club Talking of Establishing Links for the Use of Their Members —Wealthy Men Putting the Game on a Substantial Footing in This City By Furnishing $4,000 to the Hillside Club—At the Last Meeting Nine Active Members Were Elected And a Number of Associate Ones.

The prospects for an active golfing season in Plainfield this year are very bright. With two clubs in existence, the golf players of the city will have able opportunity to show their ability in the game. Then there is some talk of the Park Club building golf links of its own for the use of its members.

The old links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club will be opened today for the members who wish to start practice at once. A gang of men under the charge of an expert have put the greens in good order again and they will be ready for all who care to play there.

Meanwhile the work on the new links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, located on Woodland avenue, is progressing rapidly. A gang of twenty men are now at work putting the course in order, laying out the greens and making such artificial hazards as are necessary. A surveyor has been establishing the holes and greens and laying out the course.

The clubhouse is soon to be started. The plans are drawn by A. L. C Marsh, of this city, and the building contracts will soon be awarded. It is understood that the house will cost $4,000, while as much more money will be expended on the links in putting them in first-class shape. The money was raised among the wealthy members of the club who were glad to advance the necessary funds to put the sport on a firm basis and give Plainfield one of the best golf links in the State.

The trustees of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Thursday evening elected the following active members: Charles D. Freeman, Stephen Cahoone, Sherman Evarts, Henry W. Lowe, Robert Bushmore, David J. Scott, Percy H. Stewart, A. F.H. Streuli and C. B. Tyler; also the following asso ciate members: Miss Mary A. H. Wood, Jr., Miss Katharine M. Wood, Mrs. E. H. VanBuren, Miss Zaidee VanBoskerck, Miss Edith VanBoskerk, Miss Ethel VanBoskerck, Miss Elizabeth F VanBoskerck, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss Lucy Talmadge, Arthur W. Talmadge, Frank C. Scott, Jr., Mrs. H. M. Stock and T. E. Stockton. Only eight vacancies remain in the active membership.

PASSING COMMENT.

What might have resulted in a broken neck or a serious accident of the sort was luckily averted yesterday afternoon on Watchung avenue, when a should act as an object lesson to all drivers to be sure to have the rear of their carriages closed—especially when the occupants are children.

A hack was driving along that highfare yesterday afternoon at a fair pace with the door swinging open. Inside a little boy was standing on the side of the seat. A sudden turn of the vehicle as it passed over a rough bit of road unbalanced the youngster and he pitched headforemost out of the door into the roadway. An eyewitness expected to see his life crushed out beneath the carriage wheels, but the boy cleared them and fell prostrate in the dirt. The little fellow picked himself up uninjured and screamed with delight for the driver to stop. The latter halted and the little accident jumped in and went on his way.

Sunday Merchants Arrested.

The city proved a very uneventful place for Plainfield. All of the saloons that remained open were very quiet and most of them had curtains drawn in their windows. There were no arrests made among the stores. No arrests were made and the police report is no complaints were made and the question of Sabbath observance remained unchanged. Citizens made no move and the city went off quietly and peacefully.

RAISED THOUSANDS FOR GOOD PURPOSES.

Creditable Work Accomplished By Presbyterian Women.

REPORTS HEARD FRIDAY.

BR EFLY RECEIVED AT THE MEET NG OF LAD ES' AID SOCIETY.

Home Missionary Society Donations Have Just Reached the $1,000 Mark While the Foreign Mission Workers Have Passed That Sum by $75—Young Lads Have Done Good Work —Four Hundred Dollars of the Mc-All Auxiliary Funds Were Raised by Crescent Avenue Church—The Officers.

The good works of the women of the Crescent Avenue church were briefly reviewed at the annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society held in the church parlors Friday afternoon. Mrs. William Scribner, the president, was in charge of the meeting. Mrs Arthur Baynon, the secretary, first read the minutes of the last meeting. The report of the treasurer, Mr. C. B. Corwin, was read. It showed a good balance on hand. The funds of this society are devoted to the floral work of the church.

Then followed a series of reports from the different women's organizations of the church telling of the work that they had accomplished during the year. Miss Mary Ketcham gave the report of the Women's Home Missionary Society. It consisted of an account of the year's work and gave the information that the donations had just reached the $1,000 mark.

Mrs. Hariot Burton Ford gave the report of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society. The work in Brazil is still being carried on. The amount given through the Board amounted to $1,073.65.

The report of the boys' mission band, the Ernest Workers, was made by Mrs. Arthur Baynon. They had contributed $50 to the support of a teacher in India.

A very successful year was reported by Miss Ethel Holmes for the Young Ladies' Mission Band. Miss Elsie Goddard gave the summary of the work of the Sunshine Mission Band. An encouraging and successful report was given for the Junior Endeavor Society by Miss Carrie Dewey.

The flourishing condition at Hope chapel was the basis of the report of Mrs. S. S. Gavett. She told of the good work of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Women's Missionary Society there. An equally interesting report of the progress at Warren chapel was given by Mrs. J. W. Gavett.

The work in this city of the women of the church was touched upon. Mrs. Horace Kimball gave a short statement of what had been done at the Children's Home. Mrs. Frederic G Meade reported that of the $700 raised by the McAll Auxiliary over $400 came from the Crescent Avenue church.

The election of officers was next held. Mrs. Horace Kimball, as chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following ticket which was unanimously elected: President, Mrs. William Scribner; vice presidents, Mrs. W. R. Richards and Mrs. Oliver King; secretary, Mrs. Arthur Baynon, treasurer, Mrs. Charles B. Corwin; chairman of floral committee, Mrs. C. B. Corwin.

As this was the first public meeting since the death of the late treasurer, Miss A. Kate Martine, resolutions of sympathy and condolence were presented by Mrs. Horace Kimball and unanimously passed.

Mrs. William Scribner gave a very interesting and witty sketch of an old table that has been used in the church for all variety of things since 1872. Several weeks ago, it finally collapsed.

TRACED HIS FATHER'S WHEEL.

Then Sold the Gun Which He Received and He is Now Under Arrest.

Harrison Randolph, a colored man of this city, is now involved in rather serious complications. Sometime ago he took his father's wheel and rode over to New Market. There, it is alleged, he swapped it off for a $20 shot gun with Thomas H. Cavalier, of New Market.

Then Randolph visited Bound Brook. At Bound Brook, it is claimed, Randolph drunk heavily until he lost all control of himself. In a moment of generosity he sold the gun to a Bound Brook man by the name of Taylor for $8.

Then Randolph's father paid a visit to Cavalier and pictured all sorts of prospective horrors of the law if Cavalier did not give back the wheel. Cavalier returned it to the real owner. He wanted the gun back, however, but Harrison had it not.

Cavalier appeared before Justice Storms, of New Market, and swore out a warrant for Harrison's arrest. The warrant was served in Plainfield last Monday. Randolph was brought before Justice Nash Monday morning. He waived examination and was held in $100 bonds for his appearance before the Grand Jury.

PREACHERS PLEAD PEACE WITH HONOR

Conference Pass Resolutions Upholding President's Course.

DR. SNODGRASS HONORED.

MADE ONE OF THE COMMITTEE TO ACT ON THE MATTER.

At This Time of Excitement and Peril the Conference Expresses Its Hearty Appreciation of the President's Patient and Patriotic Efforts to Maintain Peace—Presiding Elder Smith Makes an Encouraging Report of the Work in the Elizabeth District—Conference in Session at East Orange.

The Plainfield Methodist clergy was honored at the Newark conference Thursday. Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First Methodist church, of that city, was named as one of the Committee on the State of Union, which drew up the resolutions concerning the present National crisis.

The Cuban question and the possible chances of war have overshadowed the Conference from the very start, and in nearly every prayer that has been offered there has been a supplication for the guidance of the President in this great crisis, while the expression, "peace with honor," has been repeatedly heard. The feeling reached its height yesterday morning when, soon after the organization of the Conference and its calling to order, Bishop Goodsell announced that he would appoint the Committee on the State of the Union. The following members of the committee were named: Rev. Dr. Henry A. Butz, Rev. Dr. Lewis P. Dunn, Rev. Dr. John I Boswell, Rev. A. H. Tuttle, Rev. G. C. Mouladale, Rev. Alexander Craig, Rev. David R. Lowrie, Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, Rev R. B. Lockwood and Rev. Dr. S. L. Baldwin.

The committee was instructed and then retired to prepare a minute or memorial for presentation to the Conference.

About 11:30 o'clock the committee came in and it was a significant fact that at once the pending business was suspended and the committee was allowed to report. Dr. Baldwin then read the following brief report:

"The Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in session at this time of excitement and peril expresses to the President of the United States its hearty appreciation of his patient and patriotic course in seeking to avert war without sacrificing the honor of the country or the claims of humanity; assures him of our earnest prayers for Divine support and guidance in the great responsibility now upon him, and while praying that war may be averted, in case it is found to be necessary pledges the Government the same loyal support which our peachers and people have always given whenever the Nation was in danger."

A buzz of satisfaction ran through the vast audience when the report was read, and when Bishop Goodsell said, "As many as are in favor of the adoption of the resolution will stand," every one rose; not only the members of the Conference, but those of the congregation.

After Rev. George W. Smith, of Plainfield, presiding elder of the Elizabeth district, had stated that there was nothing against the character of any of the elders in his district, the preachers in that district presented their reports of missionary collections Mr. Smith then reported that none of the pastors in his district had been obliged to give up work because of death or ill health. He reported an increase in the collections for the various funds of the church, and said that several churches were succeeding in attempts to cancel their church debts. Among those churches which have reduced their debts are St. James's, Elizabeth; Flemington, Raritan, Somerville, Grace church, Staten Island; Park church, Elizabeth, where a parsonage has been erected, as also at Trinity church, Rahway; Gladstone, Trinity church, Staten Island; Asbury, Staten Island; Roselle, Quakertown was reported to be one of the best country charges in the district. Westfield is the only church where the pastor has served five years. Great revivals were held at Grace church Plainfield; Kingsley, White House, and Mt. Horeb, where an all day meeting was held, those attending bringing their lunches; Califon, Flanders, Park church, Elizabeth. There were over 600 conversions in the district during the year.

IN A NAMELESS GRAVE NEW-BORN BABE LIES

The Ghastly Discovery Made By Three Youths.

FOUND IN A POOL OF WATER

A CRIME IN WHICH THE GUILTY HANDS ARE UNKNOWN.

The Boys Were Wandering Along Cedar Brook When the Wee Body, Without Clothes or Covering of any Kind, was Discovered—A Pitchfork Used to Take the Remains Out of the Water—County Physician Examined the Corpse and Granted a Burial Permit —The Babe was of Negro Parentage.

Exposed to the full fury of the elements lay the body of a new-born babe floating about in the shallow water of Cedar brook just below the bridge where Scott place crosses the brook. How long it lay there no one but the one who left it there knows. Thursday afternoon it was discovered by three small boys playing in the neighborhood. Then the police were notified. Now the little one lays in a nameless grave.

The three boys who played the important part in this ghastly discovery were Albert Zabriskie, of LaGrande avenue, Fred E VanLiew, of East Sixth street, and George Aller, of LaGrande avenue. They are all lads of about fourteen years. Yesterday afternoon they happened to be playing right along the brook. Now right in the rear of Patrick Keely & Son's stables there is a small dam in the brook. As a result, there is a small shallow pond of still water.

The boys were wandering along the bank when one of them noticed a little form bobbing up and down in the water close to the bank. It looked like a small animal, but on closer inspection, the boys were horrified to discover that it was a baby. Considerably frightened at what they had found, the boys departed without stopping to investigate. One of their number rode his wheel to town and notified Patrolman McCue, who reported the find to Roundsman Flynn.

Flynn went at once to investigate Meeting Chief Grant at Scott's Press Works, the two went at once to the place where the body lay. With a pitchfork from the stables the little body was lifted out of the water, wrapped in some clothes and placed in a box.

The corpse was that of a colored boy, perfectly nude, and evidently only a few hours old. It was evident that the corpse had been in the water for some time, three or four days at least and possibly a week. The baby while perfectly formed, was very small and was evidently still born.

There was absolutely no clue as to the parents of the babe or as to who it was that left the child there. The theory of the police, which seems very plausible, is that the body was thrown under the bridge at Scott place and drifted down to the little pond formed by the dam in the rear of Keeley's place on LaGrande avenue. The spot is a short distance above Richmond street.

The body was taken to Casey's morgue on West Third street. County Physician Westcott examined it late Thursday afternoon and granted a burial permit. It was interred this morning.

HORSEMEN UNITE TO HAVE RACING MEETS.

The Meeting Held in This City Last Saturday.

4 COUNTIES INTERESTED.

TWO DAYS OF GOOD RACING PROPOSED IN JUNE AND SEPTEMB:R.

The Meeting Held in the Board of Trade Rooms, and Presided Over by Judge W. A. Codington, Who Explained the Purposes—National Association Rules Will Govern the Contests—No Gambling or Betting of Any Kind Will Be Allowed on the Grounds—Competitions for Horses Owned Only in Four Counties.

A movement, looking toward the advancement of the fair speeding of fast horses in this section of New Jersey, has been formulated among the horsemen of the counties of Union, Middlesex, Somerset and Hunterdon. Saturday afternoon an informal meeting was held in this city for the purpose of taking the initiatory steps toward the organization of the leading horse owners of the four counties The representative men who gathered from the counties in question were unanimous in their support of the proposed organization. The meeting was held at the Board of Trade rooms in the Babcock building. Some forty of the representative horsemen of the four counties were gathered at the meeting.

The meeting was called to order by H. E. Rider, of this city. Former Judge W. A. Coddington, of Plainfield, was made chairman and Robert A. Fairburn, of Westfield, secretary. The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be to unite the horsemen of the four counties under some proper name as an association and arrange a series of race meets for the coming season. It was thought that there should be a two days' racemeet in each county during the month of June and another in the fall in September or October. It was planned to unite with the Breeders' Association and hold the meets under the management of both. At the meets the National Association rules were to govern. The race meets were to be for the encouragement of the raising of pacers and trotters and to keep up an interest in them.

At the conclusion of the chairman's remarks, most of those present expressed themselves as being in favor of the proposed association.

A resolution was passed that the chairman should appoint a committee from each county to ascertain how many in their county would pledge themselves to help and support such an organization. After deciding to hold another meeting at New Brunswick Thursday evening, when the committees will report, the meeting adjourned.

As planned by the leaders in the movement, the meets will be free from all troublesome elements. No gambling or betting of any kind will be allowed on the grounds. The prizes which will be awarded to the winners in the events will be put up the association. Prizes will be put up for each class on the same principle as competitive prizes are awarded to the members of college classes. The competitive races will be between horses owned only in the four coun ties, but special events will be arranged to furnish great entertainment and interest.

The committee of Plainfield horsemen has not lost any time since the meeting, and already $1,500 has been pledged to guarantee the support of the Plainfielders interested.

Court of Inquiry Report.

Through the courtesy of Congressman Fowler the Public Library has received the important report of the Naval Court of Inquiry upon the destruction of the battle ship Maine, together with the testimony taken before the court. This makes a pamphlet of 307 pages, and contains many illustrations of the wreck. The pamphlet may be seen upon application at the desk.

A Bicycle Sociable.

A bicycle social will be held Thursday evening at the home of Dr. W. Kemptons Browning, 224 East Fifth street, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church. All members of the society and young people of the church and congregation not members are cordially invited to attend.

Sick in the South.

Cyrus Moore, formerly owner of a news stand on North avenue, and a resident of New street, who went to North Carolina for his health some time ago, has grown worse. Last Saturday Mr. Moore's mother started for the south to bring her son home.

Changes in Jersey Postoffices.

Theodore Starr, the new postmaster at Roselle, took charge of the postoffice Friday. J. H. Taylor took charge of the Pleton Postoffice Saturday morning. The term of Postmaster Scudder, of Westfield, will expire this month.

Attached Law Books.

Justice Mosher has issued a writ of attachment for Edward E. Veghte, law publisher, of Somerville, against Walter Gordon Williams, of this city, for the price of a number of law books held by the latter. The amount claimed is $131 40. At present Mr. Williams is out of town. The last heard from him was that he was in Omaha. Mr. Williams is represented by Lawyer Swackhamer, while the plaintiff is represented by Lawyer Winfield Angleman.

WATCHUNG WATER GUSHES AT LINCOLN.

The Occasion Made a Joyous One at Lincoln.

THE MAYOR HELD THE HOSE

THE WATER THROWN OVER THE FLAG POLE.

A Number of Prominent People Were Present to Witness the Turning on of the Water—Visitors shown Through the Factories, and Afterward Taken to the Home of Charles Sebring Where They Saw the Pumping Station —Mr. Sebring, in the Capacity of a Host, Tendered Them a Banquet.

The enterprising town of Lincoln is now in the possession of a complete and efficient water supply, and the heart of Mayor Drake has been made glad. The residents also join with the Mayor in feelings of pride. It required just 366 days to establish the water plant and when the water was turned on last Saturday afternoon there was rejoicing on all sides. The steam whistles at the various factories gave vent to their utmost capacity and joined in the celebration. There were many prominent people from the surrounding towns and cities present and all expressed admiration for the wonderful success of the exhibition.

For just a o'clock when the water was turned on. The exhibition took place in front of Mayor Drake's office and His Honor, together with Chief T. O. Doane, of Plainfield, held the nozzle. The stream shot forth from the pent up pipes and ascended to a considerable heighth. A flag pole in front of the Mayor's office 55 feet high was cleared nicely by the stream. The force of the stream was a surprise to all. There was about a 50 pound pressure on and the difference in the elevation between Lincoln and where the water comes from makes the test a wonder. There are now fourteen hydrants at Lincoln and the town is well supplied with good water.

Manager Sebring, of the Watchung Water Company and his assistants were present and they were congratulated by everyone. Among the prominent people present were the following: W. W. Smalley, L. S. Cook, J. E. Hillpott, R. H. Brokaw, David Hastings, Sylvanius Ayers, Jr., J. G. Smith, Jr., S. E. Hazard and R. P. Bache, of Bound Brook; Councilman Neuman, Chief T. O. Doane, T. O. Doane, Jr., L. M. Dunavan, Thomas Doud, Surrogate Spencer, of Plainfield; J. C. Morris, New Market; J. Sebring, Greenbrook; Gideon W. Smalley, Joseph Maier, Fred Wilcox, W. Wyhuskey, Walter Bunyon, of Dunellen; Manager Sebring, of the Watchung Water Company; Mayor Drake and A. G. Drake, of Lincoln; Daniel Whittaker, New Brunswick.

After the test the guests were shown about Lincoln and through the various factories, and about 5:30 all were taken to the home of Charles Sebring, of Greenbrook, where "mine host" served a tempting repast for his guests. Everyone drank to the health of genial "Charley" and voted him to be one of the most progressive citizens to be found.

While the banquet was in progress the guests were called on for speeches and some excellent remarks were made. Thomas Doud, of North Plainfield, who constructed the water plant, was also highly complimented for the excellent work he performed. Another test was made at Greenbrook with a pressure of 70 pounds, and the work was highly satisfactory.

Manager Sebring was justly proud of the display of his fine hat, belt and membership certificate, which he used when assistant foreman of Gazelle Engine Company of Plainfield.

Medical Supplies for Missionaries.

The box which the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church is now preparing for Rev. E. L. Walz at Britin's Cove, N. C., is about completed. A valuable contribution to it has just been received from the Drs. Hedges. It is a large supply of drugs and medical supplies, all nearly labeled with their use marked on them.

Judge Vail Sworn In.

Hon. Benjamin A. Vail was Friday sworn in as Judge of the Union County Court by County Clerk Howard. There was a delegation of Rahway citizens and other friends of the Judge pre ent to congratulate him, and see him take the oath of office.

Business and Pleasure.

The Epworth League of the First M. E church held a business meeting in Vincent chapel Friday evening. Reports were received and routine business transacted. An informal social followed the meeting.

Converts to be Baptised.

Three converts will be baptised as members of the Calvary Colored Baptist church next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Church of Christ on Grove street.

SIX YEARS OF FIRE INSURANCE AND LOSS.

Showing the Efficiency of the Local Fire Department.

GOOD WORK HAS BEEN DONE

DEMONSTRATES THAT LOCAL RISKS ARE TAXED HIGH.

The Bearing Which the Efficiency of the Fire Department Should Have in Determining the Amount of Premium to Be Charged—Local Agents are Trying to Secure a Lower Uniform Rate, and it Has Been Practically Promised—Large Sums Represent Insurance and Small Figures the Losses

Among the many great advantages that Plainfield enjoys is a strictly up-to-date fire department. The firemen have always been quick to respond to an alarm and they have been able to save thousands of dollars worth of property.

With these facts in mind the people of Plainfield have for some time past felt as though they were paying a very high rate of insurance on their property. They argue that there are other places much smaller and with less efficient fire protection that are enjoying a much lower rate, while Plainfield with an acknowledged up-to-date department is paying considerably more than if her fire-protecting service was not so good.

The fire insurance companies have without a doubt realized that Plainfield people are paying well for their insurance and the local agents have admitted the fact. Of late some of the agents have cut the rate, and it is said that insurance will be written in the city for a rate as low as 35 cents a hundred. The regular rate will average between 50 and 60 cents a hundred. This rate is considered very high by most everyone. The local agents are now endeavoring to secure a lower uniform rate, and it has practically been promised them by the companies.

In connection with this it might be interesting for Plainfielders who are paying large insurance to know something about the insurance on both real and personal property and the loss on the same for a few years back. The figures run back to 1892, and as it takes in six years it will give a fair example of losses and gains.

In 1892 there were 27 fire alarms from boxes, three out-of-town calls and two telephone calls. The insurance on the real estate property involved that year was $72,200, while the loss was $8,206. The insurance on personal property amounted to $30,000 and the loss to $1,881 50. There were thirty-two box and three telephone calls in 1893. The insurance was $111,900 on real estate and the loss was $12,233 65. The insurance on personal property amounted to $39,900 and the loss $11,450.49. In the year 1894 there were forty seven box and thirteen telephone calls. The insurance amounted to $79,915 on real estate and the loss was $3,015.20. On the personal property there was an insurance of $42,900 and a loss of $6 674. In the year 1895 the department had twenty six box and eleven telephone calls. The insurance on real estate was $19,300 and the loss $1,768.80. On the personal property there was insurance to the amount of $33,350, while the loss was $1,426.55. In the year of 1896 the box calls were forty-six and there were fifteen telephone calls. There was insurance to the amount of $144,000 on real estate and the loss was $8,702 86. The insurance on personal property was $92,675 and the loss $2,230 20. Last year the department had thirty box and thirteen telephone calls. The insurance on the real estate was $70,800 and the loss $10,571.42. On the personal property there was an insurance of $85,000 and a loss of $10,423.70. These figures speak volumes to those who are interested.

The total loss on real estate involved for the last six years amounts to $44,598 87, while the total insurance on the property was $528,615. On the personal side there was a loss of $30,763.47, while the insurance on the same was $338,825.

These figures are authentic and are taken from official records. Another interesting feature is that of figures showing the amount of property endangered by fire during the years of 1896 7. In 1896 the property value of real estate endangered amounted to $188 725, while there was $149,025 worth of personal property at stake. For 1897 the amount for real estate property involved was $6 775, and $169,813 worth of personal property.

The above figures show conclusively that Plainfield people pay well for their insurance, and considering the protection given it should be much lower. It is understood that in June there will be a meeting of the representatives of the insurance companies in this city and that rates will be put down very much.

Club Car Contract.

The committee from the members of the club car in this city met last Saturday evening and considered the advisability of renewing the contract for the cars "Howard" and "Evona" for another year. Nothing definite was decided, but it is safe to say the contract will be renewed.

TROLLEY WILL GO ON EAST FRONT STREET.

Railroad Capitalists Outwit Residential Apponents.

BOUGHT PROPERTY TO DO IT.

SAMUEL MILLIKEN SOLD A LOT TO A RAILROAD ADVOCATE.

The Land is at the Corner of East Front Street and Richmond Street, Opposite the Home of James T. Clawson, Who is One of the Bitterest Opponents to the Introduction of the Trolley on East Front Street—This Purchase Gives the Railway Over 51 Per Cent of Consents For Right of Way.

A silent but none the less vigorous warfare has been waged between the property owners on East Front street and the capitalists of the Plainfield Street Railway Company for many weeks. The trolley advocates were anxious to connect their present lines with the proposed road from Scotch Plains. The Scotch Plains road came down East Second street as far as Richmond street, but beyond that the roadway was too narrow to accommodate the trolley. East Front street was then selected. After months of labor among the property owners to secure the necessary consents, the trolley kings have now outwitted their residental opponents and bought their way through.

According to the State law, a trolley company cannot lay its tracks on a street until the consent of the owners of over fifty per cent of the land fronting on the street has been secured. Since the Plainfield company started to get the permits on East Front street it has met with decided opposition on the art of some of the wealthy land owners. Consents have been secured but not enough to allow the company to run their tracks down that street.

The fight has been a hard one, many interests have been brought to bear by both sides. Everything that might influence the property owners was brought up. The contest was a quiet one, little was known of it outside of the circle of those interested. The newspapers have had but little to say about it. Both sides were redesent about talking for fear that the other side might learn their plans.

After trying every other plan available, the trolley magnates decided on a new plan of operations. If they could not win their way through any other way, they would buy it through. They only lacked but a small amount to make up the necessary amount of consents.

Samuel Milliken, of Central avenue, owns, or rather did own a lot at the corner of East Front and Richmond street, directly opposite the large residence of James T. Clawson, one of the leaders in the fight against the trolley. Sometime ago negotiations were begun by Adrain Riker, of Newark, a brother of Chandler W. Riker, President of the Plainfield Street Railway, looking toward the purchase of that property. The lot is 157 feet long and 175 feet deep. Mr. Milliken placed a good price on the property and instructed his real estate agent, J. T. Noll, to sell it for no less. Riker at last agreed to the terms and the deed has now been signed.

While the trolley magnates make no announcement that they have completed their work of securing consents, it is understood on good authority that such is the case and that this purchase ends the fight for the possession of East Front street, between Watchung avenue and Richmond street.

Changed His Office.

Harry C. Runyon has given up his old offices at rooms 306 and 307 in the Babcock building, and moved to rooms 213 and 214 on the second floor of the same building. His new rooms are those formerly occupied by the Board of Trade. The new Board of Trade, of which Mr. Runyon is secretary, will use the back room for its meeting place. The billiard and pool tables now there are to be sold at auction.

Doctors now agree that consumption is curable.

Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced.

The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites.

To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if thin, you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

THEY MET SOCIALLY.

WARREN CHAPEL SOCIETY ENTERTAINED BEREAN BIBLE CLASS.

Rev. and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey Acted as Hosts, and a Clever Programme of Musical Numbers Was Given After the Supper.

The rooms of Warren chapel presented an attractive sight Thursday when the members of the Ladies' Aid Society gave a supper to the members of Berean Bible class. The affair was arranged by the women solely for sociability and for the purpose of giving the members and their wives an opportunity of becoming better acquainted. The members were allowed to bring their wives only, and in case they had none they were to come alone.

In the primary department room the tables were arranged by those in charge. Several banquet lamps were used and with good effect. The table decorations were very pretty and great admiration was expressed.

Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor at the chapel and teacher of the Berean Class, together with his wife, acted as host and hostess, and everyone present received from them a warm and cordial reception.

The supper was in every particular a great success and the various dishes were served in a manner pleasing to all.

After the supper all adjourned to the main part of the chapel where a choice entertainment was presented for the amusement of the guests. There were selections on the mandolin by Erwin Cooley, of Cornwell University. His playing was a decided feature and received hearty applause. He was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. McKelvey. Another feature was the singing by Miss Delphine Bowers, whose sweet voice was great ly enjoyed. Edson C. Martin, of Putnam avenue, also appeared on the programme and his tenor solos proved to be exceedingly enjoyable. Mrs. McKelvey was the accompanist, and those who furnished the entertainment received the cordial thanks of all for their efforts. During the evening there was an intermingling among those present and the sociability was one of the best features.

Those who deserve credit for the arrangement of the affair include Mrs A. V. D. Honeyman, Mrs. J. W. Gavette, Miss Adelle Kirby, Miss Swain, Miss Finck, Miss Maude Honeyman, Mrs. Sutton, Miss Hattie Tay lor, Mrs. Manning, Miss Bowers, Mrs. Francis Whiteley and J. W. Gavett.

A WORTHY CITIZEN GONE.

All That Was Mortal of Thomas Stine Laid to Rest in Grave.

The funeral of the late Thomas Stead Stine was held Thursday afternoon at the old homestead on Green Brook road where 64 years ago he was born. As remembered in his early days of manhood and of strength he was a friend to the weak and the strong alike, and in return was liked by all whom he came in contact with. His great physical strength, mental determination and kind attention explain his wonderful struggle for the past five years against the all powerful foe who at last "lay him low." Few there are who could have stood what he passed through in that time, one disease following another in almost continuous course, toward the last a complication of diseases added to the suffering, so when cold after cold developed into quick pneumonia human nature could stand no more but gave up the battle early Tuesday morning. the family, brothers and sisters near at hand, were with his moments. As a young man Mr. Stine was always deeply interested in his town affairs. For some years he was at Berry's hardware store, later going to New York where for many years he was engaged in the leather belting business until his sickness. Those who knew him will miss a friend.

Dr. Yerkes, who officiated, spoke highly of him in his kindly manner if anything more lovingly than usual Mr. Stine brings the fourth whom he had seen buried from the homestead, three brothers and three sisters still survive him. Many old friends and relatives were present from here and from New York and followed the body to the Baptist cemetery on Plainfield avenue where in the family plot, the interment took place.

As he lay in the casket Mr. Stine looked very life like and outwardly showed little sign of the terrible sufferings through which he had passed. The simple floral decorations were Easter lilies, symbolic of our rising Saviour, while his hands so strong in life clasped a bunch of white carnations. The bearers were Messrs. Cadmus, McCollough, Potter, Wm. Debelee, Howard Randolph and Wm. Swartz. The age of deceased was 64 years, 6 months, 17 days. He leaves a widow and two children.

In Honor of Her Birthday.

In honor of the celebration of the anniversary of her birthday Mrs Anestor Corwin, of Park avenue, entertained a few of her friends at her home last Thursday. The affair was one of congratulation and the hostess was wished many happy returns of the day. Sociability was the feature and at a late hour supper was served.

LUMPSUM FOR LAWYER, ONE CASE FOR A TEST.

How The Martin Act Will Be Fought in This City

AFFECTED ONES WILL UNITE.

THE COMMISSIONERS' REPORT WILL GET TO SUPREME COURT.

First, the Property Owners Who Are Affected by the Report Will Go Before the County Judge and Then Carry the Contest to A Higher Tribune—Date for a Public Meeting is Board of Trade Rooms Has Not Been Fixed, But a Lively Meeting and Hot Arguments Will Ensue.

There is evident determination in the effort to fight the report of the Martin Act Commissioners. Then, too, the effort promises to be a united one. When the question of the collecting of back taxes under the provisions of the Martin Act was first acitated, a great storm of indignation went up from the citizens who were innocently affected by it. Then came the appointment of the Commissioners and the excitement died down to some extent. Now, however, that the text of the report of the Commissioners has been learned, the storm bursts forth with renewed violence.

Alfred C. Lounsbury, president of the Board of Trade, is one of the most energetic of those who worked against the movement when it first appeared and who now plans to fight the rulings of the Commissioners in the courts. Mr. Lounsbury has always paid his taxes, but he purchased property from the Smillie estate which was supposed to be free from all encumbrances. It was not, however, according to the decisions of the Martin Act Commissioners. There are scores of others who are placed in virtually the same position as Mr. Lounsbury These are the principal opponents of the law and its results, which they denounce as "infamous."

While no date has yet been set for the public indignation meeting at the Board of Trade rooms, it promises to be a lively one. It is the intention of some of those who are largely affected by the report, to organize a movement against it. They will secure counsel and probably carry one test case to the highest court in the State to try its legality.

Before any action of that kind is taken, the county court will hold a public hearing to all who have anything to say for or against the report. It is the wish of some of the leading opponents of the report to take a small army of Plainfield citizens to the hearing and demonstrate that there is a manifest sense of the injustice of the whole matter in the minds of the people in Plainfield.

Aside from the general plan of the objectors, nothing has now been decided. Action will necessitate the combination of the opponents and that will not be made until the night of the public meeting which is called for that express purpose.

PERMANENT RESCUE MISSION.

Young Christian Workers Organize for Effective Work.

For over a month a number of Christian workers have been conducting a rescue mission in this city at 129 East Front street, and feeling that the time had come for a permanent organization of the work and that results warranted such a course, a meeting was held last Thursday and an organization effected. F. H Martin was selected as superintendent for the first year and committees were appointed to care for the different branches of the work. The mission will be strictly inter-denominational and Mr. Martin desires the assistance of all Christian workers especially the active members of the Christian Endeavor societies of the city. He will explain the objects of the mission tonight at 8 o'clock at the rooms, and invites all that are interested in the mission to be present and express their views upon the subject.

Comfort Bags for Sailors.

The members of the Carlstan Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church held their regular monthly business meeting Thursday at the home of Miss Giles, East Sixth street, and the attendance was large. The missionary committee decided to call a meeting at an early date for the purpose of making comfort-bags for sailors, and a committee will be appointed to arrange for the tenth anniversary of the society, which will take place next November. The meeting closed after the serving of refreshments and a general time of sociability Enjoyed a Drive, Then Dinner.

Miss Katheryn Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, gave a dinner party to a few friends at the Balmoral Golf Club house, near Summit, last Friday The party drove over from this city by moonlight. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. VanBuren, Miss Katheryn Reinhart, Miss Marjorie Coe, William N. Runyon, L. H. VanBuren and Mr. Kernigan.

A YOUTHFUL HARPIST.

HE PLAYED WITH WONDERFUL ACCURACY AND FEELING.

A Fine Musical Programme Given in Vincent Chapel Thursday—Tableaux of Bible Incidents Were Beautiful.

A youthful harpist of much ability and a series of Biblical tableaux were the principal attractions at the entertainment given in Vincent chapel last Thursday by the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E church.

The programme opened with a piano solo, "Valse Caprice," by Miss Maud French. It was well rendered. Then came a harp solo by Master Fanelli, the 'Boy Harpist." Although only a youth in years, he played with a skill and touch of an artist. His touch was sure and yet light, while he played with an a curacy and feeling that has made him a wonder in the musical world.

Three short recitations, embodying pathos, feeling and humor, were given by Miss Bertha Whitney. The recitations were "Loraine Lorie," "One, Two, Three," and "Supposing." Another harp solo by Master Fanelli closed the first part.

Part second consisted of a series of Biblical tableaux interspersed by selections on the harp by the youthful artist. The titles of the tableaux were as follows: "The March from Israel," "The People Rejoiced in That They Offered Willingly," "The King's Daughter," "The Morning Prayer," "And Bind Them on Thee as a Brine Doeth," "Rise up, ye Women," "We Have Heard What Works Thou Did in the Times of Old" and "Presenting the Golden Sceptre to Queen Esther."

The costumes and groupings in the tableaux were all taken from the new Illustrated Bible. The calcium lights of various colors were turned on the groups with very pretty effect. The tableaux were all very pretty. The costumes were principally in white or light blue, with here and there a red sash to lend color to the effect.

There were no particular characters taken by the different participants except that Clifford A. McGee took the part of "King Solomon" in the tableaux in which the latter appeared, while Miss Sadie Blimm portrayed "The Queen of Sheba." The others who took part in the tableaux were the Misses Maud French, Bertha Jenkins, Etta Raybert, Edna Harris, Lizzie Stafford, and Lucie Palmer Davis and Harlan G Snodgrass, Frank Mc Donald and James A. Stafford.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of Mrs. George H. Whitney, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs Charles H. Lyman and Miss Bertha Whitney.

CONTRIBUTION TO GOOD CAUSES.

Endeavorers of Crescent Avenue Church Do Much in Missions.

The annual business meeting and election of officers of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was held Friday night. The treasurer's report showed the finances of the society to be in excellent condition, despite the fact that the subscriptions from outsiders had been less than formerly. The missionary committee reported the gifts to missionary work to have been as follows: Support of a missionary in Japan, $25; to Miss Rachel Mair for her work in Africa, $5; to the Industrial school at Hope Chapel, $14, to the work of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp, $8. The sewing school at Hope Chapel is carried on by workers from this society, which is the only one in the Local Union which has an industrial committee.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Miss Louise H. Burnett; vice-president, Fred G. Smith; recording secretary, Miss Lucie Brown; corresponding secretary, Irving Stewart; treasurer, Henry Brower. The chairmen of committees are not elected by the society, but will be appointed later.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL OFFICERS.

Crescent Avenue Church Society Organized for a New Year.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue church was held in the Sunday-school rooms Wednesday, March 30. The reports of the officers showed the Sunday school to be in a flourishing condition with an increase in membership over the past year. The election of officers was held and resulted as follows; Superintendent, Henry B Newhall; assistant superintendent, Samuel F. Kimball; treasurer, R. A. Beebe; secretary, William H. Sebring; librarian, J. B. Coward. The following committees were appointed for the year: Finance committee, Stephen Cahoone, Mrs. John Grey Foster, Miss Margaret Tracy; missionary committee, Mrs. William B Ostrum and Miss Carrie Dewey; library committee, Mrs. I. C. Pierson, Mrs Henry R. Halloway and Mrs. Harlot Burton Ford.

Where the Breezes Blow.

The members of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church are considering the plan of holding a meeting this spring on the plazza of the Mountain Park Inn.

THE SOLONS BIVOUAC IN A NEW CHAMBER.

And They Like Their New Home Very Much.

MET THERE FOR FIRST TIME.

SIGNALIZE THE IMPROVEMENT BY TALKING IMPORTANT BUSINESS.

The Matter of Street Work Discussed and the Plans of the Committee Disclosed—New Sidewalks to be Built on Somerset Street—Permanent Pavement Also Discussed—Probable Cost Would Be $20,000—General Budget of Appropriation Probably $30,000—Assessment and Collection of Taxes Considered.

The new Borough Council rooms, corner of Somerset street and Craig place, in the Thorn building, were occupied last Friday by the Council for the first time. It was the unanimous opinion of all that the new quarters could not be improved upon. Everything had the appearence of being new and there was a cleanliness that is gratifying. In the lobby there was a few spectators who admired the change very much.

The Mayor, Councilmen, Counsel and Clerk felt perfectly at home and the business of the evening was promptly taken up at 8 o'clock.

Clerk Arnold presented his monthly financial report as follows: Borough balance, $1,757.82; lights, $1,559.44; roads, $1,790.21; fire, $247.93; poor account, deficit, $391.62; paid county and State, $3,507.75; total balance, $1,396.03. The Clerk also reported the collection of $43 as fines.

The report of the finances of the borough to January 1st, shows that at the above date there was a balance of $16,061 75. The receipts were $22, 193 75; disbursements, 36,509 88; balance in bank present date, $1,746 62.

Collector Brown reported his receipts to date to be $1,818.06 and thus far there has been no expenditure. Former Collector Spencer reported back taxes as follows: 1895, $73.56; 1896, $176.98; 1897, $211.98.

A communication was received from the Plainfield Board of Trade asking the Council to appoint a committee to confer with a similar committee, from the above organization looking toward the purchase of a water supply for the city and borough.

Borough Counsel Reed asked the Council to furnish the borough recorder with the necessary legal books, costing about $18. The matter was referred.

Residents of Rockview avenue asked the Council to macadamize the above avenue from Rockview Terrace to West End avenue, and they agreed to pay the proportionate share of the expense. After a great deal of discussion the matter was referred.

Mr. Woolston, of the street committee, stated that the total amount of money expended on the streets during the past month was $307.37.

Mr. MacLoughlin, of the tax and assessment committee, introduced an ordinance relative to the assessment and collection of taxes, and setting forth the duties of those who have the matter in charge. Violations of the ordinance shall be punishable by a fine of $100 and any other acts as stated in the State laws.

The ordinance was laid on the table until the next meeting for adoption Mayor Wilson appointed Frank E. Winn as special marshal, and the appointment was confirmed by the Council.

The committee on license and marshals was authorized to secure new uniforms for the marshals at a cost not to exceed $100.

On a resolution offered by Mr. MacLaughlin a warrant for $151.15, special school tax, was ordered drawn in favor of Collector Brown.

Resolutions were offered by Mr. Burtis to the effect that a loan of $1,500 be made, the same to be charged to the road account, and that the license fee for each dog be $3. Another resolution provided that the Clerk collect all fees and deposit the same to the credit of the borough.

Mr. Valiant offered a resolution that all bills against the borough must be presented three days prior to each regular meeting, to insure payment. Mr. Rogers presented a resolution asking that a loan of $1,500 be negotiated, the same to be charged to the fire department account.

Mr. Woolston presented three bids received for furnishing crushed stone for the present year. The bid of John H. Wilson & Co., for stone, all sizes, delivered, was 90 cents, and this bid was accepted, Mr. Chamberlain, of Scotch Plains, bid $1.08 and A. I. & N. B. Smalley's bid was 95 cents.

At this time a general discussion of street work was introduced by Mr. Woolston, chairman of the street committee. He stated that the committee met last Thursday evening and talked over several important matters concerning the work for the present year. One thing decided upon was the extension of the sidewalks on Somerset street as far as the Miles property. Greenbrook road also received the attention of the committee as well as many other streets. Regarding a permanent pavement on Somerset street from the bridge to Greenbrook road it was stated in a letter that the work could be done by using vitrified brick for about $20,000. The information was given by Borough Engineer Frank Hubbard. The figure for the work as given by F. A. Dunham was $2.30 per square yard, while Mr. Hubbard's figure was $2. The sum of $20,000 would make the interest each year about $1,000 at the rate considered. Mayor Wilson expressed himself as being in favor of the plan, but the committee thought that inasmuch as there were no sewers on the street it would not be wise to make such a move at present.

Mr. Woolston thought it would be well to lay a block of the vitrified brick in front of the public school building, and this suggestion will probably be carried out. It is quite likely that the budget this year will be about the same as last year, $20,000, but this will be decided at a future meeting.

The committee also considered the purchase of a water wagon and a roller for the streets. The roller will probably not be purchased, but it is likely that the water wagon will.

Another subject that was discussed exhaustively was the opening of Duer street into the city. Mr. Woolston stated that the property on Craig place owned by Mr. Dyer, which now stands in the way, could be purchased for about $4,000. The Council thought the price pretty high and the Mayor stated that he had offered Mr. Dyer at one time $5,000 for his house and property, and in return received an impudent letter. Mr. Valiant said he had a similar experience with the owner. Mr. Woolston said that thus far about $1,500 had been subscribed toward opening the street. After a lengthy discussion the matter was dropped indefinitely, as it was not thought wise to take the matter up until the Watchung avenue matter was settled.

Considerable discussion followed regarding the macadamizing of Rockview avenue from Rockview terrace to West End avenue, and Mr. Rogers in strong words favored the plan. He felt proud to think that the borough had such a resident as Mr. Buttfield, who had built so many handsome houses and thereby improved property in the borough. It is Mr. Buttfield who heads the list of those who want the avenue macadamized. This matter as stated above was referred to the street committee, after which the Council adjourned.

$10,000 DAMAGE SUIT.

PLAINFIELD CYCLIST ASK TO PAY PAY FOR CHILD'S INJURIES.

William Pittis Struck Christian Hansen's Three-Year-Old Boy and Injured Him So He Had to be Sent to a Hospital

An adventure wheeel that William Pittis, of Central avenue, passed through one day last August, has now led to a suit for $10,000 that has been brought against that young man. The suit is brought by Christian Hansen, son of Scotch Plains, whose three-year-old son was injured by a collision with Pittis' wheel.

Young Pittis is an enthusiastic wheelman. He traveled all through the adjacent country on his silent steed, visiting the neighboring towns. One Thursday he traversed the narrow sidepath that leads to Samptown. Now at that time Hansen and his family occupied a house that is included in that little settlement. This same day that Pittis traveled that way on his wheel, Hansen, his wife and little boy were walking along the narrow path. Pittis came up behind them.

According to the story of the Hansens, Pittis did not warn them of his approach by either ringing his bell or speaking. Instead, they claim, he attempted to pass them. At any rate Pittis did start to pass them and struck the little lad with his front wheel, knocking him under the bicycle. Pittis claims that the boy walked directly into the path of the approaching wheel. The lad was thrown down and broke his leg, or in the vernacular of the physicians, he sustained a fracture of the femur.

The lad was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital where he remained for six weeks for treatment. Then he was taken home. His parents now claim that he has not had the full use of his leg since the accident. Hence the suit.

The couple consulted their lawyer, Harry C. Runyon, of this city. Pope & Runyon, of this city, have now brought suit in the Supreme Court of the State for $10,000 damages as attorneys of record. Murphy & Blatz will represent the defendent in the suit.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office from North Plainfield: Sigler VanFleet et ux to Wm. J. DeMeza, North Plainfield, $1; Alma C. Randolph and husband to Emily H. Cory, North Plainfield, $1.

BIG MAN OF THE NAVY BORN IN PLAINFIELD

The Honorable Record of Lieutenant Commander McLean.

SERVED HAWAIIAN PEOPLE.

ALSO ENLISTED IN CHINESE NAVY AND WAS IN BATTLE OF YAHI.

Disappointed in Securing an Appointment as a Cadet at Annapolis He Enlisted and Worked His Way to His Present Position by Sheer Force of Character and Ability—He is Now in Charge of the Portsmouth and is Instructing the Jersey Naval Reserve in a Thorough and Satisfactory Manner.

Just at this time when so much attention is being called to the New Jersey Naval Reserves it will be of interest to Plainfielders to know that she is not only furnishing a small part of this important adjunct to the regular navy, but one of the most important officers—Robert H. McLean, who was a few days ago commissioned lieutenant commander of the Reserves.

It is not generally known that Lieutenant McLean was born in Plainfield. Such is the fact, however, and the event occurred about forty-seven years ago. At an early age he moved with his folks to Brooklyn, where he pursued his studies in the public schools. He graduated and received the appointment as alternate at the Naval Academy, Annapolis. He was disappointed, however, for the appointment was filled by a companion. This did not discourage him and he returned to Brooklyn with the determination to try again.

With this purpose in view he enlisted in the regular navy as an apprentice, and very singularly he served his first year on the Portsmouth, the vessel that is now in the service for New Jersey. He did good work, and at the close of the year, by competitive examination, he secured the coveted prize, and won an appointment as cadet midshipman. He was graduated at Annapolis first in his class and that record was maintained through the two years he served in the navy. He received the commission of ensign, master and lieutenant, and he served in all parts of the world. When an ensign cruise he was in the Ordnance Department, and as before he served with honor and distinction.

As promotion is slow in the navy, he was lured away by the Hawaiian officials, and as colonel of infantry he commanded their forces. During the incarceration of "Queen Lil" she was directly under his charge.

After he left the Hawaiian Army he enlisted in the Chinese Navy and took part in the battle of Yahi. Here he also served with great honor.

The New Jersey Reserves are certainly to be congratulated in having such an officer so thoroughly educated in his profession, as a companion, instructor and a leader. No doubt he will be the means of bringing the boys up to the highest possible standard. Lieut. McLean being a native of New Jersey he would, of course, prefer to sail with her sons and be counted as one of them. Since he joined the New Jersey boys he has been living on board of the Portsmouth and has been looking after some important detail work. The movements of this body will, no doubt, be watched with considerable interest by Plainfielders who have more than a common interest in the crew.

FAITHFUL BAPTIST DEAD.

Miss Nancy Connett Passes Away After a Long Illness.

The death of Miss Nancy Connett, who resided at the corner of Second and New streets for a number of years, occurred Wednesday March 30 at about 2 o'clock after an illness of six months with angina pectoris, complicated with broncho-pneumania. Miss Connett was born at Short Hills and has lived in this vicinity all her life, where she was well known and respected. She was a member of the First Baptist church and was a faithful attendant. Two sisters and three brothers survive her. The sisters are Mrs. I. D. TenEyck and Mrs. Lewis C. Putnam, while the brothers are I. A. Connett, of Watchung avenue, Frazee Connett and Henry Connett, of Illinois. The funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at the house.

Decision Long Time Off.

At the meeting of the Borough Council last Friday, Counsel Reed informed the Mayor and members that if there were no obstacles in the way and everything worked as it should there would be a decision in the Watchung avenue case by next November. The Council seemed to be well pleased with the prospects.

—Former Councilman E. R. Ackerman, of West Seventh street, will give his illustrated lecture on "A Trip Around the World," for the benefit of the Somerville Y. M. C. A., on the evening of April 21st. The lecture will be given in the Second Reformed church, Somerville.

POPPED CORN AND PULLED CANDY.

A Real Old-Fashioned Time Enjoyed at the Park Club.

A decidedly enjoyable time was provided for the members of the Park Club at the clubhouse last Tuesday. The house committee called it an "old-fashioned good time."

Corn poppers were provided, together with a store of pop-corn. Steward Jones had a roaring fire in the great open fire-place in the basement, and round it the guests gathered. Soon the room resounded with the sharp crackle and snap of the popping corn. Three poppers were kept busy until an enormous heap of the white corn was provided.

In the steward's cottage, old-fashioned molasses candy was prepared. After the corn was popped, the candy was brought out and young and old took a hand in pulling it. With buttered fingers the old and dignified members forgot to stand sedately around, but worked at the candy as if their life depended on it.

An exciting game of bean bags was started in the parlors during the evening and kept many of the gusts busy for most of the evening. Of course, the pop-corn and candy was eaten, and then Steward Jones had other good things that were served during the latter part of the evening.

SURGLARIZED WHEELMEN'S REST.

Entrance Effected by Knocking Off Boards—Stole $15 Worth.

Dunellen, April 6.—During last Monday evening someone broke into the "wheelmen's retreat" at the end of the trolley line and stole about $15 worth of tobacco, cigars, etc. Entrance was effected through the rear of the building where several boards were knocked off. The cigar and tobacco case was thoroughly cleaned out and everything in general was upset. The robbery probably occurred during the early hours of the morning, for it was late when the owner, Fred Huff, left his place and went home.

This makes the third time that the place has been broken open, and there is very little prospect that the thieves will be caught. Mr. Huff purchased a bulldog recently and placed him in the building nights. The animal was only there a few nights before some one spirited him away. Mr Huff now thinks that he will hire a man to watch the building and see what can be done toward catching the robbers.

IMPRESSIVE GOSPEL LESSON.

Novel and Pleasant Entertainment Given by Junior Endeavorers.

A creditable entertainment that should be repeated was given last Tuesday in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, under the auspices of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society. The attendance was not very large, owing to the stormy night, but those present were well repaid for going.

Part first of the progamme was opened with a chorus "Who will follow Jesus," by the Juniors, and was followed with a sweet little prayer by Beulah Van Winekle, and a piano solo by Lucy Coriell. A recitation "What will you give to Jesus," was given by Anna Holder. The next number was a recitation and response, "Heathen Children," Beulah Van Winkle, and others with singing "Voices to us are Calling."

The following number was an autoharp solo by Bessie TenEyck, which preceded a chorus "Send Out the Light," by the Juniors. "Nellie's Lost Prayer," a recitation by Bessie Randall, and another recitation, "Suffer Them to Come," by Lena Bohan, were well given, as was also a recitation and response "Help to Send the Gospel," by Chrissie Mobus and six boys and girls. Another solo on the autoharp was given by Bessie TenEyck, after which the first part was closed with the offering and a prayer by Elsie Tier and the singing of "Whiter Than Snow," by the Juniors.

Part second was the presentation of a dialogue entitled "The Lamp in a Dark Continent." The room was completely darkened after which Hattie Randall, representing the "Mother Church," and Lida Wyman, the "Martyr Church of Madagascar," entered bearing lighted candles. Annie Mandell, Hazel Martin, Clara Martin, Ada VanDoren, Lucy Coriell, Bessie Wilson and Katie Bodine, representing the dark continent, entered the room bearing unlighted candles. Each candle was lighted from the two carried by Hattie Randall and Lida Wyman, as the bearer, told how the Gospel was carried into the dark continent. The illustration was impressive and the lesson taught effective.

Mrs. John Manley presided at the piano and played for the little ones to sing. During an intermission an offering was taken by two young Juniors.

RIBBON AND LACE IN PROFUSION.

Flounces Are Made of Different Material from the Bodice.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

Trimmed skirts are here in great profusion among the lately imported models. Rows upon rows of lace insertion encircle the skirts of foulard and taffeta gowns as well as those of transparent materials. In some models the deep circular flounce is almost entirely composed of alternate bands of silk and lace insertion, either black or white. When the lace has a straight edge it is finished with a tiny frill of narrow edging or gathered baby ribbon. This sort of trimming is applied to organdy as well as silk gowns. One elegant imported costume of black taffeta has several rows of black chantilly insertion around the circular flounce, beginning at the upper edge and leaving a wide hem of the silk at the bottom. The bodice and sleeves are also encircled with rows of insertion, of which all the edges are finished with a frill of narrow lace.

A detailed description of the use and varied kinds of tiny ruchings which flourish in dress decoration would fill a volume, and literally miles of this popular trimming adorn our new frocks. It is made of chiffon, tulle, gauze ribbon, and pinked silk, in all colors, varying a little in width, according to the mode of using it, and also of narrow lace edging in both black and white.

True lovers knots of lace insertion, with the material cut out underneath, spread their graceful shape over the front and sides of some of the thin gowns, and twine in and out among yards of ribbon on others. Surely this is a ribbon season, a lace season, and every other kind of season which can be specified by variety in dress trimmings.

SPORTS' PARADISE.

CANADA'S GREAT AREAS OF VIRGIN FORESTS FILLED WITH GAME.

Streams Full of Trout—Almost a Million Square Miles of Wooded Land Open to the Sportsman—Which Can be Easily Reached.

On every hand one hears the question propounded, "Where can good hunting and fishing still be obtained?" In some instances the idea of time or expense is not taken into consideration, but in the majority of cases it is. Another question is sure also to be asked: "Where can one go to find restful solitude and unlimited sport? Surely not to any places within reasonable distance in the States."

But a very few years ago how readily the answer would have come: "Seek the Adirondacks." To-day one would rather say "Avoid them." Why? Simply because they have become too civilized. So it is that as readily as we formerly said the Adirondacks we now say Canada.

A. P. Low, of the government Geological Survey, one of Canada's greatest explorers, has made some extensive journeys, and has discovered an immense region full of wonderful things. He started about the middle of last June to complete his explorations in the territory east of Hudson Bay. This expedition covers the ground from the head waters of the East Main River through Labrador to the Atlantic coast at the mouth of the Hamilton River. Mr. Low's previous trip was made into Labrador, lasting two years, and he returned in the summer of 1894.

According to the latest explorations, the forest possessions of Canada are as follows, divided into areas:—

First, commencing at the northwest border of the Dominion, is a tract between 9,000 and 10,000 square miles in extent. This approximates Belgium in size, and lies between Alaska and the Arctic coast. The next area comprises about 20,000 square miles, lying west of the Yukon River, also bordered by Alaska on the west. The third area, nearly as large as Scotland, comprises about 27,000 or 28,000 square miles, and is bordered by the Stique, Pelly and Lewes rivers. The next in order is one of the largest areas. This comprises fully 100,000 square miles. It lies between the Pelly and Mackenzie rivers and is twice the size of England. Reaching into this territory for several hundred miles is the northern end of the Rocky Mountains.

The next area is about half the size of the one just mentioned—50,000 square miles. This lies between the Arctic coast and Great Bear Lake. The fifth area is between Great Bear Lake, the Mackenzie River and Great Slave Lake. It is 25,000 square miles in extent and about equals Portugal. Between the Skeena and Peace rivers, on the south, and the Lair and Stique, on the north, is an area of between 30,000 and 32,000 square miles. Thirty-five thousand square miles are comprised in the next area, lying southeast of Athabaska Lake. The next area is about half the size of Switzerland, or 8,000 square miles. This lies between Copper and Baffinland Inlet. East of this is an area fully equal to Ireland in size—about 32,000 or 33,000 square miles.

The second largest of the areas is one bounded by Great Slave Lake, Hacks River, Athabaska Lake, Hein Beer and Hatchet lakes, Churchill River and the west coast of Hudson Bay. This comprises nearly 180,000 square miles, and is much larger than Great Britain and Ireland. The greatest and last of the areas is the most easterly one, which is comprised practically all Labrador peninsular. About 290,000 square miles in extent, it would more than equal twice the area of Great Britain and Ireland, with New Foundland added.

It is difficult to get a proper appreciation of such immense areas. Yet the territory is there, just as described—underestimated, too, rather than over-estimated. Probably it will never be completely explored. Here is where the hardy sportsman, with ample time and money at his command, can find an inexhaustible supply of fish game and enjoyment.

But here the great majority will ask "Of what service is all this to us? It is beyond our reach for many reasons." The answer can be readily given. There is very nearly as good territory for sport lying at a distance of about 150 miles north of the St. Lawrence River as that just described. This is the extreme southern border of the Laurentides Canadian Wilderness, and one need penetrate but a short distance to find ground that he is absolutely the first white man to visit. This can be done at very moderate expenditure of time and money. The means of access are very good, several railroads run near it. In fact, about twenty-four to thirty hours from New York or New England stations points is all the time necessary to reach this sports man's Mecca.

NEW YORK WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Sorosis Always Stands First in the List. Dating From 1868.

That this is a women's century seems in nothing to be so strongly emphasized as in the women's clubs. They show more clearly than anything else the wide diversity of women's interests, interests which it is felt need the help of organization to bring them to fruition. They cover, too, a startlingly wide range. There are political clubs, suffrage clubs, clubs for women of the stage, and women who write; study clubs of various kinds, clubs for the study of children, art clubs, philanthropic and literary organizations, and almost everything, even to one of the very latest organization of women, the Women's Klondike Expedition Syndicate.

JENNIE JUNE CROLY.

There is some earnest thought or purpose at the foot of all these bodies of women, and there are perhaps only two interests which women might promote that are not generally represented and these are domestic and social interests. There may be reason for this. Women feel that their domestic interests are always present with them and that they can best develop them along their own individual lines of experience, and as a woman's society life goes along hand in hand with all her other interests and the presence of men are necessary, clubs of a domestic nature have recently become more numerous.

In speaking of women's clubs Sorosis is always the first on the list. Sorosis is called the mother of women's clubs, though occasionally a club is heard from which disputes her right to seniority.

Sorosis dates its birthday back to 1868. There were a number of bright women who held occasional meetings in the parlors of the charming sisters, Alice and Phoebe Cary. There were Jennie June (Mrs. Croly), the pioneer newspaper woman; Fanny Fern, Kate Field, Mrs. Charlotte Wilbour and Celia Burleigh. There were twelve women in all who decided to form an organization and became the charter members in that new and strange thing, a woman's club. The Blue-Stocking Club they proposed to call themselves, at first, but thought better of it, and took the now famous name of Sorosis which has since been taken by unnumbered godchildren all over the world.

Mrs. Jennie June Croly has been called as Sorosis as a body is, the mother of women's clubs. Mrs. Croly succeeded Alice Cary to the presidency of Sorosis, and has been an active worker in the organization ever since. At the meeting of the State Federation of Clubs in Brooklyn two years ago she was made honorary president.

Mrs. Croly is also the president and was one of the founders of the New York Woman's Press Club, another prominent woman's organization, which has a large membership of professional and semi-professional women with regular literary and social meetings. As a penwoman Mrs. Croly is well known. She has been writing now for over forty years and her editorial, journalistic, magazine, and other work has been prolific.

INGENIOUS SOUNDING APPARATUS.

A Method by Which a River Bed Was Mapped.

Rapid-test soundings were required in some work on a railway line between Paris and Havre, where the cast-iron viaduct of Bezons was replaced by an arch bridge alongside. The old foundations for six channel piers were removed from the bottom of the river. It was required that the river bed should be carefully leveled. After it had been dredged the bottom was explored by means of a horizontal bar of iron about twenty feet long, which was suspended at each end from a framework uniting two flat boats in catamaran fashion. This beam was lowered close to the bottom and the boats were gradually moved along in the direction transverse to the length of the bar. When the scraper encountered no irregularity, the suspending chains hung vertically, but as soon as either end was detected by contact with any obstruction an electric circuit was closed, which caused an alarm to sound. The boat was stopped, and the obstruction located by means of sounding poles. In this way, small stones, down to a diameter of four inches, were easily located, and the bed of the river was leveled to within four inches of any point. The method proved rapid and successful.—Engineering News.

Last Behest.

"I have a request to make before I die," said the dying man to his friend. "Name it," said the friend. "It is that you will not marry my widow," said the dying man. "Why do you make that request?" asked the friend. "Because I have been married to her myself," said the dying man. "I have been married by a preacher," said the friend. "So have I," said the dying man.—Washington Star.

Results in a case of severe kidney trouble after only four weeks' treatment.

Mr. Fred Latimer has written us as follows:

THE CAPSULOID COMPANY, UTICA, NEW YORK.

GENTLEMEN:—Twelve years ago I had my first attack of Kidney Trouble, following a heavy cold. The pain in the back was severe and there was smothering over the kidneys. I rapidly lost in strength, weight, and color. I got over my acute attack, but my kidneys were left weak and tender. Several small attacks since further weakened my kidneys, and about a year ago I had the worst attack of all. I was confined to my room for eight weeks. My doctors attended me constantly, and by their ability pulled me through; but when I got around again I found my kidneys were in the same old state. A friend of mine, a doctor, told me to try Capsuloids. A month ago I commenced taking them. Now everyone of the bad symptoms have disappeared; the pain is all gone, as I scarcely ever feel any smothering. I have gained three pounds, my appetite has improved, I have lost that sallow kidney complexion, and have a good, healthy, strong appearance with lots of color in my face. Best of all, all the kidney symptoms that so worried me have disappeared. It is hard even for me to believe, but it is perfectly true. I feel thankful to the Capsuloid Company." FOND LOVE ALLURED TO HYMEN'S SHRINE

Fashionable Wedding in Park Avenue Baptist Church.

COARD-JOHNSON NUPTIALS.

CELEBRATED WITH GREAT BEAUTY TUESDAY EVENING.

The Bride Was Miss Alice Dupuy Coard and the Groom Harry Frapole Johnson—An Easter Wedding in all its Elaborate Details—Magnificent Floral Decorations in the Church—Bridal Party Attired in Beautiful Gowns—How the Ceremony Was Performed—Reception Given at the Home of the Bride's Parents—The Gifts.

As one of the principal events of the week of joy and brightness that follows the solemn Lenten season, the marriage of Miss Alice Dupuy Coard daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John James Kirby Coard, of East Ninth street, and Harry Frapric Johnson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson, of LaGrande avenue, took place Tuesday evening in the Park Avenue Baptist church. It was a beautiful Easter wedding, well worthy of the time. A host of friends, made during the long residence of the young couple in this city, gathered in the church with many others from other cities to witness the nuptial ceremony. It was a glad occasion, the Easter season, the bright skies and balmy air of spring all uniting in the celebration of it.

The wedding was one of the most beautiful and elaborate of the year. It was held in the Park Avenue Baptist church, where both of the young people attend service. As appropriate to Easter the magnificent floral decorations in the church were entirely of green and white. The central platform was one mass of Easter lilies and other white flowers surrounded by palms. The organ loft was similarly decorated. On the front of the lower platform was an altar, covered with white satin, over which hung a floral bell of the prevailing colors. On either side were ranged the lilies and palms in profusion. In other parts of the church the decorations were artistically arranged. The general effect was very beautiful.

The ceremony began at 8 o'clock. While the organist, Miss Jessie Utter, rendered several selections the guests that thronged the church were escorted to their seats by the ushers. Soon every seat was filled and many were left standing. Then the six ushers marched in the front of the church while the grand strains of the Tannhauser march were heard. The ushers were Harry Williams, Henry A. Patton, William R. Coriell, a cousin of the groom, George F. Coard, brother of the bride, Joseph Sawyer, Jr., of New York, and Ernest Franke, of Breslau.

As the ushers reached the open space in front of the platform the six bridesmaids entered from the doors in either side of the platform and marched past them and up the aisle. They were all attired in gowns of white mousseline de soie over green silk and carried bouquets of pink roses and mignonette. They were Miss Grace Spencer, of Passaic; Miss Nettie Hills and Miss Grace Hills, of Plainville, Conn.; Miss Mabel Voorhees, of Elizabeth, and Miss Maud Middleditch and Miss Ethel Holmes of Plainfield.

Followed by the ushers they went to the doorway in the rear of the church. There they were met by the maid-of-honor, Miss Mabel Coard, sister of the bride, and the bride herself on the arm of her father.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white ivory satin trimmed with pearl garniture and real lace.

Her bridal veil was caught up with a sunburst of diamonds. She carried a boquet of lilies of-the-valley and orchids. The maid of honor wore a gown of pink silk and white mousseline de soie. She carried pink roses.

As the bridal party passed down the aisle to the centre of the church, The groom and best man, Herbert G. Johnson, his brother, made their entrance with the officiating clergyman, Rev. John Wilbur Richardson, through the side door and awaited them at the altar.

With the appearance of the bride, the music had changed to the Lohengrin wedding march. The bridesmaids and ushers formed a semi circle in front of the altar. Then came the beautiful and impressive ceremony. The bride was given away by her father. After the couple knelt at the altar and received the blessing of the clergymar, the Mendelssohn wedding march pealed forth

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson led the bridal party up the aisle, followed by the

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

RESULT OF VOTING IN SEVERAL JERSEY CITIES TUESDAY.

Elizabeth and Rahway Went Republican and New Brunswick Democratic—Newark Will Have a Democratic Mayor

Elections were held Tuesday in Newark, Jersey City, Paterson, New Brunswick, Orange, Trenton, Elizabeth, Hoboken, Bayonne and other New Jersey towns.

As a result of Tuesday's voting James M Seymour, Democrat, stays in Newark's Mayoralty chair, and Joseph M. Byrne, Democrat, is the successor of William Stainsby, Republican, in the Board of Works.

Mayor John C. Rankin, Republican, of Elizabeth, will surrender his office to Dr. W. A. M. Mack, Republican, who defeated Fred C. Marsh.

Harry Stetson succeeds John Gill, Republican, as Mayor of Orange.

In Jersey City the election of Col Robert G. Smith, a Davis Democrat, to the Board of Works was a foregone conclusion.

The most notable fight in Paterson was in the Eighth Ward, where the Democratic leaders recaptured the stronghold taken from them four years ago by Alderman Matthew Maguire, a Socialist.

Rahway Republicans carried everything. The Council will stand: Eight Republicans to three Democrats.

In New Brunswick the Democratic City ticket was elected. This leaves the political complexion of the Common Council as at present.

DINNER FOR BRIDAL PARTY.

One of the Charming Social Events of Easter Week.

One of the most charming social events of Easter week was the dinner given to a bridal party Tuesday by Miss Mary Bushnell daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bushnell, of Madison avenue, in honor of Miss Bertha Clark who will be married this evening to Samuel Porter Williams, of Hartford, Conn. The table decorations were pink and green and many pretty and unique features added much to the enjoyment of the guests. Covers were laid for eighteen, including be side the hostess and her sister, Miss Jessie Bushnell. Misses Bertha and Helen Clark, Gertrude Haviland, May Shreve, Marion Mandeville, Miss Williams from Hartford, Miss Homer from Chicago and the Messrs Samuel P. Williams, Phillip Williams, William Horker, Mr. Catlin, from Hartford. Frank Lysle from Rochester, Howard Foster from New York, Frank Frost, Irving Clark from Plainfield and Mark Cheney from Manchester.

Good Work of Presbyterian Women in This District.

DELEGATES AT DUNELLEN.

A NUMBER OF PLAINFIELD WOMEN TOOK AN ACTIVE PART.

Nearly All the Old Officers Were Re-elected, Which Include a Number From Plainfield—Addresses Delivered on Foreign Missionary Work—Delegates Appointed to Attend Conferences of Women's Societies—The Convention of the Presbyterial Society Will be Held in Plainfield Next Year.

Dunellen, April 13—The twenty-seventh annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Presbyterial Society of the Elizabeth Presbytery was held yesterday in the Presbyterian church. There were 128 delegates present from all parts of the district. Mrs. J. T. Kerr, of Elizabeth, president of the society, presided over the sessions. Miss E. M. Colton, of Elizabeth, was the secretary.

The delegates were welcomed by A. I. Martine, pastor of the church One of the important features of the morning session, which began at 10 o'clock, was the report of the treasurer. Mrs. E. P. Tenney, of Roselle. It showed that $4,950.08 had been received and expended during the year for missions. The report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Wilson W. Smith, of Plainfield, was very encouraging, as were also the reports of Miss L. B Allen, young people's secretary, and Miss J J. Smith, secretary of literature. The closing hour of the morning session was devoted to an address by Mrs. John Gillespie, of Elizabeth, who gave a talk on missions in foreign fields. From 1:30 to 2:15 p. m. a conference for young people was held. At the morning service a duet was effectively rendered by Mrs. Anna Abbott and Mrs. O B. Chandler. Mrs Wilson Fredericks presided at the organ. In the afternoon Mrs. O. B. Chandler sang a pretty solo.

The features of the afternoon sessions were the addresses by Mrs. J. C. R Ewing, and Robert E. Speer, of Elizabeth. Both were along the line of foreign missions, and each speaker held the closest attention of the large audience present

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Mrs. J. T. Kerr, Elizabeth; vice-presidents, Mrs. C. B. Langdon, Elizabeth; Mrs. J. A. Liggett, Rahway; Mrs. J. G Mason, Metuchen; Mrs. S. E. Lewis Rahway; Mrs. S. J Rowland, Clinton; Mrs S. Milliken, Plainfield; Mrs. F. H Pierson, Elizabeth; Mrs. V O Burtis, Westfield; Mrs. William Scribner, Plainfield; Mrs. J. Gillipsie, Elizabeth, Mrs E B Cobb, Elizabeth; coresponding secretary, Mrs. Wilson W. Smith, Plainfield; recording secretary, Miss E. M Colton, Elizabeth; young people's secretary, Miss L. B. Allen Elizabeth; assistant secretary, Miss Emily Tracy, Plainfield; secretary of literature, Miss Jessie J. Smith, Elizabeth; treasurer, Mrs. E. P. Tenney, Roselle; assistant treasurer, Mrs. W. P. Stevenson, Roselle

Mrs. Smith was appointed a delegate to attend the conference of women's societies to be held at Trenton, while Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Tenney were appointed delegates to attend a similar conference to be held at Princeton

The committee on resolutions, in closing, thanked all those who took part on the programme and all who helped to make the meeting a success The meeting closed about 4:30 in the afternoon.

The Plainfield Presbyterian churches were well represented by their best workers, who were successful in securing the society to decide upon meeting in the Crescent Avenue church, Plainfield, in April, 1899.

AN AFTERNOON TEA.

CONGRESS MEANS WAR.

DEMANDS THAT SPAIN WITHDRAW FROM CUBA AND AUTHORIZE PRESIDENT TO INTERVENE WITH ARMED FORCE.

Washington, April 13.—This morning Secretary Long, of the Navy Department, issued sealed orders to Commander Schley, of the Flying Squadron, commanding him to sail south at 2 o'clock. To what point it is impossible to learn. This action created excitement in legislative circles, as it was taken to mean that war was inevitable and that the Flying Squadron was going into active service.

Another very important happening this morning was the decision of the Naval Auxiliary Board to purchase the American liners St. Paul and St. Louis.

It is officially announced that the flying squadron has gone to sea to practice for 48 hours. Sigsbee will captain the St. Paul and Goodrich the St Louis.

The Senate committee on Foreign relations made its report to the Senate this afternoon. The report declares that the battle ship Maine was willfully destroyed by the Spanish.

The report denounces it as the duplicity, perfidy and cruelty of the Spanish character.

The resolution, introduced by the committee, is as follows:

"Whereas, the abhorent condition of affairs, which has existed in Cuba for over three years has shocked the people of the United States and has been a disgrace to Christian civilization and culminating in the destruction of the battleship Maine and the loss of 266 officers and crew while on a friendly visit in the harbor of Havana, has been set forth by the President of the United States in his message of April 11th.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

First, That the people of the island of Cuba are and of a right ought to be free and independent.

Second, that it is the duty of the United States to demand and the government of the United States does demand that the government of Spain at once relinquish its authority and government in the island of Cuba and withdraw its land and naval forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

Third, That the President of the United States be and is hereby directed and empowered to use the entire land and naval forces of the United States, and to call into the actual service of the United States, the militia of the several States to such extent as may be necessary to carry these resolutions into effect.

The House committee of foreign affairs also made its report this afternoon and presented a resolution. It was preceded by a preamble similar to the Senate preamble.

The House resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be and hereby is authorized and directed to intervene at once in the island of Cuba for the purpose of put ing a stop to the war between the government of Spain and

HIGH WATER MARK IN REFORMED CHURCH.

Creditable Record of That Denomination During Past Year.

IN THE CLASSIS OF NEWARK.

THERE ARE 4,088 COMMUNICANTS ON MEMBERSHIP ROLLS.

Large Increase in Membership and Finances—Rev. J. T. Duryea Chosen as Delegate to the General Synod Which Will Meet at Asbury Park—Rev. Cornelius Schenck Named for Member of the Board Which Examines Applicants For the Ministry—Detailed Reports From Each Society in the Classis Were Read.

The spring meeting of the Newark Classis of Dutch Reformed churches, was held in this city Tuesday in the Trinity Reformed church.

The morning service was taken up with routine business, including the reports of several of the standing committees of the classis. The session was presided over by Rev. T. J. Lee, D. D., pastor of the First Reformed church, of Newark.

The afternoon session began at 2 o'clock with a praise service, conducted by Rev. Donald Sage Mackay, D. D., pastor of the North Reformed church, of Newark. The singing was led by a large choir of ladies of Trinity Reformed church. Addresses of a devotional nature were delivered by pastors of the classis.

At 2:30 o'clock the business session was resumed with Rev. Dr. Lee in the chair. A detailed report from each church in the classis was then presented, the pastors reading them. The churches presenting reports were the Belleville church, Irvington church, New York Avenue church, of Newark; Franklin church, North church, of Newark; West Newark church, Clinton Avenue church, of Newark; Linden church, Christ church, of Newark; Orange church, Trinity Reformed and German Reformed churches, of this city, and the Montclair church The reports were all referred to the standing committee on the state of religion.

A discussion took place upon the question of how to dispose of the names of church members who have ceased to attend church and have failed to ak for letters of dismissal. It was the prevailing opinion that some means should be devised to enable the churches to get rid of such names. The matter was referred to a committee consisting of Rev. Joseph T. Duryea, of Orange, and Rev. Mr. Janesen.

The report of the standing committee on the State of Religion showed that the denomination has reached this year its high water mark in membership and in finances. The report showed a total of 2,440 families and 4,088 communicants upon the membership rolls of the churches. The classis has sixteen Sunday-schools with a total of 5,006 pupils.

Rev. Joseph T. Duryea was nominated for delegate to the General Synod which will meet at Asbury Park. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., was named for member of the general board of superintendents, whose duty it is to examine candidates for the ministry.

UPTON-OLSON.

Attendants at Brookside Full in Love and Marry.

Monday morning, precisely at 9 o'clock, Frederick Upton and Miss Hilda Olson were married by Rev. Charles Herring. The bridal party drove away from Brookside amid a shower of rice and the best wishes of their many friends, with whom they have been for some time. The bride was becomingly attired in a blue French cloth, with trimmings of white brocaded silk and lace, white gloves and hat to match dress. Mr. and Mrs. Upton took the train for Plymouth, Pa., where the groom's parents reside. After a week's absence they will return to Brookside. The bride was the recipient of some very pretty and useful presents.

Judgment to be Entered.

FIRST BAPTIST AFFAIRS.

ANNUAL PARISH MEETING WAS HELD TUESDAY EVENING

The Society Has Collected and Expended Over $6,000 for Church Expenses During the Past Year—New Trustees Elected.

The annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church was held Tuesday evening in the lecture room of the church and was well attended. L. V. F. Randolph was selected as chairman of the meeting, and O. B. Leonard, stated clerk, filled his regular position. The first business was the presentation of the report of Alex. Gilbert, treasurer This report shows the total receipts during the year to be $6,174.88, and the expenditures $6,050.89, leaving a balance on hand of $123.99. Of the above amount $3.915 was expended for salaries. The amount collected from pew rents was $4,101.56.

The present financial condition of the church shows that the assets are $1,589.14 and the liabilities $7,359 69 making the liabilities over the assets to be $5,884 89 On the side of liabilities is a note of $6 000 which is termed a floating debt caused by additions to the church some time ago.

The estimated expenses for the coming year are counted as $6,123 99, which is $108 in excess of the amount counted upon as receipts.

The next thing on the programme was the election of trustees. The resignation of Martin I Cooley, trustee, who has another year to serve, was received and accepted, leaving in all four trustees to be chosen, the terms of J. D Runyon, S. St. J. McCutchen and E J. Waring having expired. The election resulted in the selection of J. D. Runyon, T. S. Armstrong, S. St. John McCutchen and O B Leonard. This concluded the business of the evening and the meeting adjourned.

WEDDED AT ST. MARY'S.

Miss May Griffin Becomes the Wife of a Mt. Vernon, N. Y. Man.

The marriage of Miss May Griffin, of Park avenue, to Gerald O'Connor, of Mt. Vernon, N Y., was celebrated at St. Mary's church Monday afternoon The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McCormick, assistant rector of the church. Miss Lillie McQuay, of this city, was the bridemaid, and Thomas Farrell, of Montclair, the best man. The bride was given away by David Barry, of Plainfield avenue. Following the wedding a reception and supper was given at the home of David Barry, and during the early part of the evening Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor left for Boston, where they will enjoy their honeymoon. They will reside at Mt. Vernon. Among the gifts given was a diamond brooch from the groom to the bride.

GAYETY AT PARK CLUB.

Junior Dance Given Tuesday Night and a Pleasant Time Enjoyed.

After the quietness of the Lenten time, the social season at the Park Club resumed its wonted activity last Tuesday, when the junior dance was held. As at the many other pleasurable affairs in the Park Club house, the members and families turned out in numbers together with their friends.

The clubhouse was crowded early in the evening and the throng did not diminish until after midnight. There were many charming gowns to be seen. The music was inspiring and tempted the young people out on the floor for dance after dance.

The patronesses were Mrs. Edwin T. Douglass, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. George T. Rogers and Mrs. J. H. Howell.

DUNELLEN HAS A SAY ABOUT SEWER BEDS.

State Board of Health Receives a Complaint.

INVESTIGATION TO BE MADE.

PROMINENT CITIZENS PRESENTED A BIG PETITION.

Urged That Sewer Beds Were a Nuisance and Spread Ill Health Through the Community by the Variety of Ill Smells Which They Emit—State Officials Will Make Personal Inspection to Decide Whether Action Should be Taken to Compel the City to Quit Dumping Its Refuse on the Sewer Farms.

Trenton, April 13—After two years of agitation concerning the alleged nuisance which the city of Plainfield established at their very noses, the indignant residents of Dunellen appeared before the State Board of Health yesterday and made complaint against the sewage disposal beds near Clinton avenue. The complaint came in the form of a petition containing over a hundred names of people living in Dunellen and the western end of Plainfield, who state that the maintenance of the sewer beds is a constant menace to the health of the community and have become to be such a nuisance that they ask the State health officials to interfere and suppress the city from dumping its offal at their very doors.

The petition was presented by Rev. A. L Todd, Adam Dealaman, William Craig and John Peters, who urged that immediate action be taken in the matter.

President Brackett and Secretary Mitchell, of the Board, were appointed a committee to confer with the people of Dunellen and inspect the territory in the vicinity of the sewer beds They will start the investigation in a few days.

There is not much doubt but what the health officials will find the whole population of Dunellen, as well as a good portion of the Fourth ward in this city, up in arms over the presence of the sewage beds in their neighborhood Ever since their establishment property owners nearby have declared that the value of their property has been deteriorated, and that the smells that arose from the beds are a source of ill health. As a result of these complaints, the city is a defendant in an action for $10,000 damages which Mrs. Sarah Millikan, who lives near the sewage beds, claims she suffered by reason of the smells and presence of the beds near her home. She conducted a boarding house, and she claims that the sewer farm drove away all of her boarders. The case will be heard at the next term of the Supreme Court in Union county.

WIFE RAN THE HOUSE.

The Novel Defence Heard in Justice Nash's Court.

The trouble between Charles Drake and his wife, Mrs. Lizzie Drake, was settled some time ago Then they attempted to go to housekeeping once again. Mrs Drake's parents had the possession of the household goods of the Drake establishment and refused to give them up. Then Mrs. Drake brought suit in Justice Nash's court against her father, John Waldron, for $200, the alleged value of the goods. The defence put up by the husband was rather remarkable. He claimed that his wife was the business man of the household and ran the house, her husband paying board. A non-suit was granted for the reason that the plaintiff was under age.

A Woman Crushed Between Cars.

Somerville, April 13.—Bridget Greisheimer, fifty years old, was instantly killed in the yard of the Central Railroad at this place yesterday. She attempted to pass between two boxcars which stood a short distance apart on a siding when a shifting engine struck one of the cars and shoved them together. The woman was caught and crushed. County Physician Wagoner made an examination, and ordered an inquest, which was held by Coroner Sullwell this morning.

A Final Decree.

Lawyer Newcorn has obtained a final decree in the foreclosure proceedings in the case of Hetfield et als against DeCamp et als in the Court of Chancery. A fi fa has been issued.

This Sounds Like Summer.

The joint excursion committee of the local lodges of the A. O. U. W. have decided on the date for the joint excursion to Asbury Park. It will be held June 23d.

Making Over Dresses.

The home dressmaker is just now employing a considerable part of her time in making over dresses from those which have done fair duty for two seasons past, and arranging new draperies of net, mull, fancy grenadine, or other semi-transparent textiles over bodies and skirts or princesse dresses of silk or satin, that have been worn in other forms. To add to these gowns of this class, finished, are now sold quantities of extremely pretty made-up laces—berthas, plastrons, collarettes, frilled fichus, girdles, enriched with handsome slides and jewelled buckles, and also knife, box, and accordion-pleated frillings by the yard, that form short sleeves and corsage, and skirt-trimmings that save much time for the dressmaker, and prove very effective additions. Another use that is made of partly worn silk or satin skirts is green, blue, black, etc., is to convert them into petticoats. These skirts must be ripped apart, brushed, sponged and pressed, a breadth or so removed, and then the skirt is faced and bound at the hem, so that it will wear well—a great fault with nine-tenths of the silk skirts sold ready made being the propensity to fray very quickly at the lower edges. Rustle percaline, or some of the other substitutes for horse-hair, is a good choice for the facing. When completed, add new ruffles to the skirt, which need not necessarily match the foundation. Hundreds of very handsome remnants are offered for sale in two and three yard lengths, that will make the prettiest sort of frills for the petticoat. These may be carried to the stores, where side-pleating is done at so many cents a yard, or be corded at home on the sewing machine, with the simple little cording attachment. They can be pinked with a tiny pinking-iron at the edge, or merely piped or hemmed and machine-stitched. The ruffles may be of fancy-striped satin in tri-colors or plain or shot taffetas, of pleated surah, faille, Liberty silk or satin, or any of the very gay tartans in glowing clan colors.

Natural Cosmetics.

Let orange or lemon peel soak in your water jugs; it forms an excellent tonic and cleanser for the complexion.

Cucumber rind is also beneficial, as is cucumber juice. Cut it in slices, and let the juice run from it, or press the juice out with a pestle and mortar; then use the juice to bathe the face twice daily; it is so cooling and nice.

Vichy Water is another excellent and natural cosmetic, as it contains such cleansing properties and preserves the natural beauty of the skin.

First wash the face in the usual way, always remembering to use pure soap, rinse well, then with a soft sponge dipped in Vichy Water wipe the face well over, and finally dry thoroughly, with a fine, soft towel.

If you use Vichy Water you can easily dispense with the use of soap, as it is so cleansing.

For the complexion, too, ladies would find elder-flower or rose-water far preferable to ordinary water, and either is most refreshing and nice, more especially in summer time.

Some Facts About Meat.

Although mutton is more easily digested than beef, the latter contains a larger quantity of nourishing juices and less fat, and ranks first in nutritive value among animal food. Lamb and veal contain but a small proportion of nutriment as compared with beef or mutton, and pork still less. The most advantageous way of cooking meat are grilling and roasting. Meat which is cooked before a clear fire shrinks less, and is better both in flavor and appearance than if baked in an oven. It is a common error to suppose that boiled meat is more easily digested than roasted; provided it is scientifically cooked so that the goodness is retained, meat roasted is both nourishing and digestible, but if boiled is cold weather all the juices of the meat are drawn out and the fibre alone remains. Stewing is a very economical way of cooking, for by this means meat which might otherwise be tough and unpalatable is rendered tender and very nutritious.

In Spring Attire.

Of gowns suitable for early spring wear nothing is more effective than smooth faced cloths or light weight materials. Fur trimmings are much used on early spring gowns, and many have the narrowest border of dark fur, while the dress is extremely light in tone.

A chic little walking costume, made in a light woolen material, has the skirt trimmed round the base with three narrow bands of fur. The bodice matches the skirt, and is laid on either side of a vest of figured silk, which is trimmed at the top with a small yoke of figured material. Collar and waistband of velvet. The bodice is ornamented with a large collar of silk edged with trimming and forming revers in the front. The sleeve material is pleated crosswise at the top. Small toque of velvet with black aigrette.

Cloth Capes for Spring Wear.

A dainty cape suitable for cool days is of fawn colored cloth, trimmed with bands of material machine stitched on. The front and lower edge is turned in and machine stitched, and the lining of fine colored flowered silk is cut just like the material, made up separately and slip-stitched in. The collar is of double material, interlined with canvas.

A pretty little toque to go with this cape is of golden brown velvet, trimmed on the left side with 3 feathers and an aigrette. The styles in capes will vary largely, many being made in unique patterns. One recently seen being of three overlapping capes, curving right from the neck all round.

THE VICAR OF CHRIST

CELEBRATION OF LEO XIII'S ANNIVERSARY AT THE VATICAN.

A Description of the Services by an Eye-witness—Splendid Scene Observed With Pomp at Rome—The Pope Not Wearied by the Effort.

Feb. 13 last witnessed the long expected mass celebrated by the sovereign pontiff, Leo XIII, at the papal altar above the confession or tomb of the Prince of the Apostles, in the Vatican basilica, in presence of over 70,000 persons, including 30,000 pilgrims coming from all parts of Italy to do homage to the vicar of Christ on the double anniversary of his twentieth year of pontificate and his diamond sacerdotal jubilee. Thirty archbishops and bishops of various Italian dioceses presided at the pilgrimage, some 200 Catholic associations and societies, with their respective banners, oriflambs, etc., of every hue and shade, many of them most beautiful, gorgeous in gold embroidery and sacred emblems, lent brilliancy and gayety to the scene as they were grouped near the high altar reserved for the papal function. Last, but not least, were 300 pilgrims from the diocese of Anagni, which embraces Carpineto, the birthplace of his holiness, who brought offerings and gifts in kind to their august fellow citizens. Amid these Carpinese pilgrims was a peasant of that town, Ludovico Salvagni, 87 years of age, who in bygone days was the habitual attendant in his hunting excursions of the youthful Gioacchino, and to give more solemnity to the function the pope had invited the sacred college—not as a rule present on similar occasions—the diplomatic corps and the Roman patriciate, for all of whom separate tribunes were erected beside the throne of St. Peter, as also for the prince grand master of the sovereign order of Malta with his knights. The archbishops and bishops were bidden to attend in simple mantelletas and rochet, the diplomats in evening dress, with decorations, the cardinals alone wearing cope and miter.

Their eminences, to the number of 19, including the cardinal patriarch of Venice and the cardinal archbishop of Milan, with their respective diocesan pilgrims, preceded the sovereign pontiff as, borne on high in the sedia gestatoria, he entered the basilica from the chapel of the Pieta and was carried to the foot of the papal altar, the famous silver trumpets of the noble guard sending forth their sweetest strains from the summit of the dome over the confession, while the choir of the basilica intoned the "Te es Petrus," amid the wildest enthusiasm of the immense crowd thronging every inch of the major temple of Christendom.

After vesting at the faldistorium his holiness began the celebration of a low mass, assisted at the throne by the usual dignitaries, the motets "Verbum supernum," "Quam suavis," "Ponem de coelo," being well rendered by the Choir Julia, led by Chapel Master Meluzzi. At the solemn moment of the elevation above the throne, which re-echoed the melodious notes of the silver trumpets executing the celebrated "Armonia Religiosa," composition of an ex-noble guard, Count Dominic Silvani. Having ended his mass, the pope disrobed at the faldistorium, made his thanksgiving, retired for a moment to partake of some slight refreshment prepared for him, returned to the papal altar, and in a firm voice intoned the "Te Deum" in thanksgiving for the gifts, sung by the choir and the people. At the termination of the prayers the holy father, vested pontifically, tiara on head, mounted the sedia gestatoria and was borne round the altar to the front of the confession, while the cardinals, bishops, diplomatic corps and Roman patriciate, quitting their places, ranged themselves in due order of precedure to either side of the podium, raised for the occasion.

The 180 banners of the Catholic societies dipped deep in homage along the passage of the sovereign pontiff, Leo XIII, who, assisted by Cardinals Mocchi and Segna of the order of deacons, intoned the solemn rites, answered by people and choir, and from the podium imparted in clear, sonorous tones the solemn apostolic benediction, amid the grounding of arms from the bristling Noble Swiss and Palatine guards, and the pontifical gendarmes, and the unrestrained emotion of the reverend crowd, who after the lecture of the "Brief of Indulgence" by the cardinal secretary of state set forth in enthusiastic "Evviva!" not ceasing till the pope had reached the lower end of the basilica. Then, rising to his feet, he once more blessed his devout children as he disappeared from their view, entering the chapel of the Pieta, while he was borne to his private apartments in the Vatican palace.

To avoid all occasion of fatigue to his holiness it had been previously decided that there were to be no audiences read nor replies expected, no presentation of pilgrims or kissing of the papal hand and foot. Consequently the holy father at the close of the function, lasting from 8:30 to 11:30 a. m., gave no evidence of undue weariness. Everything passed off satisfactorily.

Two of the most conspicuous and interesting groups present in the basilica were five Chinese in their national costume, four being youths from 12 to 14 years of age, the fifth apparently much older, who, placed close beside the confession, watched the ceremonies with eager interest. There was a considerable number of students of the Roman university and members of the Catholic University club, wearing the particolored berettas of the respective faculties they follow, which they agitated in the air, shouting "Evvivas!" to the pope as he was borne before them on his passage to the podium for the apostolic benediction.—Brooklyn Eagle.

INSTRUCTIONS IN TAXIDERMY.

Preparing Wings and Feathers and the Skins of Birds.

Now that feathers and wings are used to such an extent for the decoration of hats and bonnets, and as these articles are quite expensive, it would be a great boon to many women to prepare their own wings, which can be easily done with the exercise of a little skill. The outfit necessary for the handling of wings, tails and parts of the skins of birds is very simple. A rather sharp ordinary pocket-knife, a little arsenic, as sold by druggists, some cotton batting; a piece of silk or muslin and a strong needle and thread. When using arsenic care must be taken that there are no cuts or hangnails on the hand, and that it is out of reach of the children.

Quite a number of our common birds have exquisite coloring in their plumage. The blue tint can be found in the indigo finch, the blue jay, the blue bird, and the blue-winged teal. Then there are birds with the green and purple coloring, which are quite rare, however, the black bird being the most common. Then we have the white wings of the domestic poultry and pigeons, a number of the latter having a blue garb which is often used. The goldfinch, the yellow warbler and meadow lark furnish us with yellow. The plumage of water fowl stand the weather much better than those of the land.

To prepare the wings and tail of a pigeon for further use it is necessary to chop off the wings close to the body, and cut off the tail, taking with it the candle-vertebrae. After spreading out a wing it will be seen that a few small feathers are directly over the muscle. These should be plucked out above the muscle, and then with a sharp knife the skin should be cut from the end of the muscles to where the wing was chopped off. Cut out as much flesh as possible, taking care not to injure the other side of the wing. Then put the arsenic into every corner under the skin until the exposed surface is completely covered. Put a piece of batting into the excavation made and cover this neatly with a bit of silk and sew the patch to the skin. To dry these wings all that is necessary is a large book between which they should be placed, under a heavy weight, for two or three weeks.

The breasts of ducks, gulls and many water fowls are beautiful. A sharp knife is necessary for this work. Begin at the neck just above the portion you desire to save, and carefully cut the skin. Do not cut any deeper than just through the skin, and take the feathers parted by use of the left hand. Cut straight along the bird's side until near the lower end of the breast bone. Be careful not to go beyond the breast bone. Now slit across the neck and repeat the operation on the other side of the bird, and the skin is then ready to peel off. The skin should be slightly pushed, but not pulled as that is apt to stretch it. After the skin is free slit across from the inner side and the wings will come off.

Trim off any ragged pieces you do not want on the fleshy side of the breast and apply a quantity of arsenic, rubbing it in until the skin becomes dry. As there is a quantity of oil in all water fowls it is a good plan to apply a little cornstarch, made into a fleshy side over the arsenic, then the batting and lastly sew on the covering of silk neatly and to the proper size.

It is well to dry the breast in its natural shape, therefore the book should be used. A piece of heavy wrapping board, covered with wadding would serve the purpose and on this the breast should be placed feather side up. Cover this with a clean piece of linen and fasten securely with a few pins. A duck or goose breast will be ready for use and will last an indefinable time.

To Make Good Coffee.

It is a little curious that the most expert authorities, almost without exception, fell back upon the old-fashioned coffee-pot as the one which, properly looked after, produces the best coffee. The reason this is not true in the average kitchen is because the qualification mentioned is not carefully observed. One mistress insists not only that the inside of the coffee-pot shall be clean, but that it shall be polished—this not because she cares for the polish, but because in this way the absolute cleanliness of the interior is insured. The deposit of sediment from many coffee-drinkings easily effects the flavor of all brews made in the pot. Care, too, should be taken to keep the inside of the tea-kettle free from deposit, and with pure, freshly boiled water, a good grade of coffee, the fourth or whole egg—shell and all—with five-minute boiling, and prompt service at the table, the old-fashioned pot, be it of tin, copper, britannia, agate, or what not, is still the peer of any in the long list of special coffee-pots to be found in any housefurnishing shop.

The Russian Stove.

The stove is the principal furniture of a Russian cottage, it fills a third of the interior of the principal room, being built of brick and plaster, flat on the top. During the day it is used for cooking and drying clothes, and at night it is the family bed, on which all the inmates sleep in a heap, pell mell.

Ourselves and Others.

Every girl is ready to give in a long catalogue of those virtues and good qualities she expects to find in the person of a friend; but very few of us are careful to cultivate them in ourselves.

ARE BORN, NOT MADE.

TRAINER JOHN SPLAN SAYS THIS OF ALL GREAT HORSES.

Sarus a Cause in View—Noted Racesman on the First Trotter to Beat 2:14—Goldsmith Maid the Only One to Beat Him More Than One Race.

Sarus, the first trotter to beat 2:14, was the grandest animal I ever saw and was proof positive to me that great horses are born and not made. His owner was a poor plain Long Island farmer, who had probably never been inside a racetrack or ridden a three-minute gait in his life. His sire and dam were both owned and worked on the farm, where Sarus was foaled. Neither of them had any pretension to speed in any way above an ordinary road horse—neither one of them ever produced anything of note excepting Sarus, although both of them were mated in after years with animals of superior trotting, breeding, and action; yet the produce of such mating was never above the ordinary.

With this evidence before us, we can easily believe that Sarus owed his greatness to nothing but his creator. In formation he was not what was considered in his day a typical American trotting horse. He was sixteen hands high with a very light body for a horse of his size—the best of legs, a beautiful tail and carried it well; his head was plain but denoted great character and will power. In disposition he was a horse of great courage and bravery—a good deal of temper, but absolutely controllable at all times. He was a horse with a robust constitution, was a great feeder, and what the English horsemen call "a good doer;" that is, he could take a great deal of work in training—a very important matter in a racehorse.

In July, 1876, his owner, Mr. R. B. Conklin, placed him in my hands to train and drive him in his races for our mutual benefit—a contract which turned out very satisfactory to us both, as I won with him in stakes and purses over $100,000 and sold him at the end of his turf career for $36,000—the highest price ever paid for a trotting gelding.

His turf career while in my hands might be called a succession of victories. In the four years that I had him we trotted him all over the country, over all kinds of tracks, and made two trips to California. He started against all the best horses, and in all those busy years was never beaten but by four different horses. Goldsmith Maid, who was champion and had been for some time, with a record of 2:14, was the only horse that ever beat him more than one race. The first three races he trotted against her she beat him, but from that time on he was always able to beat her and her best record.

In his ownership he was one of the most fortunate horses I ever saw. Although his breeder, Mr. R. B. Conklin, was not a sportingman in any sense of the word and had no practical knowledge of horses, he had formed in his mind what might be called a great deal of old-fashioned "horse sense." He realized the fact that Sarus was a great horse and gave him what he considered the best opportunity to develop and show his greatness. He retained his horse and trainer with the greatest consideration and had the satisfaction of bringing his plans to a successful issue financially and otherwise. Mr. Conklin sold him to Mr. Robert Bonner, who is probably the best-known man in the world in connection with the American trotter, and to him more than any other man is due the credit of having placed the trotter in the front rank of all the horse families in the country—John Splan, in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Ill-Humor and Peevishness.

There is hope in every man who can yet believe in mirth, but he whose vice is so confirmed that he does not credit the existence of virtue, is irreclaimable.

No disease of the mind can more fatally disable it from benevolence, the chief duty of social beings, than ill-humour and peevishness; for though it breaks not in paroxysms of outrage, nor bursts into clamour, turbulence and bloodshed, it wears out happiness by slow corrosion, and small injuries unrevenged or repaid, as may be considered as the canker of life, that destroys its vigour, and checks its improvement, that creeps on with hourly depredations, and taints and vitiates what it cannot consume.

CATHOLICITY IN NORWAY.

Bishop Falise's Account of the Advance ment of the Faith There.

From every quarter of the globe come reports of the progress of Catholicity. Even in the most Protestant lands the church is growing steadily. We learn from the London Tablet that the vicar apostolic of Norway, Bishop Falize, gives an encouraging account of the advancement of the faith in that ancient kingdom. The hospital of the Sisters of St. Joseph at Christiania, formerly a miserable shed, where the good nuns lost their lives in undeserving to save their patients, has been replaced by the handsomest hospital in all Norway. On Aug. 28 the bishop consecrated the new Church of St. Halvard, modest externally, but extremely beautiful in the interior. At Trondhjem the little Catholic church was in a distant and not very respectable suburb. To the bishop's joy the government agreed to sell him an old railway station in the center of the town, close to the ancient cathedral. The little church of Harstad, in the large island of Hindo (Lotoden), has been erected into a new parish, and the former parish of Alten, in Lapland, which had been given up, has been opened once more.

The bishop concludes with the following passage: "How far 'Catholicism is in the air in Norway,' to quote the recent expression of the bigoted Lutherak Ugetidende, a little incident will show. In the large town of Bergen we have nursing sisters, but, owing to want of means, no hospital. Last June I was confirming some converts there. On this occasion a deputation of doctors, all Protestant, came to beg me to erect a hospital. I told them that we should have had a magnificent site, but no money. Then they offered to hire a house at their own expense, where the sisters might install a temporary hospital, but only on condition that it should be called 'the Catholic hospital,' adding, 'We are sure that the name alone will guarantee the success of the establishment.'"

THE POPE AND BORES.

How a French Bishop's Interview With Leo XIII Ended.

The pope's private audiences have been reduced in number. The individuals who have been accorded this honor have been requested by the pontifical chamberlains to co-operate in causing as little fatigue as possible to his holiness. The pope himself good humoredly submits to these prescriptions.

Latterly a French bishop, on his visit ad limina, on receiving notice of his audience, was requested not to protract the same beyond a given number of minutes. As the pope entered the chamber the domestic prelate warned the bishop that he would give him a signal, when it would be time for him to request the apostolic benediction and take his departure. The bishop was led to the throneroom and the audience commenced.

The minutes quickly passed, and the domestic prelate at length gave the signal for the bishop to retire. His lordship, however, thought he had not yet been allotted sufficient time, and paid no heed. The prelate, after a few minutes, repeated the signal; but, perceiving that his efforts were unavailing, walked quietly to a side door and in a moment returned to the bishop with two poles. Taking, who had with them two red poles. Fastening these to the sides of the throne, they calmly raised it and carried the pope bodily from the reception room.

The French bishop remained mute with astonishment. Then he rose from his knees and took his departure, not without gesticulating.—London Mail.

MOTHER OF LEO XIII.

Her Best Wish That He Might Live to Be a Pope Fulfilled.

Pope Leo XIII, when talking of the coming twentieth anniversary of his nomination to the pontificate, recently told that once in the presence of his mother and a peasant woman he, then a little child, was straining to reach some object, when he fell to the ground. The country woman picked him up and exclaimed: "Oh, you must have been born to be a pope!" Whereupon Signora Anna Peccl, the present pope, was but an infant at the time, but he showed by signs that the augury filled him with indignation.

"A cardinal, I mean," said the woman, correcting herself.

"You should say a pope," said the child's mother, and thereupon the boy manifested unmistakable joy. Ever afterward the mother's best wish for her son was that he might live to be a pope. And pope he is.—Baltimore Sun.

The New Poor Box.

The robbers of church poor boxes are a cause of apprehension to the clergy of New York. The authorities of the church of the Paulist fathers, at Colonial bus avenue and Fifty-ninth street, have fortified a shaken faith in the reverence of the thievishly inclined by a highly ingenious device. Where the poor box used to be is now the cap of a heavy metal pipe that leads down into the basement. In the cap is a slot where coins are inserted. Once deposited they rattle down the pipe into a receptacle in the basement safe from the sudden attack of sneak thieves.—New York Sun.

Sisters of Notre Dame of Namur.

The sisters of Notre Dame of Namur were founded in 1804 at Amiens, France, by the venerable Mother Julie Billiart and Rev. Mother St. Joseph (Visconntess de Gesiancourt), under the direction of the fathers of the Society of Jesus. The first community in the United States was established at Cincinnati in 1840, and this continues to be the mother house in this country, though there are two other novitiates of the institute in America, one at San Jose, Cal., and the other at Waltham, Mass.—Chicago Times-Herald.

GEN. FITZHUGH L.

OUR ERRING BROTHER WHO P[illegible] HIMSELF THE MAN OF THE HOU[illegible].

Educated at West Point He Left the Army When Virginia Seceded, and Joined the Confederacy—Gen. Lee's Boss as Invaluable Government Officer.

Thackeray says somewhere that whenever you find a man whose friends all call him by his first name that man is very apt to be a good fellow. In this were ever signally illustrated by any man, it has been in the case of Fitzhugh Lee. Every man who knows him is his friend, and all call him "Fitz."

Sidney Smith Lee, the father of Fitzhugh, was the fleet captain of Commodore Perry's squadron when it opened Japan to the world and western civilization. When the war began Capt. Lee, of the United States Navy, resigned about the same time his brother, Robert E., his junior in age by two years, quitted the United States Army. It was a terrible blow to Capt. Smith Lee, as it was to his brother, to leave the service of the United States, in which he had passed forty years of his life and won honor and rank. But there was no shrinking from his point of view. Capt. Smith Lee's first son was in the United States Navy when the war began. He was afterward a lieutenant on the famous confederate cruiser Shenandoah, Capt. Waddell, the finest and swiftest fighting ship the confederacy ever owned.

GEN. FITZHUGH LEE.

But "Fitz," the second of the famous sons of Capt. Smith Lee, would go into the army. He had inherited the cavalry spirit of his grandsire, and when he was fourteen could ride like a Comanche. And in 1843, he had, then seventeen, was sent to our military school on the Hudson, which his grandfather, "Light Horse Harry," had helped Washington to found. You cannot always tell what a man's future will be from his standing at school. Robert E. Lee was second in the class of 1829 at West Point, a class whose members in after years were among the most brilliant men of their time in our military service. "Fitz" Lee graduated third, "if you begin counting the class from the bottom," as he always says. The truth was—and still is—Lee was a man of action rather than a student.

It was to the Second United States Cavalry that Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee went, after his graduation in the class in 1856. His active service commenced at once. The Indians were much excited at the crossing by emigrants of their lands and hunting grounds. With his usual energy Lieut. Lee distinguished himself in every fight with the Comanches in which he took part. He had some close calls.

In one Indian fight a warrior, dashing up close to him, shot Lee with an arrow. It would have killed him had not the head turned on striking. As it was it penetrated several inches, and Lee had to ride about and command his men with the feather end of the arrow sticking out of his breast. It began to be painful, and lying down on his side, Lee called his men and said: "Jack, pull this devilish thing out." The friend gave a tug. The arrow did not move. "Put your foot against my side and try it again." The other did so. The pain must have been horrible, for Lee's face turned very white. Finally, out came the snarf of the missile, leaving the steel head four or five inches deep in the young lieutenant's breast. It was a severe wound, for the heavy steel head could not be reached by the surgeon. But the wound healed over, and the steel happened to be new and clean, and therefore did not induce blood-poisoning. For some years it troubled Lieut. Lee, but was finally absorbed into the system and ceased.

Ther were five of the Lees of Virginia wearing the United States uniform when South Carolina fired on Sumter. They all waited and watched the trend and course of events. The storm burst in Virginia, Alabama and they waited for her word. When it came, first Sidney Smith, then Robert, G. W. Custis, Sidney Smith, Jr., of the navy, finally and last Fitzhugh, all quitted the service of the country their forefathers, their fathers and grandfathers had helped to lay. Of the awful pain and regret all felt (especially the seniors) at the dissolution of the Union as they deemed it, there is ample evidence extant. But go they must. Virginia had at last spoken. She was "their cherishing mother. Her word must be obeyed, and it was.

As a soldier, Fitzhugh Lee was among the very first of that gallant lot of young general officers who helped to make "Stuart's Cavalry" the famous corps it became, under its brilliant young Virginia chieftain and head. As a leader Fitzhugh Lee was, perhaps, the most popular officer in the corps save Stuart himself. Stuart in his evidence in oft-repeated words, showing his appreciation of his young lieutenant. It is, indeed, high praise when Stuart commends an officer as he does Fitzhugh Lee.

HIRED TO DO HIS WORRYING.

Man from Missouri Made a Bargain, for It Cost Him $6.

He looked tired and worn out. His eyes were red and swollen from weeping, and his sunken cheeks plainly told of ceaseless care and worry. A man not more than 40 years of age, he looked every bit of 60. He had been arrested last week and arraigned before Justice Martin charged with disorderly conduct.

"I don't know what to make of him, your Honor," said the officer who made the arrest. "He is hanging about the docks in the central part of the city and seems to fear some impending doom. He refused to give his name, and as a last resort I thought I would bring him before you."

"Your Honor, sir," meekly spoke the prisoner. "I am worried, just as the officer says. The frequency of bank troubles and loan associations, both coupled with the stringency of the money market, have well-nigh driven me crazy. I have done everything possible to overcome my trepidation and nervousness, but my recent losses are too strong a hold upon me. Several days I met a man who seemed to appreciate my condition. He informed me that he would ease my mind and cause me to recover my buoyant spirits. Eagerly I grasped his outstretched hand. He directed me to a place on South Clark street where I was told I would meet a person known as Professor Ongwee who was the sole owner and proprietor of a worry office."

"A What?"

"A 'worry' office, sir. I met the professor, your Honor, and on looking over his price list learned that he would worry for me for a day's ordinary cases or $6 a day in serious or extraordinary cases. In desperate ones he would sweat blood for $25. I paid him $6. For the time being I felt comparatively at ease. I left his office as happy and chipper as a soul-lifting bird. Not a care on my mind, and I really felt sorry for the poor professor who was doing all my worrying so cheaply, but it lasted but a short time, and I soon fell back into the old trough of despair, and perhaps have acted a bit strange of late. I don't blame the officer, sir, but if I could get back to my people perhaps I could forget."

THE MAN WHO WORRIED.

On his promise to leave the city the prisoner, who was afterward learned to be addicted to opium, was allowed to go to his home, which was said to be in Warrensburg, Mo.—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE FATHER'S SHOT.

How England's Postmaster General, Has Become Famous. Lost His Eye.

The fur seal is a land animal of perverted tastes, who, living at sea, has had his paws changed into flippers very like the long black kid gloves of a woman. His heart, liver and kidneys are exactly the same as those of a sheep, and just as good to eat, but his flesh, although just like fat mutton to look at, is rank and distasteful from his habit of eating dish, which he packages up in a parcel of thick white fat to keep the body warm, while from the skin grows a heavy crop of beautiful grown to protect with large flat oily-bearing hairs, making a glossy surface which slides through the water without friction. Perfectly fearless, overflowing with fun, a perfect little athlete, naturously strong, the fur seal is the most delightful of all wild creatures. But although they live at sea the seals, being heavily clothed in fat, skin, fur and hair, find the temperate latitudes much too warm for comfort during the summer months. Since they cannot shed their garments like ourselves, they migrate to a sub-arctic region, entering the immense multitudes where there are fisheries to support them. Their ration is fifty pounds of cod every day, which for a creature the size of a sheep is considerable.

When the little pups appear their mothers go a-fishing to feed them, and likewise teach them to swim. The pups howl with fright when first thrown into the water. Now, outside the seal city, with its regular streets and harness, assemble the young bachelors not yet grown enough for love and fighting. Here man steps in, driving the poor bachelors away inland to be clubbed for their precious fur.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

The District of Columbia is pleased with the election of McComas as Senator. If it must lose Mr. Gorman, who has been popular here because he has always looked carefully after the interests of the District, it desired to have a man not less friendly. Although legally a resident of Maryland, Mr. Gorman is to all intents and purposes a District man, his home being but a short distance away from Washington. Long residence and constant service in Congress for years have made him familiar with all projects coming before Congress, and experience has taught him how to overcome all obstacles that to a newcomer would appear to be insuperable. Mr. McComas served many years in Congress, most of the time on the District Committee, and, being a man of much tact, he won the favor of the people who live here by intelligent and alert labor in their behalf. Mr. McComas is not so mysterious as Senator Gorman. He is not a compromiser, a "conniver" among politicians. One of the comments made upon him here, when he was elected, was that in his service as Judge of the Supreme Court he has not quarreled with the lawyers practicing under him. The talk that would be heard about him as a "Gorman Republican" loses its force now, since the Republicans have learned to win victories without the consent or advice of Mr. Gorman. If it is not improper to make a comparison of honorable Senators, it might be asserted that McComas is an improvement upon the average that has recently prevailed in the body that Mr. Hoar thinks has not deteriorated.

The Negro Poet Dunbar.

One of the most conspicuous figures about the Library of Congress is Paul Laurence Dunbar, who has made so creditable reputation as a poet. Mr. Dunbar is employed as one of the assistant librarians and has charge of the division of medicine, mathematics and the natural sciences. He enjoys the duties of his position, and all of his spare time is devoted to studying and writing. Mr. Dunbar has been more or less lionized since he came to Washington, and is extremely amiable in granting the various demands made upon him. On several occasions he has read selections from his own works, and, which is not always true of authors who give extracts from their own writings, he reads with expression and taste.

The Sick-Leave Habit of Clerks.

The severity of the language of a circular just issued by Secretary Gage about the sick leaves of absence and leave for the usual thirty days each year makes it evident that the Secretary has obtained the impression, or even gained the conviction, that the Treasury employes have abused the opportunities afforded them for getting not only thirty days of liberty each year when well, but thirty days for illness without loss of pay,whether sick or well. The Administration takes up this subject with the determination at the beginning, to get for the Government, from the employes paid for services, a fair seven hours' work each day. As a matter of fact, it is but six and a half hours that the Government exacts, five out of the time between 8 and 4 o'clock a half hour is allowed for luncheon. Mr. Gage began by putting under surveillance every clerk in his department, and a shout of rage went up when it was found that many of them, to vein the habit of arriving at 9:30 or later, and that these late-comers "evened things up" by leaving a little earlier in the afternoon than the clerks who came at 9 o'clock precisely. It must be assumed that he has obtained trustworthy evidence that sick leaves are frequently taken on false representations, for he has issued an order requiring a report from each head of a bureau of the leaves of absence of each employe to be rendered each month.

Heroes Subject to Government Flowers.

The florists of Washington are making an earnest effort to secure the passage of a resolution by Congress prohibiting the free distribution by officials of the Government of plants, cut flowers, foliage, etc. There are four conservatories and propagating gardens belonging to the Government in Washington. One is under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Buildings and Grounds, another is at the White House, a third at the Agricultural Department, and a fourth is the Botanic Garden, near the Capitol, under the direction of the Joint Committee on Library of Congress. It has always been customary, as long as anybody can remember, for the people in charge of the establishments to distribute their surplus flowers among the official families of Washington and to join plants and similar decorations for dinners, receptions and other entertainments, which, of course, cuts a good deal into the trade of the local florists.

A CONCISE MEMORANDUM.

S. P. G., However, Had a Different Meaning to the Mother Than to the Son.

Part of the boyhood of Bishop Barry was spent at boarding-school, where, during his first term, he was allowed $10 as spending money. His mother, on giving it to him, requested an exact account of his daily expenditures. He tried to keep his word, but sometimes, forgetting to post the items for days together, it was difficult to recall them, and he invented an abbreviation corresponding very nearly to sundries, which appeared pretty regularly throughout his account.

When Mrs. Barry first looked over her boy's account-book on his return she was much pleased at the most frequently recurring item of expense, and supposed that he had been led to take so strong an interest in the cause of missions. Astonished in his turn, he declared he had not given a penny to missions.

"But, surely," exclaimed Mrs. Barry, "the society for the propagation of the Gospel is missionary work, and I find that more than half your money has been given in small sums to S. P. G."

"S. P. G., mother," confessed the future dignitary of the Church, "does not mean Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. When I could not remember what I spent my money for, I put down S. P. G.—Something. Probably Grub.' "—Christian Commonwealth.

SHE TAMES WILD HORSES.

Strength, Patience and an Indomitable Will All that is Necessary.

Miss Vaughan-Lewis is the hyphenated name of the woman who can boast that she is the first of her sex to adopt the profession of horse breaking.

She is the daughter of a Welsh clergyman. At sixteen she had a reputation among his parishioners for her power over vicious and unmanageable animals. Then her father died and she was obliged to earn her own living. She went to Canada and soon had a number of clients, who kept her busy breaking their half-wild horses for them.

Now she has a farm near San Francisco. She can board twelve horses at a time. Three men servants and two women form her retinue. She breaks all the horses herself. By 6 o'clock every morning she is in the stables. Seemingly the most vicious brute and entirely without whip or spur. Her wrists are very strong, her patience inexhaustible and her will indomitable. These three qualifications, she says, are all that are needed to make a woman a success as a horse breaker.—New York Journal.

Foolish Excess of Discipline.

The practice in some public schools of requiring the children, when moving in a body, to observe more than the military rigidity of line, with penalties for looking in other than a prescribed direction, or for lifting the hand to allay a facial irritation, reaches a climax in the San Francisco schools. There, the boys, when lined up in front of the school, awaiting the tap of the bell, are required to stand with their arms folded across their chests, exactly in the prison attitude. When they move it is with the prison lockstep, and between rows of nails driven into the sidewalk, and the top of the unlucky youth who steps over the line. The criticism of the method comes from a detective. The boys, he claims, are acquiring a habit which in later years will be a source of annoyance and a cause of suspicion. Discharged convicts, the detective asserts, frequently resumes the prison habit of the lockstep and the folded arms when their minds are preoccupied, and to the veteran police officer the motion and the attitude are as distinctive as the striped suit. —New York Post.

Scalp Hunting for Pay.

It is not generally known in latter-day Minnesota history that the state treasury once paid out cash as bounties for Sioux Indian scalps, just as this and many other states are now paying for wolf scalps. State Treasurer Koerner, in looking over the 1836 report of State Treasurer Charles Schaff, discovered the following item among the disbursements of that year: "J. G. Davis, Sioux scalp, $25." This item occurs in the list of disbursements amounting to $7,870.06, under the head "Suppressing Indian War." The $25 paid to J. C. Davis for the Indian scalp in question, therefore, had its origin in the cause of suppressing or spreading the Sioux outbreak. It doubtless strikes the general reader that $25 is rather small inducement for securing Sioux scalps. Few hunters to-day would care to contract for pelts of that kind for that figure. —Minneapolis Times.

The Oldest Lock in Existence.

"The oldest lock in existence is the one which formerly secured one of the doors of the Temple at the Jewish Republic. "It is a gigantic affair, and the key to it, which is as large as one man can conveniently carry, reminds one of the Scriptural reference to such instruments being carried on the shoulder. The exact words are, 'And the key to the house of David I will lay upon his shoulder.' The key to the lock from Nineveh is nearly three and a half feet in length, and of the thickness of a four-inch drain tile."

NEW YORK FASHIONS

A dainty frock for a little girl is of pale blue woolen crepon. This is made in Russian fashion and attached to a yoke of cream guipure over pale blue satin. The middle and rosette are of blue taffeta, while the shirred sleeves are of the crepon.

Care should be taken with the girl just blossoming into maiden-hood, about fourteen or fifteen, to make the best of her awkwardness, and at this age she requires very careful dressing. If she be fairly slim, and a brunette let her wear a dress of blue or red serge, with simple braid trimming or for that matter, no trimming at all. The blue serge frock is also very stylish trimmed with white cloth. The simplest hat for a young girl is the flat model, trimmed with flowers and ribbon.

Tucks Very Popular.

Tucks are in quite as great favor as they have been for several seasons past; therefore no woman need hesitate about tucking her waists and gowns for the summer if she fancies this easy and effective style of trimming. There are very many women who employ a portion of the quiet home hours of the Lenten season in making up the simple dresses they will need during the vacation season to come, leaving the few handsome gowns they intend to have for the tailor's or dressmaker's designing later on. Tucks are used at present, but they will increase and multiply all over the summer gown, being laid up and down, horizontally, in arching lines, in serpentine curves on sleeves of thin fabric, and in broad, medium, and finest fingerwidths on yokes, guimpes, panels, and blouses. White organdy skirts will show alternate rows of tucking and flouncing from belt to hem. Other models will be tucked around the hips only, and blouse vests and skirts will be arranged in rows of alternate tiny frills, lines of tucking, and bands of insertion in French embroidery.

The Flounce Much Worn.

The circular flounce—probably because it is an entire change from familiar styles of seasons past—has become quite a feature on gowns designed both for house and street wear. It is the exception on tailor dresses, however, and even on other costumes there is a very noticeable defect in the adjustment of the flounce. No matter how perfectly it is cut and applied to the upper half of the skirt, after being worn a few times it sags in places, particularly if the goods composing the gown are lightly woven, like serge, wool armure, or etamine. Graceful as it looks on some of the elegant unworn French gowns, it is not a style that is likely to last, for the dressmakers prefer to make other styles, and when they are personally requested to follow the flounce model, the patron ordering the circular effect almost invariably regrets it.

A Pretty Collarette.

A smart and pretty collarette is always a great boon to girls who have only a limited sum to expend on dress, as by its aid a plain bodice may be smartened up for evening or dinner wear. A dainty model is of cream silk muslin, but it is equally suitable for thin silk in any light shade; it is tucked perpendicularly to within 2½ inches of the edge of front and back, and the entire depth of shoulders; the untucked edge forms a frill edged with a tiny ruche of chiffon about one inch wide. Straps of jewelled guipure are placed down the centre and each side the front; the collar-band is arranged in folds, and the stand-up collar is edged with a chiffon ruche; the epaulettes are slightly full, and are also edged with a ruche.

Striped Gingham Shirt Waist.

Silk shirts made of taffeta are much worn at this season and are made in the same way as the cotton ones, only in some cases a little more elaborate The heavier materials in wash goods will be in demand long before the organdies and fine lawns make their appearance. Therefore waists of galetea, madras and pique are often worn under jackets long before the real warm weather arrives.

A stylish shirt waist of striped gingham which is made quite plain, has a white linen box pleat down the center, and white linen collar and cuffs are also worn. The most popular shirt to wear with these waists are of black serge or taffeta, though during the summer the pique and linen skirts will be very much worn.

There is no worship in effect where is no joy.

COURT CEREMONY.

CHANGES IN WASHINGTON SOCIETY INAUGURATED BY MRS. M'KINLEY.

At the White House Receptions Refreshment Served Only to those Receiving—Viands at the Afternoon Functions of Women of the Cabinet More Simple.

It has been said with truth that no reigning queen has more social power than has the wife of our President. Indeed, no woman of royal authority has as many social responsibilities. Just as it would be were she the Queen-Empress, an invitation from Mrs. McKinley takes precedence of all other offers of hospitality which might be extended by an American woman. No cause other than illness or mourning can be offered as an appropriate excuse for regretting an invitation despatched by her order. An invitation to the White House is always a sufficient excuse for breaking a previous engagement elsewhere.

Mrs. McKinley will not return official calls. She or her husband may enter private houses as may any other citizens if they wish, but such visits can never be regarded as returns for calls. Social ethics, however, demand that the President and his wife be entertained at dinner one night during each social season by all of the members of the Cabinet in turn, beginning with the Secretary of State, who is our premier, and ending with the Secretary of Agriculture. The President, however, will never enter a foreign embassy or legation, and the same rule will be observed by his wife. A foreign embassy or legation, technically speaking, is foreign soil, just as is a foreign war ship in our harbors.

A number of social changes have been made in the social calendar. For several administrations Thursdays have been reserved as Executive days, so to speak, when alternating receptions and dinners were held between the beginning of the year and the first day of Lent. Most of these functions, will take place on Wednesdays instead.

A great deal is said each year concerning the cost of official hospitality here at court. It has often been argued that Presidents cannot afford to put aside anything to speak of out of their annual salaries, because of the great personal expense attached to official entertainment. The cost of one season's hospitality at the White House is variously estimated by good authorities at from five to twelve thousand dollars a year. The official receptions at the White House cost very little. Wands are served to the receiving parties alone. The music is furnished gratis by the government Marine Band, and the flowers—taken from the White House conservatories—are also government property. The cost of one state dinner is estimated at from five hundred to one thousand dollars.

Of late years the refreshments offered at afternoon receptions of women of the Cabinet and of other higher circles have been of the simplest description—usually consisting of tea, cakes and bonbons. The cost for one afternoon is comparatively small—ten dollars being sufficient to cover it in most cases. Formerly very elaborate collations were spread at the homes of officials during these functions. In the first Cleveland administration, for instance, terrapin and champagne punch were features of the afternoon receptions on a lavish display—luckily for the entertainers—is now considered to be bad form. —New York Herald.

Friday a Lucky Day.

An American girl should regard Friday as lucky, since nearly all the most notably successful events in American history took place on that day of the week: Columbus sailed on his voyage of discovery on Friday, and discovered America on Friday, a week later, St. Augustine, the oldest town in this country, was founded on Friday. The Mayflower arrived in Providence on Friday, and on Friday the Pilgrims signed the August compact—the forerunner of the Constitution. Other prominent events taking place on Friday were the birth of Washington, the seizure of Bunker Hill, the surrender of Saratoga, the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, the motion made in Congress that the United States were free and independent. In the South the Judges are abolishing Friday as hangman's day and appointing executions to take place on other days of the week.

Our Language a Poser.

An American girl who recently studier in Germany tells of a German girl who was studying English, and who used to write letters in English to her parents. One day the German girl wasted over to her, saying: "Here is the letter which I have written to my mother. I want you to read it over and see if it is properly written." The letter was all right, excepting the closing phrase, which read as follows: "God pickle and keep you." An inquiry elicited from the young German woman in looking for a synonyme for "preserve" had come across "pickle."

A Bit of Home Life.

"He is getting worse than ever!" exclaimed my mother, who sat in the lining-room darning socks. "How ever can boy does manage to make such holes in his socks I cannot think."

My scientific father (reading paper on spectroscopy): "All our observations go to show that the present is a time of abnormal activity in the sun's lower limb, producing immense holes, rents, and fissures in the outer envelope."

"Well, I never!" said my mother. 'Does it say that? How they can ever know such things by staring through a spyglass is more than I can fancy; but I have noticed a thing every mending night. There! the clock is striking twelve!"

My brother Tommy, from upstairs, who is supposed to be asleep: "Never mind, mother; it's never too late to mend!"

To Make Children Attend School.

The club-women of Chicago are turning their attention to the enforcement of the compulsory school law. The law, as at present existing in Illinois, provides that all children between seven and fourteen years of age shall be compelled to attend school for at least sixteen weeks in every school year, provided that "such children are not receiving education somewhere else, or are not physically incapacitated." It is this qualification which has proved a sufficiently large loophole for a good many children to escape through. What the club-women mean to do is to study the efficacy of the law and how large a percentage of truants it admits the existence on and upon these data they will shape their future action. In their efforts they have the co-operation of the officials of the compulsory department.

BISMARCK FAILING.

THE MAN OF IRON BOWED DOWN BY RELENTLESS TIME.

Doughty Warrior Has Lost Interest in the Affairs of State—Characteristics of the Man Who Changed the Geography of Central Europe.

Bismarck is dying. The mighty personality who changed the map of Central Europe will on April 1, probably celebrate his last anniversary. He is losing his memory, his means of locomotion and his memory. He is as helpless as a child. His limbs refuse any longer to bear the weight of the great statesman's enormous body and he has to be wheeled around from one apartment to another at Friedrichsruhe.

Like other remarkable men Bismarck was never a man of very agreeable disposition, and on his eighty second year his nerves which were as rigid as rod-iron, become so flattered by the least reference to public affairs that no mention even of his own marvellous achievements can be made in his presence. There are only two persons outside the members of his family who can converse with him. These are his physician, Dr. Schweninger, and Editor Hoffman, of the Hamburger Nachrichten, who through all the trying period when Bismarck's pride was sorely humbled, when it was harder to part with that diplomatic world which he had so long moulded by his intellect and by his mighty will than it is now to finally leave it, was the one close and confidential friend of Bismarck. He alone was the man upon whom the Prince leaned in the days of his distress, and to Hoffman alone does he instinctively clings in these days of what may be called his second childhood. When even his dearest friends are upbraided in his periodic fits of despondency no unkind word is addressed to the faithful family Editor.

Of the public and political life of Bismarck little that is new can be written save by some such man as Editor Hoffman. Bismarck is one of the central figures of the century and isolated and unrivalled will he indeed that land where the news of his helpless and stricken condition shall not arouse a sympathetic response on this probably one of the last gatherings of the family around its venerated Chief. Sun. Of Bismarck it will be written that in an age of prolific of great men he was, measured alike by the range of his intellect and the majesty of his achievements probably the greatest personality of his time. He was the product of a single idea—the unification of the thirty nine states of the Germanic Confederation into a federation of which Prussia was to be the predominant partner. This was the dream of his youth and the realization of his old age; and though like others who have accomplished notable things he saw ambitious youth prepared to discount his marvellous life work when that work was done, Bismarck's fame towered so conspicuously that that of the greatest of German monarchs is but as a dwarf to a giant beside it.

Bismarck was about thirty years of age when the people of Germany rose to throw off that condition of servitude in which they stood to a few princely families who like the House of Hesse sold them for money to fight the battles of foreign sovereigns. The German people could have no interest in these wars but they were accustomed to obedience and were loyal and true to the gonfalon of their chiefs. But in 1848 they took a new view of their duties and when the masses moved, the Austrailian family being more powerful than the Hohenzollerns secured the appointment of the Arch Duke John of Austria as "Administrator of all the Germans."

From a revolt against Emperor was but a step, and this event gave the starting point to. Bismarck's idea though it was nineteen years later and after the national activity of 1848 had subsided and Koenigsgratz was won that Bismarck organized the northern states into what was called the North German Confederation. He had ten years previously resolved upon forming a triple alliance between France, Russia and Prussia. Neither Napoleon III nor Alexander II were friendly to such an alliance, but as soon as the Confederation was formed with a population of 29,000,000, and Bismarck himself was its foreign minister He was in a better position to deal with the two Emperors. The subsequent events connected with the Beneditti affair, the war of 1870, the crowning of the Hohenzollern instead of the Austrian monarch as Emperor of Germany at Versailles, and Bismarck's assumption of the office of Chancellor of the Empire are familiar to all readers.

Though all Germans now approve of Bismarck's masterpiece he had while carrying it out bitter enemies among his own countrymen who denounced him as the arch-enemy of freedom, as a tyrant, a brutal and inhuman, as a man of enormous appetite, of overmastering ambition, as a modern combination of Lucullus and of Caesar. The truth is that in the Germany into which Bismarck was born there were only two classes, the rulers and the ruled, or the landgraves and the peasantry. Bismarck belonged to and was as much the living embodiment of the aristocratic Teuton as is Lord Salisbury of the Anglo-Saxon to-day in England. Bismarck's sweeping statements were responsible for this feeling:—All cities should be swept away; too many of these burghers gather in one place and they become centers of democracy and of constitutionalism," he exclaimed, when he heard of the national assembly at Daintiness.

Daintiness is that undefinable quality in a girl which causes her to appear more charming in her young, sweet freshness and tidiness than those around her; it is an attribute which is not inborn in any maiden, but the result of culture. She is certain to make a good impression where others ignominiously fail to do so, a fact which causes jealousy, and makes those who are not dainty look with envious admiration and wish that they, too, possessed the subtle charm. Daintiness, however, though not inherited, is the outcome of habit. A girl is dainty and charming on important occasions, simply because she has been accustomed to give thought and time to being agreeable to others. Thus it comes natural to her, just as the rough ways and manners of the girl tomboy, which result from carelessness, seem part and parcel of herself.

The dainty maiden is dainty in appearance, also from habit. Her wealth of hair, always so glossy and carefully trained, owes its satiny appearance to the fact that she brushes it regularly and frequently, and not solely when she feels do so, or when she does so, or when she desires to look extra nice.

Her pretty, soft hands, with their shelly pink nails, are always in an immaculate condition, for it is her habit and pride to keep them spotlessly clean. Her person appears to shed around her a fragrant perfume, delicate, yet quite perceptible. This faint fragrance comes from her dainty way of putting her dresses away in drawers which contain sachets of sweetly smelling powder, the dainty fragrance from which seems to be a part of herself.

Sleep.

There is a decided tendency in these days—owing to the endeavour to get as much as possible into our lives—to do with less than a reasonable amount of sleep. There are unquestionably some temperaments which do not require as much sleep as others, but the average woman of between twenty and fifty needs, and should give up, eight hours out of the twenty-four to slumber. Too much sleep is not advisable, but it is better than too little. It is a bad plan to go to sleep again after being called in the morning at the usual hour; the snatches of sleep obtained in this way are not refreshing, and often result in headache. It is impossible to wake up feeling thoroughly refreshed and rested if the bedroom is not properly ventilated. The window must be wide open, if possible at night, than we do in the day, and yet how many of us are content to sleep in an atmosphere, which is actually poisonous, for if the air in one room is bad, it soon becomes poisoned from the carbonic acid gas given out from our lungs. Bad air will certainly prevent our deriving the full benefit from a good night's rest, and if we usually wake with a headache or a sensation of lassitude after spending seven or eight hours in unbroken sleep, we may be quite sure that our room needs ventilating. Sleeping in vitiated air, besides seriously affecting the general health, is extremely bad for the skin.

The Sunday Dinner.

The Sunday breakfast is later by half an hour to an hour, and is from several ounces to a pound of food heartier; then the one or two o'clock elaborate dinner is substituted for the light midday luncheon of the week days. Supper becomes a meal of highly seasoned salads—scallops and the like—with usually a preponderance of sweets in the way of cakes and preserved fruits that is also quite at variance with the plain fare the rest of the week at that hour. At bedtime there is often a desire for a little more nibbling, which is really a form of indigestion, brought about by the surfeit of the day. A three months' trial of duplicating the Sunday meat service, both its kind and hour of partaking, on Sunday would convince the most acentical of its hygienic value. Any presentation of this subject has to consider the prominent element of the domestic arrangement, but, it is perfectly possible, even in a one-servant establishment, to make a Sunday menu with regard to the maid's rest on that day as well as to the convenience of the mistress.

How to Bone a Turkey.

Begin by cutting through the skin down the centre of the back, and raise the flesh very carefully on either side with a sharp knife until the sockets of the thighs and wings are reached; then with the point of the knife detach the joint at a point where the legs join the back; hold the end of the bone firmly, and proceed to loosen the flesh on it, still using the point of the knife, and keeping it close to the centre bone until the whole of the flesh is torn out. Remove the bones from the other leg in the same way, and then turn your attention to the wings, which must be dealt with as were the legs. The merrythought and neck-bones should then be removed, and the back and side bones, which are left, divided. After the flesh has been carefully separated from the breast-bone, the latter can be removed without much difficulty, and the bird must then be restored to its proper shape by filling the inside of the body with forcemeat, after which it should be sewn up and trussed in the usual way.

The Use of Honey.

Honey is simply invaluable for throat troubles, and where there is any bronchial trouble on the lungs it has been exposed to a cold, damp atmosphere the free use of pure honey is the best medicine you can take.

It is also more wholesome and economical than butter, and children should partake of it freely.

Honey, too, is especially valuable for cooking purposes. Use it instead of sugar, for in rice puddings it is delicious,

AFTER THE ASSESSORS.

In charging grand juries lately two Supreme judges in this State have admonished the jurors that assessors who have failed to assess property as its true value should be indicted. This is rather an interesting decision on the part of the judicial minds, but the wonder is why it is taken at this late day. From time immemorial it has been the custom of assessors to overlook the real value of property held for taxable purposes, and that practice has become to almost recognized as part of the official's duty, even though the exacting law may really mean different. Justice Dixon informed the grand jury of Bergen county that one assessor in that bailiwick had already openly confessed that in his district he had put the assessable value of property only at fifty per cent of its actual rating, and that he should be indicted on the strength of the confession. If that advice is followed not only in Bergen but as well by all other grand juries in New Jersey, the courts would be busy the year around trying recreant assessors.

A PERMANENT PAVEMENT.

The agitation of a permanent pavement for the streets in the business center of the city—and especially an experiment on Park avenue from Front street to North avenue is in the right line of public improvements. Though Park avenue was macadamized in a thorough manner but two years ago, we are informed now by the Street Commissioner that it is practically necessary to go over the work again. A permanent pavement—vitrified brick, asphalt or some of the equivalents—would last for a large number of years, and though it would cost a great deal more to put such a roadbed down than to macadamize the street once, in the end it would be cheaper and far more serviceable. The traffic on this thoroughfare in the business district is the heaviest of any of the streets and some steps should be taken by those in charge of the streets to build a roadbed that is not constantly getting out of repair.

A DEMOCRAT STAYS IN.

Republicans are generally too busy just now viewing proceedings at Washington to bother with the picayune matters at the New Jersey capital in a political way, but it will doubtless be somewhat surprising, as well as interesting, to the faithful followers of the G. O. P. banner to know that Governor Voorhees has so far forgotten his Republican allegiance as to appoint a Democrat to a good office. The lucky Democrat is James T Morgan, of Elizabeth, who is continued in the office of secretary of the Bureau of Labor Statistics for another year. The Governor says the reappointment was made solely as a reward for the intelligent and untiring efforts of Mr. Morgan is a prominent member of several labor organizations, and once ran on the Labor ticket against the Governor when he was a candidate for the Assembly.

LIQUOR AT PUMPTOWN!

Though that famous locality bearing the poetic name of "Pumptown" is essentially a suburb of Plainfield, the question of whether or not it shall be provided with a bar dispensing alcoholic drinks has become one of the political issues in New Brunswick, since both towns are in the bailiwick of Middlesex and amenable to the power of the officials of that county A year ago a man by the name of Smith was refused a liquor license for the wheelmen's rest at that point, but this year Mrs. Madge Vail—a Plainfield woman—is the proprietress of the hostelry and is also applying for a liquor license. The New Brunswick Times seems to be under the impression that Mrs. Vail may get the license, and thus jogs Judge Strong's memory:

> The same reasons which were potent last year against a saloon there still exist. Judge Strong has frequently declared that he would not favor granting licenses for new saloons in that section. It remains to be seen if the protests of the people will be heeded by Judge Strong and if he will live up to the position he has expressed himself as taking. There should be no saloon at Pumptown.

maid of honor and the best man and then by the bridesmaides and ushers.

The groom presented the ushers with gold scarf pins composed of a circles of pearls with a diamond set in the centre. The bride's gift to the bridesmaids was a clasp pin of gold in the shape of a four leaf clover and wish-bone, set with pearls.

The marriage gifts formed a magnificent display. They included silver, cut glass, and many valuable articles of use and decoration

After the ceremony a reception was given to the relatives and visiting friends at the home of the bride's parents on East Ninth street. The house was handsomely decorated The prevailing color in the reception room was green and white. The drawing room and dining room were decorated in pink and green.

The reception was an informal one. Over a hundred were present. Among those from out of town were J. A. Babcock, of Brooklyn, Mrs. E. R. Kirbie, of Philadelphia, Rev. Dr. Dodd, of Newark, Dr. and Mrs. Prescott Vail, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Anderson and son, of Lambertville, Miss Miles, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heath and son, of Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Turnbull, of Brooklyn, Henry Golden, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Smalley Corriell, of Bound Brook, Mr. and Mrs. Abram Ammerman, of Somerville, Mr. and Miss Smith, of Somerville.

The newly married couple left the house soon after 10 o'clock. Before leaving, the bride distributed the boxes of wedding cake among the bridesmaids according to the old custom. The box containing the fated ring, which is supposed to go to the one to be married first, was received by Miss Ethel Holmes.

On their departure, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were plentifully showered with rice by the friends at the house. They took the 10:28 train for New York. They will spend several weeks at Old Point Comfort. On returning they will take up their residence at the home of J. Wesley Johnson, on LaGrande avenue.

After the departure of the couple from the reception, the guests spent the remainder of the evening in dancing. An elaborate supper was served by Caterer Ruse, of Elizabeth. The floral decorations were arranged under the charge of Mrs. Denton.

BOOKS FOR MUSIC LOVERS

A NEW DEPAPTMENT COMPLETED IN THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Over 100 Books of Interest to Musician, Which are in the Circulating Department—To be Grouped Together.

During the past year the Public Library has been building up its department of music, and its collection now numbers over 100 volumns of the best books on this subject. Nearly all of these are in the circulating department. They include books relating to the history of the subject, lives of musicians, the more recent as well as the "old masters," books in the voice, musical instruments, various forms of musical composition on the oratorio, cantata, opera, boy, opera, etc., other books relating to the theory of music, harmony, counterpoint, etc., as well as lighter books of musical essays and criticism A few song collections with music and musical stories are also of the number. The beginners in music, as well as the more advanced student will find books of interest and value. For one week only, beginning tomorrow, all the books on this subject will be grouped by themselves for convenience of inspection by those interested. The books will not be withheld from circulation during that time, and consequently those coming early in the week will have a better opportunity of examining the collection. All these books are listed in the card catalogue, both under the authors names and under the subjects of which they treat, and on these cards is a critical estimate of each book made by the well known authority in musical matter, H. E. Okeblel, who is the musical editor of the N. Y. Tribune. By consulting these cards the reader will be greatly aided in determining what books are best to read on any division of the subject.

FLAMES LICKED UP THE SPANISH EFFIGY.

Butcher Weyler's Straw Image Incinerated Last Night.

A GREAT RUMPUS WAS MADE

TIN HORNS AND DRUMS ADDED TO THE GENERAL DIN.

Young Patriots Marched the Streets, Parading the Effigy of the Spaniard Amid Cat Calls and Sneers—"Down With the Spaniards" Was the Slogan of the Young Men—The Effigy Burned in a Vacant Lot at Somerset Street and Greenbrook Road—The Police Made No Attempt at All to Stop the Burning.

The attempts of a number of patriotic young men of the city and borough to burn in effigy Gen. Weyler, was accomplished last Monday in the borough. About one week ago a similar attempt was made in this city without success, because the police broke the affair up through a misunderstanding.

The young men were not discouraged, however, and last Monday some fifty of them gathered together with the straw dummy. They were well provided with tin horns and drums. During the fore part of the evening they gave vent to their feelings in a parade through the principal streets of the borough. The sound of the horns and drums attracted the attention of a number of young men who were led to join in the festivities. The dead march was played and cries of "Burn the Spaniards!" were often heard from the crowd of men and boys.

When the parade passed through Somerset street cheers were given on all sides and there was much excitement. The dummy was carried by two young men in the crowd and every glance at the stuffed image called forth jeers and sneers. When the crowd reached the corner of Somerset street and Craig place they turned about and marched to the corner of Greenbrook road and Somerset street, where they burned the effigy in a vacant lot.

While the dummy was being consumed the sounds from the horns and drums could be heard a great distance, while the yells and cat calls added much to the general out burst of enthusiasm. The police in the borough made no attempt to stop the demonstration and the young men were allowed to carry out their programme unmolested.

ACCIDENTS ON THE ROAD.

A Colored Cyclist Fell and a Horse Choked so That He Was Thrown.

Park avenue looked like a second Coney Island cycle path Sunday afternoon. Vehicles, wheelmen and pedestrians were out bound to or from Plainfield. The destination of some was the gypsy encampment at Avon Park but the army of cyclist was largely made up of those out for a spin on the county road with no particular object aside from an afternoon ride. Many of the fast horses from Plainfield and vicinity were out and lively brushes were the order of the afternoon until the shower came up.

Caesar Taylor, a colored man in the employ of Bolce, Runyon & Co., of this city, was out on his Eldridge racer during the afternoon. He had a little spurt with Richard Higgins They passed the gypsy encampment at full speed. The street was crowded with vehicles and wheelmen. In trying to avoid them Taylor fell and cut his face badly. He was badly bruised.

The black trotter belonging to N. B. Smalley, of Somerset street, met with an accident Sunday afternoon while its owner was speeding it along Park avenue. Smalley was going at full speed and attempted to pull up to avoid the crowd around the gypsy encampment. The horse suddenly lost all control of itself and plunged heavily on the roadway, bleeding at the nostrils. It was badly cut on the side and shoulders. It is supposed that the animal was partially strangled by the throat latch and burst a blood vessel.

PRIZES OFFERED TO INCREASE ROYAL ARCANUM MEMBERSHIP.

Regent Bromfield Anxious to See the Council Grow and He Offered Three Valuable Premiums for the Best Work.

The members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, enjoyed their final entertainment for the present season last Monday and it was a great success. Dr. W. Kempton Browning and Wm. Augustus Brett were received into membership, after which Orator Baker announced that Regent Bromfield would award three prizes. First, for the member securing the largest number of applications for membership during the year of 1896, a gramaphone and records, value $30; second, for the member securing the next largest number, a very handsome gold-mounted Waterman Ideal fountain-pen, value $5; third prize to be decided upon later, for the person securing the next largest number of applications.

The balance of the evening was then given up to the "Black Diamonds," in charge of Edward Martin. The colored men entertained the members of the Council with singing, piano selections, clog-dancing, etc. They captured the audience by storm. After the close of the entertainment the committee in charge served refreshments and the affair closed at a late hour. Every member voted that the entertainment was the best ever given.

The Storm Was a Furious One for Sometime and Drove Pleasure Seekers to Places of Shelter—James E. Kimball Saw the Bolt Strike the Church and He Was Half Stunned by the Shock—Roof and Rafter Was Shivered by the Lightning's Attack—Lightning Darted From Pole to Tree

What an Easter Day Sunday was. The morning was delightful. Perfect spring weather with clear skies and balmy air tempted everybody into the open air. The afternoon seemed just as pleasant, but here and there a patch of clouds covered the fathomless blue. The wiser ones saw the portends of a storm and remained close to shelter.

It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon before the long array of threatening clouds in the far west mustered together and advanced toward the city. They were dark ugly clouds that stretched away to the north and south as far as the eye could see. They rolled and tossed as they advanced upon the sun until its bright rays were hidden. Then the pleasure seekers began to realize with the disappearance of the sun that a storm would soon be upon them.

What a scurrying there was for shelter. Where the roads before had been crowded, they were now deserted. Those who remained were earnestly seeking some place of safety before the storm should break The great dark clouds came in an unbroken line, dark and frowning at the edge and fading away to a wild copper colored tint in the west.

There was something in the air that seemed to presage a terrific outburst of the elements. People felt it and increased their efforts to reach shelter. Or if they had already reached it, they watched the approaching storm with anxious gaze. The horses felt the approaching deluge and responded gallantly to the word of the drivers to hurry home.

The storm began easily but soon increased in fury. The rain fell in torrents while the lightning zig-zaged across the horizon. The roll of the thunder was frequent. The streets, dry and dusty a few moments before, became raging torrents during the down-pour.

It was at 5 o'clock that the city was startled by one dazzling flash of unusual brilliancy and a crash of thunder that seemed to shake the very foundations of the city. The lightning shot downwards and the bolt struck the spire of the Park Avenue Baptist church, shivering a portion of the woodwork of the spire and sending a shower of slate down on the pavement below.

James E. Kimball, who lives on the opposite corner, saw the bolt strike the church. He was half stunned by the shock. As soon as he recovered, he hurried out to see if fire was to follow the lightning. There was no sign of any, however.

The lightning struck the front of the steeple on the Park avenue side, just on the panel in which a row of windows are located. A false rafter that forms part of the side at that part was shivered into a thousand pieces, while the slate was torn off for some distance. There was no damage below the bell except the burning out of the electric lights in the vestibule. It is impossible to estimate the exact amount of the damage done.

The flagpole on the residence of the Hon. Joseph W. Yates, of East Seventh street, was struck during the storm. The lightning ran down the pole for a distance and then jumped to an apple tree close by and followed that down almost to the ground. Then the bolt left the tree and split up into several smaller bolts which entered the ground making holes in the earth like those made by shot.

Morris Dumont, who lives almost opposite Mr. Yates' house, was standing by the window when the flash came. He was almost thrown to the floor and was affected with violent nausea which lasted for some time. Miss Marion Dumont, in the same room, felt the shock in her arm which became numb. She did not recover from its effects until evening.

The barn of John Koch, near Washington ville, was struck by lightning during the storm of yesterday afternoon. A quarter of the roof was torn off by the bolt.

COLLEGE COMEDY FOR PLAINFIELD SOCIETY

Amherst Students Made a Great Hit Monday Night.

ACTED ON CASINO STAGE.

PLAINFIELD YOUNG MAN IMPERSONATED A WINSOME GIRL.

'All the Comforts of Home." Presented in a Jolly Manner, and Witnessed by a Large Audience of Cultured People—First of the Post Lenten Society Events—Fred Goddard in a Feminine Role Was pleasing to His Many Friends, Who Applauded His Histrionic Efforts—Story of the Comedy.

It was a sympathetic audience that assembled in the Casino o' the Union County Country Club last Monday prepared to do justice to "All the Comforts of Home" as presented by the Amherst College Seniors. The guests came prepared to overlook any little mistakes, but they found none to overlook. The presentation was particularly well given and placed an exceptionally high standard of college dramatics that other students will have difficulty in equaling.

The Casino was nearly filled with a fashionable audience. It was the first of the series of society events in Plainfield during Easter week. After the long quietness of Lent, society bloosomed forth in honor of the Amherst Seniors and gave them a hearty reception.

The play, "All the Comforts of Home," one of William Gillette's strongest comedies, seemed just fitted to the capabilities of the college boys. Brimming over with humor from the start, the scenes were filled with action, working up to a climax that effectually brought down the house at the close of every act.

The story is that of an extremely jealous husband, Mr. Pettibone, who suddenly hurried his young wife and daughter away to Europe to escape an imaginary lover of his wife's. Alfred, a nephew, is left in charge of the house and, to raise funds, he rents out the apartments with "all the comforts of home." Although engaged to his cousin, Alfred falls in love with the daughter of one of his lodgers. All sorts of wierd predicaments result from complications among the lodgers. The uncle and his family finally return unexpectedly to add to the general confusion until, at last, all turns out right and everybody is happy.

Harold Walker, who took the part of the nephew, had a difficult part but played it with an ease that carried him through the most trying places with credit. The young men, who took the part of the feminine members of the cast, cleverly represented the various characters. Fred W. Goddard, of this city, as the bewitching young daughter of Mr. Bender, one of the lodgers, delighted his friends. The love scene in which she, or rather he, and "Alfred" figured, brought forth a grand burst of applause. Goddard really did exceptionally.

At a distance it was difficult to believe that the handsomely gowned actresses were really rollicking college boys, but when they spoke however, the illusion vanished.

Altogether, the play was a success The college boys kept the audience in roars of laughter by their really clever acting and their good interpretation of a very funny comedy.

During the intervals between the acts, piano selections were rendered by Richard Menzel, of this city.

WOULD END CUBAN WAR

President Asks Power to Enforce Peace on the Island.

MAINE LEFT TO CONGRESS.

The Full Text of the President's Message to Congress Recites the Efforts Made by the United States for Years Past Looking to the Amelioration of Conditions in Cuba, and Their Ineffectual Results. It Is an Appalling Record That Is Presented Against Spain, and One Which Clearly Proves That the President's Recommendation for Armed Intervention is Both Humane and Just.

The President in his message asks Congress to authorize and empower him to take measures to secure a full and final termination of hostilities between the Government of Spain and the people of Cuba, and to secure the establishment of a stable Government capable of maintaining order and observing its international obligations, insuring peace and tranquility and the security of its citizens, as well as our own, and to use the military and naval forces of the United States as may be necessary for these purposes.

After recommending that the distribution of supplies be continued, the President closes the message with a plea for peace. The issue is now with Congress. It is a solemn responsibility. I have exhausted every effort to relieve the intolerable condition of affairs which is at our doors. I am prepared to execute every obligation imposed on me by the Constitution and the law. I await your action."

The President acknowledges the receipt of information of the proclamation of a suspension of hostilities on the part of Spain, and says: "If this measure attains a successful result then our aspirations as a Christian peace loving people will be realized. If it fails it will be only another justification of our conscientious attempt."

The full text is as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

Obedient to that precept of the Constitution which commands the President to give to the Congress from time to time information of the state of the Union, and to recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient, it becomes my duty now to address your body with regard to the grave crisis that has arisen in the relations of the United States to Spain by reason of the warfare that now for more than three years has raged in the neighboring island of Cuba.

I do so because of the intimate condition of the Cuban question with the state of our own Union, and the grave relation to the course which it is now incumbent upon the nation to adopt must needs bear to the traditional policy of our Government, if it is to accord with the precepts laid down by the founders of the Republic and religiously observed by succeeding administrations to the present day.

Our people have beheld at once a prosperous community reduced to comparative want, its lucrative commerce virtually paralyzed, its exceptional productiveness diminished, its fields laid waste, its mills in ruins, and its people perishing by tens of thousands from hunger and destitution. We have found ourselves constrained to the observance of that strict neutrality which our laws enjoin and which the law of nations command; to police our own waters and watch our own seaports in prevention of any unlawful act in aid of the Cubans. Our trade suffered, the capital invested by our citizens in Cuba has been largely lost and the temper and forbearance of our people have been so sorely tried as to beget a perceptible change in our own citizens, which has inevitably found its expression from time to time in the Legislature, so that we have wholly external to our own body politic express attention.

All this must needs awaken and has indeed, aroused the utmost concern on the part of this Government, as well during my predecessor's term as in my own.

In April, 1896, the evils from which our country suffered through the Cuban war became so onerous that my predecessor made an effort to bring about a peace through the mediation of this Government, in any way that might tend to an honorable adjustment of the contest between Spain and her revolted colony, on the basis of some effective scheme of self-government for Cuba under the flag and sovereignty of Spain. It failed, through the refusal of the Spanish Government then in power to consider any form of mediation or, indeed, any plan of settlement which did not begin with the actual submission of the insurgents to the mercy of the mother country, upon such terms as Spain herself might see fit to grant.

The war continued unabated. The resistance of the insurgents was in no wise diminished.

The efforts of Spain were increased both by the dispatch of fresh troops to Cuba and by the addition to the horrors of the strife of a new and inhuman phase happily unprecedented in the modern history of civilized warfare. The policy of devastation and concentration, inaugurated by the Captain General's bands of October 21, 1896, in the province of Pinar del Rio was thence extended to embrace all of the island.

The present revolution is the successor of other similar insurrections which have occurred in Cuba against the dominion of Spain, extending over a period of nearly half a century, each of which, during its progress, has subject ed the United States to great effort and expense in enforcing its neutrality laws, caused enormous losses to American trade and commerce, caused irritation, annoyance and disturbance of our citizens and the exercise of cruel barbarous and uncivilized practices of warfare, shocked the sensibilities and offended the humane sympathies of our people. Since the present revolution began in February, 1895, this country has seen the fertile domain at our threshold destroyed by fire and sword, in the course of a struggle unequaled in the history of the island.

The assassination of the Prime Minister, Canovas, led to a change of government in Spain. The former administration, pledged to subjugation without concession, gave place to that of a more liberal party, committed long in advance to a policy of reform involving the wider principle of home rule for Cuba and Puerto Rico. The overtures of the Government, made through its new envoy, General Woodford, looked to an immediate and effective amelioration of the condition of the island, although not accepted.

By the time the present Administration took office, a year ago, reconcentration, so-called, had become effective over the better part of the four central and western provinces, Santa Clara, Matanzas, Havana and Pinar del Rio. The agricultural population, to the estimated number of 300,000 or more, was herded within the towns and their immediate vicinage deprived of the means of support rendered destitute of shelter, oft poorly clad, and exposed to the most unsanitary conditions. As the scarcity of food increased with the devastation of the depopulated areas of production, destitution and want became misery and starvation. Month by month the death rate increased in an alarming ratio.

By March, last, according to conservative estimates from official Spanish sources, the mortality among the reconcentrados, from starvation and the diseases thereto incident, exceeded 50 per cent, of their total number. No general relief was accorded in the island. The overburdened towns, already suffering from the general dearth, could give no aid. So-called "zones of cultivation," established within the immediate area of effective military control, about the cities and fortified camps, proved illusory as a remedy for the suffering. The unfortunates, being for the most part women and children, with aged and helpless men, without food by disease and hunger, could not have tilled the soil without tools, seed or shelter, for their own support and for the supply of the citizen population, adopted several months ago by as a war measure, in order to cut off the resources of the insurgents, worked its predestined results.

As I said in my message of last December, it was an uncivilized warfare, it was extermination. The only peace it could beget was that of the wilderness and the grave. Meanwhile, the military situation in the island had undergone a noticeable change. The extraordinary activity that characterized the second year of the war, when the insurgents invaded even the hitherto unharmed fields of Pinar del Rio, and carried havoc and destruction up to the walls of the city of Havana itself, had relapsed into a dogged struggle in the central and eastern provinces. The Spanish arms regained a measure of control in Pinar del Rio and parts of Habana, but, under the existing conditions of the rural country, without immediate improvement of their productive situation.

Even thus partially restricted, the revolutionists held their own, and their conquest by any plan put forward by Spain as the essential and sole basis of peace seemed as far distant as at the outset.

By the joint resolution approved May 4, 1897, prompted the humane extension of a similar scheme of aid to the great body of suffer-rs. A suggestion to this end was acquiesced in by the Spanish authorities. On the 24th of December last, I caused to be issued an appeal to the American people for contributions in money or kind for the succor of the starving sufferers in Cuba, following this on the 6th inst. with a further public announcement of the formation of a central Cuban relief committee, with headquarters in New York City, composed of three members representing the American National Red Cross and the religious and business elements of the community.

The work of the committee have been untiring and have accomplished much.

To the extent of admitted mediation in any shape, were met by assurances that home rule in an advanced phase would be forthwith offered to Cuba, without waiting for the war to end, and that thereupon hostile operations should thenceforth prevail in the conduct of hostilities. Coincidentally with these declarations, the new Government of Spain continued and completed the policy already begun by its predecessor of testifying friendly regard for this nation by releasing American citizens held under one charge or another connected with the insurrection, so that, by the end of November, not a single persons entitled in any way to our national protection remained in a Spanish prison.

While these negotiations were progressing the increasing destitution of the unfortunate reconcentrados and the alarming mortality among them, claimed earnest attention. The success which had attended the limited measure of relief extended to the suffering American citizens among them by the judicious expenditure through the consular agencies of the money appropriated for that purpose, led the Executive to seek, in the same manner and through the same instrumentalities, to afford like aid to the rest of the destitute. The overburdened towns, already suffering from the general dearth, could give no aid. So-called "zones of cultivation," established within the immediate area of effective military control, about the cities and fortified camps, proved illusory as a remedy for the suffering. The unfortunates, being for the most part women and children, with aged and helpless men, without food by disease and hunger, could not have tilled the soil without tools, seed or shelter, for their own support and for the supply of the citizen population, adopted several months ago by as a war measure, in order to cut off the resources of the insurgents, worked its predestined results.

The Spanish arms regained a measure of control in Pinar del Rio and parts of Habana, but, under the existing conditions of the rural country, without immediate improvement of their productive situation.

IN SANCTIFIED SPIRIT EASTER WAS JOYOUSLY OBSERVED WITH FLOWERS, CAROLS AND SERMONS

ELABORATE PROGRAMMES RENDERED TO CELEBRATE THE DAY THAT THE SAVIOUR ROSE.

Beautiful Floral Decorations Bounded Pulpits From Which Eloquent Words Appropriate to the Day Were Uttered—Children Took a Prominent Part in the Programmes.

CHRIST TAVERNACLE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Music played a prominent part in the celebration of Easter at the Crescent Avenue church Sunday. Beside the regular quartette choir, composed of Mrs. Emily Banta Brooke, Miss Annie P. Hardenbergh, G Morgan Strickiett and Charles L. Lewis, a volunteer chorus choir of twelve voices assisted in the rendition of the special Easter music. Frank J. Smith was the organist. Four selections were given at the morning service and four at the evening service They were magnificently rendered. Appropriate sermons were preached by the pastor, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, morning and evening. His morning text was "Alleluia for the Lord God Omnipotent Reigneth."

The Sunday-school held special Easter service in the afternoon at which special music was given. The floral decorations were unusually elaborate. A large cross of Easter lillies was suspended over the pulpit while lillies, palms, hyderangeas and other potted plants were grouped about the base of the pulpit and platform.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Special music, Easter sermons and well chosen decorations distinguished the morning and evening services at the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday. A large chorus choir led the singing, and rendered two appropriate selections at each service. Those of the morning were "The Lord Is Risen," by George M. Garrett, and "Easter Morning," by D. E. Davis, musical director of the church; those of the evening, "Awake, Thou That Sleepest," by Albert J. Holden, and "Christ Is Risen from the Dead," by J. Varley Roberts. The subjects of the two sermons preached by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, were "Everything Conquered," and Easter Morn in the Garden." The platform of the church was very prettily decorated with lilies, azalias, and other potted plants, under the direction of the Christian Endeavor flower committee. The Sunday-school held no special exercises.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Easter Sunday was observed in the First M. E. church with appropriate services in the morning and afternoon. At the morning service, the pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, preached a sermon appropriate to the day. The choir sang several Easter anthems. There was a solo by Miss Maude Mosher. The Sunday-school held an Easter missionary service in the afternoon in the church. Rev. Dr. S. L. Baldwin, a returned missionary from China, made an address. There were recitations by members of the intermediate and primary departments. There were the usual floral decorations about the front of the church. Easter and cala lillies were banked about the pulpit with other potted plants.

MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURCH.

The Easter service at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church was held in the afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. At the morning service four members were received into the church by letter. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed. The afternoon service was given by the Sunday-school. The superintendent, Walter M. McGee, was in charge. Edward Beekman read the Scripture selection. James McGee led in prayer. There was a reading by Miss Etta Randolph. The address was made by the pastor, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, and was of an appropriate character. Augustus Rose sang "Calvary." The church was prettily decorated for the day with Easter lillies, palms and the like which were banked about the platform.

GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

The Eastertide was received at Grace P. E. church Sunday with beautiful music and a magnificent display of flowers. The church presented a very beautiful appearance with the perfect bower of Easter lillies, palms and other potted plants that surrounded the altar and chancel. The arrangement was most artistic. Services were held at 7, 8 and 10:30 o'clock in the morning. In the evening a children's festival was held. The choirmaster had prepared a number of special Easter anthems under the direction of Mrs. W. A. Freeman, the organist, which were given Rev. E. M. Bodman made an address at the evening service. The Kyrie Eleison and Gloria Tibi used in the morning service were composed by Mrs. Lewis E. Howard, of LaGrande avenue.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Easter programme at this church was very pretty and attracted large congregations at each service. The decorations, which were arranged by the members of the Advance Circle, King's Daughters, were the prettiest of recent years. Numberless lilies, choice roses and greens were artistically arranged about the pulpit, platform and organ, while the presence of two white doves over the platform added not a little to the general attractiveness.

The morning service was devoted to Easter carols rendered by the choir and members of the Sunday school The scholars occupied seats in the gallery. The music was in charge of William E. MacClymont, and was pleasing to all. An appropriate discourse was delivered by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring, who held the closest attention of all.

The programme as published in The Press last Saturday was presented in the evening entire. There were vocal solos by Miss Kathryn Glen, Miss Charlotte Messersmith and Wm. Holmes. Miss Glen also sang a very pretty solo at the morning service.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH

Attractive services were held at Grace M. E. church Sunday. In the morning the choir rendered three appropriate anthems, and the new pastor, Rev. L. W. Gardiner, preached for the first time.

The platform was prettily decorated with choice flowers and lillies arranged by Andrew Wilson. After the services nearly everyone remained to become acquainted with the new pastor whom they found to be exceedingly pleasant.

The afternoon service was devoted to the members of the Sunday-school under the direction of Superintendent John Valiant and Mrs. A. A. Taft After the opening exercises the following programme was presented: Recitation, "Welcome," Laura Dean; dialogue, "Easter Torches," Addie Carney, Carrie Pangborn, Grace Gaddis, Nellie Valiant, Mabel Stevens and Belle DeMott; recitation, "God's Helpers at Easter," four girls from the primary department; song and recitation, "Hope of Israel," Mabel Stevens and Carrie Pangborn; song, "Lilly Bells Ring," members of the intermediate grade; recitation, "Easter Thoughts," primary department; recitation, "The Butterfly," Grace Gaddis; dialogue, "The Sermon of the Bells," Ira Pangborn, John Carney, Charles Powell and David Fairchild; "Easter Cantata," primary department. The exercises closed with an interesting address by the pastor.

In the evening the pastor preached another appropriate sermon and the choir rendered four Easter anthems in an excellent manner. Miss Grace Carroll presided at the organ.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Easter was pleasantly observed at the Congregational church. The decorations were very tasteful, consisting chiefly of Easter and calla lilies and palms, which were massed across the whole front of the platform.

Several appropriate selections were rendered by a quartette choir, consisting of Miss Margaret E. Meredith, Miss Julia Belknap, Morris C. VanArsdale and B. T. Barnes, and the pastor of the church, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, preached a strong and eloquent sermon on "The Must-Be of the Resurrection."

The special exercises of the Sunday-school were held in the afternoon. Several carols were sung by the school, two of them including duets by the Misses Emma and Agnes LaBoyteaux. The quartette choir of the school, consisting of Miss M. G. Morse, Miss Julia Belknap, Morris C VanArsdale and Stacy B Raynolds, sang two selections. Beautiful carols were sung by the primary department, including a solo by Master Clarence Stetser. A recitation, "Easter Morning," was given by Miss Anna Morrison. There were also two other recitations: "Easter Gifts," by the Misses Hattie Messersmith, Edith Whittier, Agnes LaBoyteaux, Edna Conde, Emily Winant and Edith Robinson; and "Eastertide," by Anna Morrison, Ethel Weseman, Emily Winant, Marion Winant and Marion Dwight.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

One of the prettiest Easter services was held at the First Baptist church. The church decorations were very elaborate and were arranged by Miss Ella Serrell and Miss Margaret Harold. The flowers, consisting of Easter lilies, roses and greens, were from the conservatories of C. W. McCutchen and L. W. Serrell.

The music was under the direction of C. W McCutchen, and Howard Case presided at the organ. In the afternoon Mrs. B. T. Barnes presided at the piano and P. Ludwig Conde played the violin.

The musical programme in the morning consisted of anthems by the regular choir, with Miss Harris, soprano; Mrs. Ward, contralto; G. W. Smith, tenor; William Holmes, basso, as a quartette.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school scholars from the First Baptist church, Mt. Olive Baptist church and East Third Street Mission joined in the service and rendered carols. The instrumental selections by P. Ludwig Conde, Mrs Barnes and Howard Case on the violin, piano and organ were features. A pleasing number on the programme was the selection, "God's Garden on Easter Day," by Miss Addie Parker Jackson.

The primary department took part in the exercises by singing a pretty carol. An interesting portion of the programme were the annual reports given of the various schools. The report of the home school was ready for the last time by Charles Smith The total receipts during the year were $2,389 94 and expenditures $2,183 75, leaving a balance of $256.19.

The next report was presented by M. C Dobbins, superintendent of the Mt. Olive school. This report shows an enrollment of 208 scholars and 14 teachers, with an average attendance of 105 scholars and 11 teachers.

The last report was for the East Third Street mission by the superintendent, L W. Randolph. This report showed an enrollment of 143 in the school and the receipts to be $117.63, leaving a balance of $56.80

Another number on the programme was a recitation by Miss Mary Cole, of the Mt. Olive church. There was also a selection by a quartette from the choir and pretty solos by Miss Harris and Mrs. Ward.

ALL SOULS CHURCH.

All Souls church celebrated the most interesting Easter festival which has ever come to this parish. The platform about the pulpit was converted into a bower of palms, Easter lilies, pots of azalias and marguerites. The choir sang "He is Risen," in a spirited manner. After the responsive reading, prayer and Scripture lesson, seven young people presented themselves before the pastor for confirmation But one had been baptized as infants and all were consecrated anew to the religious life The names of the young people are Mary Byrd Wells, Stephen Haff, Henry Claflin Wells, Laura Elizabeth Osgood, Grace Littlefield Osgood, Elmer Chapin Walker and Dorthea Wells.

After they had been welcomed to the fellowship of the church the choir sang, 'Day of wonder, day of gladness " The choir was augmented for the occasion by Mr. Augustus Rose, baritone, who sang gloriously during the collection of the offertory. Mr Rose is recently from Sydney, Australia, and brings to America a wonderful voice. The pastor preached a powerful sermon on "Immortality" from Titus 1:2.

In the Sunday-school after Easter carols and a brief address by the pastor, Rev. A. C. Nickerson, each child was given a potted plant and with it an Easter lesson by Mrs. Joseph O. Osgood Altogether it was a gala day for All Souls parish. The decorations owed their good taste to Miss Carrie Haviland.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH

In striking contrast to the sombre Lenten aspect was the appearance of the interior of St. Mary's church Sunday in honor of the resurrection of the Saviour. The high altar was tastefully decorated with a profusion of Easter and calla lilies, palms and cut flowers, while inside the sanctuary were also palms and lilies. A brilliantly lighted crystal cross shone forth from the altar, and above all were the words in jets of gas: "He is Risen; Alleluia."

At usual, four services were held. The high mass taking place at 10:30, at which the assistant pastor, Father McCormick. was the celebrant, and the pastor, Father Smyth, preached a sermon suitable to the day. During his remarks he referred to the war cloud hanging over our country, and hoped it might soon be dispelled; that as Christ appeared to His apostles and said to them "Peace be to you," he urged his hearers to pray for peace, with the hope that the impending crisis might be averted.

The singing at this mass was very fine, the regular choir being augmented by a full chorus, and also by orchestral accompaniment.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

There was a large attendance at the morning service and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy their new beautiful church home, the flowers, the singing and the excellent discourse of Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., the pastor, from the text, "If a man die, shall he live again." In addition to the excellent quartette choir of the church, E. C. Martin, of Putnam avenue, assisted very materially in making the Easter music the success it was. Mr. Martin sang a duet with Miss Krymer, and a solo, 'The Resurrection," during the offertory, both of which were particularly enjoyable.

A. L. Titsworth, the organist, is delighted with the recently-built pipe organ and the music he brought out of it with his playing was a delight to all. He is also to be congratulated upon the proficiency of the singing of the choir of the church, of which he is instructor.

The display of flowers, though not large, was all that could be wished for, and the ladies who spent many hours to produce the beautiful effect realized, are deserving of much credit. They were Mrs. E. H. Bird, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, assisted by two members of the Endeavor Society of the church, the Misses Bessie Martin and Maude VanDyke.

At the evening service, which was in charge of the Sunday-school, the church was again filled with an appreciative audience, and in addition to the excellent singing by a large chorus choir, the primary department of the school rendered the following programme greatly to their credit and that of their superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Tier.

Recitation, "Bring Lilies for Easter Day," Luella Day; "The Sermon of the Bells," Edmund Templen, Frank Miner, Chrissie Mobus Arthur Williams; "Little Daffodils," Delia Duffor, Mildred Caleen, Laura Bodine, Flossie Yaeger, Emily Templen, Hermina Leithauser, (song, "Blue Bells and Lilly Bells;") recitation, "Earth's Awakening," Pansy Luckey; "Fairy Bells," Elsie Tier; Easter carol, Ira Vail, Eddie Taylor, Georgie Dobbs, Raymond Martin, Willie Luckey, Elmer Bohan; "How They Know," Ida May Tier, Bessie Randall; "Easter Keys," Myra Dunavan, Lizzie Hapenny, Etta Trembly, Rose Hook, Mabel Scribner, Hazel VanSyckle, Edith Caleen; song, "Lilly Bells Ring;" "Angels of the Resurrection," Sadie Hyler, Lulu Vail, Anna Bodine, Gussie Kreitling, Mary Neal, Lena Bohan, Elsie Dunavan, Minnie Nischwitz. Miss Kreitling accompanied the little folks singing on the parlor organ.

At this service a duet was sung by E C Martin and Miss Krymer which was greatly enjoyed, as was also a solo by Mr. Martin. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Schenck, made a short address of congratulation to the school for their proficiency and thanked all who had in any way helped to make the exercises of the day so successful. Assistant Superintendent Fred E. Smith also spoke words of encouragement to the school and those present. Altogether, Easter was a happy day for the people of Trinity Reformed church.

CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER

The Easter festival of the Sunday-school of the Church of the Redeemer was held Sunday afternoon. The services consisted of prayers and the singing of carols and the awarding of prizes. A handsome Bible and Bible dictionary being the prize offered to the young men's Bible class. It was awarded to George H. Dupee he having the highest average in his class A prize was also offered to the scholar who could best recite the catechism and as the following four were all perfect each received a handsome book: The Misses Edna Moore, Dora Warling, Mai Faber and George H. Dupee' After the awarding of prizes Easter eggs filled with candy) were distributed to the children. A collection was taken up amounting to $50 and that with the collection of the morning church services made a total of $800 for the day, all of which was for the building fund.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH

Special Easter services were held in the Holy Cross P. E. church Sunday morning and afternoon. The pastor, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, preached an Easter sermon in the morning. The organist, George Hosking, had a very elaborate musical programme prepared for the services which was well rendered by the trained choirister choir. The children's services were held in the afternoon. The chancel was handsomely decorated with Easter lillies. The other floral decorations were very beautiful.

PRIZE CHORISTERS.

Singers Rewarded for Good Work at Grace Church's Easter Festival.

The prize choristers of Grace church for March were Kendall Mason, Harris Egan, Walter Hockridge, Raymond Cohen, Charles Bryan, Roland Chandor, Douglass Murphy, Augustus Feiring and the Misses S. Ball, E Van-Deventer and C. Woodword.

The prizes were given at the Easter festival of the Sunday-school, at which time Miss Eleanor VanDeventer received the Grace church cross.

Luncheon for a Bridal Party.

Miss May Shreve, of Grove street, gave a delightful luncheon Saturday in honor of Miss Bertha Clark and the bridemaids who will assist at her marriage to Samuel Porter Williams, of Hartford, Conn., Easter Wednesday. An interesting feature of the luncheon was the announcement of the engagement of one of the bridemaids, Miss Marion Williams, of Hartford, Conn., to Frank Lysle, of Rochester, N. Y. Miss Williams is a sister of Samuel Porter Williams, and Mr. Lysle will be one of the ushers at the wedding Easter Wednesday.

College Dramatics.

The Amherst Seniors had an enthusiastic audience at the Hotel Lakewood, in Lakewood, on Saturday night. They have been very fortunate in selecting for their tour Gillette's popular and most amusing comedy, "All the Comforts of Home," which they present tonight at the Casino in this city.

BASKET-BALL GROWS TO BE VERY POPULAR.

Both Sexes Now Enjoy the Aggressive Exercise it Affords.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM'S RECORD.

SUFFERED ONLY EIGHT DEFEATS DURING THE WHOLE SEASON.

Twenty-Two Games Were Played Against the Best Teams in the Suburban District—The Third Season Ends With a Good Cash Balance—Same Players Retained Throughout the Winter, All of Whom Did Splendid Work in Everything Except Goal Throwing—Expected Improvement Next Year.

By far the most successful season for basket ball in Plainfield has just come to a close. The game has risen from the favorite of a chosen few to be extremely popular with all. The crowds that have frequented the visitors gallery at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium whenever a game was played have told better than words of the rise the game has had in popular favor. During the past winter it has been the favorite public indoor sport and carried away the honors from bowling that has heretofore attracted the most general interest.

Aside from the fact that so many of both sexes have learned the game and played it during the winter, the success of the sport in Plainfield during the past season has been largely due to the great showing that the basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. has made. This is the third season since the Association has attempted to support any regular team. The first year's team was not at the game Last season a poor opening rather marred the entire season.

This year the Plainfield team has pushed itself to the front and remained there to the end with a record that the team can well be proud of. The season has not been without its defeats. That would hardly be expected, as the team met some of the strongest teams in the metropolitan district. Twenty two games were played in all, of which fourteen were victories. Only two of the eight defeats were in the Plainfield gymnasium. Those two defeats were administered by worthy adversaries, the second team from the Twenty-third street branch of the New York Y. M. C. A. and the "Rubber Five" of the Greenpoint Y. M. C. A. Among the teams that the Plainfielders outplayed were those from the St. Thomas Athletic Club, the Elizabeth Athletic Club, the Bedford branch of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., the Newark Y. M. C. A., the Institutes of Newark, the German branch of the New York Y. M. C. A., and Newark Academy.

In no case has the Plainfield team very badly defeated. The worst drubbing it received was at the Twenty-third Street Branch, New York, where the Plainfielders were defeated by a score of 35 to 11. Plainfield's greatest score was rolled up against the Newark Y. M. C. A. in this city. It was 27 to 9. Several games were played in which the victory was won by one point.

The team was under the management of C. E. A. Heywood, the physical director. Walter L. Long captained the team. While there were many minor changes in the lineup on different occasions, the same players represented the association throughout the year, Eric Moraller and Walter L. Long have made themselves very valuable as forwards. Berry Egan proved to be an ideal centre. Max Moraller and George Proctor Smith completed the team as guards. They played hard and well.

While the individual playing was almost invariably good and deserving of commendation, it was by their excellent team play that the Plainfield boys won their victories. They had the passing down to a fine point and were noted for their excellence in that line. In goal throwing, there was something lacking. Many of the final results might have been the other way had the Plainfield boys shown more accuracy in throwing for goals. With the expected improvement in that line the other year may bring the Plainfield team will be close to the top of the heap.

Altogether, the management of the team has much to be thankful for. While the team itself has won distinction and honor, the financial side has been a signal success. Under the charge of George E. Fuller, the team has paid all of its own expenses and laid up a fund of nearly $50.

Will Have Charge of Music

UNITY AND REVERENCE NEAR TO THE CROSS.

Good Friday Services Evidence Church Harmony.

NO DENOMINATIONAL LINES.

MOST SOLEMN AND IMPRESSIVE SERVICE OF CHURCH YEAR.

Grace P. E. Church Filled With Earnest Christians to Hear Ministerial Words From the Cross—Clergymen in Black Coats and the Dark Decorations of the Pulpit Made a Profound Scene—Dean Bodman Welcomed the Congregation—Eloquent Words on the Subject—Service Closed With Silent Prayer.

The most solemn and impressive service of the church year was held Friday in the Grace P. E. church. The union Good Friday service loses nothing of its beauty, its attractiveness, or its significance as an evidence of the spirit of Christian unity which prevails in Plainfield, by its repetition year after year. The very large attendance, which crowded the church to the doors, showed the desire of the people of the city to draw near to the cross of Christ, and worship there. The crowd was a very reverent one, and when the vested choir, bearing the black-draped cross, entered the church, followed by the train of black-coated clergymen, not a sound could be heard except the opening strains of the processional hymn, "There is a Green Hill Far Away." Into the chancel, where, also, all the decorations were black, filed the train, and joined with the great congregation in the hymn, "Oh, Come and Mourn With Me, Awhile." Prayers were offered by Rev. Dr. Erskine M. Rodman, and the lesson read by Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, after which all united in the responsive reading.

After the singing of "Sweet the Moments, Rich in Blessing," Dr. Bodman welcomed the congregation, entreating them, at the same time, to shut the world entirely out of their thoughts and hearts, and stand, in imagination, before the cross on Calvary, and in spirit and in truth worship the One who hung there.

The first word from the cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," was spoken by Rev. D. J. Yerkes. He spoke eloquently of that great love which could pray for its enemies, the soldiers who crucified Him, Pilate, who delivered Him to them, and the chief priests who sought His death. That great love, said he, Christ carried with Him to heaven, and has for the world today.

"Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise," was the text of Rev. W. C. Snodgrass' remarks. He emphasized especially the readiness of Christ to answer the *prayer of the penitent thief, and there*fore, of any penitent. His quickness to give him the blessed assurance of forgiveness, and the wonderful power which can make a sinner fit for association with the saints above.

After the singing of "Lord, When We Bend Before Thy Throne," Rev Dr. W. R. Richards rose to speak upon the words "Behold thy Son, behold thy mother." Very tenderly he told of Christ's affection for John, and His leaving to him the most precious legacy he had to give, His mother. Peter he went on to say, was afterwards asked three times if he loved Jesus, and when he answered in the affirmative, was told to feed Christ's sheep We, also, he finished by saying, if we say we love Him, are given someone to care for, someone to feed, and if our love is true, we shall accept it as gladly as John did.

That most mysterious, almost incomprehensible, word from the cross, "My God, my God, why has thou forsaken me?" was gravely and reverently spoken of by Rev. Floyd Appleton. Sin, said he, caused alienation from God, and Jesus came to undo the work of sin, and conquer sin and its penalty, death. He suffered every possible human woe, and touched the bottom of human dispair. In his own soul he learned the uttermost of separation from God. Impossible for us to understand, it is yet true that Jesus felt himself rejected by the God he had perfectly served. That was the culmination of his sacrifice, by which he ransomed fallen humanity and satisfied eternal justice.

"I thirst," the brief word which was Christ's only expression of physical suffering, was the text assigned to Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich. He spoke of the intolerable thirst which accompanies crucifixion, and the blessedness of the knowledge that when men suffer on earth they may take comfort in the thought that the Lord Christ knows how it feels. He presented an unanswerable argument against the Christian Science theory that suffering is a delusion, by calling to mind that Christ's suffering was very real to him, and against the ideas of those who will employ no physician and use no medicine, by saying that Christ asked and accepted relief. He closed with a reference to the fact that Christ thristed upon the cross in order that when we hunger and thrist after righteousness we may be filled.

"Jesu, Son of Mary, Hear," sang choir and people, then Rev. C. E. Herring came forward to speak upon the words "It is Finished." This is not a word of defeat, he said; it is a note of victory. The task of redemption is done. Apparent defeat does not always mean ultimate defeat. Easter is coming. As God fulfilled His promises to the Messiah, so He will fulfil all His promises to you and me.

The last speaker was Rev. G. Kennedy Newell. His text was the dying words of the Saviour, "Father, Into Thy Hands I Commend my Spirit." Through all His suffering, said Mr. Newell, Christ found a way back to God; He saw His Father. Jesus knew what was beyond and it was to His Father that His soul took its conscious flight.

While the choir sang an anthem an offering for the Children's Home was received. The hymn "Just as I Am" was sung, after which all knelt in silent prayer. The closing prayer was offered by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. E. M. Rodman; then came the recessional, the black veiled cross leading choir and clergy, singing "Oh, For a Closer Walk With God." As the vestry closed on the last singer the congregation knelt once more in silent prayer, remaining till the last amen stole out upon the stillness, then rising to go out into the moonlight, into the world they had almost forgotten, in going back to live in that first Good Friday, so many centuries ago.

ON THE WAY TO KLONDIKE

A PLAINFIELDER WRITES OF HARDSHIPS HE HAS EN OUNTERED.

Peter Anderson, Who Forsook Painting to Hunt for Gold, Says the Change Has Given Him a Hard Time.

An interesting letter was received a few days ago from Peter Anderson, formerly in the employ of Woolston & Buekle, of North avenue, who is now in the Klondike region. Mr. Anderson left Plainfield Feb. 10th, and it was March 23d when the letter was written from the summit of White Pass.

He tells in an interesting way of his trip and advises all persons who think of going to buy their clothes and provisions at Seattle, as they can be secured for a cheaper price. The weather on the trip was very good. He says that he landed in Skagway Feb. 27th, and from that day until the time of writing he passed through many hardships, The first fourteen days on the trail the weather was warm and the sun was out much of the time. There was much rain and the trail was in a bad condition. A number of times the party were impeded and the animals broke through the ice. Finally the summit was reached and a very deep snow was found.

Mr. Anderson says that he was charged duty on his provisions and hardware about 40 per cent. of its value. On tobacco costing $1.50 a duty of $1.95 was charged. On a quantity of other material costing $11.14 a duty of $6.75 was imposed. Mr. Anderson also says that unless a man has plenty of money he had better stay away from the Klondike. He has paid as high as 25 cents for a 5 cent loaf of bread. He says he hopes to be back in Plainfield in a year and a half and sends best wishes to his friends.

He Imposes on Clergymen.

Sergeant Kiely has been notified by the police department of the District of Columbia to look out for an impostor who is traveling about this part of the country. He usually applies to clergymen, chiefly Presbyterian ones, representing himself to be the relative of a clergyman in a distant city. He claims to be an electrician out of work. He is about twenty-eight years old, short and stout build, brown hair, short moustache, short feet, very high instep, rolls his eyes while talking.

Entertained King's Daughters.

Last Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, the Brightside Circle, King's Daughters, met and were delightfully entertained by the host and hostess. During the evening a choice musical programme was rendered by members of the circle and sociability formed an important feature of the evening.

Still Looking For "Cack."

"Cack" Carter is still at large. The investigation of the trouble at Mrs. Peterson's on West Third street, in which "Cack" figured so prominently, was to have come up in the City Court Saturday morning. "Cack" wasn't around, however, so the whole matter was laid over until he is captured.

A Military Appointment.

John I. Holly, of Park avenue, this city, late adjutant of Squadron A., of New York, has been honored by the appointment to the important position of Quartermaster-General of the State of New York.

BURIAL CASKET WAS UNEARTHED BY DOGS.

Shocking State of Affairs Said to Be in a Local Cemetery.

SANITARY LAWS BROKEN.

COMPLAINT MADE AGAINTST SEXTON KENNEDY BY HEALTH OFFICIALS.

Neighbors Claim That the Coffins Are Placed Just Below the Surface of the Ground—The Health Inspector Investigated the Case—Claims to Have Found a Number of Cases in Which the Caskets Were Not Placed at the Prescribed Depth Under Ground —Kennedy Arrested and Held for Trial.

A horrible discovery has been made by the health authorities. Some of the coffins in the Methodist cemetery on Plainfield avenue were placed in shallow graves with only a thin covering of earth over them instead of being placed the prescribed distance from the surface. The people living in that vicinity are up in arms. They tell of how dogs have entered the cemetery and scratched away the dirt, leaving a corner of the casket exposed. Now they have taken the matter in hand and will prosecute those who are to blame.

There is a State law that directs that the bodies of all grown persons shall be placed under six feet of earth. Children shall be interred in three feet six inches of earth at least. The local Board of Health ordinance complies with the State law.

Next to Evergreen cemetery is the Methodist cemetery, with the city plot close by. Potter's field, that section is sometimes called. Here, too, the county provides for the burial of such as come under its jurisdiction. Here the nameless colored child, found dead in Cedar brook, was placed by the county. The residents of that neighborhood have been complaining They directed their efforts to the Health Board. Inspector Addis was directed to make an examination last week. He did so accompanied by a witness.

Together they examined the graves. Addis says that the coffin of the county's charge was only twenty-five inches below the surface. They dug down and found another child's coffin only eleven inches down. Caskets of grown people were found, they claim, only two or three feet below the surface.

Peter Cuff, the old colored man who generally figures as grave digger, said that he had not dug a grave there for some time. Isaac W. Kennedy, the sexton of the First M. E. church, was the man, he said. The neighbors confirmed this statement. They told how they had driven dogs out of the cemetery and filled up the holes they had scratched in the soft earth which exposed the wooden casket. It was horrible, they said.

One man claimed that he had tried to persuade Kennedy to dig the graves deeper and that he had been told that it was none of his business.

Friday afternoon Inspector Addis appeared before City Judge De Meza and swore out a warrant for Kennedy. Patrolman McCue served the warrant and Kennedy was arraigned before the Judge late in the afternoon. His trial was set down for Saturday. At that time, at the request of Former Assemblyman W. B. Codington, counsel for Kennedy, the case was adjourned for a week.

To Help the Cubans.

The class in the Sunday-school at the First Presbyterian church taught by Miss Louise Snediker will give a sale and entertainment at the home of Miss Snediker, on Greve street, Thursday afternoon and evening. It will be for the benefit of the reconcentrados in Cuba.

Doing Good Work in Jersey City.

Charles B. Brown, general secretary of the Jersey City Y. M. C. A., was the guest of his brother, Collector George F. Brown, of the borough, Thursday afternoon. Mr. Brown is doing a great work in Jersey City and is very successful.

When the children are hungry, what do you give them? Food.

When thirsty? Water.

Now use the same good common sense, and what would you give them when they are too thin? The best fat-forming food, of course.

Somehow you think of Scott's Emulsion at once.

For a quarter of a century it has been making thin children, plump; weak children, strong; sick children, healthy.

DRAKE AND STRONG HAD A WORDY TUSSEL.

Fighting To Bring Trolley Over Two Different Routes.

SARCASM FREELY DEALT IN.

A BIG HEARING BEFORE PISCATAWAY TOWNSHIP OFFICIALS.

Mayor Drake Wants the Trolley to Go Through Lincoln and He Made a Great Oratorial Effort to Convince the Committee That That is the Only Good Route to be Had—Aspersions Cast on the Standing of the Signers of the Two Petitions Were Presented—Committee Did Not Decide.

The Piscataway Township Committee met last Friday afternoon at Nelson's Hotel, New Market, for the purpose of giving the interested people an opportunity of discussing the relative merits of two routes for the trolley from New Market through to Bound Brook. The first route is what is known as the old stage route and by measurement is about eighteen hundred feet shorter than route number two, which by the way of Harris lane through Lincoln to Bound Brook.

There were about one hundred people present. Mayor Drake, from Lincoln, presenting five petitions from property owners along route number two, was present and had for his opponent, Counsel Strong, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, who resides at New Brunswick. Mr. Strong presented a petition signed by twenty-five persons who favored the old stage route.

The debate between Mayor Drake and Lawyer Strong was a lively one. The Mayor showed that while the first route was considerably shorter, the road was not as wide as the road for route number two. The representative for route number one was inclined to speak disparingly of the signers for route number two, saying that they were all young people, and some of them working in Lincoln for $4 or $5 a week.

On the other hand Mayor Drake made sarcastic replies regarding the ballots of the signers for route No. 1, by saying that some of them lived out of the county, and that before he finished he would clip their wings in true Lincoln style. The five petitions bore the names of 120 persons, the majority of whom are property owners along route No. 2.

After a long and heated discusion the committee decided to adjourn for one week when one of the two routes will be chosen.

HIS FRIENDS DIDN'T TELL HIM.

A Pleasant Birthday Surprise Tendered to George Taylor.

A pleasant event of last Friday was the complete surprise tendered to George Taylor, of Coddinton avenue, by his friends and neighbors. It was in honor of the completion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his birthday and the gathering of friends was an agreeable reminder of the happy event. Games was the feature of the evening. The host was congratulated by all and wishes for many happy returns of the event were extended to him. Mrs. Taylor also shared the pleasures of the event with her husband and a thoroughly enjoyable time resulted.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Ross and daughter, Helen Ross, Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Waldron, Mr. and Mrs Horace Huff, Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno and daughter, Emma Hazel Ryno, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kitchen, Miss Minnie Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Connett, Bert Honeyman, of Plainfield, and Miss Clark, of Kingston, N. Y.

Funeral of A. L. Way.

The funeral of the late Albert L. Way was held Friday afternoon from Holy Cross church. Rev. T. L. Murphy, the rector, officiated. The choir was present and rendered "Peace, Perfect Peace," "Now the Laborer's Task is O'er," and "Hark, Hark my Soul." The floral tributes completely covered the casket and were, indeed, very beautiful. The church was largely filled with friends and acquaintances of the departed. Those who served as bearers were Col. Sterling, Horsely Barker, Wm. A. Westphal, Andrew Guyer, Prof. Smith and Mr. Kenney. Interment was in the family plot at Philadelphia.

A Patriotic Demonstration.

What promises to be a patriotic demonstration by the people of Plainfield will be held in Music Hall Thursday evening under the auspices of the Plainfield Camera Club. The entertainment will consist of a series of views of Cuba and her war and of the naval forces of the United States and Spain.

WANTS VOTES FOR VETS.

WILLIAM SMITH A CANDIDAE FOR G. A. R. COMMANDER.

Winfield Scott Post Officially Promulgate His Candidacy in a Letter Reviewing His Record in the Order.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city never had a more conscientious and earnest worker than William Smith, who has held most all of the important offices in the Post, and many other important offices in the Department of New Jersey, and his fellow comrades recognizing his especial fitness have decided to present his name before the thirty first annual encampment, to be held at Long Branch in June, for Department Commander. The Post is about to issue a circular letter to be sent to the comrades throughout the State The letter states that at the Post Encampment held March 22d, the delegates to the Department Encampment were instructed to present the name of Mr. Smith for Commander and to use every honorable effort for his election.

Comrade Smith was formerly a member of Co. F, Second N. J. Calvary. He has filled the position of Officer of the Day of the local post for several years; has served as its Commander two terms, and for the past two years has filled the position of Chief Staff to the Department Commander. He is a soldier in every sense of the word, and has the best interests of the comrades at heart. He has given liberally of his time and money in building up the order and is considered as a rightful candidate to the chief position in the State.

IN BAITALION DRILL.

HIGH SCHOOL AND LEAL'S CADETS COMBINE THEIR FORCES.

Divided Into Four Companies Under the Command of Captain Geo. F. Edwards—Evolutions Gone Through With Credit.

The Plainfield High School Cadets and the Leal School Cadets held a joint-drill in the Crescent Rink Thursday afternoon. The cadets were divided into four companies which were arranged to form a battalion The afternoon was spent in battalion drill under the command of Captain George F. Edwards, who acted as major. His staff consisted of First Lieutenant A. W. Lederer as adjutant and Sergeant DeForest as sergeant-major.

The fight company was composed of High School cadets under the command of Captain Henry W. Brower. The right centre company was from the same corps and was commanded by Second Lieutenant William A. De-Long, Jr. The left centre company was made up of the Leal School cadets under the charge of First Lieutenant Orville T. Waring. The left company was also of the Leal School cadets, commanded by Captain Henry Leal.

It was the first attempt at battalion drill and so the cadets found it rather difficult at first. The evolutions were rapidly learned, however, and the different companies took their positions without confusion. The drill will be continued next Thursday afternoon at the same place. It will be private. As Captain Edwards is in charge of both companies, the arrangement put into effect for the first time yesterday will probably be continued next spring so that the cadets can appear at any celebration this year as a battalion.

CHILDREN AND MATCHES TO BLAME.

Started a Fire in Damp Hay Which Burned Very Slow.

Thursday a fire alarm was sent in from Box 35, corner of Fifth street and Arlington avenue, by J. D. Spicer, who noticed that there was a fire in a barn in the rear of the house on Madison avenue, occupied by John Naegle. The fire was caused through the carelessness of some small children living in the vicinity. In the afternoon they were in the haymow of the barn playing with matches. They set fire to some hay, which was rather damp, and it did not burn freely. When the 5 o'clock alarm was blown the children started to go home. One of them suggested that they go back and see if the fire was out, but the majority felt certain that it was and they went home. About 7:30 a bright light was noticed and it was then discovered that the fire had been burning for some time.

The department arrived quickly but but it was only necessary to use one extinguisher to put the fire out. The damage was very slight.

Former Plainfield Girl to Wed.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Mary Abbie Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Ford, to Charles Wallace Oakley, son of Jesse Oakley, both of Elizabeth, which will take place Wednesday evening, April 20th, at the residence of the bride, 1211 East Broad street, Elizabeth. The contracting parties were formerly residents of this city. Mr. Ford was a member of the late firm of Ford & Stiles, while the groom's father was engaged as an architect in this city.

FROM LAWS TO FIRE HOSE

ASSEMBLYMAN MURRAY WILL BE FOREMAN OF ALERT COMPANY.

Unanimously Chosen for the Position —Council Must Act to Fill Company Membership Rolls With Active Men.

The Alert Hose Company is powerless at present. While it only has two active members at present, it cannot enlist any more recruits until the Common Council has given it permission. According to a past ruling by the Council, it must give its sanction to any addition to the fire department. Meanwhile the exempt members of the Alert company are continuing to look after the organization.

Thursday the company held a meeting and nominated officers. It is not every company that can have an Assemblyman for a foreman so Assemblyman Roger F. Murray was unanimously named for that position. The other nominations were as follows: First assistant foreman, Townsend Rushmore; second assistant foreman, F. L. C. Martin; secretary and treasurer, C. G Burnett; representative to relief association, C. H. Dunham and H. M. Demarest; inquiry committee, W. S. Lowry, C. H. Dunham and J. L. Moore. The election of officers will be held on the first Monday in May.

A SENSIBLE SHOE STORE.

M. C. VanArsdale Now Starts on His Second Year.

A year has now elapsed since M. C. VanArsdale established his Sensible Shoe Store on East Front street. The year has been a successful one to that enterprising merchant and to those who have become his patrons. His determination to give all the best of treatment has been carried out to the letter. Mr. VanArsdale is not going to let his business drag now. He will start the second year with renewed vigor.

He has now laid in a stock in spring and summer lines of a greater variety than ever before. He doesn't cater to any class in particular. There are shoes at his store for everybody, high grade goods all, and made by the best manufacturers. There is one thing remarkable about the prices. They are decidedly reasonable. Mr. VanArsdale is a believer in frequent sales and small profits The low prices and the remarkable variety of boots, shoes and slippers are of the kind seldom found in a city of the size of Plainfield.

A BICYCLE SOCIABLE.

Over a Hundred Endeavorers Enjoyed a Pleasant Evening.

A bicycle sociable was held at the residence of Dr. Kempton Browning, East Fifth street, Thursday, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church. There were about one hundred members and friends present who enjoyed the hospitality of the host and hostess, as well as that of the social committee.

The entertainment of the evening consisted in the transposition of letters into the names of the standard wheels, saddles, lamps and tires. Music was furnished by the graphaphone, reproducing selections from Sousa's, Gilmore's and other well-known bands. During the evening refreshments were served by the social committee consisting of Miss Margaret Harold, Miss Mamie Frenchs, Dr. Chapman and Dr. Kempton Browning.

HELD IN $500 BAIL.

Frank Hollenbeck Arraigned on Charge of Receiving Stolen Goods.

Frank Hollenbeck, of Sutherwood, who was arrested recently on a charge of receiving stolen property from the residence of David Eastman, which was taken by John Fillmore, his brother-in-law, was arraigned in Justice Moffett's court this morning. He waived examination and was held in $500 bail for his appearance at the next term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer. John Fillmore, who was charged with stealing iron, etc, from Mr. Eastman's residence, was committed in default of bail to the trial Lawyer Edward Nugent, of Elizabeth, is counsel for Mr. Hollenbeck, and he appeared Friday with his client. Mr. Hollenbeck furnished his own bail.

Father Time Dealt Kindly With Him.

Many Plainfielders will remember the genial John Voorhees, who resided on East Front street at what is now number 826. Mr. Voorhees was in town a few days ago, and the many persons with whom he shook hands all congratulated him on how leniently Father Time had dealt with him in the twenty years he has been away from this city. He now resides at No. 2 West Thirty second street, New York. His East Front street property is in the hands of J. B. Coward for sale.

Underground Conduits.

The work of laying the underground conduits for the telephone wires will soon start. A carload of material for the sub ways arrived here Thursday night, and more will follow. The telephone company will start as soon as the arrival of the warm weather is assured, and will place a large force of men at work so to complete the laying of the conduits as soon as possible.

DUER STREET OPENING.

The Thoroughfare Cannot Be Opened by Private Subscription.

In connection with the proposed opening of Duer street from the borough, the action of the Borough Council at the last meeting was not clearly stated. At the meeting Counsel Reed stated that the street could only be opened in one way, and that is by having commissioners appointed to assess benefits and damages just the same as is done in other similar cases. The street cannot be opened by subscription as was thought by Mr. Woolston and other Councilmen. As soon as the above fact became known Mr. Woolston had nothing further to say regarding the opening. It is safe to state that the idea of opening the street is not entirely abandoned and the prospects for it are very good.

TROUBLE AT WASHINGTON HALL.

The Fireman Wanted to Thrash the Professor.

Prof. Eugene O'Reilly and Owen Holmes, the big fireman at Washington Hall, had a little dispute Friday. Holmes says that O'Reilly was trying to damage his reputation and so he intended to damage the Professor's face. That made trouble right away. Holmes was placed in a cell in the rookery to meditate on the sin he wanted to commit.

Saturday City Judge DeMeza heard the story and suspended sentence on Holmes.

Engine Company Nominate.

A meeting of No. 2 Engine Company was held Thursday. The officers for the ensuing year were nominated as follows: Foremen, Charles W. Smith and Frank Hand; first assistant foreman, William Chamberlain; second assistant foreman, Harry Connett; secretary, Adolph Kahrman; financial secretary, James Dawe; treasurer, Frank Schuck; engineer, Frank Schuck; first assistant engineer, Adolph Kahrman; second assistant engineer, Alexander Manning; representatives to the relief association, C. J. Neuman and William Townley. The meeting was followed by one of their old-time collations.

Capt. Edwards in Active Service.

Captain Eaton A. Edwards, of the U. S. regular army, who has been stationed at an army post in western Montana, has been ordered to Key West with his regiment for active service. Capt. ARRANGING FOR THE HORSE RACE MEETS.

A Meeting Held in New Brunswick Thursday.

PURSES TO BE OFFERED.

PLAINFIELD ENTHUSIASTS HAVE ALREADY SUBSCRIBED $1,500.

Three Counties Represented Thursday but Owing to the Absence of Hunterdon County Representatives Several Details Could Not be Decided On—Somerset Men Have Not Yet Raised the Required Sum of $1,000, but Expect to Get It—Five Regular Events in Trotting to be Arranged for Soon.

Horsemen of Middlesex, Union, Somerset and Hunterdon counties are now prepared to effect a permanent organization to conduct a series of racemeets in the four counties. Thursday the promoters of the organization met at this city to complete arrangements. Owing to the absence of the delegation from Hunterdon county, the regular steps to organize the association were deferred until the next meeting.

The meeting was held in the parlors of the Mansion House shortly after 8 o'clock. It was called to order by Former Judge W. A. Coddington, of Plainfield, who is the chairman of the temporary organization. Owing to the absence of Robert A. Fairburn, of Westfield, the secretary, James Parsons, of this city, was appointed secretary pro tem.

After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting and the stating of the object of the meeting by the chairman, the committees from the various counties made their report. The Plainfield contingent had a guarantee fund of $1,500 ready. The Middlesex county delegation had secured a similar fund of over $1,000. The Somerset county men reported that they had not been able to raise $1,000 as yet, but that there was little doubt but that it could be secured shortly. For some unexplained reason, the Hunterdon county delegation did not put in an appearance, so nothing could be learned of the success or failure of the movement in that section.

The chairman appointed a committee, composed of Fred Williams and H. E. Rider, of Plainfield; Austin Moore, of Somerville, and A. B. Monahan, of New Brunswick, to formulate plans for the race meets and select the classes for the races. Then the ones interested took a recess while the committee retired to a back room to prepare their report.

The committee advised that a two days' meet be held at one track in each county at some date in the early summer. They will probably be held during June. They recommended that there be five regular events and one special event each day. They reported the following classes: 2:19, trotting and pacing; 2:20, trotting; 2:30, trotting and pacing; 2:40, trotting; 3:00, free for all. The purses and prizes were to be awarded to each race by the general association. As Hunterdon was not present it was decided to postpone the fixing of the amounts for the purses until the next meeting. The recommendations of the committee were adopted.

The date for the next meeting was set for Wednesday, when the interested ones will gather at Somerville. It was voted to extend an invitation to the horse-owners of Monmouth county to attend that meeting and join the association if they wished to. It was thought that Monmouth was near enough to be in the circuit. There are a number of enthusiastic lovers of the sport in that county who would take an active interest in the races.

There was a discussion regarding the management of the different meets and it was the general opinion that they would be much more successful if managed by the members from the county in which the meet was held. It was then decided that the members of the association from the county in which the meet was to be held should have charge instead of a committee from the general association to look out after all of them. Each county will manage its own race meet and guarantee its expenses and losses.

A large delegation was present from Plainfield at the meeting. They drove over and some arrived after the meeting had started. Among them were H. E. Rider, Fred Williams, Sheriff William T. Kirk, Former Judge William A. Coddington, Robert A. Fairburn, C. V. D. Corle, Charles H. Lyman, City Judge George W. De-Meza, J. W. Van Sickle, Thomas Brantingham, Charles C. Brower, John Osborne, William E. Brock, Harry B. Potter, and Newton B Smalley.

CRESCENT CHURCH IN DEBT OVER $5,700.

The Report Made at the Annual Meeting Last Night.

GOOD WORK HAS BEEN DONE

ENCOURAGING STATEMENTS MADE BY AUXILIARY SOCIETIES.

The Meeting Held in the Crescent Avenue Church Chapel, With Rev. W. R. Richards Acting as Moderator —I. C. Pierson Resigns as an Elder— A Strong Plea for a Larger Membership in the Sunday-school—$100 Deficiency in That Department—Report of the Deacons—Benevolent Offerings.

The annual meeting of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was held April 5th in the lecture room of the church. There was a large attendance and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards presided. After opening exercises of a devotional character, the minutes of the last meeting were read by Israel C. Pierson.

A letter was read by the moderator, giving the resignation of I. C. Pierson as an elder of the church. The resignation was accepted, with much regret,

The report of the women's societies was read by Dr. Richards, showing the year to have been one of successful work. The Home Missionary Society and Foreign Missionary Society both reported interesting meetings, a generous amount of money given for mission work, and comforts sent to many workers in the field. The Young Ladies' Mission Band and the Sunshine Mission Band presented encouraging reports, as did the Earnest Workers, a boys band. The Junior Endeavor Society were shown to be in a flourishing condition. The McAll Auxiliary also rendered a report. Through all these associations, over $2,500 had been given for worthy objects, during the year. Dr. Ben VanD. Hedges gave the report for the Y. P. S. C. E., and H. B. Newhall for the Sunday-school. The latter made a strong plea for a larger membership in the home department. Over $700 had been given by the Sunday school, during the year, for missions. The general treasury of the school, however, ended the year with over $100 deficiency.

A nominating committee of nine, six of whom were appointed by the moderator and three elected by the meeting, were instructed to nominate members of the congregation to fill vacant offices in the boards of the church, and report at a future meeting. The committee was as follows: Charles Place, C. Kirkland Myers, Leander N. Lovell, Henry G. Squires, Samuel F. Kimball, S. H. Whitney, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, H. B. Munger and W. D. Murray.

Reports of the work at Bethel chapel were given by S. A. Ginna and Rev. Mr. Tilden, showing the chapel to be doing a real spiritual work among the colored population. H. C. Squires reported for Hope chapel. This was a very bright and humorous report, and told in an interesting way of the different lines of work carried on by this young "institutional church." Rev. G. Kennedy Nowell's few words on the same subject were deeply earnest, and thankful for the steady, quiet endeavor he had witnessed among his people.

Warren chapel was represented by Leander N. Lovell, who reported a treasury in good condition, a good attendance at the various services, and a variety of lines of work successfully carried on. Rev. J. O. McKelvey had also a few strong words of commendation to say about his church.

The report of the deacons was rendered by S. H. Whitney, and that of the trustees by Charles Place. The latter reported a present indebtedness on the part of the church of over $5,700. I. C. Pierson read the report of the session of the church, showing a steady increase in the membership of the church and chapels. A list of the members who had died during the year was read, and a list of offerings for benevolences, amounting to $18,906.01.

Will be Transferred.

Irving L. Ross, of Westfield, representing the New York and New Jersey Telephone Co., who has been in Plainfield for sometime past securing new subscribers for the company, is about to be transferred to Long Branch for the summer. While Mr. Ross has been in this city he has made a good many friends and has been very successful in his work of the above-named company.

Grace Church's New Pastor.

Rev. Mr. Gardner, who has been assigned to Grace M. E. church, North Plainfield, is a graduate of Syracuse University and has just concluded his studies at Drew Theological Seminary. Mr. Gardner is considered a good all-around preacher and worker and is very talented. He supplied the pulpit at Branchville while he was concluding his studies at Drew.

EPISCOPALIANS ELECT.

ANNUAL PARISH MEETINGS HELD MONAAY EVENING.

Grace Church Collected and Expended Over $15,000—Talk of Changing Time of Election—Action in Three Churches.

The annual Parish meeting of Grace P. E. church was held last Monday by Rev. Dr. Rodman, rector of the church, called the meeting to order and G. S. Clay was appointed secretary. The treasurer's report was presented and showed the total receipts during the year to be $13,329 and the expenditures $13 029, leaving a balance on hand of $203. This report is considered to be one of the best presented in some time.

The election of various church officers resulted as follows: Wardens, D. G. Irvine, Thomas Minford; vestrymen, C. G. Howard, G. S. Coe, N. F. Rogers, L. G. Timpson, E. H. Booth, W. T. Gough and M. S. Ackerman: delegates to Diocesan convention, J. B. Dumont, G. S. Clay, B. H. Depew; alternates, L. G. Timpson, M. S. Ackerman, G. M. Randall.

The subject of changing the time of holding the Parish meeting from Easter to January was introduced and discussed at some length. The general opinion seemed to be that the change would be preferable, and it stated that in five dioceses in New York the change had been made. Owing to the fact that there was not a certified copy of the law giving the power for such a change in the hands of the members, the matter was laid over until another meeting. The change will undoubted be made at an early date. The reason given for the change is that it would seem to be more appropriate to hold the meeting at the beginning of the year than three months later.

CONGRESS MEANS WAR.

the inhabitants of that island, restoring peace and order thereon, and also establishing a stable and independent government of their own by the free act of the people thereon;

And that the President is hereby authorized and empowered to use the army and navy of the United States for the purpose of carrying out the object of this joint resolution.

The above resolutions were adopted by a vote of 324 to 20, and this is equivalent to a declaration of war.

Madrid, April 13—At a special Cabinet meeting held last night important war credits were granted, including a large sum for the completion of artillery preparations at Porto Rico.

Senor Gullon, Minister for Foreign Affairs, read to the Cabinet the official text of President McKinley's message, which was discussed at length.

Afterward an official note, giving an opinion on the message, was issued as follows:

"Although the document transmitted to the Government is incomplete, lacking extracts of previous messages whereto it refers, which are indispensable to a complete understanding of the document, the Council is of the opinion that the strange, meddling attitude expressed in President McKinley's message is incompatible with the sovereignty and rights of the Spanish nation.

"These rights admit of no interference with Spain's affairs by any other Nation.

"The Council deems it inexpedient to make any further declaration, except to express in the solemnest manner its unalterable determination to uphold the rights of the Nation until the American Congress or President McKinley takes definite steps to enforce the doctrines expressed in the message.

"Government awaits further developments with calmness and with a determination to defend with energy the sacred interests of Spain by the patriotism of the Spanish race."

Key West, April 13.—Acting under orders from Madrid, the Spanish Consul has closed his office here and has gone to Tampa. Before leaving he turned his papers over to the British Vice Consul, Mr. Taylor, who will represent Great Britain, Spain and Italy.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 13.—The United States troops stationed at Fort Bliss have received orders from the War Department to start for Chickamauga today.

"What's use of talking," exclaimed representative Grosvernor, of Ohio, this morning, when asked whether we were going to have war, "we are going to declare war before night or at least that will be the effect of the action that Congress will take today."

The spirit of all our acts hitherto has been an earnest, unselfish desire for peace and prosperity in Cuba, untarnished by differences between United States and Spain and unstained by the blood of American citizens. The forcible intervention of the United States as a neutral, to stop the war, according to the large dictates of humanity, and following many historical precedents where neighboring States have permitted to check the hopeless sacrifice of life by internecine conflicts beyond their borders, is justifiable on these grounds. In this case, however, hostile contraint upon both the parties to the contest, as well to enforce a truce as to guide the eventual settlement, is the only ground for such intervention may be briefly summarized as follows:

First—In the cause of humanity and to put an end to the barbarities, starvation and horrible miseries now existing there, and which the parties to the conflict are either unable, or unwilling to stop or mitigate. It is no answer to say that is all in another country, belonging to another nation, and is therefore, none of our business. It is specially our duty, for it is right at our door.

Second—We owe it to our citizens in Cuba to afford them that protection and indemnity for life and property which no Government there can or will afford, and to that end to terminate the conditions that deprive them of legal protection.

Third—Right to intervene may be justified by the very serious injury to the commerce, trade and business of our people and by the wanton destruction of property and devastation of the island.

Fourth—And which is of the most importance. The present condition of affairs in Cuba is a constant menace to our peace, and entails upon this Government an enormous expense. With such a conflict waged for years in an island so near us and with which our people have such trade and business relations—when the lives and liberty of our citizens are in constant danger and their property destroyed and themselves ruined—where our trading vessels are liable to seizure and are seized at our very doors, by warships of a foreign nation, the expedition of filibustering that we are powerless to prevent altogether, and the irritating questions and entanglements that arise—all these and others that I need not mention, with the resulting strained relations, are constant menace to our peace and compel us to keep on a semi-war with a nation with which we are at peace.

Owing perhaps to the large expanse of water separating the island from the Peninsula, the contending parties appear to have within themselves no depository of common confidence to suggest wisdom when passion and excitement have their sway and to assume the part of peacemaker.

In this view in the earlier days of the contest the good offices of the United States, as a mediator, were tendered in good faith, without any selfish purpose, in the interest of humanity and in sincere friendship for both parties, but were at the time declined by Spain, with the declaration, nevertheless, that at a future time they would be indispensable. No intimation has been received that in the opinion of Spain that time has been reached, and yet the strife continues with all its frightful horrors and all its injuries to the interests of the United States and of other nations.

Each party seems quite capable of working great injury and damage to the other, as to all the relations and interests dependent on the existence of peace in the island, but they seem unable of reaching any advantageous and both have thus far failed of achieving any success whereby one party shall possess control of the island and the authority of the other. Under the circumstances, the agency of others, either by mediation or by intervention, seems to be the only alternative which must, sooner or later be invoked for the termination of the strife.

These elements of danger and disorder, as already pointed out, have been strikingly illustrated by a tragic event which has deeply and justly moved the American people.

I have already transmitted to Congress the report of the Naval Court of Inquiry on the destruction of the battle ship Maine, in the harbor of Havana, during the night of the 15th of February.

The destruction of that noble vessel has filled the national heart with inexpressible horror. Two hundred and fifty-four officers and sailors and marines and two officers of our navy, reposing in the fancied security of a friendly harbor, have been hurled to death, grief and mourning brought to their homes and sorrow to the nation.

The Naval Court of Inquiry which, it is needless to say, commands the unqualified confidence of the Government, was unanimous in its conclusion that the destruction of the Maine was caused by an exterior explosion, that of a submarine mine.

It did not assume to place responsibility. That remains to be fixed. In any event, the destruction of the Maine by whatever external cause was a patent and impressive proof of a state of things in Cuba that is intolerable.

The reply above referred to on the 21st ultimo also contained an expression of the readiness of Spain to submit to an arbitration all the differences which can arise in this matter which is subsequently explained by the note of the Spanish Minister to Washington, of the 10th instant, as follows:

"As to the question of fact which springs from the diversity of views between the report of the American and Spanish boards, Spain proposes that the fact be ascertained by an impartial investigation by experts, whose decision Spain accepts in advance. To this I have made no reply. President Grant in 1875, after discussing the phases of the contest as it then appeared and its opulence and apparent indefinite prolongation, said:

In such event I am of the opinion that other nations will be compelled to assume the responsibility which devolves upon them and to seriously consider the only remaining measure possible—mediation and intervention.

If my annual message to congress December last, speaking to his, I said:

The near future will demonstrate whether the indispensible condition of a righteous peace, just alike to the Cubans and to Spain, as well as equitable to all our interests, so intimately involved in the welfare of Cuba, is likely to be attained. If not, the exigency of further and other action by the United States will remain to be taken. When that time comes that action will be determined in the line of indisputable right and duty. It will be faced without misgiving or hesitancy in the light of the obligations this Government owes to itself, to the people who have confided to it the protection of their interests and honor of humanity. Sure of its right, keeping free from all offense ourselves, actuated only by upright and patriotic consideration, moved neither by passion nor selfishness, the Government will continue its watchful care over the rights and property of American citizens and will abate none of its efforts to bring about by peaceful agencies a peace which shall be honorable and enduring.

If it shall hereafter appear to be a duty imposed by our obligations to ourselves, to civilization and humanity to intervene with force, it shall be without fault on our part; and only because the necessity for such action will be so clear as to command the support and approval of the civilized world.

When the inability of Spain to deal successfully with the insurrection has become manifest, and it is demonstrated that her sovereignty is extinct in Cuba for all purposes of its rightful existence, and when a hopeless struggle for its re-establishment has degenerated into a strife which means nothing more than the useless sacrifice of human life and the utter destruction of the very subject matter of the conflict, a situation will be presented in which our obligations to the sovereignty of Spain will be superseded by higher obligations, which we can hardly hesitate to recognize and discharge.

The long trial has proved that the object for which Spain has waged the war, cannot be attained. The first of insurrection may flame or may smother, with varying season, but it has not been and it is plain that it cannot be extinguished by present methods.

The only hope of relief and repose from a condition which can no longer be endured is the enforced pacification of Cuba. In the name of humanity, in the name of civilization in behalf of endangered American interests which gives us the right and the duty to speak and to act, the war in Cuba must stop.

In view of these facts and these considerations I ask the Congress to authorize and empower the President to take measures to secure a full and final termination of hostility between the people of Spain and the people of Cuba, and to secure in the island the establishment of a stable government capable of maintaining order and observing its international obligation, ensuring peace and tranquility and the security of its citizens, as well as our own, and to set the military and naval forces of the United States as may be necessary for these purposes.

And in the interest of humanity and to aid in preserving the lives of the starving people of the island, I recommend that the distribution of food supplies be continued and that an appropriation out of the public treasury to supplement the charity of our citizens. The issue is now with the Congress. It is a solemn responsibility.

I have exhausted every effort to relieve the intolerable condition of affairs which is at our doors. Prepared to execute every obligation imposed upon me by the Constitution and the law I now place the matter in your hands.

Yesterday, and since the preparation of the foregoing message, official information was received by me that the latest decree of the Queen Regent of Spain directs General-Blanco, in order to prepare and facilitate peace, to proclaim a suspension of hostilities, the duration and details of which have not yet been communicated to me.

This fact, with every other pertinent consideration, will, I am sure, have due weight with careful attention in the solemn deliberations upon which you are about to enter. If this measure attains a successful result, then our aspirations as a Christian, peace-loving people, will be realized.

If it fails it will be only another justification for our contemplated action.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

BATTLING WITH THE ELEMENTS.

The Fury of a June Storm About Key West and the Cuban Coast.

Will the Cuban question drag along until the summer which is the season of awful tempests in West Indian and Carribean waters? Obviously it ought to be settled before summer or the advent of the rainy season on land and the hurricanes on sea will render it impossible of settlement until fall. Throughout the summer months the risk of wreck in the northern part of the Carribean Sea is so great that the most powerful men-of-war are not proof against these sudden storms even while riding in harbor. In 1782 the Ville de Paris, the Centaur and the Ramilies foundered in a gale, and a whole fleet of West Indiamen was sunk in 1830, also while lying to in a hurricane. The wind suddenly shifted from west to east and blew equally heavy and every ship in harbor, says the London Nautical Magazine, "under a square course foundered with the loss of their various crews."

These southern storms which are generated under the equator move like the Gulf Stream in a northerly direction and come into collision with the tropical islands which are the northern limit of the Carribean Sea. Of these islands the three or four largest, namely Cuba, San Domingo, Hayti and Porto Rico form a continual barrier opposed obliquely to the trade winds. And as a mass of moving atmosphere, coming from the north, also presses down upon the islands in its southwestern progress, the obstruction which the islands thus affords produces a constant tendency to atmospheric disturbance and a consequent eddying motion which sweeps along the ocean gathering rapidly increased powers of destruction as it proceeds.

Probably the most thrilling example of these Southern ocean disasters was that which occurred in the harbor of Apia, ten years ago. It was so terrible an event that it is said to have actually subdued a rebellion, and the natives certain that Heaven was angry with them were so awed by the storm of that year that no power on earth could again stir them to revolt.

In 1888 there were complications between Great Britain, Germany and the United States in Samoa. A native Chief Tamasese, was the Kaiser's favorite. Consuls Knappe and the German lieutenants Eber and Adler were sent to Apia in his behalf. England sent the Calliope and the United States despatched the Trenton and four other war vessels in order to check the Kaiser and to maintain order.

One evening these various war vessels were all lying at anchor as proudly as Sennacherib's host in the harbor of Apia, awaiting hostilities on shore. Without much warning one of these fierce gales struck the harbor, and in less time than it takes to say "Cock Robin," the attention of the seamen was suddenly diverted from the doings of Tcmasese and his fellow conspirators; hatches were battered down, topsails reefed; the upper spars were girt; great guns were securely fastened in their places; additional anchors dropped and ample cables played out to allow the ships to heave to and fro in a heavy sea. The various captains were thundering orders to their crews and the latter were rushing madly to their posts of duty, when suddenly the cables dragged and the immense war vessels were pitching hither and thither like chips in whirlpool while the terrified and crazed natives looked on in amazement, believing as they did in their superstitious Samoan way that the Angel of Death spread his wings on the blast. After a short but brave battle against a terrific wind and a high rolling sea the German gunboat Eber went down, sending a last puff of white smoke into the air as the waters quenched the fires of her boilers below. Seventy-five brave seamen went down with her, four of their bodies being sometime later washed on the shore. The crew of the Nipsic, seeing their ship now dragging anchor before the storm detached a Krupp gun from the gun carriage and fastening it to an eight-inch hawser, swung it as an additional anchor into the sea. While doing this the Nipsic was rammed by the Olga losing two of her boats in addition to other injuries and her smoke pipe. With her smoke pipe gone steam was impossible to be kept up and the Nipsic was beached upon the sands and in an attempt to lower one of her remaining boats some of the crew were thrown out and drowned; others with great difficulty, and by sliding to shore on the lines were saved in quite a miraculous way. In less than five minutes the Alder drifted broadside on the reef where her sister ship had foundered. In another moment she was lifted bodily out of the sea on the crest of a gigantic wave and thrown over on her side, drowning twenty of her crew. While this distressing series of incidents was happening in one part of the harbor, the Vandalia of the American squadron was in another place running before the gale close to the British ship Calliope. She was beached with great difficulty, many of her crew meantime dropping into the surging angry sea. In the last effort her brave captain was knocked down by a machine gun that had broken loose, rolling over him on deck and killing him outright. His body was washed off and he sank in a moment. Next morning when the muster roll on the Vandalia was and no bird can safely fly through, surpass in their horrible and lonely desolation those inhabitable regions which Mr. Fronde in his "Oceana" has marked for such marvellous achievements of the human race.

Write the name of Mrs. Isaac Lawrence on the tablets of fame beside that of Holland, the inventor! She is the patron saint of the submarine torpedo-boat, and when that boat has been adopted and revolutionizes the navies of the world, it will not be forgotten that to a woman's faith and generosity something of that success was due.

Mrs. Lawrence is a popular young matron of society. Her husband is a lawyer, one of the Lawrences of Long Island. She was Miss Lee Gwynn, and is a daughter of the late Nicholas Gwynn, from which she inherited a large fortune. Her city home is at No. 10 Eas. Nineteenth street.

Mrs. Lawrence has been several times in Cuba. She has seen the starving reconcentrados, and burns with patriotic zeal whenever the question of American intervention is discussed. Mr. Holland was seeking about for some one to back him in his experiments with the submarine wonder. Here was an opportunity to help her country. She saw that the Holland boat, if it could be made a success, would furnish a new arm to the naval service more terrible than the monitor.

She bought stock in the company—lots of it—and talked it up so eloquently that a number of her friends also invested in the company. Mrs. Lawrence is the heaviest stockholder.

But her interest did not end there. She paid frequent visits to Perth Amboy, where the little vessel was building, and watched the progress of the work with keen eyes. She is the only woman that has ever been allowed on board.

"Where on earth could she have picked up so insignificant a man for a husband?"

GET OUT OF CUBA BY SATURDAY SAYS UNCLE SAM TO SPAIN!

American-Spanish Crisis is Now Brought to Focus by President's Ultimatum Yesterday.

Joint Resolutions Signed and Sent to Congress Yesterday—Spain Must Get Out of Cuba by 9 a. m. Saturday—Not Expected That Spain Will Answer

WASHINGTON, APRIL 20—THE PRESIDENT'S ULTIMATUM DEMANDS THAT SPAIN EVACUATE CUBA BY SATURDAY NOON.

SPAIN WILL PROBABLY REFUSE.

THAT WILL MEAN ARMED INTERVENTION.

Washington, April 20.—War with Spain is now the one subject of conversation at the National Capitol. The joint war resolutions, passed by Senate and House, have been signed by the President. Closely following came the ultimatum to Spain.

Washington has been in a grand turmoil of excitement all day. The White House was crowded with people who wished to see the President on business. There was a universal feeling that the President would sign the joint resolution.

It was expected that the President would take action yesterday afternoon. He did not, however. He was in close consultation with members of the Cabinet and the State Department.

It was stated that the delay in signing the resolutions was made so that the ultimatum might be issued immediately afterward.

It was announced that the President would surely sign this morning. Another meeting of the Cabinet was held early in the morning.

At 11:23 o'clock, President McKinley placed his signature to the joint war resolutions of the Senate and House. The news was quickly passed about the city. It was taken to be the final step. Everybody believes that war is now inevitable.

At 11:50, the President issued an ultimatum to Spain. It was short and to the point. It declared that Spain must vacate the island of Cuba by Saturday noon, (Madrid time). That is about 8 o'clock Saturday morning, (Washington time).

The ultimatum was cabled to Ambassador Woodford at Madrid at once. He was directed to present it to the Spanish ministry without delay. The text of the ultimatum has not yet been made public.

A copy of the ultimatum was served on the Spanish Minister in Washington, Senor Polo. He has asked for passports, which will be granted at once. He expects to leave Washington this afternoon.

It is not expected by the authorities here that Spain will make any answer to the ultimatum. If no answer is received by Saturday at the appointed time, hostilities will begin at once.

The movement of the regular troops to the southeastern coast still continues. They are rapidly being mobilized at the different camps. The great activity in the War Department continues.

It is announced at the Navy Department that the United States Navy is ready for the conflict and is ready to start for Havana and Porto Rico at once.

Madrid, April 20.—Ambassador Woodford received the ultimatum this afternoon. It will be presented to the Spanish Government at once. Ambassador Woodford sent a farewell card to the members of the diplomatic corps in Madrid this morning. He will probably leave this afternoon.

General Weyler is in favor of war. He says that if the Americans manage to reach Cuba, they will find it necessary to have many thousand men. The yellow fever, he says, will kill half of them and the Spanish troops will answer for the rest.

The Spanish Cortes was assembled here this morning. Prime Minister Sagasta made a very warlike speech to the Cortes. He declared for war.

The time to talk, he said, has passed. It is the time for action. Acts and not words are required.

Spain, he continued, had suffered with patience resignation and prudence the greatest and most indescribable bitterness and worry but the Spanish people felt encouraged and inspired by patriotism.

He characterized the action of the United States in trying to secure the independence of Cuba as a most infamous calumny.

The action of the United States, he said, filled all the Spaniards with the holiest indignation against those who tried to take away Spain's indisputable sovereignty over one choice piece of Spanish territory.

Just as the announcement came yesterday of the signing of the war resolutions and the sending of the ultimatum to Spain, the fire whistle told the people of Plainfield of the fact by a long and furious blast.

The State department has sent instructions to Minister Woodford to apply to the Spanish authorities for his passports if the reply of the latter to the ultimatum of this Government is not satisfactory.

Paris, April 20.—There is a rumor current here that Spain is about to take a new way out of the difficulty with the United States. It is said that Spain is considering the advisability of turning Cuba over to the sovereignty of the Pope. He would then declare its independence.

MILLION DOLLAR FIRE IN NEW HAVEN.

Twenty Girls Penned in By the Flames and Burned to Death.

New Haven, April 20.—A disastrous fire broke out this morning at 10 o'clock in the heart of the business section. The flames started in the five-story building occupied by Beecher, Leonard & Company, the largest dry goods and clothing establishment in southern Connecticut.

The flames spread very rapidly and communicated to E. Moses & Company's four-story block on the east. On the west, two large millinery stores and the Young Men's Library and Institute caught fire.

Twenty persons, mostly young girls who were employed in the store, are supposed to have been burned to death.

The loss on the stock in the stores and on the buildings will amount to over $1,000,000.

KNOWING WILD BIRDS.

INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE TUESDAY NIGHT.

Dr. Stone Talks on "Our Wild Birds and How to Know Them"—Urged Women Not to Use Feathers on Hats.

The illustrated lecture on "Our Wild Birds and How to Know Them," by Dr. Witmer Stone, of Philadelphia, given at the Y. M. C. A. last Tuesday, under the auspices of the New Jersey Audubon Society, was one of the most interesting yet presented. Despite the very stormy night there was a large attendance of people who are supporters of the society and all were highly pleased with the lecture.

Former Mayor Alex Gilbert, president of the society, made a few remarks previous to introducing Dr. Stone. Mr. Gilbert said that he had to confess that he knew very little about birds, although he had for several days past been trying to interest himself in the subject. He said that there is one wild bird that everyone is now interested in—the American eagle—and he thought it well worth while in keeping an eye on him, for if he escapes he is bound to do some damage. Mr. Gilbert then introduced Dr. Stone, who, for over an hour, talked in an entertaining manner about wild birds.

He divided his subject into three divisions. First, scientific ornithology; second, economic ornithology; third, æsthetic ornithology. He then took up the subject of birds individually.

He commenced with the swallow, warbler, wren, sparrow, etc., and told of the difference in style of habits and living. He explained how birds build their nests and how they live. Of the curious manner in which they travel from one clime to another. He spoke of the act in Pennsylvania how the authorities offered a bounty for the capture of hawks and owls, and in a short time they paid out the sum of $9 000 in bounty. This he claimed was wrong, for the legislators thought that the birds were destroying fowls, when in fact they were ridding the land of mice and rats.

Regarding the use of feathers and aigrettes for women's hats, Dr. Stone spoke in positive language. He did not favor the idea and thought the plan altogether wrong. He said that the Paradise bird was now almost extinct on account of the use made of its plumage.

SHARP WORDS ABOUT SUGAR BEET BOUNTY.

Albert H. Atterbury Classes it as Vicious Legislation.

"IS A FRAUD AND A SHAME."

THOUGHT THAT GOVERNOR WILL KILL THE MEASURE.

Mr. Atterbury Opposed the Bill, He Said, in the Interests of the Plain People Who Did Not Want Their Taxes Increased for the Benefit of Their Neighbors—Vital Force Behind the Bill Was Greed and Monopoly—Dr. Hough Said Lawyers Were Always Trying to Hurt the Farmers.

Trenton, April 20.—While the distinguished legal gentleman, Charles A. Reed, of North Plainfield, Senator from Somerset county, was the chief champion of the sugar bounty bill in the legislature another legal luminary who resides in Plainfield—just across the brook—was its principal opponent at the hearing held before Governor Voorhees yesterday. The latter was Albert H. Atterbury, the difference with Mr. Reed in legal status being that the former is a New York practitioner. This does not prevent him, however, from being a very alert and public spirited citizen of New Jersey.

Unfortunately for Mr. Reed his professional engagements in court at Somerville prevented his being present at the hearing, but there were several other influential gentlemen at the hearing to support the measure.

The bill provides for $250,000 in bounties for growers of beets, which are manufactured into sugar within the State. Mr. Atterbury opposed the bill, he said, in the interests of the plain people, who did not want their taxes increased for the benefit of their neighbors. He argued that the bill was vicious from an economic standpoint, and demoralizing socially and politically. The best sugar industry, he said, would thrive without a bounty if it could profitably be pursued in New Jersey. He added: "We are bearing burdens enough; this bill, when considered as a public benefit, is a fraud and a shame. Who helps the clerk, the laborer, the shopgirl, who are forced to submit to close competition to get through life? The vital force behind this bill is a small and grasping monopoly. It makes an intolerable proposal to a free State. Farmers are not ready to be held up as objects of charity, and this is a charity of the boldest kind, a proposition for the vicious waste of the substance of the community."

Dr. Hough, Assemblyman Wright, of Burlington, the father of the bill, and ex-Senator Parry, asked the Governor to sign it. Dr. Hough said that the farmers were always trying to injure the farmer's interests.

The Governor replied that the last Legislature had done more for the farmers than for any other class of citizens. In citing laws enacted for their benefit he mentioned the Tuberculosis Appropriation bill, and took occasion to say that tuberculosis was a fad. He signed the bill, he said, as a matter of protection, as other States would exclude the frequent examination of the cows which produce the milk their inhabitants consume.

Dr. Hough, Atterbury, Wright and the Governor then drifted into an argument which was interesting. The point was made by Mr. Atterbury that there was no standard of quality in the bill, and that a farmer who raised a ton of beets containing only an ounce of sugar would be entitled to the bounty. He denied that he represented the Sugar Trust or any other corporation.

Those who heard the Governor's remarks on the bill believe he will kill the beet sugar bill on general principles.

CLINTON AVENUE DRAIN.

As Soon as the Ground Becomes Dry it Will be Built.

Civil Engineer David Townley, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, called on Street Commissioner Gavett Tuesday afternoon with a plan and profile of the proposed drain from Clinton avenue.

Mr Townley reported that he found the ground was so full of water at present that it would be almost impossible to lay the pipes. As soon as the water is low enough, the pipes will be laid through Rushmore avenue to the brook from Corlell's hat shop.

Mrs. Comstock, of west Fifth street, has recovered from a slight illness.

—The finest stock of seafood on the market will be found at Rogers' this week. Place your order early.

A $250,000 FRANCHISE.

THAT IS THE ESTIMATED WORTH OF COUNTY TROLLEY RIGHT.

In Going Over the Route it is Found That at Least 100 Houses Will Have to be Moved or Torn Down.

Elizabeth, April 20.—While the road committee of the County Freeholders were inspecting the proposed West field avenue trolley route from Elizabeth to Plainfield Monday, they met with many property-holders who asserted they would contest any action taken by which their land would be appropriated for the widening. In Cranford it is proposed to cut a street through the rear of the lot on which the opera house block stands in order to make the street at this point straight. This would necessitate the purchase of considerable property, and would alone cost about $10,000.

In Westfield a large brick building will have to be moved or razed. It is believed that at least 100 houses will have to be moved or torn down at an approximate cost of $1,000 each, which would take all of the $100,000 offered for the franchise.

The Board has decided that it ought to have $250,000 for the franchise. Two surveyors have been employed on the road, one to work from Elizabeth to Westfield, and the other from Plainfield to Westfield. Their report, with that of the committee, will be made to the Board of Freeholders May 5th.

RACE TRACK FOR MIDDLESEX.

Prominent Horsemen are Interested in the Project.

New Brunswick, April 20.—Middlesex county, while abounding with prominent men who are lovers of horseflesh, is very poorly equipped in the way of race tracks. New Brunswick is the centre of the horsemen. The only race track in the county convenient to this city is the one at South River, the property of the Middlesex Driving Association. It is located four miles from here.

Sometime ago a project was started to erect a track at Highland Park, a suburb of New Brunswick. This movement has received a new stimulus from the proposed trotting association which is to be composed of the horsemen of Middlesex, Union, Somerset and Hunterdon counties. The men who are interested in the latter are now taking active steps toward the carrying out of the scheme for a new track.

The necessary financial support has been secured and there will be no delay in starting work on the new track. It will be a half-mile track and will be made as fast as possible. A bicycle track will also be built within the inclosure as well as stables and grand stand. Highland Park is connected with New Brunswick proper by excellent roads and by a trolley line.

Among the leading New Brunswick men who are interested in the movement are: John H. Conger, the County Clerk of Middlesex county; P. M. Welsh, Robert J. Smith, a member of the Board of Education; Edward H. Radel, superintendent of the Brunswick Traction Company; George H. Deinzer, a member of the County Board of Freeholders; John V. Hubbard and Dr. Harvey Iredell.

The articles of incorporation for the association which is to conduct the new track have been filed at the county clerk's office in this city. The association is known as the New Brunswick Driving Association. The capital stock is fixed at $20,000, divided into 400 shares.

A BIRD DAY.

New Departure for Public Schools Adopted by Superintendent Baxter.

Trenton, April 20.—Charles J. Baxter, State Superintendent of public instruction, has issued his circular regarding Arbor Day to the county and city superintendents. Besides the reference to the usual observation of the day and the vote on the State tree, Superindent Baxter makes the following report:

"It has been suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture that a Bird Day be set aside and observed annually. There is also a strong public sentiment favoring the establishment of such a day.

It seems unadvisable to make futher encroachments upon our already short school year, I would suggest that a portion of the exercises on Arbor Day be devoted to the birds. With this purpose in view I have prepared a circular designed to awaken among the pupils a more sympathetic interest in these denizens and friends of the trees."

The circular mentioned will be read at the Arbor Day exercises.

—The work of laying sewer pipes through Somerset street will be completed this week.

STIFF LEGAL FIGHT IN SOMERSET COUNTY

Contention Over Riparian Rights on Green Brook.

OTHER CASES ADJOURNED.

THE CLAIMS OF MILL OWNERS DISPUTED BY WATER COMPANY.

Reed & Coddington Represent the Plaintiffs—Celebrated Case of Elizabeth Myers Against Joanna C. M. Blume for $50,000 Damages is Down on the Calendar. But Defendant is Not Quite Ready—Judge Magie Says That if Witnesses Cannot be Got by Monday He Will Put it Over the Term.

Somerville, April 20.—The Somerset county court opened its spring term yesterday. There were several cases of importance to come up in the Supreme Court but all were laid aside for the trial of the case of George Harper et als against the Mountain Park Water Company. The case has already been mentioned in The Press. The Water Company furnishes the water supply for Summit and Orange. The owners of the mill rights along the course of Green brook have claimed that the company is diverting the water that properly belongs in Green brook for its own benefit. The suit has resulted. All other cases have been laid over until Monday as it is expected that this suit will occupy the rest of the week.

Reed & Coddington, of Plainfield, are the legal representatives for the mill owners and Riker & Riker, of Newark, are counsel for the water company.

Yesterday afternoon the case of Elizabeth Meyers against Joanna C. M. Blume for $50,000 damages, which has attracted so much attention in New York courts, was called and finally adjourned for a week. The suit was originally over injuries that Mrs. Meyers, of New York, received from falling on a loose cover to a coal hole in front of a house on West Forty-fifth street, New York. The house is said to be the property of Mrs. Blume, who owns a summer residence at Washingtonville. Suit was first brought in the New York courts, but Mrs. Blume claimed to live in New Jersey. Then suit was again started in Hudson county and was transferred to Somerset county.

Mrs. Meyers was represented by Tyndall and VonMoeckzisker, of New York. Mrs. Blume's counsel was Senator C. A. Reed, of Reed & Coddington. Mr. Reed wanted an adjournment, as he said that some of the most important witnesses were out of the State and had not yet been secured. The case was laid over for a week when the Judge said that if the witnesses could not be secured he would adjourn the case until the next term of court at the expense of the defendant.

RECEPTION FOR PASTOR

DR. W. C. SNODGRASS AND FAMILY WELCOMED BACK.

The Sociable Affair Given Under the Auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society and an Informal Programme Rendered.

In honor of the beginning of the second year of Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass as pastor of the First M. E. church, a reception was tendered Dr. Snodgrass and his family last Tuesday, at Vincent chapel. It was arranged by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson and Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. McGee acted as a reception committee. Dr. and Mrs. Snodgrass received the guests. Miss Persis Snodgrass, Harlan Snodgrass and Rhey T. Sdodgrass were also present.

An informal programme was rendered during the evening. It consisted of recitations by Miss Rita Pond, piano solos by Miss Saidee Mae Howell, and soprano solos by Miss Katheryn Mitchell, of Philadelphia.

After the programme the remainder of the evening was spent in a social manner while the ladies served ice cream and cake.

The reception was arranged by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society. Mrs. Noah W Pike and Mrs. Garriet Q Packer acted as chairman of the general committee in charge. The entertainment committee was composed of Mrs. J. R. Joy, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins and Mrs. D. E Davis. The decoration committee was composed of Mrs. J. R. Joy, Mrs. Yerkes and Mrs O. L Jenkins. The members of the ice cream committee were Miss Susie Jackson, Mrs. Charles E Horne, Mrs J. P. Homan and Miss Minnie Sharpe.

OFF TO SERVE ON THE MONITOR MONTAUK.

Surgeon Simpson and Apothecary Fulton Left Wednesday.

WILL REPORT AT HOBOKEN.

THEN GO TO THE LEAGUE ISLAND NAVY YARD.

Both Went Prepared to Stay an Indefinite Length of Time—Monitor is in Commission and There is Plenty of Life on Board Getting Her Ready to Start—Supplies and Ammunition are Being Put in the Hold—It is Thought Likely That the Monitor Will Leave for the Maine Coast Next Monday.

Surgeon M. S. Simpson and Apothecary Frank Fulton, of this city, left at 7:55 a. m. Wednesday for the headquarters of the New Jersey Naval Reserve, Battalion of the East, at Hoboken, where they will report and afterwards leave, with a number of other members of he detail assigned to man the monitor Montauk, for League Island navy yard, near Philadelphia. Both Dr. Simpson and Mr. Fulton went prepared to stay an indefinite time, and from present prospects they may get some active service.

League Island, April 20.—Looking spick and span, with her commander's pennant and the Stars and Stripes floating in the breeze over her, the monitor Montauk, the pride of the navy yard and of the Battalion of the East, New Jersey Naval Reserves, was the scene of much activity today. The monitor having been put into commision with the idea of hurrying her to completion, there has been plenty of life in every part of the vessel since. Orders have been given out to push the work on the monitor's four boats, which are being put into shape in the yard shops.

Part of the ammunition for the big guns, the muzzles of which shoot at the turret holes, has been put aboard, and today a start will be made upon the placing of supplies in the hold. Commandant Casey has been making frequent visits to the Montauk during the past few days and having talks with Commander Strong and the Naval Reserve officers. The suggestions he made were with the view of getting the monitor out within the ten-day limit he set, which will be up Monday next.

There is talk of sending for the sixty odd men who are to fill out the crew at the end of this week. The practice is, after the vessels have been made also ready to sail, for the commandant to send notice to the naval authorities at Washington, when the State officials are communicated with and then the reserves are called out. Should the rest of the New Jersey men arrive Saturday next the monitor would most likely leave for Portland, Me., Monday.

PEEKE SISTERS VISIT.

Charming Entertainment Given in Trinity Church Tuesday Night.

The members and friends of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed Church enjoyed a visit, last Tuesday, from the Peeke Sisters from Alaska. The Sisters usually make their rounds once a year, and this year they decided to visit the society of Trinity Reformed church. They were gladly received by those present and a cordial reception was accorded them.

The Sisters were all gowned alike, red being the prevailing color, while the presence of the peak cap was an unmistakable evidence as to who they were. They entertained their friends by singing songs and giving recitations.

Miss Sadie Searing, as Keziah, had charge of the performance. Miss Bessie Randall, as the irrepressible Sophia, greatly amused the audience.

The tunes were all familiar and were quickly recognized. Those who represented the Sisters were Miss Sadie Searing, Miss Corinna Young, Mrs. Bertha Richards, Miss Jennie Ross, Miss Grace Berg, Miss Minnie Berg, Miss Nettie Kreitling, Miss Sadie Holmes, Miss Lillian Zeiss, Miss Emma Line, Miss Bessie Randall and Miss Grace Randall.

After the entertainment the Sisters served refreshments to all present and a good social time was enjoyed.

The affair was in charge of the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of which Mrs. H. J. Martin, is the chairman.

Death of an Aged Woman.

Mrs. S. B. Ross, aged 96 years, widow of the late Peter Ross and mother of John Ross, died Wednesday at her home, 339 East Sixth street. Notice of funeral will be made hereafter.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

Braiding in vermicelli, French arabesque, Greek key, trefoil, clover, floral, and purely conventional devices, appears on many of the very stylish imported costumes, redingotes, jackets, and small pelerines just brought to view; and the new rests produced by this graceful form of decoration arouse quite as great a degree of admiration as if this were the initial season of its vogue.

Net and tulle gowns are again with us and very dressy garments they make for theater and reception wear. The dainty dress here pictured is of black tulle ornamented with black lace applique and mounted on a white satin foundation. The plain bodice is covered with tulle to match. The long transparent sleeves are shirred and trimmed with full epaulettes at the top.

The hat to accompany this gown is of black ballet straw turned up slightly on the left side and trimmed with tulle and violets, a black ostrich plume on the side. The newest shape in hats this season will be the "Shepherdess," with the drooping brim back and front, and will be the form most in use by those who can wear it.

In Dotted Challie.

A simple and becoming blouse for home wear is of cadet blue dotted challie. This waist is made over a fitted lining. The front edge is turned in and slip stitched to edge of lining, which hooks invisibly, then on to the right side the revers is joined. The revers is of the material, trimmed with three rows of lace. Tight fitting sleeve with a small puff at the top. Cointure and collar of cadet blue velvet.

While the real Russian blouse is now a thing of the past, the pouched effect in front will long remain with us. The blouses may be worn with or without the basque, but the belt is universal and will be seen with all styles of waists.

Crepe de Chine Evening Waist.

The draped bodice with the material draped across the front in soft folds on one side, is seen again, and whether the back is full or plain it has no seams except the one under the arm.

An effective model is of steel blue taffeta with yoke and sleeves of silk crepe de chine. The draped material is finished at the edge with a ruffle of black velvet, headed by a large velvet rosette. The shirred sleeves of crepe de chine have epaulettes of the material at the shoulder, edged with black velvet, velvet also outlining the yoke, and finishing, the collar, belt and sleeves.

The dainty hat worn with the corsage was of yellow straw, slightly dipped on the right side, while a rosette of black velvet rested on the hair on the left. The crown was of mirror velvet, and a bunch of violets and an aigrette completed the trimming.

Where the Great Plagues Come From.

There are three places in the world to which the great plagues of cholera and kindred epidemics that have swept over the world may always be traced. These are Hurdusar in India, Mecca in Arabia, and Nijni-Novgorod in Russia. Hurdusar and Mecca are the meeting-places of thousands of pilgrims every year, whilst Nijni-Novgorod is famous for its annual fair.

A Mouth Wash.

Half an ounce of salts of tartar, four ounces of honey aug. opt., thirty drops of oil of. peppermint, thirty drops of oil of wintergreen, two ounces of spirits of wine, ten ounces of triple rose water, sufficient liquid cochineal to color. Mix well. To be used morning and evening.

Hot Milk as a Stimulant.

When overcome by bodily fatigue, or exhausted by brain labor, no stimulant, so called, serves so well the purpose of refreshment and rest, both bodily and mentally, as milk. When heated as hot as one can readily take it, it may be sipped slowly from a tumbler, and as it is easily digested, one feels very soon its beneficial effects. Few persons realize the stimulating qualities of this simple beverage.

German soldiers each carry a four-ounce religious book with the rest of their personal equipment.

According to a Swiss physician, a symmetrically worn heel and sole indicate an energetic, faithful, well balanced character.

Dainty Foulard Waist.

Very few waists now made have the material reaching the neck; the bodices are invariably cut more or less low and worn with a yoke or guipure of different material. Some are cut open down the front, showing a strip like the fitting at the neck. Foulards have appeared again this spring, and promise to be more in vogue than ever. These summer silks show more figures than any other design.

An effective blouse bodice of foulard combine the dainty shades of violet and green. This waist is worn over a guimpe of white mousseline, this filmy material also trimming the sleeves and bodice. Straps of green ribbon come over the shoulders and the ceinture is of green velvet.

Teapot Cozy.

A very useful and necessary article in the teapot cozy. A medium pattern measures 9 inches across the top, 14 inches across the lower part, and 9½ inches deep. A foundation of fine muslin is cut one inch larger than this each way. The two pieces are first covered with white silk, then a strip of golden brown velvet is placed in the centre, puffings of maize Indian silk are arranged each side, and two shaped strips of guipure are placed over the joinings of velvet and silk. The two sides are laid face to face, and are sewn together and turned inside out.

The cosy is next lined with a well wadded lining of maize silk, which should be made a trifle smaller than the cosy, so that it fits inside; the lining should be joined to the top and ends of cosy by a few stitches, and is slip-stitched to the lower part. The edge is finished with silk and tinsel cord arranged in loops at the corners, and two bows of golden-brown ribbon velvet.

White Vegetable Soup.

Ingredients.—One carrot, one leek, two onions, one turnip, a bunch of herbs, a blade of mace, one ounce and a half of dripping, two ounces of flour, a small lump of white sugar, one pint of skim milk, one pint and a half of warm water.

Method.—Prepare the vegetables and cut them into nicely-shaped pieces; melt the dripping in a saucepan, put in the vegetables, pepper, salt and sugar, put on the lid and let them cook gently for ten minutes without browning. Add the water, herbs and mace, and let all simmer gently until tender, from twenty to thirty minutes according to the age and size of the pieces of vegetables. Rub the soup through with a little cold milk and stir into the soup when boiling; take out the herbs and mace and add the rest of the milk.

Golf Stockings.

The invalid who wishes to use her little strength in some simple employment can take advantage of the golf craze, if she be able to knit, and make for her golfing friends knitted scarves which are now so popular. These are woven to show the Scotch plaids on a dark blue, red, or green ground. They are one and a-half yards long, and are about half a yard wide. On the links, men and women both, but women especially, are wearing such scarves knotted round the waist, or across the breast, like a plaid. In that position it is meant as an ornament, while by merely shifting it in the position of a kerchief or muffler, it becomes on cold days on the links a comfort and protection.

Sally Lunn.

Sally Lunn is as well known as Mother Goose, but perhaps few know that she was a pastry cook famous for her teacakes, and flourishes in Bath, England, about 1776. Her fame did not die with her.

"Charlotte" is a corruption of the old English word "charlyt," meaning a custard, so that a charlotte russe is simply a Russian, custard.

"Macaroni" means "the blessed dead," and derived its name from the custom of serving it at funeral feasts.

New Cloth Gowns.

Among new cloth gowns being made up by the tailors are those in gray-green or Roman-blue shades, with a close braidwork over the front of the skirt made to simulate an overskirt. The open jacket is likewise densely braided, and, as a rule, there is an odd vest beneath, either in pale blue, cherry red, or violet—this of silk laid in tucks and fastened down the front with jewelled studs.

MANUFACTURING HIGH EXPLOSIVES

The Importance of Compressed Air as a Motor in Firing.

It is a long jump from a pop-gun to a dynamite gun; and yet such a jump a certain schoolmaster made. This is how it came about:

One day a mischievous urchin fired a paper ball from a pop-gun and struck his schoolteacher in the eye. So forceful was the impact that Meford, the teacher, who was of an inventive turn of mind, determined to see if compressed air could not be used as a motive power for firing something more important than paper balls out of a boy's popgun. Why might not dynamite, or other powerful explosives, be fired safely from a huge air-gun? was the question the wad of paper propounded to his mind. In this way, he thought, the shock liable to cause premature explosion might be avoided. The experiment was worth trying, and he at once set about devising such a gun. His success was sufficient to attract the attention of Lieutenant Zalinsky, who had the crude gun at the schoolmaster brought to his station; and, working from it as a starting point, finally produced the Zalinsky Pneumatic Gun, the first successful gun capable of firing a shell heavily loaded with dynamite. This is the gun the small boy and his smaller popgun played in the invention of the deadly dynamite gun.

The knowledge that several hundred pounds of dynamite, gun-cotton or nitro-gelatine can be hurled from a great gun, miles away, and exploded at the spot aimed at by the gunner, makes all anxious to know something about the nature and military uses of these dread substances.

Five things are required of military explosives. "1—The substance must possess the greatest breaking efficiency for the smallest unit of weight and unit of volume. 2—It must possess great insensitiveness to sympathetic explosions and to mechanical shocks, especially those due to small projectiles, while it yet retains the property of exploding completely through the influence of an initial detonation. 3—It should be quite insensitive to fire, or at least so much so that there would be no chance of an immediate explosion when a considerable mass of it becomes ignited. 4—It should possess great stability, and not only should its efficiency remain unimpaired, but it should remain so under very extreme conditions. 5—It should remain unaffected by water."

Thus far the chemist have produced only three substances which may be considered as approaching the fulfillment of these requirements. They are dynamite, compressed wet gun-cotton and military explosive gelatine. Of these three gelatine comes the nearest to meeting the five required conditions. Weight for weight it has 25 per cent. more breaking efficiency than the best dynamite or gun-cotton, and for equal volumes it possesses 40 per cent. greater efficiency than dynamite and 75 per cent. greater than gun-cotton. It is superior to gun-cotton or dynamite in its insensitiveness to great pressure or mechanical shocks, but stands below wet gun-cotton as regards fire and about on par with dynamite. Wet gun-cotton cannot be set on fire by either flame or spark. It must be dry before it can be ignited. This property of wet gun-cotton makes it the safest of all explosives where the danger feared is fire. The keeping qualities of gelatine are equal to those of gun-cotton or dynamite; and it remains unaffected by water.

These properties of gelatine make it the most valuable of the explosives for military uses. This will quickly be seen if the question of transportation and storage is considered; for 25 per cent. more energy can be stored of explosive gelatine than can be used instead of dynamite and 40 per cent. more force can be put into one magazine if it is filled with gelatine in place of dynamite. Then again smaller torpedoes, having the same destructive power, can be employed if loaded with gelatine rather than other high explosives. Gelatine is the most effective filling for shells, now that it can be fired with comparative safety and accuracy from pneumatic guns. A small chloride of silver battery is enclosed in each shell, and so arranged that the electric current fires the charge at the moment the shell strikes. This battery nearly does away with the danger of premature explosion; and also renders it possible to explode the charge at any point, which has been found to be the most effective way.

In the navy compressed gun-cotton is still largely used for torpedo charges and other submarine groundmines; but army favors the more powerful nitro-gelatine owing to its enormous shattering power. When bridges, stockades, walls, forts or any similar obstructions have to be removed gelatine is the substance that will do it the most effectively.

Gelatine, as used for military purposes, consists of 92 per cent. o nitro-gelatine and 8 per cent, of nitro cotton. A certain percentage of camphor is sometimes added to this compound, as experiment has proved that by the property of rendering the gel atine less explosive. Gelatine, at an ordinary temperature, is quite elastic to the touch and looks very much lik a beautiful straw-colored jelly. Wher lighted with a match it burns with an intense white flame. It is insensiti to shock, to friction, and to the pres sure or action of water. A powerfu detonator must be used to explode it.

Dynamite is made by forcing a cer tain quantity of nitro-glycerine int some porous substance, usually infusorial earth. Nitro-glycerine is formed through the action of concentrated nitric and sulphuric acids on glycerine. It is an oily liquid, clear, colorless or of a yellowish tint, of a sweetish and burning taste and without odor. A sudden blow will explodes it.

Gun-cotton is produced by treating ordinary cotton with concentrated nitric and sulphuric acids. Notwithstanding the extraordinary chemical change which has taken place in the nature of the cotton, it still looks like cotton. It is a trifle less white, feels somewhat harsher to the touch grates slightly when squeezed and is heavier than cotton. When rubbed gun-cotton will become strongly electrified and stick in lumps between the fingers of a dry hand. Cotton will not do this. Gun-cotton explodes from a blow, or heat, particularly by ignition; but when wet cannot be ignited.

A Sign of the Times.

A few days ago a solicitor, while instructing a man with regard to the cremation of the remains of a deceased client, remarked:

"You know well enough that the headings 'Births, marriages, and deaths' also bear the description 'Hatched, matched, and despatched.'"

"Oh, yes," said the man; "but if cremation becomes more general than now, those words will have to be modernized into 'Created, mated, and cremated!'"

The First and the Last.

A short time ago a young fellow, having heard wonderful tales of the skating-rink, made up his mind to visit one. The sight of such a large number of young ladies and gentlemen gliding round and round in all directions led him to believe that skating was the easiest thing in the world.

He hastily made up his mind, and, after ordering a pair of skates, and having them fixed to his boots, he took a brave bold step forward, and—bang he dropped full length on the ice! An assistant at once ran up to help him up.

"Is this your first attempt at skating, sir?" he asked.

"No," growled the young fellow; "the last!"

When two quarrel, both are in the wrong.

Colors in Millinery.

Bright tulip colors, red in Roman, geranium, and other brilliant dyes, mauve, and tangerine yellow are the most popular colors in millinery as it is now presented. Violets, velvet, and Venetian lace trimmings are so fashionable on bonnets and toques with in Paris, and sent to this country that notwithstanding the fact that these flowers decorate seven-tenths of the headgear worn here, they are likely to be elected by a large portion of our well-dressed women as garnitures for their spring hats and bonnets. But the violets selected are as different from the every-day sort, seen everywhere, as a paper rose is different from a genuine Jacque. The French-made violets are soft and flexible, and perfect replicas of Nature's own production. The petals are shaded and velvet-like, and many of the delicate clusters are perfumed with the natural odor of these modest blossoms. They look refined and dainty on any style of head-covering, and are becoming alike to the young and the elderly.

Pretty Evening Bodice.

A dressy waist suitable for party or theater wear is of plain light blue silk, trimmed with spangled embroidery, the shirred sleeves being of chiffon. The yoke is set in pleats across the front, being cut without a seam as the bodice hooks down the back. The blouse portion is spangled over, and slip stitched to the yoke under the passementerie trimming. The waist is banded with ribbon and fastened at the left side with a large bow. Epaulettes of silk have an accordeon pleated frill of chiffon at the edges.

Silk waists hold a prominent part in a woman's wardrobe, and very elaborate some of them are. Many of them have the popular blouse effect and are fancifully trimmed with tucks and ruffles.

Frocks for Young Girls.

The new dainty silk cashmere and thin cotton frocks for girls from four to sixteen years have velvet ribbon edging the ruffles on the waist and skirt similar to those prepared for women. These frocks also have yokes of tucked silk and velvet ribbon, and ribbon is worn in profusion on children's dresses. The belts are made of No. 9 or No. 12 ribbon, with a rosette on each side, and two ends falling to the lower edge of the skirt. Since sashes have returned to favor children wear them tied in a knot at the back. Black and fancy ribbons are preferred to solid colors for children's frocks. Square yokes are sometimes finished with a rosette or donkey-ear bow on each side, with long ends of the former.

Brown Soup.

Ingredients.—One pound of bones, one carrot, one turnip, two onions, a bunch of herbs, two ounces of barley, two ounces of dripping, two quarts of warm water, twelve peppercorns, one ounce and a half of brown thickening.

Method—Prepare the vegetables and cut them in halves; chop the bones, melt the dripping in a large saucepan and fry the bones and the vegetables; pour off any dripping that is left and put in the herbs, spices, pepper and salt, and the barley (blanched). Put on the lid and let all simmer for three hours. Strain off the soup through a colander, put the liquor back in the saucepan with the vegetables cut up small, add the thickening and stir until the thickening dissolves and the soup boils.

Charming Summer Frock.

A model which would make a lovely summer frock was worn by a petite blonde in the first act of a popular play recently. The material was blue accordeon pleated crepon, mounted on a separate silk lining. The skirt, which had the fashionable train, was trimmed with cream guipure.

The bodice, made tight fitting had a plain back, while the fronts were artistically trimmed with guipure. Band collar covered with guipure and edged with lace, and around the waist was a sash of blue silk, made into a knot in the back. The close fitting sleeves were made with a slight fullness on the shoulder, the lower part being trimmed with the insertion.

To Clean Prints and Engravings.

Immerse the print for an hour in a lye made by adding to the strongest muriatic acid three times its weight in water, and to three-parts of this mixture add one of red oxide of lead or black oxide of manganese. Indian-ink stains should, in the first instance, be assisted out with hot water; pencil-marks should be carefully taken out with indiarubber or a piece of stale bread. If the print has been mounted, the paste on the back should be thoroughly removed with warm water.

IN BLACK TULLE.

A Dream of a Gown.

The majority of the thin materials which are now beautifying the windows and counters of city stores will next season be made up with linings separate from the outer skirt, except at the waist, where one belt holds both skirts. Very lovely indeed are the French organdies that tempt every woman into a purchase who beholds dainty or the textiles finer than in the patterns just opened to view. The prices are all most alluring, and the gown, as it lies before one, sheer and dainty, looks like an inexpensive Arcadian purchase. But take it to the dame, and this frail bit of cloth will presently return to you done up in silk-tissue paper, laid in a beautiful satin-paper box; and the bill for silk linings, ribbons, lace, trimmings, and the additional, inevitable, vague, but very potent, item of "findings," composed to this exquisite "creation," will turn the "dream" aforesaid into a realistic nightmare of consternation. Ergo, unless your purse is plethoric, and money no object; unless you have some pretty, half-worn silk gowns you can beautifully utilize for foundation slips for your new organdies; unless you have a deft, artistic home dressmaker, avoid the unbearable temptations that are now set before your eyes in the mull and muslin departments of all the great emporiums of the city.

Novel Neckties.

The craze for neck bands still continues unabated. Every week seems to bring some new fancy, and one can never have too many of these pretty accessories of dress. As the warm weather approaches chiffon and tulle scarfs brought twice around the neck and tied in a large bow will be much worn with tailor made suits.

A dainty model suitable for afternoon or evening wear is of cream mousseline and fine lace. The mousseline is laid over a stiffened foundation and closes in front at the side. Another model is simpler in style and can be worn with shirt-waists. The material is silk, trimmed with frills of chiffon. This tie is caught in the middle by a gold ring.

The Latest in Sleeves.

There is as yet but little change in the general preference for the close coat sleeve with every sort of odd little garniture as a finish to the tops, including the wing decoration consisting of a three-cornered piece of the dress fabric, or else of a material matching the trimming used on the gown, this piece terminating in ruffled, piped, or satin-lined with a contrasting color. It is carried under the arm after the sleeve is sewed into the bodice. The third short point is tucked away under the folds; the two longer points are then brought to the top of the shoulder and simply tied, the ends left to somewhat resemble the wings of a bird in flight. A full soft knot is left in the centre. Wide-ribbon loops in place of a puff, a number of horizontal tucks taken in the fulness of mutton-leg sleeves, and straight flat rows of gimp laid across the tops of close coat sleeves are other popular modes.

Tomato Soup.

Ingredients.—One pound of tomatoes, one onion, two sticks of celery, one bay leaf, one blade of mace, a small piece of cooked ham, pepper and salt, one pint and a half of water, one ounce of crushed tapioca.

Method.—Slice the tomatoes; prepare the celery and onion and cut them in pieces; put the vegetables in a saucepan with the mace, bay leaf, ham, water, pepper and salt, and cook till tender; rub through a sieve or colander, return to the saucepan, bring to the boil, sprinkle in the tapioca and stir and cook till clear.

The annual women's championship tournament will be held in the latter part of September. The exact dates are not yet determined, but they will be arranged soon, and in all probability laid before the Executive Committee meeting of the United States Golf Association for ratification. More women than ever before enter for this event than ever before, and particularly noticeable among the contestants will be many of the younger players, who came prominently to the front last year.

"Mr. Billings spoke of you last evening as such a womanly woman," said the brunette one.

The blond one burst into tears. "To think," she sobbed, "that I have been at the forefront of all the intellectual movements for the betterment of woman's lot for more than a year, only to get maligned in that fashion."

OUR COAST LIGHTS.

BEACONS WHICH GUIDE MARINERS SAFELY TO FRIENDLY HARBORS.

May be First to Detect the Approach of an Enemy—The Loneliness of the Lighthouse—How They Aid in Time of Peace or War.

All along our Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and usually situated on some lonely, storm-beaten point of land, where the great waves never cease their sullen roarings, the lighthouses of the United States, like giant sentinels, keep watch and ward. And these, far out from the shore, where the danger from rock and storm is greatest, with only the unquiet ocean and the changing skies for company, swing and toss at the moorings the lightships of the coast. Hundreds of brave men and thousands of dollars worth in ships and merchandise are saved annually from the waves and the rocks by these watchful guardians, who have eyes that never slumber and warning voices that even the noises of the storm cannot drown. The wildness of their surroundings, the lonesomeness of their duties—the saving of human life and property—cast a glamour over the lonely lighthouses and storm-tossed lightships and make all that pertains to them of fascinating interest.

Stark and white upon the bare white beach of North Island, South Carolina, stands the historic Georgetown lighthouse. The tower is 85 feet high, and its light can be seen for fifteen miles. It throws a plain white light, which shines with unbroken radiance far out over the dark waters, a beacon of hope to the storm-driven mariners. The light has watched while history was made. It was built in 1801, and rebuilt after the war.

Another light, famous in history, is the one at Cape Henry off the coast of Virginia, at the entrance of Chesapeake bay. It is 163 feet high; and, as has often guided "the father of his country" on the way home from his travels. Recently a new house, 111 feet high, was built at this place and equipped with all the latest light appliances, electric light signals, a powerful siren, etc. A "steam siren" is a trumpet blown by steam, which sings a song to lure mariners away from destruction, and has a voice so loud that it can be heard for many miles at sea. The song of this siren is a blast five seconds long, then a silence of ninety seconds, a blast five seconds, followed by a silence of ninety seconds, and so on through all the hours of the day and night. The light is white in color, with red rays between southwest and west and south-southwest, and shines steadily.

The Cape Cod lighthouse is connected with Boston by telegraph. A signal display station reads the messages signalled from passing ships, and within a minute these messages are in Boston. The light is situated on the highest of Cape Cod, and can be seen from a hundred feet above the level of the sea. The building is all white and can be seen by vessels twenty miles away. Its Daboll trumpet sends forth continually blasts eight seconds long, with intervals of half a minute of silence.

The entrance to Delaware bay is guarded by the Cape May lighthouse, 167 feet high. This light can be seen for a distance of nineteen miles. One of the highest lighthouses in the United States is the one at Block Island, Rhode Island. It is 204 feet high, and shows a fixed white light that can be seen for a distance of twenty-two miles.

The lonesomeness and the dangers of the position of lighthouse keeper are so apparent that one would hardly expect to find women performing such duties; and yet, in the United States, some twenty women hold this responsible and ofttimes dangerous post. There are heroines, too, among them, whose deeds have been so heroic as to command the admiration of the whole seven seas. Ida Wilson-Lewis, the story of whose bravery is too well known to need retelling here, keeper of Lime Rock lighthouse, Newport, Rhode Island, has rescued eleven persons. Five people owe their lives to the courage of Mrs. Blake, keeper of the lighthouse at Robbins Reef, off Tompkinsville, New York harbor. Harriet Janet Malby, keeper of the Mill Neck lighthouse in Chesapeake bay, during a terrible storm of wind and rain and hail in 1894, pushed her open boat out from the safety of Mill Neck Hook into the angry waters, and rescued six men, whom she saw struggling in a frail boat, which the great waves threatened to swamp each moment.

Few people, except seamen, know anything about the number of lightships, which the United States keeps moored in dangerous places, far out in the ocean and exposed to all the perils of the stormy sea. From Boston to Galveston there is an almost unbroken line of these floating lighthouses placed where they can best warn the mariner of danger. Fastened to the ocean's bottom with great anchors and strong chains or hawsers these lightships keep lonely vigils over the surrounding waters; and when the heavy storms and seas sweep down the coast the bright flashes of their electric lights, the loud blasts of their steam whistles or the deep boom-boom of their great bells warn the storm-tossed sailor lads from hidden dangers and guide them on their way to havens of safety.

Embarrassing.

Mabel—"It is very annoying. I happened to say that it was the most interesting novel I had ever read."

Laura—"Well?"

Mabel—"Well, he insisted on talking about just those incidents I must have skipped."

BEGINNING OF TIME.

IT IS GREENWICH WHICH TELLS US WHAT O'CLOCK IT IS.

Marvelous Instruments Employed by the Scientists in Charge of the Great Observatory—The Point Whose Longitude is Zero.

Doubtless every student of geography has had his curiosity aroused regarding Greenwich Observatory, whence longitude is reckoned and where the world sets its timepieces; and has been desirous of learning more about the dwelling place of "Longitude Naught" and the chronometer that regulates the clocks of the world. The purpose of this article is to gratify such curiosity; and to describe, briefly, some of the wonders of the great observatory.

The most important room of the whole observatory is the transit room. Four broad stone pillars occupy the greater part of the space of this room. Two of these pillars are tall, as well as broad and massive. They stand east and west of the center of the room and center between them the Transit circle. Here is the home of "Longitude Naught"; for the optical axis of the great telescope of the transit circle marks the exact spot crossed by the prime meridian of the world. Two other telescopes are in the room, one to the north and one to the south of the transit circle, mounted on the two remaining pillars and both on the line of the optical axis of the transit circle.

THE GREENWICH TRANSIT CIRCLE.

There are two somewhat different senses in which the meridian of Greenwich is the standard meridian of nearly the entire world. It constitutes the fundamental line whence distances east and west are measured; and it gives the time to the world.

It will be interesting to note how time is found.

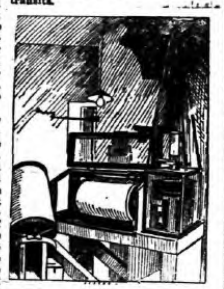
The great telescope, already described as occupying the center of the transit room, is very solidly mounted. Its pivots are supported by the pair of great stone pillars, whose foundations go deep down under the surface of the hill; and it turns but in one plane, that of "Longitude Naught." On the west side of the telescope, and rigidly connected with it, is a great wheel, with a number of wooden handles fastened to it, like the steering-wheel of a large steamer. This wheel carries the setting circle, which is engraved on a band of silver let into the face and back of the wheel near its circumference. Eleven microscopes penetrate through the pier, and are directed at the circle on the back of the wheel. These are the instruments used in finding time.

Time is usually determined by the watching of passing stars. The stars are used for this purpose, because they are many and the sun is but one. If clouds hide the sun at noon, the only time when it can be observed to determine time, a day is lost; but if one star is covered by a cloud there are still many others than can be observed. Star transits can be taken at various times throughout the day and night, while the sun can be used only once a day.

About two minutes before the appointed time the operator takes his place at the eyepiece of the telescope. As he looks in he sees a number of vertical lines across his field of view. These are spider-threads placed in the focus of the eye-piece. Presently a bright point of silver light comes moving quickly, steadily onward. The watcher's hand now seeks the side of the telescope till his finger finds a little button, over which it rests ready to strike. On comes the star "without haste, without rest" till it reaches one of the gleaming threads. Tap! The finger falls sharply on the button. In three or four seconds later the star has reached another thread. Tap! Again the button is struck; and so on until the ten threads have been passed and the transit is over.

Now what have the finger taps done? Each tap completed, for an instant, an electric circuit, and recorded a mark on the "chronometer." This is a large metal cylinder covered with paper, and turned by a carefully regulated clock once in every two minutes. A similar mark is made once in every two seconds by a current sent by means of the standard sidereal clock of the Observatory. If, then, one of the clock dots and one of the observer's dots come exactly side by side, it is known at what precise second the star was on one of the wires, as the spider-threads are called. If the observer's dot comes between two clock dots it is easy, by measuring its distance from them with a dividing scale, to tell the instant the star was on the wire to the tenth part of a second. Since the transit was taken over ten wires and the distance of each wire from the center of the field of view is known, practically ten separate observations have been made, and the average of these gives the time of transit.

At the Observatory there is a great clock, called the sidereal clock, which registers twenty-four hours in the precise time that the earth rotates once on its axis, or the time when a given star would again appear on a fixed meridian. Hence, since the exact time is known when the star ought to be on the meridian, this clock can be readily checked by the observations of star transits.



THE CHRONOGRAPH.

The error of the clock is determined twice a day, shortly before ten o'clock in the morning and shortly before one o'clock in the afternoon. These two times are chosen because, at ten and one o'clock signals are sent to all the great provincial centers. Also at one o'clock the time ball at Greenwich and at Deal are dropped, so that the captains of ships within sight of the dropping-mast may set their chronometers.

Thus is time found and regulated at the great Observatory.

The rating of chronometers for the Royal Navy is one of the most important duties of the Observatory. Here they are carefully tested until their time keeping qualities are as perfect as human skill can make them.

There is little of the picturesque or sensational in the regular routine work of the Observatory. The daily observation of the sun and of many stars—called clock stars, the determination of the error of the standard clock and its correction twice a day, the sending out of time signals, the testing and rating of hundreds of chronometers and the determination, from time to time, of the exact longitude of foreign and colonial cities make a ceaseless round of work. Yet there is a charm in it all to those who delight in the handling of delicate and exact instruments which renders its dreary routine fascinating.

A Cautious Man.

"It's a good thing to be cautious when among strangers," said the precise-looking man to a tall, angular old fellow, to whom he was talking on the deck of an Atlantic liner.

"Yes," was the response, "you can't always tell who you're talking to when you don't know a stranger as through together, as we are, are very likely to make mistakes if they don't look out."

"That's what I think about it," said the precise one. "There are several people around that I'd like to know who they are, but I feel a delicacy in asking."

"Who, for instance?" asked the tall party, letting his eyes wander about the deck.

"Well, there's a lady standing there by that door, talking to a young fellow who looks as if he might be her son."

"That far door?" inquired the tall party, stretching his neck around.

"Yes."

"She looks as if she might bite a nail in two?"

"Yes."

"Got a jaw on her like a vice?"

"Yes."

"Keeps it going all the time, as if there wasn't any such thing as an eight-hour law?"

"Yes."

"Got a bonnet on that looks as if it might be a sign for a vegetable gardener?"

"Yes."

"Got a complexion like a slab of tan bark?"

"Yes."

"Got clothes on that look as if they'd been made out of last year's circus posters?"

"Exactly—she's the one! Who is she?"

"The tall party got up to have a better look before committing himself.

"She's a jay from Westminster, ain't she?" he said, with a laugh, as he sat down again.

"Yes. Who is she?"

"Oh, she's my wife. Let me take you over and introduce you."

But the cautious man declined, and managed to lose himself in the crowd as quickly as possible.

Sublime and the Ridiculous.

A sentimental gentleman, out for an hour's sail, was rhapsodizing in the following terms:—"When we contemplate the heavens, under the brilliant light of day, or, as in the present, by the shades of the evening, when the stars begin to appear one by one with increasing splendour, are not our souls impregnated with a sense of sublimity, of rapture, of mystic awe? Oh, my friend"—turning to the man at the helm—"oh, my friend, what do you think?"—"Think?—why, I thinks it's very loikely."

Thousands of Egyptians live in old tombs, eating, sleeping, wooing, loving, laughing, dancing, singing, doing all their deeds of daily life and house hold work among the mummies and sarcophagi.

POLITICAL PRISONS.

IRISH PATRIOT TELLS OF TORTURE IN THE BRITISH JAILS.

Thirteen Awful Years—His Sufferings in the Cells of Chatham and Portland—Terrible Abuses Crowded Upon Political Offenders by the Guards Over Them.

"Cruelties, such as are almost past belief are practiced on Irish political convicts in English prisons," declared John Daly, recently in Chicago. "I am heartily glad that the other poor fellows, who, like myself, were sentenced for life, are to get an liberty next June, when they will have served fifteen years of their time."

John Daly, recently in Chicago. "I man, who, in spite of having passed nearly thirteen years of his life within the penel cells of Chatham and Portland prisons, scarcely looks the 53 years to which he lays claim. From his boyhood he has been connected with the various movements to free his native land from British dominion, and has served and water. During the first year we were only allowed to write and receive one letter; the second year two, the third year three, and after that four. But when letter time was approaching our Orange guards used to do their best to provoke us so that, by committing some breach of discipline, we might be deprived of the privilege of writing or receiving a communication to or from the outside world.

Three times I was approached by emissaries of the government and offered my liberty on condition that I would appear before the royal commission and give perjured evidence against Parnell. The first to come to me was Sames, the rascally lawyer hired by the London Times, and the second was the traitor, Richard Piggot, who was never guilty of but one decent act in his life, and that killed him. He shot himself. The third was Littlechild, the head detective of Scotland Yard. But I turned a deaf ear to them all, and told them I would sooner rot in a British jail or die insane than purchase my liberty at such a shameful price.

Finding that persuasion was useless, they tried to poison me. The jail physician gave me an almost fatal dose of belladonna. There was a government inquiry into this attempt at murder, and it was reported to have been an "accident," but medical men, with one accord, have assured me that belladonna was the last thing in the world that should have been given to a man in my enfeebled condition. A significant fact is that neither the physician who prescribed the dose, nor the druggist who prepared it, was dismissed from his position. I am still demanding a fuller investigation into that matter, but have almost despaired of getting what I seek.

JOHN DALY.

While I was imprisoned, in 1883, my fellow townsmen in Limerick did me the honor to elect me to Parliament, but the Conservative party voted against me, and I was disqualified on the ground of my conviction. In the following year they elected me high sheriff, but the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland set that election aside on the same ground and appointed another man. Last November I was nominated for mayor of Limerick, but the crown law adviser ruled that I lacked fifteen days of a legal residence, so, of course, I could not run. However, I expect to be elected to the next Parliament, or, if a vacancy occurs in Limerick before the present Parliament is dissolved, I expect to be elected to fill it.

Mrs. Danbury's Patriotism.

"Of course we want war!" exclaimed Mrs. Danbury. "The idea of letting such an outrage go unpunished! I don't care whether the Spaniards did it or not. They deserve to be whipped, anyway. If they hadn't oppressed those poor Cubans our boat wouldn't have been ordered to go down there, and the terrible thing probably would not have happened.

"I just wish I were a man! I can tell you I would show some of those cowards how to act such a time as this.

"Bravo! Bravo!" exclaimed her husband. "Spoken like a regular little patriot! Your sentiments are mine exactly. I'm glad you take such a noble view of it, for now I shall not have to hesitate any longer. There is something I have wanted to tell you for two days, but I have hesitated for fear it might distress you. I am going to join a military company so as to be ready to go to the front at the first call to serve my country. I am so glad you"—

"John!" exclaimed Mrs. Danbury, "are you crazy? Do you mean to say that you would go away to war and leave me here alone? You will join no military company. You will stay right here, no matter what happens! This country has never done anything for you! Let others do its fighting if it gets into trouble. Here, have a cup of tea. It'll be good for your head!"

No Difference.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

(Special Correspondence.

It was that which drove Flanagan and Featherstone out of their minds. Think of it! Wakened every hour of the night for four long years. Even the Malay pirates never devised a torture more exquisitely hideous, and yet the English Home Secretary repeatedly declared that we were dealt with like the ordinary prisoners. That was a lie —a deliberate and cruel lie. The excuse for our treatment was that convicts in Australia had been released by an expedition on board the American schooner Catalpa, and that it was necessary to guard against any attempt at escape.

No man was allowed to speak a word or communicate with a fellow convict under the terrible penalty of three days on bread and water. During the first year we were only allowed to write and receive one letter; the second year two, the third year three, and after that four. But when letter time was approaching our Orange guards used to do their best to provoke us so that, by committing some breach of discipline, we might be deprived of the privilege of writing or receiving a communication to or from the outside world.

THE LOURDES WATER

A YOUNG WOMAN ATTRIBUTES HER RECOVERY TO ITS PROPERTIES.

Miss Marie E. Beimdick of St. Louis Drank the Water of Lourdes and Immediately Was Restored to Health—About an Eighth of an Ounce Was Taken.

After suffering for a year from loss of speech and a complete paralysis of her right side, Miss Marie Elizabeth Beimdick of St. Louis was suddenly restored to health. She attributes her recovery to the miraculous properties of the water of Lourdes, a vial of which she drank a few minutes before the remarkable change in her physical condition occurred.

Miss Beimdick is well known in public school circles. In March, 1897, her friends were grieved to learn that she had been forced by sickness to give up teaching. Her condition rapidly grew worse. First her voice was affected. For several months she could barely make herself understood. Then she lost the power of speech altogether. She took to her bed, and her vocal affliction shortly was followed by severe pains in the right shoulder and hip. The entire right side was affected and for weeks the unfortunate young woman was unable to speak or move without the greatest effort.

Physicians were summoned. One of them diagnosed her ailment as spinal trouble. Another said it was hip disease, and a third one informed her that she was a neurasthenic. Remedies were prescribed and taken, but they gave her no relief. In time she was able to leave her bed and move about on crutches. She became discouraged and discontinued the services of several of the attending doctors.

She was prepared for death, and, being a devout Catholic, had received the sacraments of the dying. A few weeks ago two Sisters of Mercy visited the sick girl. Seeing she was beyond medical aid they proposed to the mother that Maria try the Lourdes water. Most marvelous cures have been ascribed to the supernatural efficacy of the water from the celebrated French spring. A bottle of the liquid was left at the house, but Marie, though a good and faithful Catholic, hesitated to use it. She had grown so despondent over her prolonged and seemingly incurable illness that she had given up all hope.

"I actually thought I was beginning to lose my mind," said Miss Beimdick to a reporter. "I could not make myself understood, as I knew from the answers I received to some of my whispered questions. I was in a desperate condition and just didn't know what to do.

"On Thursday, September 24—the day after Zola was convicted, by the way—the folks went out for awhile and I was by myself. I was moving around on the crutch. I began to think for a moment; then I knelt down and prayed for perhaps three-quarters of an hour. I thought somehow or another of a book I read in my childhood days, entitled 'The Wonders of Lourdes.' It is an account of cures effected by the waters of the source. As I believed for an instant on the Zola incident and the book written by him, 'Lourdes.' The thoughts just flashed across my mind, and I paid no particular attention to the matters recalled.

"When I arose from my prayer, I walked instinctively, as it were, over to the mantel on which was standing the bottle of Lourdes water. I drank a small vial—not more than an eighth of an ounce—and then went back to the parlor. In a few moments my brother came in. I don't know what made me do it, but I sat down at the piano and asked him to turn to the hymn 'The Holy City.' I played and sang some little effort used my voice. When I got to the second verse, the notes were very distinct, and before I finished the anthem my vocal organs, to me, at least, were as good as they ever were. I had fully recovered my speech. My brother was amazed at the sudden transition, and my mother, who came in, could hardly believe that it was I at the instrument.

"I had used the crutch to get to the piano. When I got up, I said, 'Oh, I think I can walk without this,' and I went clear across the room unaided. Within ten minutes after I took the water my ailment had disappeared, and there was not an ache in my body. I felt like shouting for joy, and the members of the family were just crazy with delight."

"Did you get up early the next morning and go to church?" asked the reporter.

"Well, you guessed it about right," replied Miss Beimdick. "You may be sure I was and am thankful for my recovery, and I am convinced that it was effected solely by other than natural means.

"Why, only a few days before I got well Dr. F. C. E. Kuhlmann, who was the last physician that attended me, said he would have to place my leg in splints and that I would be confined to my bed for three months if I hoped to recover. I was, indeed, very much disheartened and almost wished for death to relieve my sufferings."

This is the second time within a few months that a member of St. Bridget's parish has attributed a sudden and remarkable cure to the efficacy of Lourdes water. The son of Jeremiah Murphy, the pork packer, fell off a wagon and fractured his skull. The doctors despaired of his life. One of the Christian brothers, whose school the boy attended, recommended the use of the water, and the result was gratifying to the patient and his family. The young man was completely well in two or three days.

Father Walsh, pastor of St. Bridget's church, announced from the altar the other evening that Miss Beimdick was restored to health, detailing the circumstances.—St. Louis Republic.

NEW YORK LETTER.

Sol Smith Russell is one of the actors who had been looking for many years for a good play. He has had many which partly suited him and in which the unique charm of his personality atoned for lack of interest in the drama. This year Martha Morton wrote him "A Bachelor's Romance," and Mr. Russell played it for many weeks at the Garden Theater, Manhattan. It was generally agreed to be the best play, on the whole, which he has had, and Mr. Russell has dropped his list of dramas and is devoting his entire season to "A Bachelor's Romance." The play is thoroughly American, of course. Mr. Russell has tried several un-American parts, among them Bob Acres, but he has never proved successful in making them seem real, and he is likely to continue in parts in which his own strongly marked characteristics are appropriate. David Holmes, the bachelor of this story, is a middle aged editor of a magazine, much in love with his young ward, Sylvia. The girl loves David, of course—no girl could help it when David is Mr. Russell—but not at all as she loves young Harold Reynolds. David learns this and about the same time learns that Harold is a competitor for a $10,000 prize which his magazine has offered. He is the judge and Harold's manuscript is good. If he gets the prize he will be able to marry Sylvia; if he doesn't there is a possible chance for the bachelor. The young man gets the prize and the girl—and the bachelor gets the audience. No one can doubt Mr. Russell's complete fitness to express everything which the author may have given him in the part.

Disinfecting Library Books.

When the New York Public Library moves into the building of the future on the present site of the reservoir in Bryant Park it will be a circulating library. All citizens of New York will have the privilege of taking books to their homes. Each book, upon its return from the people to the library, is to be put through a process of fumigation sterilization, warranted to destroy all microbes and bacilli, however latent.

This system has been approved by Dr. John S. Billings, director of the library, who conducted a series of experiments in the Hortoo laboratory in Philadelphia.

A number of old Patent Office reports were inoculated with bacteria, and in a short time the books were full of germs of tuberculosis, scarlet fever, smallpox and other diseases. Then were then made of various germ-destroying substances, and as a result of the experiments Dr. Billings says that he has a perfect disinfectant in the gas formaldyde. The volume is placed in a glass or metal box, with a solution of formalin in water, and left for an hour or two. At the end of that time the vapor has penetrated into every particle of the book and not a live germ can be found.

Bibliophile will be glad to know that the formalin will destroy the Croton bug, responsible for the ruin of so many fine bindings in this country. The traditional book worm is now a rarity in America, but the Croton bug has taken its place, and the collectors of rare volumes has in Dr. Billings' discovery a preventive of the ravages that the insect's passion for morocco and calfskin causes.

It is difficult to get the people in New York to use the name "Manhattan" when speaking of that part of the city which is on Manhattan Island Brooklynites are now residents of New York, but when they are about to cross the bridge they always speak of it as going, not to "Manhattan," but to "New York." The Brooklyn street cars that cross the bridge carry signs "direct to New York." Is, then, Manhattan still to be New York, as of old in all except official language?

New York has expended $5,000,000 for a speedway for fast horses and now it is proposed to spend $900,000 for a speedway for bicycles. Plans have been drawn for such a speedway along the road connecting the Bronx and Pelham Parks. Wheelmen number 600,000 in New York, or one-fifth of the population. The wheelmen should have their speedway.

New York may well be proud of a police force that has 400 men more than six feet tall. The Broadway squad ninety giants, picked from this regiment of giants, will divide the honors with the "six-footarpers" in the eye of open-mouthed strangers gathering up Broadway.

THE FIR MEN'S HOME.

The fact that the Hotel Hunterston (popularly known as the Netherwood) has been leased as a summer resort has not disturbed the efforts of those who are working to secure its selection for the Home for Feeble and Disabled Firemen. The industry in this direction is being quietly pursued, however, and probably with good effect. J. Fred MacDonald, a man who generally undertakes any endeavor in a thoroughly practical manner, is at the head of the plan to have the home located at Netherwood Heights. Just how much co operation he has we are not aware, but at least it is not that of public agitation, which would be a very good thing in its way. The State has appropriated $75 000 for the purpose of establishing the home and it seems that sum ought to be sufficient to secure the Hunterson building and grounds for the Home. Those who are in a position to know the requirements of a building such as will be needed, say that the hotel property is particularly well-adapted to them.

The New Brunswick Board of Trade is agitating the subject of securing the home for their city, and, in fact, have taken aggressive steps in that direction. The establishment of the institution in Plainfield is a goal for which the local Board of Trade could very worthily strive.

LUCKY NE SPARZMAN.

Republican editors of New Jersey are not faring badly in gathering in their share of the patronage plums these days. Trenton had a large representation of journalists holding public positions during the last legislature, and even now a number are basking in the sbuseshine of permanent berths until their political sponsors are turned out of office by popular votes.

Only a short time ago the Rahway postmastership went to Editor Rollinson—who holds the record for perpetual office holding in Union county—and now comes the news from Washington that Editor Mason, of the Bound Brook Chronicle, will not only reside with delinquent subscribers and writing obituaries, but as well with the aggravating details—also the pleasing ones, such as drawing a liberal salary—in the local post office. He has Congressman Howell to thank for this perquisite.

THE WAY THAT REACHES.

The Hartford Courant editorially declares that "judicious advertising is the way to make business, and the newspaper is the direct way to reach the customer. There is no getting around this statement." Of course, there are other ways of wooing trade, and all have their values or they would not last. But what other tradewinner is there that goes into so many thousands of homes every morning before the families are up, sits beside them at breakfast and spends the day telling of the war news and the store news?—Philadelphia Record.

ARBOR DAY.

Governor Voorhees has issued a proclamation setting apart Friday, April 29th, as Arbor day, to be devoted to the planting of forest trees, and to appropriate exercises in the schools of the State. The State superintendent, in accordance with the proclamation, will issue a circular to the school superintendents and principals. Preparations will begin immediately for the observance of the day.

ASSESSING AT REAL VALUE.

The recent determination of two Supreme Court Judges in New Jersey to order Grand Juries to indict assessors who could be proven guilty of the act of not assessing property at its real value—an offense that will probably not find an assessor in the State innocent of—has stirred the Bergen county officials deeply. It was in that bailiwick that Judge Dixon issued the edict against the prevailing practices of assessors, as noted in these columns a few days ago, and last Friday the Bergen County Board of Assessors had a long and stormy session which ended in the adoption of a resolution that each assessor should assess property at its full value, and if any assessor makes a return otherwise, refusing to swear to his figures, his valuations will be increased by the County Board. Many of the members fear indictment and are anxious to ameliorate the situation.

Whether or not the stand taken by Judge Dixon will be emulated in other counties is a question that is a throbbing issue with a very large number of officeholders. The determination arrived at after years of built knowledge that such dereliction from the actual wording of the law have existed, put the assessors in a rather uncomfortable position. If they follow the letter of the law in their official work to escape an accounting with the judicial forces of government, that virtuous action is followed with reaping a whirlwind of wrath from taxpayers who cannot recognize themselves to the manner of assessing property as its real value, and whose range of responsibility for the new condition of things does not extend further than the assessors. It is not anticipated, however, that there will be any dearth of candidates for assessorships by reason of these things.

DEATH OF E. O. CHAMBERLAIN.

Considering that Ernest O. Chamberlain made his first success in Plainfield, and while here as the editor of The Bulletin laid the groundwork for the successful career which has been his in the great metropolitan field, the news of his untimely ending comes with regret to the large number who had watched him go higher and higher in his chosen profession.

Mr. Chamberlain was what might be called a born newspaper man—that is, he had in him the natural aptitude and intuitiveness for practical, successful work that only brief experience was required to develop. He was scarcely out of his teens when he came to Plainfield and launched The Bulletin. Instinctively he was aggressive and independent and during his editorship the caustic manner in which he treated local politics made his paper a lively one—sometimes a hated one by those who felt in truth that "the pen is mightier than the sword."

Mr. Chamberlain was only thirty-eight years of age, but he had earned for himself a conspicuous place among the writers and editors of the country. He developed in an unusual degree the rare combination of literary and executive ability.

The announcement of his death will be received in Plainfield with profound regret, for though his interests in a business way were elsewhere he often visited this city to pay devotion to his parents and was always welcomed by many friends.

AMERICAN ELECTRICAL MACHINERY.

The American invented and manufactured electrical machinery that is shipped abroad is increasing enormously in amount. Most of the adaptations of electricity to the needs of modern industry are American, from the telephone to the trolley car. The huge dynamo is also built better in America than anywhere else. For the reason that we know better how to make electrical machinery than the people of any other nation do, we have many orders for it from abroad.

In this case it is not a question of where the machinery can be made most cheaply. It is a question where it can be made at all. If foreign manufacturers are to keep up with the times, they must have such machinery at any price. Machinists of the United States have had more experience than any others in this kind of work, and they are the ones now called on to supply the demand. In a gratifying to our national pride and filling to our individual pockets. A contributor to The Electrical Engineer mentions that in a recent order for machinery received from Europe by an American firm he saw a request for a dynamo of 60 horsepower.

There are reasons why Americans ought to and can manufacture almost everything more cheaply than other nations. One is the abundance and low price of our raw material of every kind. Another is that here labor saving machinery has been brought to such perfection that even with higher wages paid to workmen we can more than hold our own with foreign peoples who still use so much hand labor.

The month of April will witness throughout some of the most tremendous grain shipments abroad from the port of New York that have been known in our history. In all 2,250,000 bushels will go, more than half of it wheat. The freight and tramp ships are not equal to the demand on them, and the liners have been engaged to carry part of the grain. It is notable that nearly every ton of this grain goes to Great Britain, to Liverpool, London, Glasgow and Hull. If this grain were being shipped in American vessels, some of it might stand a chance of capture by Spanish cruisers and privateers. As it is, however, we do not own the steamers in which our grain is shipped, and the Spanish man-of-war that would capture one of them would immediately rush into trouble with one of the European powers, probably England. Spain could not hurt us at sea, because we have nothing to be hurt on the Atlantic ocean except four passenger steamers.

LICENSE DEPENDS ON NEW SIDEWALK.

Novel Position Taken By the Common Council.

MR. HETFIELD OPPOSED IT.

DIDN'T THINK IT WAS RIGHT TO USE THEIR POWER AS THEY DID.

The License Application Laid on the Table in the Hope That They Can Force the Construction of a Walk Around the Hotel Property—Home Telephone Company Wants a Franchise—Mayor Fisk Suggests That Old Glory be Flung to the Breeze—An Ordinance in Favor of Liquor Dealers.

The chief topic of interest discussed at the adjourned meeting of the City Council held last Monday was that regarding the granting of a licence to sell liquor at Hotel Hunterston. Wm. H. Morrison made application for the priviledge and considerable time was spent in discussing the matter.

For sometime past it has been the object of the Council to have a stone sidewalk laid around the property upon which stands the hotel, and the license committee now think that they have met a way for getting the walk. Mr. Hetfield moved that the license be granted. Immediately afterwards Mr. Barrows moved that the application lie on the table for one week. The cause for placing the application on the table then came out in the discussion. It was that if the people at the hotel want a license they will be willing to put down the walk, thus compelling the owners of the hotel to grant the request of the Council first. For this purpose the application was laid over for one week.

Mr. Hetfield talked vigorously against the laying on the table and stated that it was not Mr. Morrison's place to have the walk laid as he was only the lessee of the hotel, and Mr. Hunter had already stated that he could not afford to put down the walk at present. Mr. Barrows said he thought Mr. Hyde, the owner, could, and that he thought the improvement should be made. Mr. VanHerwerden, representing the Netherwood district, voiced the sentiments expressed by Mr. Barrows, as did also Mr. Runyon and Mr. Buckle. When the question was put to a vote, Mr. Hetfield was the only one to vote against laying on the table.

Other matters of minor importance came up in routine order as follows:

Norman K. Barnes and other residents of West Fifth street, asked for three two-way fire hydrants on their street; Edward White and other business men on Front street asked the Council to locate a keyless fire-alarm box on Front street between Park and Madison avenues.

The Home Telephone Company, of Trenton, petitioned the Council for a franchise to install a telephone and telegraph system in this city. The petition was simply received and filed.

G. L. Marsey, of the company, will appear before the proper committee two weeks hence and be accorded a hearing.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company presented an ordinance regarding the placing of wires under ground, and stated that they are now ready to do the work.

A communication was received from Mayor Fisk in which he said that in asmuch as the city does not now own an American flag, he thought that one should be purchased and displayed every day over the city offices. He suggested that a flag and pole be purchased at an expense not to exceed $100, and that the flag be displayed every day from sunrise to sunset, and that Chief Doane, of the fire department, see that the flag is properly displayed. The matter was referred to the committee on fire and buildings with power.

Mayor Fisk also asked the Council to adopt an ordinance giving him authority to charge a license fee of $25 or less for the giving of entertainments and exhibitions where an admission fee is charged.

Mr. Barrows presented a resolution ratifying the report of the Westervelt Avenue Commissioners and, no one being present to object to the report, the Council adopted the report.

Mr. Barrows offered a motion that crosswalks be laid across West Front street opposite Madison avenue, at Watchung avenue and Ninth street, and another on East Sixth street. The motion was adopted.

Mr. Barrows offered three ordinances which provide for the macadamizing of Madison avenue from West Ninth street to Stelle avenue, also Woodland avenue and Stelle avenue. In each case the property owners are to pay their proportionate share for the work.

Mr. Hetfield introduced an ordinance which provides for the licensing of inns and taverns. The ordinance provides that saloons can remain open in the evening until 11:30, that the owners do not have to from year to year secure the signatures of freeholders and the customary affadavits, providing the application and applicant is all right, and that a license can be transferred on the payment of $25.

Mr. Andrews, of the laws and ordinance committee, stated that he had had no opportunity to thoroughly examine the ordinance and he objected to the adoption of the ordinance.

Mr. Runyon rise objected and he moved that the ordinance lie on the table for one week. This was done, and after the adoption of the tax ordinance on its third reading the Council adjourned for one week.

$17,000 FOR CHARITY.

BEQUESTS TO CHURCH AND HOSPITAL BY MRS. VANDEVENTER.

Hope Chapel Receives $5,000, Muhlenberg Hospital $5,000 and the Presbyterian Church in Bound Brook $5,000

Through the philantrophy of the late Mrs. Cornelia Stryker VanDeventer, who died at the home of Augustus Bronson, near Clinton avenue, March 6th, four religious societies and a charitable institution are benefited to the extent of bequests amounting in all to $17,000.

The will of Mrs. VanDeventer was probated in Surrogate Spencer's office at Somerville last week.

To Hope Chapel, of which she was a member after taking up her residence in this city, she bequeaths $5,000.

Muhlenberg Hospital, whose interest Mrs. VanDeventer had at heart by reason of the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Bronson in its behalf, is given $3,000.

The Presbyterian church, of Bound Brook, from which Mrs. VanDeventer withdrew her membership to join Hope chapel, is willed $5,000.

The Home and Foreign Missionary societies of the Presbyterian church are each bequeathed $2,000.

Augustus Bronson is made executor of the estate.

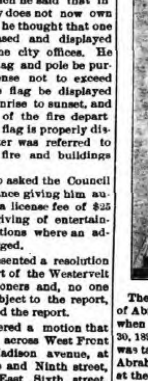
A DISPUTE ABOUT WOOD.

A Complicated Contention for Justice Mosher to Decide.

The case of David Hand against Eastman, trover and conversion, was tried in Justice Mosher's court Monday afternoon. The facts of the case are that Mr. Hand purchased some standing timber of George A. Colgate on the latter's farm in Fanwood in December, 1896. In June, 1897, Mr. Colgate sold the farm to Mr. Eastman, telling him at the time of sale that Mr. Hand owned the wood in a certain portion of the farm. Mr. Eastman allowed Mr. Hand to take some of the wood from the lot, after which he sold the farm to Lawyer Johns, of New York. Later Mr. Hand went after the balance of the wood that belonged to him, and Mr. Johns would not allow him to take it or even come on the premises.

Mr. Hand was represented at the trial by Lawyer Swackhamer, while Lawyer Hall, of New York, represented Mr. Eastman. The witnesses included Mr. Hand, Mr. Eastman, Mr. Colgate and Chris. Hansen, a teamster. The amount of the claim was $200, and Justice Mosher reserved his decision for one week. The case was very warmly contested and the debate on both sides was lively.

THE LINCOLN STATUE.



The above cut represents the statue of Abraham Lincoln as it will appear when unveiled on Memorial Day, May 30, 1898, at Lincoln. This photograph was taken from the clay model of Abraham Lincoln as it was modeled at the works of Wm. H. Mullins, of Salem, Ohio. The pedestal is now being erected out of Martinville stone, to be eight feet high, with figure of Lincoln, in bronze, seven feet high. On the occasion of the unveiling of the statue, a public dedication will be held. The veteran Zouaves, of Elizabeth, General J. Madison Drake commanding, with the Drake Band, of Elizabeth, will be present on this occasion—unless they are in Cuba. A gentleman of national character will deliver an oration. Lincoln has had many celebrations in the past year; but this event will outdo all others, in that it will interest the State of New Jersey.

PRIZE COMPOSITIONS.

Subjects On Which the Students Can Distinguish Themselves.

The principal subject of interes at the Plainfield High School now is the list of subjects for the prize compositions. They are due Wednesday, June 1st. The list has just been announced and is as follows: Is a Our-few Law Desirable? Evolution of the Modern Bicycle, Leaves from the Diary of Methuselah, The Three G's—Grit, Grace and Gumption, What Is Worth While? Pages from a Journal Written in 1800, Our Bird Friends, The Last Game of Baseball from a Girl's Point of View, A First Visit to New York City, The Moral Effect of the Home Life, A Group of Dickens' Characters, Colonial Life in Literature, The Influence of New England Life on American Literature, How the Last Game of Baseball was Lost (or Won).

Verdict for Plaintiff.

The case of J. E. Beerbower against William Trust, in trover and conversion, was tried Monday afternoon in Justice Moffett's court. Some time ago Mr. Beerbower loaned Mr. Trust a watch and he claims that it was never returned to him, and he brought suit against Mr. Trust in consequence. Mr. Trust was represented by Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, while Pope & Runyon represented the plaintiff. Judgment was given the plaintiff and he was awarded $35.

Extension of Water Mains.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company has commenced work on the extension of its mains on South avenue, beyond Berekman street. The extension will be made for a distance of 1,500 feet, and two new fire hydrants which have been ordered by the city officials will be placed in position in that section.

Theatre Parties.

Mrs. B. A. Begeman, jr., chaperoned a party of young people to the presentation of "The Merchant of Venice" at Music Hall Saturday evening. The party occupied all the lower tier of boxes. Another theatre party from the Seminary, chaperoned by Miss F. F. Clark, occupied one of the upper boxes.

MAN KILLED WHILE CATTLE ARE SAVED

Horrible Fate of South Plainfield Man.

SAW SURE DEATH COMING

THOMAS McCLANNIN'S FOOT WEDGED IN A CATTLE GUARD.

He Was Walking Along the Tracks On His Way Home—Heard the Train Thundering Towards Him, But Was Powerless to Release Himself From the Death Trap—Engineer Saw the Struggle for Life in the Glare of the Headlight—His Body Body Mangled —Taken to Perth Amboy for Interment.

Knowing that he was standing in the face of death, but a few seconds removed, a careless step had put Thomas McClannin into the fearful position of being unable to escape the fate that awaited him. McClannin lived at South Plainfield and Sunday morning started out to visit some friends living near Oak Tree.

To make his walk shorter on his return home in the evening McClannin followed the Lehigh Valley tracks from the Oak Tree station. It was just about 7 o'clock when he passed over the crossing at the road that runs between Oak Tree and Mt. Pleasant. At each side of the road slanting pieces of timber are paralled with the tracks between the abutting fences as a guard to prevent cattle from walking on the tracks.

The guard is put there to save cattle was the death trap for McClannin He had almost got across the guard when one foot slipped and became wedged in between the slanting timber. For a few moments before McClannin had heard the rumble of the approaching western express due in New York at 8 o'clock, and which passes the point at a speed of sixty miles an hour He was hurrying to cross the guard and climb upon the bank to get out of the way of the oncoming train, when his foot became fastened like a grip.

No one was present to see the wild struggles of the unfortunate man to release his foot, and so no one knows what efforts he made as the express train came flying onwards towards him. But as the swaying locomotive came within a hundred yards of the ill fated spot the engineer saw in the headlight's glare the form of a man jumping back and forth in desperate endeavor to get out of the way of the sure death that awaited him.

The engineer applied the air brakes, but to late. The powerful engine struck McClannin with such force as to release his leg and throw him to one side of the track. In the hope of saving his life McClannin had evidently bent the upper portion of his body over the outside of the rail, but a sharp projection of the ponderous machine almost severed his head and he was instantly killed.

The train was stopped a short distance away and run back to the spot where the involuntary death had taken place.

The mangled body was picked up and put in the baggage car and the train ran back to South Plainfield, where it was taken off. Then the train ran into New York a half hour late.

McClannon was a single man, and a few friends took the remains to Perth Amboy, where he will be buried.

The County Physician of Middlesex county granted a burial permit after hearing the circumstances.

Benefits for Members.

A meeting of Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., was held Friday evening at which time a committee, consisting of Messrs. Charles Ulrich, Wm. Woodruff and Robert Meeker, was appointed to change the by-laws of the lodge so as to provide for benefits for the members. Another committee was appointed, with Garret Dunham as chairman, to draft suitable resolutions on the death of the late S. W. Baxter.

Street Meeting.

Thomas Graham, the Scotch street evangelist has secured a permit from Mayor Fiske to hold street meetings in this city every evening, at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue, preceding the regular mission meeting.

A MILE OF MOURNERS.

LARGE CONCOURSE OF PEOPLE PAID TRIBUTE TO LATE JOHN COOPER.

Masons Had Charge of the Services at the Grave Which Were Very Impressive—Names of the Pall Bearers.

The funeral of the late John Cooper, of South Stirling, held Sunday, was the largest one witnessed for some time. The deceased being a Mason, the members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26 F and A. M., of which he was a member, turned out about sixty strong and held the services at the grave in Evergreen cemetery.

The funeral services at the house were held at 10 o'clock, and Rev. Peter Gibbs, of Millinson, officiated. There was a very large gathering of relatives and friends and Mr. Gibbs spoke words of comfort regarding the life of the departed who was a faithful Christian man. After this service the funeral cortege proceeded to this city and was met on Somerset street near Jackson avenue by the members of Jerusalem Lodge, who escorted the remains to the cemetery. At the grave the Masons took complete charge and their beautiful service was impressively presented.

Those who took prominent parts were: Master, H. O. Hance, marshal, W. J. Ford; orator, B. Frank Corieli; Masonic chaplain, Rev. Geo. Hauser, and M. C. Dobbins, who carried the Holy Bible. Each part was perfectly taken.

Those who served as bearers were: George Watts, D. D. Smalley, Jacob Blimm, Herman Weber, L. S. Pocock and W. R Codington. The floral tributes were beautiful. There were three set pieces. One from the Masons, one from the nephews of the deceased and another from the family, in addition to a number of smaller pieces.

The funeral cortege was nearly a mile in length.

GREAT MUSICAL SUCCESS.

Work of Collegiate Musicians Was Very Fine and Appreciated.

The concert given last Saturday evening in Monroe Avenue church by the Syracuse University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs, under the auspices of the Young Men's Association of the church, was a great success. Two years ago the same club appeared at the same place and the church was not large enough to accommodate all who wished to attend, and the same difficulty was experienced Saturday evening. There was scarcely room enough for all.

The work of the club was fine and appreciated to a high degree. The glee club has a strong chorus, although several members were not present owing to illness. On several occasions the singers brought down the house by rendering patriotic airs, and the rendition of the "Stars and Stripes," by the mandolin club, won the hearts of all. Each mandolin carried a small flag and this had its effect upon the audience. A song was given by the glee club the title of which was "What a Happy World This Would Be." Some of the words were "If we could only find out who blew up the Maine, what a happy world this would be; if Uncle Sam would only drive out Spain, what a happy world this would be." The selection captured all present.

The banjo club also did exceedingly well. Altogether the concert was one of the best ever given in Plainfield and having such an enthusiastic audience, the affair was one long to be remembered.

After the concert the members of the musical clubs retired to Epworth House where they held a reception and many of those present were introduced to the college boys. The Young Men's Association will no doubt realize a good sum from the entertainment and they deserve praise for their excellent efforts in giving their friends such a good time.

AN EDITORIAL MIND SILENCED BY DEATH.

Ernest O. Chamberlain's Successful Career Closed.

ONCE A PLAINFIELD EDITOR.

WIDELY KNOWN AND RESPECTED IN NEW YORK JOURNALISM.

Stricken With a Fatal Illness Two Months Ago, and Died at His Home Monday—Made His First Journalistic Success in Plainfield—For Several Years He Has Been Prominently Identified With the New York World, Where His Success Was Marked—Strict, But Popular, With His Subordinates—Parents Reside Here.

In the death of Ernest O. Chamberlain, which occurred Monday of pneumonia at his home, Rockledge, Edgewater-on-the-Hudson, one of the most respected and widely known newspaper men in the metropolitan district, who started on his successful career in journalism in Plainfield, pass away. Mr. Chamberlain was the pioneer daily newspaper man of Plainfield and all but the younger generation of Plainfield residents remember Mr. Chamberlain's conduct of the Bulletin in the latter part of the seventies.

Although Mr. Chamberlin had been ill for a month his death came as a great shock to his friends. Reports from his home told that he was improving and that he would return to take his active place in the field of newspaper work after a period of rest.

On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock Mr. Chamberlin's condition became so alarming that his physicians were hurriedly sent for. They announced then that they could hold out little hope of his living for another twenty-four hours.

At Great Bend, Pa., where he was born in 1860, Mr. Chamberlin had only the advantages of a common school education, but as a boy he was a close student of newspapers and magazines and developed the faculty of observation which served him so well in after years.

Deciding to adopt the newspaper profession as his life work Mr. Chamberlin began writing for a little local publication, the Great Bend Reporter. From there he went to Dunellen to edit a newspaper called The Rock.

Just after attaining his majority Mr. Chamberlin established the Plainfield Bulletin. For a long time he edited it with much success. His treatment of the politics of New Jersey particularly attracted attention and resulted in his being called to edit the Trenton Times.

While editing that paper he also served the New York Sun and the Philadelphia Press with the political news of New Jersey. The Philadelphia Press sent for him and made him its New Jersey editor.

In 1886 he went to New York and was employed by the New York Sun. He remained with that paper until the spring of 1892. He never occupied an executive position there, but as a special writer detailed to handle matters requiring accurate judgment and conscientious work, such as National and State political conventions and important acts of Congress or the Legislature, he established a reputation among newspaper workers and men in public life throughout the country.

It was in the spring of 1892 that Mr. Chamberlain was made city editor of The World, which position he filled with the same marked ability that characterized his whole career.

It was but a step for Mr. Chamberlain from the desk of the city editor to that of the managing editor of The World. For five years he had charge of either the morning or the evening edition of that newspaper, except for brief intervals when he gave up his executive duties to take charge of the gathering and writing of news of special importance, or when he had gone away for rest.

His last vacation of this kind was in August and September, of 1897. For two months he was abroad. When he returned he wrote a series of articles on the government of European cities which were widely quoted and favorably commented upon.

Mr. Chamberlain was a man of charming manner and amiable disposition. The hundreds of men serving under him on The World entertained for him a personal friendship that was the highest tribute to his executive ability, while all who knew him, even those whom he had to most severely criticise in the performance of his duty, respected him for his absolute sincerity and fairness.

Mrs. Chamberlain survives her husband. Two of his brothers, Wilbur J. and Walter Chamberlain, are well-known newspaper men.

Mr. Chamberlain's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orlando E. Chamberlain, reside at 612 Madison avenue, this city, and during the health of their son were frequently visited by him.

The funeral of Mr. Chamberlain will be held at his late home this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

BAXTER DIED FROM THE HYDROPHOBIA.

Passed Away in Terrible Agony at the Hospital.

HE WAS STRAPPED TO A COT.

HIS SNARLS AND SCREAMS WERE HIDEOUS TO HEAR.

Almost Thursday He Was in the Throes of the Dread Disease, Though at Times He Became Rational and Seemed to Realize That the Malady Had Its Fatal Grip Upon Him—Strained at the Straps That Held Him Down—Disease Resulted From the Bite of a Pet Dog Two Months Ago.

As the result of a bite, playfully given by his pet canine, Samuel Baxter passed away after a day of horrible agony at the Muhlenberg Hospital Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, a victim of hydrophobia. A happy home has been desolated and a wife and child left alone in the world as a result.

Samuel Baxter lived with his wife and child at 1,444 South avenue. Baxter was a carpenter by trade and was one of the most trusted employes of Pearson & Gayle, the builders. He was particularly fond of dogs and always had several of them around the house.

Two months ago a dog supposed to be suffering from the rabies visited the Netherwood district where Baxter lives and bit a number of the dogs there. Among those bitten was one of Baxter's pets. The strange dog was afterwards killed when found to be really mad.

It was soon after that that Baxter's dog jumped at his master one day and sunk its teeth in his wrist. The dog seemed in play. Baxter had the wound cauterized by D. B. VanD. Hodges at once. The dog was shot before it developed any signs of the rabies.

The idea began to grow in Baxter's mind that he was going to have the hydrophobia. His neighbors unthinkingly told him about similar cases in which the victim had died from the effects. They used to bring clippings from newspapers to him. His employer urged him to visit the Pasteur Institute but Baxter would not. His friends also urged, but Baxter remained obdurate.

Still he began to think about it and grew morbid under the thought. Monday night the climax came. He felt very ill. Some one had told him that when he could not drink water it was a symptom of the dread malady. He found or imagined that he could not drink and declared that he had hydrophobia. He was conveyed at once to Muhlenberg Hospital.

There was no sign of the malady except the great mental suffering on the part of the victim until April 13th. He remained perfectly rational, how ever, until in the evening at 10 o'clock.

From the time of his return to his cot, where he was strapped down by the police who had captured him, he grew rapidly worse. He was apparently cured. The symptoms of hydrophobia developed rapidly. He was wildly delirious at times and frothed at the mouth and snapped and snarled. Then he would sink into an unconscious state to return to sensibility for a short time.

When in a rational state he was free to talk of the dread malady that had overcome him. He perfectly realized that he was suffering from hydrophobia and that the end was near at hand. He seemed perfectly resigned.

At two o'clock he became suddenly worse. His ravings were terrible to witness. He had all the signs of the feared malady in a violent form. Despite the straps that held him down, it was with difficulty that he was kept in his cot. A policeman was kept at his bedside constantly to care for him should he break loose. His snarlings and screams filled the ward.

At four o'clock, the end came. After a paroxysm of unusual vigor, a shiver passed through his frame and he sank down dead. The nurses and the watcher were present at the time.

A short funeral service of the late S. W. Baxter was held Friday afternoon at 5:30 at A. M. Runyon & Son's undertaking parlors. The body was then taken to Fres Pond, L. I., for cremation. The lodges in Plainfield to which Mr. Baxter belonged will be notified when the regular funeral services will be held in this city. Interment will be in Hillside Cemetery.

A Little Girl Fell Downstairs.

May Fairchild, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Fairchild, of the borough, received a severe cut in her forehead a few days ago as the result of a fall down stairs In falling she struck her head against a sharp piece of wood. At first her injuries were thought to be serious, but fortunately they proved otherwise.

It will do you "lots" of good to see the display Willett & Son are putting out this season.

GAME FOR THE NIMRODS

TRI-COUNTY ASSOCIATION REPLENISHING THEIR PRESERVES.

Officers and Detectives Will Watch for Trespassers and They Will be Prosecuted Under the New State Laws.

At the meeting of Union, Somerset and Middlesex Counties Game Protecting and Propogation Association, held April 13th, Percy C. Ohl, the acting secretary, reported the election of quite a number of new members, and also the healthy condition of the finances. All outstanding bills of whatsoever nature, were ordered paid and a large order for quail for stocking purposes was placed in the hands of a committee.

Reports were received regarding the rabbits liberated this year, which are so encouraging that it is safe to say excellent sport is assured for those members who enjoy this sport.

Quail are reported as plenty, but the present purchasing will be used mostly for the new additional preserves.

Officers and detectives have been employed and all trespassers on the grounds advertised by this association will be strictly dealt with, according to law.

This being the last day for admittance under the $5 fee, all new applicants or delinquent members will be charged $10.

VIEWS OF CUBA.

A Patriotic Entertainment Given in Music Hall.

Something of Cuba, its oppressors and its people, made the patriotic entertainment of the Plainfield Camera Club in Music Hall Thursday a very interesting affair. Then, too, the navies of the United States and Spain were illustrated in the screen. It was a stereopticon entertainment and consisted of some hundred views of the all absorbing question of Cuba and its people and the destruction of the Maine.

The views were handsome ones and included many that were new to a Plainfield audience. Rev. Charles E Herring acted as lecturer and gave a brief explanation of the different views as they were shown. During the entertainment Miss Charlotte Messersmith sang two patriotic solos.

Despite the rain the entertainment was well attended, and all who came were enthusiastic in their applause Sattel's orchestra was present and rendered patriotic selections during the evening. Garret Dunham gave a trombone solo that was particularly well received.

600 AFFECTED BY MARTIN ACT.

Delinquent Tax Items Can be Seen at Lawyer Runyon's Office.

Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, after two days' work in the County Clerk's office, has succeeded in copying off all the names of property owners concerned in the collection of taxes under the Martin Act. The list includes about 600 names, and will be a revelation to many.

Included in the names are a number of property owners who are probably uniformed as to their alleged delinquincies. In one or two instances Mr. Runyon says that he has found citizens who were not aware that they would be assessed anything under the Martin Act adjustments. The documents at Mr. Runyon's office will prove very interesting to those who care to inspect them

The petition to the County Judge, asking for an adjournment of the hearing on the report which is filed by the commissioners for confirmation is at Eugene Laing's hat store, where it can be signed by the interested ones

In conversation with one of the principal objectors to the findings of the Commissioners Saturday morning, a reporter was assured that a vigorous fight to have them declared invalid was to be made.

The Herons are Prompt.

Percy C Ohl reports the first arrival of that species of waders, of the family of Herons, comonly known as the Quakers, which corresponds exactly with recorded notes of their arrival for the last eleven years. Mr. Ohl says that this is the time to watch turkey hens. They have commenced to lay and the crows are on the alert for the eggs.

Died at An Old Age.

Mrs. Anna Mott, aged 90 years, of 1417 Pacific street, Brooklyn, died at her home April 13th She was the mother of Mrs. J. W. King, of Brooklyn, and the grandmother of D. W King, of Craig place, North Plainfield. The funeral services were held from the house Saturday evening at 9 o'clock and was private.

Pipe For New Water Mains.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company has received a large quantity of six inch pipe for mains, and will shortly commence the work of extending its lines in various sections of the city.

Trustees Organized.

The Board of Trustees of the First Presbyterian church have organized by electing J. A. Haynes, chairman; H. A. Pope, secretary and William H. Shotwell, treasurer.

CONSTABLE BLOCKS THE HUSBAND'S WAY

H. T. Smith Not Allowed to Enter His Family's Home.

LEGAL ACTION NOW TAKEN.

THE WIFE SAID TO BE INFLUENCED BY ANOTHER WOMAN.

Mrs. Smith, it is said, Thinks That Her Husband is Not the Ideal Partner That He should Be, and She Refuses Him Admittance to the House Owned in Her Name—Husband Declares That Miss Sue Peck Exercises an Undue Influence Over His Wife—Miss Peck Threatened With Prosecution.

The question as to whether a husband can be deposed from the residence of his wife when the latter owns the property is about to be determined by law in this city. The case is a very peculiar one and will considerable interest until it is settled.

Mrs. H. T Smith, of Westervelt avenue, has had a notice served on her husband through her lawyers, Reed & Coddington, warning him not to come on her premises. If he does, he will be considered as a trespasser and will be dealt with according to law. This notice was served last Monday on Mr. Smith.

The cause for such action is given that Mrs. Smith does not believe that her husband is the ideal life partner that a man should be, and she refuses to live with him.

Mr. Smith was at one time wealthy, but through a chain of unforunate circumstances he lost his property. During the past year he has held the position of clerk in the treasury department at the courthouse in Queens county, L. I., which place was his former home. Of late he has come home every night but found the doors locked and Constable Rockafellow on duty to keep him away. Wednesday evening Mr. Smith came home as usual and learned that Constable Rockafellow was not there. He went in the house, and while there talked with the children. Rockafellow came in and ordered him from the house. Mr. Smith asked the constable to show his authority for deposing him. The constable replied he had none but that he could soon secure a writ if necessary. Mr. Smith was threatened with arrest if he did not leave.

Mr. Smith has since learned that Constable Rockafellow has been occupying his room in the house every night while on duty to keep him away from the house.

Mrs. Smith seems to have a feeling that her husband is not a proper life partner and there seems to be a spell come over her at times. One night recently Mr. and Mrs. Smith went out together to church. Everything was calm and they both exhibited affection for each other. The next morning when Mr. Smith left the house to go to work his wife's actions were just the reverse.

It has been discovered that there is a third party in the affair, Miss Sue Peck, of West Front street. Miss Peck is a Christian scientist, and it is claimed has had an influence over Mrs. Smith. Not long ago Mrs. Smith had a bad spell and Dr. Hodges was sent for, as well as Miss Peck.

Miss Peck arrived first, and when the doctor came Mrs. Smith seemed all right. A notice was served on Miss Peck warning her to keep away from the residence of Mrs. Smith, and it is probable that a suit for damages will be commenced against her for interference in family relations. A similar notice has also been served on Constable Rockafellow warning him to keep away or he and his bondsmen will be prosecuted.

RECEPTION AT EVONA.

Pleasant Affair Arranged by the Heavenly Rest Women.

The reception held in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest Thursday afternoon and evening, notwithstanding the inclement weather, was a pronounced success.

The refreshments, consisting of a generous supply of cake, sandwiches and coffee, was a leading feature and enjoyed by all.

Mrs. J. W. B. Lewis and Miss Graves rendered appropriate selections on the piano. Miss Violet Leivers recited "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight" with excellent effect.

Phonograph selections were many and varied and listened to with marked interest.

Much credit is due the ladies of the church in their efforts to make such an informal affair an enjoyable success. The reception committee consisted of Mrs. E E. Brown, chairman, assisted by Mrs. L H. Morgan, Mrs. J. R Phillips, Mrs. J. W B. Lewis, Mrs. Chas. Graves and Miss Jennie E. Wenzel. It is rumored about church circles that this parish is enjoying a steady, healthy growth, which will be pleasing news to its many friends.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael DeCourey, of East Second street, was brightened Sunday morning by the arrival of a nine-pound boy. Mother and son are doing nicely.

COMPETITION IN GOLF.

EVENTS FOR THE ENSUING SEASON ARE ANNOUNCED.

The Hillside Club Prepared to Have an Active Summer at the Popular Exercise—The Events and Conditions.

The growth of golf in this city has been a rapid one since its introduction here three years ago by the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, until now it has attained a prominent position. Every year has seen a great improvement in the advantages offered to the local golf players. This year the new links of the Hillside Club will be greatly superior to the old ones. Then a greatly increased list of competitions for the year has been announced. The competitions are so arranged that all the players will be given a chance in them. The competitions for the year are as follows:

Chapman Cup—Men's competition; open to active members only. The eight players who shall have qualified at medal play, eighteen holes, to compete at match play, eighteen holes. No entrance fee will be charged. Cup now held by H. Reeve Stockton.

Reinhart Cup—Handicap. Men's competition; open to active members only. Eighteen holes, medal play. No entrance fee will be charged. Cup now held by F. W. Walz.

Fisk Cup—Handicap. Competition open to boys under eighteen years of age, whether active or associate members. Eighteen holes, medal play. No entrance fee will be charged. Cup now held by N. P. Rogers, Jr.

Schoonmaker Cup—Handicap. Competition open to ladies of any age, whether active or associate members. Nine holes, medal play. No entrance fee will be charged. The cup will become the property of the player who shall win it three times.

Men's Monthly Handicap—Competition open to active members only. Eighteen holes. Medal play. Entrance fee 50 cents.

Girls' Handicap—Competition open to girls under sixteen years of age, whether active or associate members. Nine holes, medal play. No cut once fee will be charged. A prize will be awarded to the winner f each event.

Mixed Foursomes—Handicap. Competition open to both active and associate members. Eighteen holes, medal play. Entrance fee 50 cents for each couple.

Men's Foursomes—Handicap. Competition open to active members only. Eighteen holes, medal play. Entrance fee 50 cents for each player.

Boger Handicap—Competition open to all active members. Eighteen holes, match play. Entrance fee 50 cents.

The golf committee has made the following announcement regarding the competitions:

All entries must reach a member of the golf committee or be dropped in the box provided for that purpose in the clubhouse at least twenty-four hours before the event; otherwise the entry will not be accepted.

Entries for handicap competitions must be accompanied by the member's last three gross scores (totals) unless they are already in the hands of the golf committee; otherwise he must play from scratch. Members are requested to keep their score cards in the score box so that the committee may have a reliable basis for handicapping.

When an entry is accepted, the number failing to play will be considered as defaulting; and the entrance fee, if any, will be charged to his account.

In all club events each participant must play with a competitor.

PROMISING CAREER CUT SHORT.

Clarence L. Titsworth Passed Away This Morning.

The many friends of Clarence L. Titsworth, aged 27 years, will be shocked to learn of his death, which occurred Saturday at the home of his uncle, J. D. Spicer, No. 125 West Fifth street. Death was due to consumption of long standing. Mr. Titsworth spent sometime in the west at Denver, in the hopes that he would receive benefit to health, but all efforts proved fruitless. He was born in this city and attended the public schools While the work of locating the sewer system in Plainfield was in progress he was engaged in doing civil engineering work For sometime past he has been unable to do very much and he has of late been residing with his uncle where he died. The funeral services were held from the home of J. D. Spicer last Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock

Former Plainfielder Weds.

The following interesting item appeared in a recent number of the Lumber Journal:

E. C. Pease, the ubiquitous representative of Wm. Schuette & Co., manufacturers of lumber at Saginaw, Mich., has taken to himself a wife, and congratulations are in order. Mr. Pease is what we would call a thoroughly domestic man. He is where he finds his pleasures and we are glad that the lady who has been fortunate enough to link her happiness with his will have no cau e to regret it. We extend congratulations, and trust that their lives may be happy and long continued.

Mr. Pease was formerly of Washington Park, North Plainfield, and he has many friends both in this city and the borough who wish him happiness and prosperity.

Templars Paid a Visit.

Thursday evening the annual official visitation to St. John's Commandery, No. 9, K. T., of Elizabeth, was made by the officers of the Commandery. Those who went from this city were Deputy Grand Master, Sebring; Eminent Commander, Jacob Kirkner; Henry Woodland and Ed ward Nelson. C. H. McGill, of Lambertville, was also present. Mr. McGill came to Plainfield afterward and was the guest of Jacob Kirkner, of West Eighth street.

Got Thirty Days.

James H. Emmons was arraigned before the City Judge this morning on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. He was arrested early Thursday by Patrolman Saffron He went to the county jail for thirty days.

WILL FIGHT PAYMENT OF TAXES BEFORE '80.

Citizens Affected by Martin Act Hold a Meeting.

A FORMIDABLE OPPOSITION.

A GENERAL FUND TO BE RAISED TO MAKE THE CONTEST WITH.

Lawyer W. R. Codington Has Been Engaged to Make the Legal Fight—Everyone Affected by the Report Will be Urged to Assist in the Contention to be Made—Mr. Codington Expressed the Opinion That No Back Taxes Prior to 1880 Could be Collected—Justice Nash Also Made Some Remarks About Taxes.

As a result of a meeting held in the rooms of the Board of Trade Apr l 13th, it now looks as though a formidable opposition will be made to enforcement of the findings of the Martin Act Commissioners. There was a good-sized number of interested citizens present and they voted unanimously to send Lawyer W. R. Codington to Elizabeth next Monday morning to have him, if possible, secure a postponement of the hearing. In the meantime, Lawyer H. C. Runyon will go to Elizabeth and make a copy of the names and the several amounts as shown in the report of the commissioners. Postal cards will then be sent to everyone interested asking them to attend a meeting at a later date when definite action will be taken to contest the work of the Commissioners.

The plan decided upon is that each person desiring to go in the fight shall contribute five per cent. of the amount he is assessed so that a sufficient amount can be secured to put the thing through. Eugene A. Laing, V. W. Nash and F. C Lounsbury were appointed a committee to take charge of the matter and anyone desiring can call at the stores of Messrs. Laing and Nash or upon Mr. Lounsbury and they will have an opportunity of signing a petition which will be presented by Lawyer Codington to the Court.

There was no opposition to the proposed plan and it seemed to be the general opinion that so far as the innocent purchases of property are concerned, the Court will be willing to grant them their petition.

The meeting was called to order by F. C. Lounsbury, who stated the object of the meeting. H C. Runyon was made chairman. Lawyer W. R. Codington rehearsed the acts of the city and the commissioners in their endeavors to collect the back taxes. He said that the citizens of Plainfield as a unit opposed the paying of taxes prior to 1880. The records were uncertain and there is a general feeling that they cannot be collected. In his opinion, in a large number of cases the findings of the commissioners had proved a hardship. Mr. Codington said that heretofore when persons called at the office of the collector to ascertain about the taxes prior to 1880 they were informed that no effort would be made to collect the amounts. He thought that it should be the first duty to find out whether the first amounts prior to 1880 are liens. He thought there would be no doubt about the Court granting a postponement.

V W. Nash also made a few remarks. He said that the books prior to 1880 were found to be in such shape that the several amounts due to the city could not be figured out. When Mr. Nash was delinquent tax collector, he said it was often necessary for him to have the assessor go over his field book to learn about many cases. It was in some instances impossible to ascertain which was real and which was personal. Mr. Nash also spoke of the time when Mr. Clark was collector. He said that suits were commenced and discontinued because of the inaccuracy of the accounts. When he collected delinquent taxes he was given explicit instruction not to collect prior to 1880 as it was the general opinion that the amounts could not be collected. In view of all these facts it seemed to be unfair that the people should now be called upon to pay taxes prior to 1880.

Other remarks were made by Charles H. Hand, J. C. Pope, Eugene A. Laing and others. Each one was unanimous in the action decided upon by the meeting and at the next meeting the matter will take a more definite shape.

Entertained Insurance Men.

The local agents of the Metropolitan Insurance Company and their wives were entertained last Friday by Mr. and Mrs James E. Bailey, of 26 Manning avenue. During the evening Mr. Townley, of Westfield, entertained the guests with a phonograph exhibition, and there were solos by Messrs. Naylor and Hummer on the violin and piano. Mrs. John E. Manley sang several soprano solos with piano accompaniment, after which supper was served Before the guests departed all voted that the host and hostess entertained in a royal manner.

EXPENSES WERE PAID.

FAVORABLE FINANCES OF THE PARK AVENUE BAPTISTS.

Owing to the Liberality of the Members No Special Effort Had Been Made to Enlarge Collections—Election

A very satisfactory state of affairs was found at the annual meeting of the church and society of the Park Avenue Baptist church April 13th. All the bills had been paid and a small balance still remained in the treasury.

The meeting was called to order by the clerk, Thomas A. Cuming. Rev. J. W. Richardson, the pastor was made moderator. The report of the general fund committee was made by E. Fenton Haynes. The committee stated that owing to the good financial condition of the church, no special efforts had been made to enlarge the collections.

The report of the treasurer, E. Fenton Haynes, showed the receipts in the general fund amounted to $3,661 47; and $1,840.08 for benevolences, making a total of $5 201.55. A balance of $57.41 remained in the treasury. There is still a mortgaged indebtedness amounting to nearly $8,000 which was not mentioned in the report.

The report of the board of trustees was made by the president of the Board, J. Wesley Johnson. It showed that while all bills expressed had been paid when they fell due, the income had been somewhat smaller than usual. The Board asked that the subscriptions be increased as there were some needed repairs that would soon have to be made.

The election of trustees was held and the following were chosen: J. Wesley Johnson, A. D. Thompson, E. Fenton Haynes and R. C. Treadwell.

The meeting empowered the trustees to purchase a hymn and psalm indicator to be placed in the front of the church.

SOCIETY EVENTS.

Several Pleasant Social Events That Were Held Thursday.

One of the most brilliant events of the week was the delightful luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Ernest L. Walz, of LaGrande avenue. The table decorations were unusually artistic and beautiful The guests were well-known society women: Mrs. A. D. Shepherd, Mrs Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs Wilson W. Smith, Mrs. G. Kennedy Newell, Mrs. Ellis W. Hedges and Mrs. Harmon.

Miss Grace Cooley, of Rockview terrace, gave a luncheon Thursday in honor of Miss Tylee, who is the guest of Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, of East Seventh street. The guests were Mrs. Myers, Miss Wood, Miss Huntington, Miss Randolph, Miss Dumont and Miss Gould.

A very charming dinner was given Thursday by Mrs. S. L. Schoonmaker, of Central avenue, for a number of "the buds" of Plainfield society. Those present were the Misses Goddard, Miss Fisk, Miss Andrews, Miss Cox; Roy Cox, Augustus Fisk, Charles Fisk, Jr., and Daniel Runkle

The members of the Thursday Evening Euchre Club were pleasantly entertained last Thursday by Miss Charlotte Ayres at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Ayres, of Bank place. As usual, most of the evenings was devoted to progressive euchre. The winners of the first prizes were Mrs. Will Tier and Benjamin LaVere. Miss Lissa Livezay and Will F. Williams carried off the second prizes. A social time followed.

ELDERS AND DEACONS.

Officers Elected by the Crescent Avenue Presbyterians.

A business meeting of the Crescent Avenue church was held in the chapel Thursday for the election of elders and deacons. The meeting was preceded by a brief devotional service.

The election resulted as follows: Elders, John Leal, A. J. Gavett, Stephen Cahoone, A. W. Duxberry, Silas Yerkes, Dr. E. W. Hedges. The first two were re-elected. The deacons were H O. Newman and John Doull Miller. Mr. Newman was re-elected.

No Liquor at Pumptown.

Judge Woodbridge Strong has decided that wheelmen and others can get along very well without a tavern at Pumptown, on the road between Metuchen and Plainfield, and refused to grant a license to Madge E. Vail, who applied for one. The Court allowed Howard MacSherry to withdraw the application. Judge Strong stated that the probabilities are that there will be no need of a tavern at that place for some time to come and advised no one to apply for a license in the future.

Grocer Weber Cleared.

Herman Weber, the Liberty street grocer, freed himself Saturday a, m from the imputation of having oleomargerine in his store to represent butter. The suit of Dairy Commissioner McGuire against him to recover the fine of $100 alleged to be due was tried before Justice Nash this morning. The Justice decided that there was no cause for action.

TROLLEY WILL HUM THROUGH LINCOLN.

The Question Decided at New Market Last Night.

ORDINANCE PROGRESSED.

OLD STAGE ROAD PEOPLE DISAPPOINTED OVER RESULT.

Route of the Proposed Extension of Brunswick Traction Company Decided on by the Piscataway Township Committee—Lincoln Citizens are Rejoicing Over the Victory Which They Have Won—A Big Property Owner Offers Inducements to Have the Route Changed Somewhat, But Not Leave Lincoln Out.

The town of Lincoln won a victory over the "benighted backroads people" at the meeting of the Piscataway township committee held Friday after noon. The route of the trolley line connecting Bound Brook and Dunellen has for some time been a bone of contention over which the promoters of Lincoln and the residents along the line of the old stage road have been fighting.

The advocates of the latter route, including the people of Greenbrook, were represented at the meeting by Allan Strong, of New Brunswick, who applied to them the high-sounding title of "benighted backroads people." His argument was that Lincoln already had two railroads and sundry other advantages that were not given to his faction. Therefore they thought they were entitled to some consideration.

The franchise of the Brunswick Traction Company came up for the first reading and the committee decided by a vote of two to one that the route by the way of Lincoln was the preferable one. The committeemen voting in favor of the Lincoln route were Joseph Field and John Dayton. John Sebring opposed it. The meeting was held in Nelson's hotel. There was great rejoicing among the advocates from Lincoln.

The proposed route goes from Bound Brook to Beechwood Heights and up Harris lane and Lincoln boulevard to Lincoln and then to Dunellen Heights and Dunellen. The franchise will come up for second and third reading at a meeting next Wednesday.

One of the greatest kicks now seem to be regarding the use of Union avenue over which the trolley is supposed to run into Bound Brook. The trolley company would perfer not to use Union avenue at all, but go by Dr. Pierce's property in Bound Brook and so on through Lincoln to New Market. Dr. Pierce's property is divided by two railroads and he has signified his willingness to bridge the place so that his property will be joined. Of course, the company would like to secure some land and they want to shake the other route so far as Union avenue is concerned. By the latter route they would be obliged to fill in a great amount of lowland.

A Congregational Sociable.

The storm kept many away but nevertheless, the sociable of the Women's Association of the Congregational church, held in the church parlors Friday evening, proved a very enjoyable affair. An informal programme was arranged for the evening and consisted of recitations by Miss Carrie Potter, of Rahway, and Miss Aimee Emmons, and piano solos by Miss Nellie Winckler and Miss Cornelia Rockfellow. Refreshments were served during the latter part of the evening and all enjoyed a pleasant social time. Miss Cornelia Rockfellow acted as chairman of the committee in charge of the sociable.

Former Plainfielder Dead.

The death of Thomas W. Moore formerly of this city, occurred in Brooklyn, Friday, aged seventy one years. The funeral services were held from his late residence, 98 South Oxford street, Monday at 10:30 a. m. Interment was in Hillside cemetery in this city.

Some cough mixtures smother the cough. But the next breeze fans it into life again.

Better put the cough out.

That is, better go deeper and smother the fires of inflammation. Troches cannot do this. Neither can plain cod-liver oil.

But Scott's Emulsion can. The glycerine soothes and makes comfortable; the hypophosphites give power and stability to the nerves; and cod oil feeds and strengthens the weakened tissues.

WOULD NOT ACCEPT PLEA OF NON VULT.

An Exciting Scene Witnessed in City Court Saturday.

CASE OF SEXTON KENNEDY.

CITY WILL PROSECUTE HIM FOR NOT DIGGING GRAVES DEEPER.

Lawyer Swackhamer Represented the Defendant and Corporation Counsel Marsh for the City—Former Asked for Privilege to Retract Plea, Which Was Refused—Witnesses for City Were Ready to Testify—Petition Asking the Judge to Suspend Sentence on Kennedy—Case will be Heard Again Next Saturday.

Legal complications placed a new face on the troubel at the Methodist cemetery. It will be remembered, as was told in this paperat the time, that the Sexton was arrested on the charge of violating the health ordinance by not interring bodies in the cemetery at a sufficient depth to corre spond with the demands of the health ordinance. The neighbors were up in arms and a lively trial was expected Saturday was the time set for the trial. It was to be held in the Council chambers before City Judge DeMeza. This morning the Judge and all the officials of the court with the witnesses assembled. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh was present to represent the city. S. S. Swackhamer appeared as counsel for Isaac W. Kennedy, sexton of the First M. E church, the alleged offender of the Health Board's rules.

Mr. Swackhamer asked the privilego of retracting the plea of not guilty for his client and of substituting that of non vult. The request met with decided opposition from the Corporation Counsel. Mr. Swackhamer gave as his reasons for the change that the defence had understood that Kennedy was charged with violating a regular city ordinance which does not provide any special depth. The mistake had been discovered and therefore they wished to change the plea. He explained that Sexton Kennedy had no knowledge of breaking the law in any way and that if he had violated any ordinance it was entirely unintentional.

Mr. Swackhamer had a petition to present to the court from a number of representative citizens testifying as to the good character of the sexton and asking that the sentence of the court be suspended. Among the signers were J. W. Gavett, G. Q. Decker, G. L. VanEmburgh, Fred C. Lounsburw, Henry Liefke, E. M. Laing, A. M. Runyon & Son, C. H. Bogg, L. W. Randolph and J. W. Jackson. There were also personal letters from J. W. Jackson and Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass

Corporation Counsel Marsh made a vigorous protest and declared that as the representative of the city he would oppose the changing of the plea to anything but guilty. It was an attempt to get around the law, he said. He also declared that the defence had been trying to bring the Board of Health and its ordinances into disreputa

Judge DeMeza refused to accept the change of plea but remarked that a change to guilty would be allowed. Mr. Swackhamer was undecided and asked for a week's adjournment to consider the case. The adjournment was granted.

Scrofula is Snake-Like in its subtlety. It lies hidden for years in the ambush of the blood, and when it strikes it voids its venom alike on strength and beauty, disfiguring the one and undermining the other.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is a specific for scrofula in its worst and most malignant forms. Scrofula is a blood disease. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifying medicine. Mineral medicines only drive scrofula below the surface. Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a vegetable remedy and it eradicates the disease. There is no remedy for scrofula equal to Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"I was cured of a long-standing case of scrofula by Dr. J. C. Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The disease first manifested itself when I was a child, by breaking out in red blotches all over my body. I was not free from the trouble until I took several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. That effected a permanent cure."—MRS. E. H. SNYDER, Lehighton, Pa.

GREETED NEW PASTOR.

REV. G. W. GARDNER WAS INTRODUCED TO HIS PARISHIONERS.

The Reception Held in Grace M. E Church, Which was Filled With a Cordial Assemblage—Music Rendered

The reception given by the members of Grace M. E. church to their new pastor, Rev. G. W. Gardner last Friday, was, as usual, a great success. The pretty little church was filled with members and friends who gathered to give the pastor a cordial and warm greeting. Dr. Carroll was master of ceremonies and announced the several numbers on the programme that was presented during the evening.

The first selection was by an orchestra composed of Louis Hummer, piano; Morris Sorensen, cornet; Ernest Wilcox and Bert Naylor, violins. This was followed with a recitation by Miss Ada Wilson, and a pleasing soprano solo by Miss Kathryn Glen, accompanied by Miss Lillian Glen on the piano. The two remaining numbers on the programme were a recitation by Miss Sloagland and a tenor solo by M. C. VanArsdale, and both were finely given. Louis Hummer accompanied Mr. VanArsdale on the piano.

The remaining portion of the evening was devoted to sociability. Rev Mr. Gardner, assisted by Dr Carroll and Mrs. John Valiant, received those present and many for the first time met the new pastor. All were delighted with the genuine hospitality evidenced, and the enjoyable occasion. Other ministers present were Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, Presiding Elder G. W. Smith, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, Rev J. O. McKelvey, and they all extended to Rev. Mr. Gardner their best wishes for success and blessing in his work.

An enjoyable feature was the serving of refreshments by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society, who had charge of the reception.

VER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

A Pleasant Surprise Tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Gallup.

A pleasant surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T Gallup, at their home on West Front street, last Friday, in honor of their silver wedding anniversary. The party assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gallup, on Plainfield ave nue, and proceeded in a body to the Gallup homestead, where they succeeded in completely surprising the family.

The evening was pleasantly spent in the playing of whist and in vocal and instrumental music.

Among those present were Judge and Mrs. W. A. Coddington, Mr. and Mrs. Salmon Baker, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Breed, Mr. and Mrs. Pidard and Miss Pollard, Mr. and Mrs. Horsley Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. Austin, Mrs A. M. Hanigan, Mrs. Walton and T. E. Warman.

ANOTHER SUNDAY OFFENDER.

Huff Couldn't Convince the Judge That He Was a Seventh-Day Observer.

Fred Huff came up in the City Court Friday afternoon for trial on the charge of violating the Sabbath observance ordinance by selling cigars and tobacco at the little stand at the Dunellen terminus of the trolley.

He put up a defence that he was a Seventh Day Baptist. He failed to prove it to the satisfaction of the court. He had no lawyer. Corporation Counsel Marsh was present for the city. The Judge found Huff guilty and announced that he would pronounce sentence in a week.

PLEDGED FIDELITY FOR THEIR LIVES.

Williams - Clark Nuptials in Crescent Avenue Chhrch.

A FASHIONABLE CEREMONY

JOINED IN WEDLOCK AS THE SUN WAS SETTING.

The designs of coy Dan Cupid were consummated in a most happy manner April 13th when among an admiring assemblage of relatives and friends, Miss Bertha McCullough Clark daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Clark, of this city, became the bride of Samuel Portor Williams, of Hartford, Conn.

The Crescent Avenue church, where the ceremony took place, presented a beautiful appearance. The pulpit platform and the surrounding floor space were burdened with floral decorations of superb beauty. The only blossoms visible were those of Easter lilies, which were arranged with profusion on and about the platform. These were supplemented with palms of various varieties and trailing vines in which smilax predominated. The floor about the front of the church was carpeted in white, giving an added beauty to the effect.

The large concourse of friends and relatives gathered before 6 o'clock, which was the hour set for the ceremony. The members of the immediate families of the bride and groom were seated in special seats at the front of the church.

At 6 o'clock the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march pealed from the big organ and amid a pause of expectancy the bridal party entered the church. The bride came first, leaning upon the arm of her father. She presented a charming picture, attired in white satin with pearl trimmings and duchess and white lace. In her hand she carried a cluster of Easter lilies.

The maid of honor was Miss Helen Clark, a sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids were Miss Marion Williams, Miss Gertrude Haviland, Miss Mary Shreve, Miss Marion Henderson, Miss Mary Bushnell, of this city, and Miss Sarah Homer, of Chicago. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids were attired in white organdie over white silk, and carried bunches of Easter lilies.

The party moved up the aisle to the pulpit, where it was met by the groom and his best man, Philip Williams. The different members of the party took their proper places, while the bride and groom standing in front of a small railing of white, surrounded by flowers, plighted their troth.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. R. Richards, D. D., the pastor of the church, who uttered in impressive manner the words which united the couple. The bride was given away by her father.

The ushers were Sheldon Catlin, of New York; Wm. Hooker, of Hartford; Frank Lisle, of Rochester; Howard Foster, of New York; Frank Frost, of Plainfield, and Irving Clark, a brother of the bride. The picture presented by the bridal party was a particularly pretty one, not to be forgotten soon by those who witnessed it. At the conclusion of the ceremony the party, preceded by the bride and groom, left the church and were driven to the home of the bride's prents, at 131 Crescent avenue.

A reception to the relatives and immediate friends followed at the home of the bride's parents on Crescent avenue. The house was beautifully decorated with southern smilax Easter lilies, pink and white roses, pink carnations and palms. The decorations were very handsome. A wedding supper was served in the dining room. There were a hundred and fifty guests present at the reception.

Among those present at the reception from out of town were the Misses Clark, Mrs. W. J Clark, Mrs. W. J. Clark, Jr., Miss Bessie Clark, Lawrence Clark and Mrs. A. Homer, of Philadelphia, Mr and Mrs. Louis N. Lukens, Carl Delacour, Mr and Mrs. Charles H. Clark, the Messrs. Clark, of Conshohocken, Pa., Mr and Mrs. Charles S. Williams and Dr. J. W. Harper, of Hartford, Conn., Mrs. J. W. Ball, Miss Bull, Harcourt Bull, of Springfield, Mass., Charles Homer, of Beverley, N. J., Miss Farnham, of Sing Sing and Miss McCracken, of New York.

The bridal couple expected to take the Southwestern Limited on the Jersey Central Railroad which passes through Plainfield at 9:45 o'clock They had been given to understand that the train would stop. After leaving the house amid a shower of rices, they arrived at the station to see that train pass through Plainfield going at a rate of sixty miles an hour. They were, therefore, compelled to wait for the 4:17 train for the south.

The newly married couple will spend several weeks in the south and will then return to Hartford, Conn., where they will reside.

They were the recipients of many handsome and valuable gifts. Silver and cut glass in large variety were included in the beautiful array of presents.

A PROSPEROUS CHAPEL

A PRESBYTERIAN SOCIETY THAT HAS A SUCCESSFUL CAREER.

Annual Business Meeting of Warren Chapel Friday Night—Much Money Raised for Missionaries and Benevolences

The members of Warren chapel held their annual meeting last Friday at which time the reports from the various societies were presented and other important business transacted Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, presided, and after the devotional exercises the reports were read.

For the Ladies' Aid Society, Mrs. J W. Gavett reported that the society is four years old. It started with thirteen members and there are now twenty-one on the roll.

It showed that there was an average attendance of 22 at each meeting and that the sum of $25 was raised for foreign mission work and the same for home mission work. Mrs J. O McKelvey reported for the Junior Christian Endeavor Society. There are now twenty members with an average attendance of forty. The sum of $5 was sent to Alaska, and $34 03 was contributed to Miss Rachel Maier, who is now in Africa.

Rev. Mr. McKelvey presented the report of the treasurer for the King's Foreign Missionary Circle It showed the receipts to be $54.40 and the expenditures $47.58, leaving a balance of $6 82

Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, superintendent of the sewing school, presented her report. There were nineteen meetings held and the membership has increased to 113 There are twelve classes with an average attendance of 60. Five different kinds of sewing are taught, and in all fifty-two garments were made during the year. In all the sum of $20.19 was received and there is a balance of $4 in the treasury.

J. W. Gavett, church treasurer, presented his report showing the receipts to be $398.82, with a balance of $44 82 on hand. John Herman, treasurer of the Friday evening missionary meeting, reported that $77.25 had been collected. Mrs. Wm. A. Wilson, treasurer for the Ladies' Aid Society, stated that $62 70 had been received and that there is a balance of $8.49 on hand.

The report of Superintendent Lovell, of the Sunday school, was very encouraging. The receipts during the year were $533 31 and the expenditures $512 50, leaving a balance of $20 37. The total receipts of school and church were $1,401 59 and the expenditures $1 280 52, with a balance of $1,12 07. $338.40 in all was contributed to home and foreign mission work.

Rev. Mr. McKelvey, at this time, made a few congratulatory remarks, in which he expressed gratefulness for success in the past and spoke words of encouragement for the future. Following Mr. Kelvey's remarks, the election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: Superintendent, L. N. Lovell; assistant superintendent, J. W. Gavett; choister, E. B Ryder; librarian, L. E. Lovell; assistant, Frank Kesselring; organist, Charles Wheeler; cornetist, Whitfield Frazee; janitor, Marks Lee.

Mr. Lovell then spoke of the urgent needs for a new library. He appointed a committee of which Mr. Rankin is the chairman, and he asked those present to help the committee in any way they could to accomplish the desired purpose. The committee will meet next Monday evening at the home of Mr. McKelvey. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

FANNY CROSBY SONG SERVICE.

Short sketch of Late Composer Read and several of Her Hymns Sung.

The members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held a "Fanny Crosby Song Service," in the parlors of the church last Friday. Miss Emma V. Fish conducted the service. A short sketch of Fanny Crosby was read, after which Miss Etta Krymer, H J. Martin, H. J. Martin, Jr., and Thomas A. Cuming rendered favorite solos from Fanny Crosby's hymns. The last part of the hour was devoted to the members of the society who announced their favorite hymns and gave reasons why it was a favorite. Another feature was the relating of the origin of a number of popular hymns. The service was very helpful and interesting throughout.

Pupils Render Their Entertainments

"The Lamp Lights of a Dark Continent," by the Junior Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, which was so much enjoyed by all who were in attendance when it was given Friday, April 8th, by request will be repeated Friday evening of this week. No admission will be charged, but an offering will be taken.

SHAKESPEARE GIVEN BY LOCAL AMATEURS.

"Merchant of Venice" Was Successfully Produced.

LARGE AUDIENCE PRESENT.

MISS POND AND A. E. SMITH IN THE LEADING ROLES.

The Presentation Was Given at Music Hall Saturday Evening by the Students of the New Jersey Military Academy and Their Friends—The Young Thespians Gave a Very Creditable Performance and Received the Enthusiastic Plaudits of the Audience—Miss Pond and A. E. Smith Displayed Talent.

The famous Shakespearean comedy "The Merchant of Venice" was presented for the first time on a local stage Saturday evening. What made it of special interest to the good people of Plainfield was the fact that the "Merchant of Venice," the fair "Lady Portia," the penurious "Shylock" and all their friends and companions of Shakespeare's creation were impersonated by the sons and daughters from Plainfield homes. The drama was given in Music Hall by students of the New Jersey Military Academy.

It was a courageous thing to do, that attempt to portray one of the greatest of dramatic production. It took careful study and long training to prepare for scenes in which the greatest actors of the age have appeared. And the amateur thespians did well, considering all the circumstances under which the play was given. It was not and no one expected it to be, a production like that given by Ellen Terry and Henry Irving. Nevertheless, there was much deserving of praise to be noticed in the production, and some of the parts were taken with a skill and ability that marked decided talent on the part of the participants. The dramatis personæ was as follows:

The Duke of Venice	Percy Robert Colwell
Antonio, the Merchant of Venice	Walter E. Serrell
Friends of Antonio.
Bassanio	George Proctor Smith
Gratiano	Charles M. Dolliver
Solanio	Abbott Brainerd
Salarino	Fred C. Bonney
Lorenzo, in love with Jessica	Lin ley M. Hillman
Shylock, a Jew	Arthur Embury Smith
Tubal, a Jew, his friend	N. Douglass Drake
Launcelot Gobbo, a clown, servant to Shylock	Aubrey Cameron Hull
Old Gobbo, father to Launcelot	J. Alexander Wilson
Jailer	Seward S. Pickard
Leonardo, servant to Bassanio	Edwin Smaller
Servants to Portia.
Balthazar	William H Hepburn
Stephano	Stanley G. Fielding
Portia, a rich heiress	Miss Rita Pond
Nerissa, her companion	Miss Edith B. Horton
Jessica, daughter to Shylock	Miss Lenora Wright Howard

The students of the academy, it will be noticed, were assisted by several of their friends. The play, itself, was adapted to suit the occasion. Several of the unimportant scenes were omitted and a few minor changes made. All the characters were costumed in appropriate Venitian fashion. Some were so made up that their own parents had difficulty in recognizing them. Besides the characters mentioned in the cast there were the Magnifico of Venice, officers of the Court of Justice, servants and other attendants, impersonated by other students from the academy.

Miss Rita Pond, as "Portia" and Arthur Embury Smith, as "Shylock," took the principal roles, and they undoubtedly carried off the highest honors of the evening. Miss Pond was delightful. She entered into her part with ease and feeling. She seemed perfectly at home on the stage and every action and expression portrayed the character as depicted by the author. Her most pronounced success was in the court scene, where she appeared in the guise of the young but learned doctor, wearing mortarboard cap and black gown in very becoming fashion. Her exposition of the case between "Shylock" and "Antonio" was given in a manner that evinced her decided dramatic talent. Her enunciation was remarkably distinct.

Smith was a surprise to the audience His part was, perhaps, the most difficult of all, but he carried it in a way that brought praise from even the most fastidious of the critics. His voice, his step, his every action showed that he had carefully studied the part and used his every effort to represent it according to Shakespeare's ideas as suggested in the play itself. His accuracy in the little details was noticeable. In the court scene he, too, was at his best. His acting at that time was equal to that of the many who make their livelihood behind the footlights.

There were others who deserved much credit for their parts in the production. Walter E. Serrell, as "Antonio," was a grave and distinguished Venetian merchant. He played his part with a depth of feeling that was very acceptable. George Proctor Smith was a calm and dignified "Bassanio." His anxiety at the fate of his friend and benefactor was well shown. The "Duke of Venice," Percy Robert Colwell, was very satisfactory.

Charles Marvin Dolliver made a successful "Gratiano." He was easy and self-possessed and introduced a freedom of action that was a relief from the usual set notions of amateurs. His humorous speeches were brought out with a spontaneous ease that made them effective.

Lindley M. Hillman as "Lorenzo," and Langdon Wright Howard as "Jessica," made a very loving couple. Howard was a trifle out of his element as a girl, although he made a good-looking one. Hillman sang a tenor solo.

Miss Edith B. Horton was a charming "Nerissa." She fulfilled the requirements of her role very satisfactorily.

Abbott Brainerd and Fred C. Bonny looked very brave Venetian nobles in the parts of "Salanio" and "Sararino," "Tubal," the "worthy friend" of "Shylock," was well impersonated by N. Douglass Drake. The "Gobbos," father and son, were a funny combination.

In one way, some of the young thespians deserve criticism. They did not speak distinctly so that those in the back part of the hall were unable to understand what they said.

During the play, several solos by Miss Bertha VanNuise Willis were introduced. She had a sweet voice of considerable power, which she used with effect in her well chosen selections. The orchestra was under the direction of W. E. MacClymont, of this city. A number of pleasing selections were pleasingly rendered during the evening by them. "The New Jersey Military Academy March," dedicated to the school by its composer, Mr. MacClymont, met with an enthusiastic reception.

The performance was witnessed by a large and fashionable audience that seemed thoroughly satisfied. Enthusiastic encores were given to each scene.

At the close of the court scene, the most effective in the presentation, Miss Pond was presented with a handsome bouquet.

MUST OBTAIN APPROVAL

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS EXERCISED OVER A NEW LAW.

It Refers to Repair of Bridges and Makes More Work for Whole Board —Senator Reed Asks for a Better Road.

The Board of Freeholders of Somerset County is somewhat exercised over the new law, which reduces the amount of repairs that can be made upon bridges by committees, without the approval of the whole Board. The members discussed the matter informally at the last meeting. They were of the opinion that it would add materially to the expense of the Board for it practically would require the whole Board to look after matters which were now left largely to committees. The Board will meet today at the Duryea bridge near Skillman's station, and in the meantime a committee will look at the bridge at Millstone, which the people of Franklin township want renewed. In this instance the committee can report to the full board at once, but frequently they would have to wait until the regular meeting, which would greatly delay the work.

Senator C. A. Reed appeared before the Board with a petition for macadamizing the road known as the Plainfield and Morristown road. The petition was received and filed

A similar petition was presented by Freeholder VanCleef, for the Six-Mile Run road, extending 5¼ miles through Franklin township, from the junction of French and Somerset streets to East Millstone. The same action was taken.

County Engineer Doughty recommended that the Board permit the boroughs of Bound Brook and North Plainfield to make their own rules as to the opening of sewers, etc., in the county roads that pass through them.

AN INGENIOUS DEFENSE.

Colored Man Said He Couldn't Hold Up His Pants and Fight Too.

He wore such a guileless expression that it was difficult to believe that anything but the truth ever passed his lips.

The offender was William Brown, a driver for the Plainfield Sanitary Company. His brother Edmund and Miss Eugenia Jackson had had trouble. She charged William with threatening to kill her and attempting to strike her the night after Edmund was arrested.

He explained to the Judge that he had forgotten to put on his suspenders and so had to keep his hands in his pockets to keep his trousers up. His hands were in his trousers pockets all the time, he said, and so how could he have possibly struck her?

The court was convulsed at the story but the Judge was not affected. He fined Brown $8.

Fire Alarm System Inspected.

Chief Fairchild, of the borough fire department, is having a thorough inspection of the system made. He is also ascertaining the location of each key, and the fire alarm boxes will soon be painted and new signs posted.

THE OLD MARE LED A WILD ZIGZAG CHASE.

Woman Was Unable to Control the Frightened Horse.

AN EXCITING SUNDAY RIDE.

MRS. PETER FINGER AND TWO CHILDREN BEHIND THE STEED.

While Descending a Steep Hill near Pedediou's Hotel on the Valley Road the Breeching Strap Broke and the Powerful Horse Took Fright and Went Tearing Down the Road Toward Homer— Mrs. Finger Pluckily Clung to Reins— Bicyclists and Pedestrians Had to Hurry Out of the Way—Horse Ran to its Stable.

It was a wild ride that Mrs. Peter Finger had Sunday afternoon, and she and her children had a wonderful escape from a tragic ending. Mrs Finger is the wife of Peter Finger, the proprietor of Finger's Hotel, which is located on Somerset street, just south of Washingtonville.

Mrs. Finger and her two small children drove up to Warrenville to visit friends. They had the powerful white mare and the two-seated open wagon. All went well until the return. As they were descending a sharp declivity, near Pedeflou's hotel on the valley road the breeching strap broke and the wagon rushed against the flanks of the horse. The equine made a spring and away she went at full gallop down the hill and up the next grade.

Mrs. Finger was frightened, but she clung to the reins and devoted her energies to keeping the frightened animal in the middle of the road. The roadway was narrow and there were other teams on it. Mrs. Finger's screams warned them of the approaching runaway and they drove down in the ditch to allow her to pass.

A wheelman came along with head bent down. He never saw the flying horse until close upon it. There was no time to dismount so he headed for the ditch. He landed in a heap while Mrs. Finger and her frightened steed went dashing by.

Narrow escapes were frequent all the way. Many did not see the runaway until it was close by and had barely time to get out of the road Still Mrs. Finger clung to the reins and directed the course of the white mare.

Over the bridge into Washingtonville they thundered. Round the corner they swerved while the children fled in all directions to get out of the path. Along the brook the runaway sped and went straight into the hotel sheds where she stopped of her own accord. Mrs Finger was taken to her room while the frightened children were carried in too frightened by the exciting ride to walk. No damage was done to harness or wagon by its unexpected drive.

SAYS HIS WIFE IS A TERROR.

And She Don't Stay Home to Cook What He Buys.

The marital infelicities of John Venable and his wife Rosa, colored, were aired in Justice Mosher's court room Saturday evening.

John was arrested by Constable Rockafellow on a warrant sworn out by his wife, charging him with having assaulted her. The alleged assault occurred at the home of the couple on East Third street last Thursday evening. Rosa in her testimony swore that John had a habit of beating her whenever the idea to do so occurred to him. She also charged that he did not provide her with sufficient food and other necessities of life.

John testified that Rosa was a terror. "She don't stay home long enough to cook what I does buy, nohow, Judge," he averred, glancing reproachfully at his wife.

Concerning Rosa's charge of assault Venable said that she was annoying him and that he merely pushed her from him.

SHORT, YET LONG TRIP.

HUMOROUS AND GRAPHIC LECTURE IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

Rev. George C. Wilding Was Full of Reminiscences, Most of Which Were Humorous, but Here and There Pathetic.

It is a difficult thing to transport several hundred people to England and back in an hour, but Rev George C. Wilding, D. D., of Jersey City, accomplished that feat last Monday by the aid of his clever lecturing abilities. He gave a lecture in Vincent chapel on that subject. A humorous and graphic lecture it was called and it fully bore out the name.

Dr. Wilding has appeared in Plainfield before. So when he was announced to speak last Monday there were many who wanted to hear him again. He came under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Mission Circle The chapel was crowded with an attentive audience.

Dr. Wilding's lecture was not built on the lines of the usual essay that the public is frequently called upon to listen to. It was made up of an infinite number of reminiscences and anecdotes, most of which were funny. There was a serious or pathetic touch here and there, however, that prevented the wit from becoming tiresome.

Dr. Wilding set out to tell some thing of his own trip to England and back and carried his hearers along with him. His descriptions of life on shipboard were carefully drawn true to life. He seemed to have the happy faculty of seeing the fun in everything and so his hearers were enabled to witness them too.

He remarked on the wonderful manner in which everybody gets acquainted on shipboard and how the striking peculiarities shine forth during the ocean trip. He told of a collision that his vessel had with a lumber vessel and how the crew of the latter craft was saved.

Then he landed his hearers in England and told them how the sights in that land looked to an American. London was reached and a brief trip made through the principal buildings of interest. Then the return was made to Liverpool by the way of York. The ocean voyage back to the western continent was filled with happenings that were graphically pictured. Then Dr. Wilding's audience was landed safe in Vincent chapel again after a delightful trip.

BOUGHT A FARM.

A. Vanderbeek Becomes Somewhat of an Agriculturist.

Landlord A. Vanderbeek Monday purchased at executor's auction sale the Littel farm of 97 acres, located one mile from North Branch station, Somerset county, and has placed his nephew, S. Cole Vanderbeek, on the farm to work it and have a home for himself and family. Twenty acres of the farm has an orchard of young peach trees, which are studded with cotton tails, and the ten acres of woodland is alive wity grey squirrels, and the ex-freeholder will no doubt his himself away to his farm when the piano trade is dull and the game season opens, and enjoy the sport of hunting, of which he is very fond.

—C. R. Hepburn, of East Second street, has purchased a new Eldridge wheel for his wife.

A DEFEAT AT LAST.

Whist Trophy Wrested From Park Club by the Ridgewood Team.

After a short visit to the clubhouse of the Park Club, the new challenge trophy of the New Jersey Whist Association has departed hence to visit the Ridgewood Club. This change in the stopping place of the cup was occasioned by the defeat of the Park Club whist team by the team from the Ridgewood Club Monday evening in a match for the trophy played in the Park clubhouse.

The defeat was a surprise to all concerned, the visitors included. The Ridgewood team was at its best, however, and played a remarkably strong game, while the Parks had fallen off a little in their usual excellence. It was a fair defeat, however. The game was a close one from start to finish, the visitors finally winning out by a score of 15 to 11.

The Ridgewood team was composed of Messrs. Bruck, Dunbar, Winans and Rodrigo. The Park Club players were Messrs. Rogers, McCutchen, Howell and Reed.

MARRIED AT ST. JOS PH'S.

Popular Young Couple Pledge Troth for Life.

Monday afternoon at St. Joseph's R. C. church occurred the marriage of Miss Marguerite Laughlin, of the borough, to Antonio Mark R. Martell, of Canada. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Father Miller, pastor of the church. Miss Carrie Reed was maid of honor, while the best man was Mr. Godyou. A reception followed the marriage at the home of the bride on Craig place, where a small company of relatives and friends gathered to congratulate the happy couple and wish them a long and successful journey through life. Both the bride and groom are popular young people. Mr. and Mrs. Martell will spend their honeymoon in Worcester, Mass., and upon their return they will reside on East Front street in the Voehl flats.

Visitors at Music Hall.

Louis Aldrich, president of the Actors' Fund of America, and one of the celebrated thespians of this country, visited Manager Mags Edwards Monday. Mr. Aldrich and Mr Edwards are old friends, having been associated together in the organization of the Actors' Fund. Miss Dora Co thwell, who created the role of the widow in "The Editor," accompanied Mr. Aldrich. Both visitors were highly pleased with the production of "The Editor," as given by the Ryan Company.

Jerry Landed His Prisoner.

Under ordinary circumstances, Michael Readington, of High Bridge, is an inoffensive creature as ever lived. With a slight amount of liquor abroad he became abusive. Tuesday afternoon, he went into Giles' bakery on Lee place and wanted to buy a cup of coffee. He didn't want to pay for it. Then he refused to leave. Cash was called in. Readington swung his arms and Cash went down. A struggle followed. Cash was finally victorious. His prisoner was lodged in jail. This morning, Judge DeMeza sent Readington to Elizabeth for thirty days

A RESTLESS YOUNGSTER

STUDENT AT MILITARY ACADEMY HAS DISAPPEARED.

He Comes From Chicago and It is Possible That He Has Started for Home on a Bicycle, as He Had Taken It.

After quarreling with his schoolmate, Stanley G. Fielding bundled up a small stock of clothing and started for Chicago on his wheel. This occurred on Sunday evening and since that time nothing more has been heard of the lad.

Fielding is the son of a prominent citizen of Chicago. He entered the New Jersey Military Academy as a boarding pupil several months ago He is a young lad of fifteen years. He has a dark olive complexion and is quite stout and of a stocky build. He is about five feet, three inches in height.

Fielding has been staying at the Academy under the direct supervision of the superintendent, Dr. Warde. Some time ago Fielding's father sent him a wheel. The lad frequently told his classmates that sometime he would ride home on his wheel. He thought he could make the journey in a couple of days.

On Saturday evening Fielding took part in the production of the "The Merchant of Venice" with the other students of the Military Academy. He took the part of "Stephano," a servant to Portia. Sunday afternoon he was at the Academy. There was some trouble between him and one of the other boys, Seward A. Rickards. Fielding went up to his room.

He donned his ordinary clothes and packed up his uniform. With a few other things, he made a bundle and tied it to his wheel. He then mounted the wheel and rode off.

Dr. Warde was not at the Academy at the time. It was always the custom to make the Academy as homelike as possible, and so the boys were allowed to leave the building under ordinary circumstances. No one thought Fielding's departure anything out of the ordinary until some time after he had disappeared.

An alarm was then sent out but no trace of the missing boy could be found. The police of the neighboring cities were notified. Dr. Warde then went to New York to continue the search.

Mr Fielding was notified of his son's disappearance and telegraphed back that no expense should be spared to discover his whereabouts. No possible blame was laid on Dr. Warde. Despite all the efforts that are being made to find the lad, he seems to have vanished completely after he rode away from the academy.

Hurt at Pond's.

Patrick Bergen of 17 South Second street, an employe at the Pond Tool Works, narrowly escaped death Tuesday by having a large casting fall on him. Bergen was walking about the casting at the time when it slipped from its position and fell on him. He received a cut five inches in length in the back of his head, his back was bruised and there was another cut in the chin. At first it was thought that Bergen was dead, but he was quickly removed to the hospital for treatment. An examination of his injuries showed that they were not as serious as was at first supposed, and today he is improving, with strong hopes of recovery.

Partnership Dissolved.

The partnership between David C. Bowne, Jacob Klotz and Fred Hand, in the conduct of the Plainfield Bottling Works on Somerset street, has been dissolved, Mr. Hand retiring from the firm. The new firm name is D. C. Bowne & Co., with Mr Klotz as manager.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Are added to your veins by taking with each meal one of the natural iron Capsuloids made from the fresh blood of young, healthy bullocks.

Hundreds have testified that this is the only iron medicine which agrees perfectly with stomach and bowels. The following testimony is selected at random from among some hundreds. Mr. Howard Patterson, of Tremont, N. Y., while acting as manager of one of Mr. Edwards' grocery stores, began to lose flesh and after almost losing his life through a steady decline, was saved and restored to health by taking Capsuloids. He writes as follows:

THE CAPSULOID COMPANY, New York City.

GENTLEMEN:—I cannot thank you too heartily for what your Capsuloids have done for me. I was a powerful young man two years ago but developed dry consumption, and continued to grow worse for nine months, when I was forced to go west. Climate, travel and medicine failed to do me the slightest good. My blood was exhausted; I was completely out of breath; to simply make change for customers made me pant; I grew thinner and thinner, lost my appetite and coughed terribly and was rapidly reaching the last stage of dry consumption, when I heard of your Capsuloids. They acted like magic. My blood grew rich, my heart ceased palpitating, I could get my breath easily, my appetite returned, I grew strong, had good color and had gained seven pounds at the end of seven weeks. I am still gaining right along and will report to you later. I am out of all danger now. HOWARD PATTERSON.

INVASION OF CUBA BY LAND FORCES NOW PLANNED.

Important Conference Held in Washington Yestrrday to Plan the Attack.

Help From Insurgents—Great Excitement in Madrid—Another Prize Captured—Brief Encounter Between War Ships—Shenandoah May be Safe—Talk of Annexing Hawaii.

Washington, D. C., April 27, 2:45 p. m.—The Senate committee on foreign relations has considered the proposition that the United States should annex Hawaii but has taken no action in the matter.

The naval authorities are very anxious that the annexation treaty with Hawaii should be ratified by the Senate as speedily as possible as it would then give the American squadron in the western waters a base of supplies and a coaling station.

Gen. Miles and the Cuban representatives in Washington are holding a conference today with the President and Secretary of War regarding the plans of operation for the American invading army in Cuba.

The Cubans here have arranged for Lieutenant Rowan's safe conduct to the insurgent camp in Cuba. Rowan left for Cuba on a secret mission several days ago and is supposed to have reached the insurgents' camp safely.

A Grand Invasion of Cuba.

Washington, April 27, 10 a. m.—President McKinley, Secretary of War Alger and General Miles will hold an important conference in the White House today to arrange for an invasion of Cuba. It is the plan to make a naval attack on Havana, and during the demonstration to land 2,000 marines, who will be co-operated with from the rear by the insurgent troops.

Excitement at Madrid.

Madrid, April 27.—The populace in this city are greatly excited over a report that has reached here that the United States cruisers, Minneapolis and Columbia, have left the United States bound for Spain.

It is announced here today from official sources that the Spanish fleet has left Manila, capital of the Phillipine Islands, to give battle to Admiral Dewey's fleet of American men-of-war that has just sailed from Hong Kong.

Shenandoah May be Safe.

Cork, April 27, 10 a. m.—The British ship Killarney arrived at Bristol this morning and reported having spoken to the Shenandoah on her way to the United States. The Shenandoah has been reported captured by the Spanish.

Spanish Torpedo Boat Sighted.

Dover, England, April 27, 12:30 p. m.—A Spanish torpedo boat passed this morning. Her name could not be learned. She was apparently alone.

American Bark Reported Captured.

Madrid, April 27, 12:30 p. m.—Advices from Manila, the capital of the Phillippine Islands, state that the Spanish fleet has captured the American bark Saranac, laden with coal.

To Take the Phillipines

Hong Kong, April 27, 10 a. m.—Admiral Dewey, of the Pacific fleet of warships, has been ordered to take the Phillipines.

Military Camp Flooded.

Chickamauga, April 27, 1 p. m.—The military camp at the Chickamauga Park was again flooded last night by the heavy rains. The morning has opened bright, clear and cool.

Refugees From Cuba.

Key West, April 27 12:45 p. m.—A British steamer arrived at this port this morning from Havana, Cuba. She had on board a hundred and thirty refugees, mostly Americans and English.

It was reported by those on board the steamer that the people in the city of Havana are panic stricken. The price of supplies has risen very rapidly since the blockade was instituted.

A Landing on Cuba Reported

Key West, April 27, 1 p. m.—It is reported here that Rear Admiral Sampson's fleet has effected a landing at Cardenas on the Cuban coast. No details of the landing are yet attainable

Spanish Troops Concentrating on Coast.

Havana, Cuba, via Cienfugas, April 27, 12:25 p. m.—Nobody here is able to locate the Spanish fleet and great anxiety is felt about its non-appearance.

Contradictory reports have been received about its present location.

The Spanish troops through the Island have been concentrated at different points along the coast so as to be ready to meet any attempt to land the American troops.

Thousands of loyal Cubans are reported as enlisting. A battalion is being organized here by the former Spanish regulars.

Cruiser at Bar Harbor

Bar Harbor, April 27, 1 p. m.—The United States cruiser Minneapolis anchored off here last night. She sailed away to the east at an early hour this morning.

Terrible Storm at Sea

Norfolk, Va., April 27, 12:45 p. m.—The cruiser Montgomery and the transport Panther that sailed from Old Point Comfort yesterday encountered a terrible storm last night. A coast bark was wrecked in the storm.

Gage Confers With Wall Street Men.

New York, April 27 1 p. m.—Secretary of the Treasury Gage arrived here this morning and is in consultation with the financiers regarding the proposed bond issue.

He favors the plan of a popular loan. He says the Government will have no difficulty in raising the money for the issue of bonds.

Short Encounter Near Havana.

London, April 27, 11:10 a. m.—A dispatch from Havana to this city says that an American torpedo boat destroyer fired on the Spanish gunboat Lijera at Cardenas, Cuba The smokestack of the Spanish gunboat was shot away. The American ship is reported to have retired damaged.

It is supposed that the American warship fired upon by the Spanish gunboat Lijera off the coast of Cuba was the torpedo boat Cushing. No details of the engagement have been received.

WATER COMPANY NOW MAKING ITS DEFENSE.

Trying to Disprove the Boiling Spring Contention.

MANY WITNESSES HEARD.

SEVERAL WERE OLD RESIDENTS ALONG GREEN BROOK.

Claimed That the Water Shed That Feeds Green Brook is Six Miles Square in Area and That the Water Company's Wells Only Drain One and a Quarter Miles Square—William Ballentine Swore That He Never Saw the Boiling Springs—A Professional Sportsman Testified About the Dry Ground

Somerville, April 27.—The Mountain Water Company is now making a vigorous fight through its legal representatives to put aside the strong array of facts presented by Senator Reed for his clients in the big suit against the water company. The defence was begun yesterday, although Adrian Riker, one of the lawyers who met with an accident Saturday, was not able to be present

The defence first placed in evidence a large map showing the topography of the water shed which furnishes the water at the source of Green brook It was stated that the water shed that feeds Green brook was six square miles in area and of that the water company's wells drain only one and a quarter miles. Engineer Green, of the water company, was put on the stand to swear to the authenticity of the map.

The principal points that were so vigorously contested during the day's proceedings were the location of the pipe lines in the neighborhood, particularly the location of the so-called "Boiling Spring," and the condition of the ground in the neighborhood prior to 1881

The plaintiff's side had attempted to prove that the Boiling Spring had disappeared entirely since the advent of the water company's plant. Wm. Ballentine who sold the land to the water company, was put on the stand to disprove that. He claimed that during the ten years between 1871 and 1881 he had never seen the Boiling Spring, although he had been over the land many times. He would not swear, however, that there had not been any such spring there When cross examined by Senator Reed he refused to say whether he told a neighbor that the water company's well had affected the height of water in his well and spring and that the company bought his property to prevent a lawsuit.

A man named Mullen, who owned the land before Ballentine, told how the brook frequently went dry during the summer. He too, never remembered having seen the Boiling Spring

An old farmer named Reeves had been a previous owner of that same property. The Boiling Spring had been there in his time, but had never boiled over as was testified by several of the plaintiff's witnesses He claimed that he had helped to dig a ditch to the "frog pond" which is now dried up, to drain it This was long before the water company was in existance He told how he had come back fourteen years ago and had been unable to find the Boiling Spring He however remembered that the land had always been very damp

The testimony of William Hand, of East Summit, was substantially the same as the others.

The last witness for the day was Thomas Franks. He claimed to be a professional sportsman and said that he gained a livelihood in taking parties hunting and fishing through the section now occupied by the water company and along the course of the brook. He was sure that he had never seen the Boiling Spring. The testimony of the last witness was contradicted He declared that the ground there was very dry in summer He told about walking down the bed of the stream dry sh d. As an evidence of the dryness of the ground he told how it used to crack open. In cross examination, however, he declared that he had hunted right along through that season and found snipe and wood cock in plenty despite the extreme dryness of the ground. There was a general laugh in the court room when he made that statement

The case was then adjourned until today.

A New Pastor.

After many vicissitudes the Mt. Olive Colored Baptist church, of this city, has secured a pastor. The trustees have selected Rev. J. W. Webb, of Pittsburg, to fill the position, and he will enter upon his duties next Sunday morning.

UNDERGROUND WIRES.

WORK STARTED BY TELEPHONE COMPANY YESTERDAY.

Locating Water and Gas Pipes Today—Subway to Consist of Four Iron Conduits, Capable of Holding 800 Wires.

The work of placing the wires of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company under ground was begun yesterday. It will only be a matter of a few weeks before all the wires of the telephone system in the business section of the city are placed in underground subways.

The first thing done yesterday was to locate exactly the water and gas pipes. Short ditches were dug close to the curb to get the location of these pipes. Then a map showing them all was made so that the laying of the conduits might not interfere with them.

In the afternoon the work of digging the trench in which the subway is to be laid was started. Work was begun on West Front street, corner of Madison avenue, and will be continued out Park avenue to Ninth street.

On Front street the subway is to consist of four iron conduits, each capable of holding two hundred wires. On Park avenue six of the conduits will be laid with a total capacity of twelve hundred wires. The less important streets will of course have fewer conduits laid Manager C. W. Runyon, of the telephone Company, is going to be very particular about the way in which the streets are restored after the conduits have been laid. In Morristown the Company was greatly commended for the excellent condition in which it left the streets after its work was completed.

The present system of wires will be left up until all the new arrangements are completed. There will be no interval of delay in the service to allow the change to be made. When it is ready, the new connections will be made so that the subscribers will not be aware of the fact that they are now taking underground.

A BENEFIT ENTERTAINMENT.

A Clever Programme Rendered in Washington Hall.

Washington Hall was crowded with a large audience Tuesday evening when a benefit entertainment and dance was given for Mrs Moore, wife of the late Charles Moore. The committee in charge, consisting of Robert Eick, John Adlemann, Fred Bream, Andrew Jennings and James Daly, worked hard to make the affair a success and their efforts were well rewarded. Eugene O'Reilly furnished the music.

The entertainment consisted of moving pictures operated by Thomas Schaffer, assisted by Will Townley and Mr Springer; vocal solos by the Vail Brothers; mandolin solos by Mr. St. Clair; vocal solos by Alfred Springer and Councilman Runyon. Former Councilman Wesphal entertained the audience with comical sayings, and the appearance of "Jack" Carney was a signal success There were recitations by Miss Try Mattox, of this city, and R Jaeckel, of Newark. A feature of the evening was the playing of the Dele mer by Miss Eugenia Adlemann.

After the entertainment dancing was commenced and continued until an early hour in the morning. The refreshment stand was in charge of Thomas Rafferty.

Miss Middledith's Tea.

A very charming tea was given Tuesday afternoon by Miss Maude Middledith, daughter of James Middledith, at her home on Mercer avenue The tea was given in honor of Miss Mannakee, of Washington, who is visiting Miss Middledith The hostess and her friend received the guests in the parlor, and the following young ladies served tea in the dining room: Misses Fannie Abbott, Helen Clark Mabel Coard, May Waring, Katharine Wood, Mabel VanDeventer and Gertrude Baker. A large number of friends enjoyed Miss Middledith's hospitality.

Said to Have Assaulted a Collector.

The case of Wm. Sweeney against F. DeRosa will be tried in Justice Mosher's court this afternoon. DeRosa is an Italian, and occupies the small building known as "The City Hall," on Park avenue He is charged with having assaulted Sweeney when the latter had called repeatedly to collect a bill of 10 cents. Wilmam Nash Jr., will defend DeRosa. The defense will endeavor to show that Sweeney gave the Italian an undue amount of trouble and annoyed him generally about the bill. The case will be tried at 2:30 o'clock

FOR A SOLDIERS' PLOT

A SPECIAL PLACE FOR THE BURIAL OF W R VETERANS.

G. A. R. Has Taken Up the Matter and Will Try to Have a Plot Established in the Hillside Cemetery.

At the meeting of Winfield Scott Post No. 73 G. A. R., held last Tuesday, the question of having a soldiers' plot in Plainfield was brought up for discussion. Plainfield has never had a plot where her soldiers or veterans of the late war could be buried. Of recent years most of the veterans have been interred in the plot at Westfield.

The G. A. R. members in this city think it is about time Plainfield had such a place, and at the meeting last evening the Memorial Detail was authorized by a resolution to confer with the trustees of Hillside Cemetery, with a view of making some arrangements for a plot where veterans can be buried. A report will be presented at the next meeting of the Post.

The Post also decided to run an excursion to Long Branch June 23d, the occasion being the annual encampment of the Department of New Jersey, G. A. R. A special rate will no doubt be given for the trip.

C. E. SUMMER PLANS.

A FRESH AIR CAMP ONE OF THE PRINCIPAL PROJECTS.

Endeavor Society Is Runs Soon to be Undertaken—Support for Fresh Air Camp Must be Pledged—Revise Church Bulletins.

An executive meeting of the Local Union Christian Endeavor Society was held last Tuesday in the Y. M. C. A. building. The first half of the evening was devoted to a thorough discussion of the proposed fresh-air camp work in Plainfield. Mr Pierson, of Westfield, was present and gave the committee the benefit of his wide experience in this work Representatives of the societies were requested to ascertain whether their organizations would favor and render financial aid for a summer home for city girls. No action other than this was taken.

An executive meeting of the local Union occupied the latter part of the evening, with Miss Florence Hawkins, president, in the chair. It was decided to hold, at an early date, a Local Union social, probably in the lecture room of the First Baptist church. A committee will be appointed to consist of the superintendents of the social department of the Union, with one member from each society.

The Christian Endeavor Bicycle section will resume very soon its runs to neighboring societies. Miss Ernestine Smith, secretary of the Union, was appointed captain.

A committee will be appointed soon to revise the church bulletins up-to-date A motion was adopted that a meeting of the executive committee be held the last Thursday in each month, alternately at some central location, and at the home of the members of the committee. It was the wish of the committee, to admit as members of the committee the Junior Christian Endeavor superintendents. This matter will be voted upon at the meeting of the Union.

VICIOUS DOG GRABBED A BABY.

Italian Woman Attacked and Child Tore Out of Her Arms.

Westfield, April 27.—Mrs. Philomena Serafine, a young Italian woman, was attacked by two savage dogs on Central avenue, yesterday afternoon.

The woman was walking with her nine months-old baby in her arms, when one of the brutes rushed at her from the right side. In order to save her child from the dog's attack, she transferred it to her left arm, not noticing in her excitement that another dog was approaching her from the other side. The second animal, when the child was placed in its mother's left arm, reached the spot and making a spring, seized the child by the clothing and ran across a vacant lot with it

The screams of Mrs. Serafine brought a number of men to the scene and the crowd gave chase after the dog and its precious burden. The animal finally dropped the child.

Upon examination it was found that the dog, after laying the baby on the ground, had bitten it several times Dr. Kinch dressed the child's wounds, which are not of a serious nature. The principal injury was to one of its hands which was badly lacerated by the dog's teeth.

Agree to Disagree.

Peter Dickenson, the husband, who was arrested and fined $10 in the borough court by Mayor Wilson, Tuesday, paid his fine and is now free. He refuses to live with his wife, and she refuses to live with him.

TWENTY YEARS' GROWTH

PROSPEROUS RECORD OF A BAPTIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY

First Church's Home Society Has Fifty-one Life Members—Members are Supporting a Missionary in Indian Territory.

The twentieth anniversary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church was held Tuesday afternoon in the Bible class room of the church. Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, president, was in the chair, and the annual reports of the officers were read.

The treasurer, Mrs. D. A. Bowman, reported that during the past year the sum of $545.59 had been received and expended. An interesting feature in connection with this report was that part showing the amount received during the first ten years of the society, at which time the members of the Park Avenue Baptist church society were also members of the society. The receipts received for the first ten years were $2 387 25, and during the last ten years the sum of $5 947 64 was received. It will be noticed that the increase is marked. At the same time the Park Avenue Baptist church society has also done equally well.

Mrs. S. T. Wilson, secretary, gave a report for the entire twenty years, showing the growth of the society. The society started with a membership of 121, but later the membership was reduced from the fact that the society at the Park Avenue Baptist church was formed. The present membership of the society is 100. There are 51 life members, and the society has been giving help and money to missionary interests in the south, Indian Territory and to the poor churches in the west. During the past year three barrels were sent to missionaries, and the members are now arranging to send some more barrels away. Of the first officers of the society none are now living; but Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs Manning Runyon and Mrs, John H Piends, collectors, have served the society as such from the start.

The society is now supporting Rev. J. L. Keller, a native missionary at Wynnewood, Indian Territory, and a letter was received and read from him at the meeting. Another letter was received from a missionary in the west. This was read, as was also another one from a missionary in Dakota, who was formerly a Miss Lorenzo, and who held a membership in the First Baptist church. Some time ago she married a missionary and is now located in Dakota All of the letters were encouraging and showed that great good is being accomplished.

The last letter read was from the Indian "Lone Wolf," of the Kiowah Tribe, who reported that he was glad to say that every member of his family was on the Jesus road."

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs D. J. Yerkes; first vice president Mrs. J. D. Runyon; second vice-president, Mrs. Reuben Knox; third vice president, Mrs F. H. Biglow; treasurer, Mrs. D. A. Bowman; secretary, Mrs. S. T. Wilson Mrs F. H. Biglow was elected third vice-president in place of Mrs. F. E Kinsman, who resigned.

BICYCLE FALL CAUSED DEATH.

Mrs Nicholas Terhune Never Recovered From Her Injuries.

The many friends of Mrs. Ida Elizabeth Terhune, wife of Nicholas Terhune, formerly of this city, will be deeply grieved to learn of her death which occurred at her home, 2,054 Seventh avenue, New York, last Monday evening, after a long and painful illness Before Mr. Terhune and his family left Plainfield Mrs. Terhune was suffering from an injury received at the Crescent Rink while learning to ride a bicycle She was being assisted around the floor by an attendant when suddenly the wheel turned and she fell off. The injury received at that time is supposed to have been the cause of death.

During the stay of the family in Plainfield they won many warm friends. Mrs. Terhune was beloved by all who knew her for her Christian character and many excellent qualities. The removal of the family to New York was regretted by the many friends, but the change was thought advisable. Everything possible was done to restore Mrs. Terhune to health, but every effort failed. A husband and two children survives her.

Miss Pullin, of Newark, has been visiting friends in this city.

George Taylor, of Coddington avenue, is enjoying a few day's vacation.

W. C Smith and E. C. Morse, of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73 G. A. R., went to Hoboken, Monday evening and attended a meeting of the G. A. R. Post at that place. They were royally received and were given a good time.

FOR A SISTER SAINT.

THE POPE WILL SOON RECEIVE A PETITION.

Blessed Margaret Mary Alacoque, Founder of the Order of the Sacred Heart, to Be Honored—Wording of the Petition—The Canonizing Formula.

The women of the Visitation convent in Chicago are at present in a state of expectancy on account of the petition that has, through their instrumentality, been forwarded to Pope Leo by the American clergy asking that Blessed Margaret Mary Alacoque, the original promoter of the devotions to the Sacred Heart, be canonized and her name placed in the lists of the saints of the Catholic church. A letter was recently received at this place stating that the petition had reached Paris, France, and that it had been forwarded to Cardinal Perreaud, archbishop of Auton, France, who will present it to the sovereign pontiff at the earliest possible opportunity.

The request for the canonization of this devout member of the Visitation order of the seventeenth century has awakened an interest in the heart of nearly every Catholic in the United States. The devotions to the Sacred Heart instituted by this woman over two centuries ago have grown so rapidly that now the league by that name comprises within its membership the names of thousands and thousands of Catholics throughout the length and breadth of the land.

The attempt made by the Visitation sisters to secure the canonization of Margaret Mary Alacoque is the third of its kind. About a year ago a petition was received at the Vatican from the patriarchs of the eastern churches asking that she be made a saint and the protectress of the churches in the far east in order that their members might be united with the Sacred Heart. It did not receive favorable action from the propaganda, and several months later another petition was received from the Catholic archbishops and bishops of England and Ireland to the same effect.

The wording of the petition reads as follows: "To His Holiness Pope Leo XIII, Most Holy Father—As the worship of the most Sacred Heart of Jesus and the devotion to this blessed servant of God, Margaret Mary Alacoque, has now increased in an astonishing manner and has spread very strong roots in the hearts of the faithful, as well of religious as of laity, and as heavenly favors, innumerable, both in matters of spiritual, again temporal, through the intercession of the servant of God, Blessed Margaret Mary Alacoque, even in these regions, have been procured, the faithful of Christ, both religious and laity, earnestly importune you the canonization of the above servant of God—that is to say, Blessed Margaret Mary.

"For which reason we, the undersigned, the archbishops of the United States of North America, most humbly beg and exhort that your holiness will deem it worthy to bring the said servant of God, Blessed Margaret Mary Alacoque, into the catalogue of saints for the greater glory of God and for the adoration of the most Sacred Heart to be propagated more and more."

The petition was sent to the annual meeting of the archbishops of the United States, which met in the Catholic university in Washington last October, where it received their official approval. Prior to their assembling, however, The Metropolitan had received a typewritten copy of the petition. At this meeting it was decided to send it to Archbishop Corrigan of New York, Williams of Boston, Elder of Cincinnati, Ryan of Philadelphia, Ireland of St. Paul, Riordan of San Francisco, Feehan of Chicago and Chapelle, then of Santa Fe, now of New Orleans. Archbishops Hennessy of Dubuque, Gross of Portland, Or., and Katzer of Milwaukee did not attend the meeting, but appended their signatures afterward. Archbishop Kain was in Rome at the time, and of course did not have an opportunity to sign the petition until after his return.

There is a certain formula required in the canonization of a saint of the Catholic church. First a certain number of miracles must have been performed through the instrumentality of the canonized person. The matter is passed upon by the propaganda after it is presented to them by the reigning pontiff. It is not expected that any miracle will be thrown in the way of the canonization of Margaret Mary, as a number of miracles are attributed to the devotions of the League of the Sacred Heart.—St. Louis Republic.

Mgr. Conaty's New Rectory.

Mgr. Conaty, rector of the Catholic university, has obtained the consent of the trustees to build a separate residence for the accommodation of the head of the university. The present home of the rector is the Theological hall, which is directly under the control of the Sulpician fathers. It is difficult to maintain the seclusion and discipline required by those priests in the houses under their charge in the existing circumstances in the university, says The Catholic Review. The rector, while living in the building set apart for the divinity students, is compelled to open it constantly to visitors, whom he is sometimes obliged to entertain. This breaks upon the quiet and seclusion required by the students, and the only solution is a separate residence for the rector. It is understood that Mgr. Conaty will himself raise the necessary amount.

A Historical Parish.

The oldest Catholic parish in all the vast region that lies between Lancaster, Pa., and St. Louis, is St. Patrick's at Carlisle, Pa. Few parishes have so interesting a history. It was founded by the Jesuits in 1779, and has numbered among its pastors the apostolic Pellentz, the learned Brosius; Gallitzin, who died a prince, to become a priest, and Dr. Barth, who fled a bishopric to remain a priest.—Boston Herald.

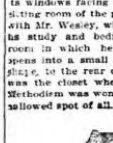
JOHN WESLEY'S HOUSE.

Now a Methodist Museum With a Kitchen in London.

The Methodists had a great time over in London the other day when John Wesley's old house, in City road, was dedicated as a museum of Methodism. There isn't a Methodist in America or anywhere else who doesn't regard Wesley's mission with reverence, and it is not fitting that the old house adjoining the birthplace of the Methodist Church, in which the founder of that sect lived and died, should be rescued from decay and preserved in as near its original state as possible.

The work of restoration has already been accomplished. The building was found to be in a state of dilapidation, but every vestige of decay has been removed. Preparations are being made for the housing of mission workers for he building will not be merely a museum. A part of it will be devoted to practical church work.

The first floor, however, will be preserved intact, with all the precious relics. It is a plain brick building, finished in October, 1779. The interest centres mainly on the three rooms of the first floor. The front room, with its windows facing City road, was the sitting room of the preachers who lived with Mr. Wesley, while the second was his study and bedroom as well, the room in which he died. The study opens into a small room of triangular shape, to the rear of the house. This was the closet where the apostle of Methodism was wont to pray, the most hallowed spot of all.



In the front room stands Wesley's bookcase, a well made and elegant piece of furniture, with doors glazed in a trellis kind of pattern. Also John Wesley's chair, occupied by the president of each London Wesleyan Conference since the founder's death. And here also is John Wesley's antique side table, made of oak inlaid with walnut. On the landing is the famous clock, keeping as good time to-day as when it started the great evangelist on his ceaseless journeys, or called to early morning service at 4 o'clock.

In the next room, the bedroom and study combined, is the bureau with its cunning secret drawers where Wesley kept his private papers. On the inside of the doors are thirty-two portraits of early Methodist preachers and other distinguished workers. It is said, by Wesley's own hand. In this bureau is the celebrated teapot of enormous size from which in the early hours of the Sabbath morning Wesley would pour out the tea while he discussed matters of moment with those other early leaders of the Methodist Church.

The old teapot is one of the most interesting relics to be enshrined in the museum. Wesley was a great tea drinker, and he was very fond of this old pot which was presented to him by Wedgwood, the famous potter of Staffordshire. An enthusiastic American tourist recently offered $10,000 for the old teapot, despite the fact that it is cracked and minus a part of its spout. Greatly in need of money as the London Methodists may be the offer was promptly refused.

The Ceylon Elephant at Work.

The elephant has his part to play, also, as a labor saving machine. Numbers of elephants are employed in rolling the heavy pieces of timber, cut in the forests, into a place of storage, and very interesting it is to see the huge brute drop down upon his knees in order to wrap his trunk more firmly about a heavy log then slowly rise and solemnly follow the coolie, who has to show him where he is to deposit his burden. And so cunning does he become that when the noonday bell rings for the coolies' dinner hour, the elephant recognizes the signal, and not one minute more work can he be induced to do until his appetite has also been satisfied. This seems to border on the exaggerated, but no one who has seen a working elephant at his tasks will marvel at any additional signs of intelligence the creature may exhibit. The elephant we are familiar with in the menageries, all dwarfed and hampered by captivity and confinement, can give very little idea of the sagacity and mental activity of which, when he can use his intellectual powers to some useful purpose.—Outing.

A Generous Wish.

As Sir Walter Scott was riding with a friend near Abbotsford he came to a field gate, which an Irish beggar, who happened to be near, opened for him. Sir Walter was desirous of rewarding him by the present of sixpence, but found he had not so small a coin in his pocket. "Here, my good fellow," said he, "here is a shilling for you, but mind, you owe me sixpence." "God bless your Honor," exclaimed the Irishman, "may your Honor live till I pay you."

After the Battle.

A Fog Dispeller.

The latest invention is a fog-dispeller. The apparatus consists of a horizontal outlook-pipe eight feet in length and eight inches in diameter. At the mouth of the tube is a wide flange; the rear end is covered with a thick disc of glass. About two feet from the rear end a pipe enters the tube from below, at an obtuse angle with the forward section. This connection is made through a sort of turntable, which permits the outlook tube to be pointed in any direction desired, up or down, from one side to the other. The pipe below connects with a blower down in the vessel.

When the dispeller is in use, the blower sends a powerful stream of air up through the pipe into the tube, and the current hurtles into the fog, boring a hole through it, as it were.

The action of the suspended moisture is twofold. The fog is rolled back in every direction, the high pressure of the blast produces a cooling influence, the moisture in suspension condenses and falls in rain. A great cone of clear atmosphere, with its apex at the mouth of the tube, results.

The eye of the pilot is at the glass at the rear of the tube, and he gazes into the bowels of the fog. With its aid a pilot can readily pick up his buoys in a fog, and keep an eye out for vessels ahead.

With a powerful blower the inventor hopes to make a fog-dispeller useful at 1,000 feet.

No claim is made that the dispeller would be practicable except when the vessel is going at a slow rate of speed, which is customary when there is foggy weather.

Dressy Calling Gown.

A dressy gown of turquoise blue bayaderes silk, has the full front of the blouse intersected with three rows of dark blue velvet, which are put on to give a round yoke effect. The little bolero of blue velvet has revers of cream guipure over white satin bound with the velvet. Over the shoulder are small epaulettes, covered with the same applications as the revers. The sleeves have a slight fullness at the top, and are then fitted tight to the arm down to the wrist, and are trimmed with rows of blue velvet.

The skirt is plain and trimmed around the foot with three rows of blue velvet. The hat worn with this gown is of turquoise blue straw literally covered with flowers.

The Language of Stamps.

The newest language of stamps is as follows: The stamp in the usual place—that is, on the top right-hand corner of the envelope—means, when upright, "I desire your friendship;" across, "Do you love me?" upside down, "Don't write me again;" crooked, "Write at once."

When the stamp is at the bottom corner on the right hand it means, if upright, "Your love makes me happy." When it is on the left top corner it means, if upright, "I love you;" across, "My heart is another's;" upside down, "Good-day, my darling." When it is on the bottom left hand corner it means, upright, "Fidelity will be rewarded;" across, "Do not leave me alone in my sorrow;" upside down, "You have withstood all trials." When the stamp is on the same line as the surname of the letter, it means, if upright, "Accept my love;" across, "I long to see you;" upside down, "I am engaged."

The Care of Veils.

The preservation of veils is an important item and a difficult one. Winding them over a piece of stiff cardboard is undoubtedly of some value where one cannot have a drawer for their exclusive use. The best way is to fold them on the width, as in opposition to the natural inclination of the day in stretching them round the brim of the hat. A long box, like a glove box, is the best thing to use, and if they are neatly folded away each time, will last a long time. Nothing ruins veils so quickly as scattering them carelessly in a drawer which is full of other things.

The World's Largest Flower.

The largest flower of the world grows on the island of Mindanao, one of the Philippine group. It was first discovered there some years ago by a German explorer. It is a five-petalled blossom nearly a yard wide. At a distance the buds look like giant cabbageheads. A single flower has been known to weigh 26 lbs. Each one calls it the bolo. Specimens sent to Europe were recognized to be of the species Rafflesia, a plant discovered in Sumatra, and named after the English Governor of that island—Sir Stamford Raffles. The bolo is only to be found in the neighborhood of Apo, one of the highest volcanoes in the Philippines, or about 2,500ft. above the level of the sea.

We All Imitate Each Other.

Have you ever noticed how persons who have something on their minds imitate unconsciously the actions of others?

A sub-intelligence seems to be at work in all of us, at all times, that controls our actions and causes us to do a great many things unconsciously. A nervous man or woman will twist and tear a scrap of paper, or toy with some article, for an hour at a time. When spoken to, such persons start and look at the article in their hands as though wondering where they had obtained it. In nine cases out of ten this person saw some other person doing the same thing, and unconsciously his or her hands, under the direction of sub-intelligence, sought out the paper or article to play with.

A few days ago a physician experimented on this subject in a railway-station waiting-room where a score of business men were waiting for the train, all preoccupied mentally with the business of the day.

The physician began a march up and down the waiting-room. In two minutes a worried-looking man, who appeared to be a prosperous merchant, began to march also. Two clerks and a stout person followed his example. In five minutes two men who were reading newspapers were the only persons out of the twenty-odd in the room who were not walking about. The physician ceased suddenly. Peculiar as it may seem, his action appeared to give the whole assemblage a shock. They woke up, as it were, but not sufficiently to know that they had been experimented upon. Before the train arrived they had assumed the positions in which the physician found them.

"Another thing I have noticed," added the physician, "is that the higher the intelligence of a man is, the more liable he is to be controlled by sub-consciousness. An unintelligent man seems to have none of it."

Novel Design in Belts.

Novel designs in girdles and chatelaines are shown among the new gold and silver ornaments. The Cleopatra girdles are set with real gems, and their price is accordingly high. Apart from its usefulness, an artistically constructed silver chatelaine makes an effective break in the plainness of the dress skirt, more especially when it is tailor-made. The genuine solid silver chatelaines worn at the waist of women in feudal times are heirlooms greatly prized, seldom seen, and really beyond price. Their close imitations are, however, wide-cast, and they certainly look antique enough to satisfy the majority. But there are chatelaines and chatelaines. Oxidized metal, which at first gives one an impression of silver work of very antique design, soon gets rubbed, and the good effect is destroyed, so that all silver chatelaines, which pretend to be nothing but the honest articles they are, are largely sold in place of oxidized goods. Occasional cleaning with whiting will keep silver bright, and the attachments, while less fanciful, are certainly stronger, and therefore more likely to stand the wear and tear of frequent use.

How to Avoid Lumpy Drawn Butter.

Lumpy drawn butter for fish sauce is an impossibility if the simplest care is given to its preparation. An ounce of butter should be melted in a clean saucepan and into it is sprinkled from an ounce to an ounce and a half of fine sifted flour. This is stirred to form a thick, smooth paste that will leave the sides of the pan clean. Add to it, when this condition has been reached, half a pint of boiling water, and let it boil over the fire for ten minutes, stirring all the time to prevent lumps forming, despite all care, some lumps have formed, it can be poured through a sieve on its way to the hot sauce dish. Despite the ease with which this unappetizing condition of the sauce is obviated, many housekeepers seem to accept the lumpy sauce as trying but inevitable.

Dress Trimmings.

All sorts of ruffling for trimming summer gowns and evening dresses can be bought in the shops all ready for use. It comes in Liberty gauze, chiffon and lace all finished on the edge with rows of narrow gold and satin ribbon, a little ruche of chiffon, a tiny border of flowers, or frills of narrow lace.

A DAINTY APRON.

TRIUMPH OF A BOSTON GIRL.

She Is Attracting Marked Attention in London by Her Violin Performances.

The latest American triumph in London is that of Miss Leonora Jackson, the Boston girl, who has astonished the metropolis with her abilities as a violinist. Born nineteen years ago, Miss Jackson displayed as a child a remarkable talent for music, and at 15 was sent to Europe to study the violin with MISS JACKSON.

Dr. Joachim at the Berlin Hochschule. She made such excellent use of her opportunities that she carried off the Mendelssohn state prize in Berlin from all the German competitors. In October, 1896, Miss Jackson appeared on the concert platform with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, the conductor being Dr. Joachim, and has taken part since then in concerts in various continental towns, her playing having been spoken of everywhere in laudatory terms.

A CHECK FOR ONE CENT.

Lots of Red Tape Necessary in This Case to Collect Unpaid Postage on a Letter.

Postmaster McCroskey, of Newburg, owns a check on the National Bank of Newburg for the sum of one cent. And this is how he became possessor of it. A drop letter in the Newburg postoffice, to go to a person in another State, had on it the one cent stamp instead of a two cent stamp. The person to whom the letter was addressed received a letter from Post*master McCroskery, which informed* him of the holding of the letter in accordance with the postal laws for the additional one cent postage. In response the person advised sent a money order for one cent through the Postal Telegraph Company, and wired the postmaster that he had sent it. The Postmaster then sent the letter on to the person to whom it was addressed. A the telegraph office the one cent was refused until the Postmaster called on a friend to identify the money. This he did and then a check for one cent on the Newberg National Bank was made to the order of the Postmaster, and the person called in to identify him signed both the telegraph blank and the check before it was delivered to Postmaster McCroskery. The check will be framed as a curiosity and kept to show the "red tape" now necessary to do business. The receiver of the letter expended $1.25 for telegraphing and the money order to get the letter, and all because the sender neglected to put on a two cent instead of a one cent stamp.—Philadelphia Ledger.

EXPERT TOBACCO TESTING.

Cuban Buyers and Their Highly Developed Sense of Smell.

The greater part, in fact, practically all, of the tobacco raised in Cuba and not used by the Cuban cigar makers is shipped to the United States. After the crop is gathered in Havana the hotels are filled with tobacco buyers from the States. Some of them deal with the brokers in Havana, but some who know the country and the language go out into the tobacco districts and deal directly with the planter, often buying a promising crop before it is picked. The tobacco buyer has necessarily to be a good judge of tobacco. He goes down into the very heart of the bale of tobacco as he examining, extracts some samples and tests them in different ways.

The first test is that of smell. The Cuban tobacco has a strong and peculiar odor. A little variation one way or the other makes the tobacco good or bad. After smelling it the buyer is likely to roll a rudely constructed cigar out of the leaf and smoke it. He will inhale the smoke and endeavor to determine whether it will "draw" well. He also examine the ash carefully and test also the combustion of the tobacco—that is, try to find out how long it will hold fire. It is a great annoyance to a smoker who is talking or writing or otherwise engaged to put his cigar into his mouth and find that it has gone out. No cigar tastes so good after it has once gone out, and a fine Havana cigar is positively rank when it has once had a catastrophe. The one quality sought for is that of holding fire. If a sample smoked by the buyer will keep lighted four minutes it is considered very good. Some will burn for five minutes and even longer, without being puffed.—Ohio State Journal.

Making a Distinction.

Miss Cheyenne has caused her partner a great deal of annoyance by forgetting what her long suit was and remaining oblivious to trump signals. He mopped the perspiration from his brow and ventured the observation. "I was under the impression that you said you were accustomed to playing whist." "Yes," she answered, sweetly "I play it. I don't work at it as some people do."—Washington Star.

THE NEW PURITANISM.

Rev. Dr. Gordon Drops a Bomb in the Camps of Orthodoxy.

Rev. George A. Gordon, D. D., pastor of the Old South Congregational Church, Boston, in an address at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, on "The Theological Problem of To-Day," judged from the standpoint of Congregational requirements, was heretical, and from the standpoint of Universalism was thoroughly orthodox. For some untold reason this utterance of Dr. Gordon's has passed unchallenged. The extract from Dr. Gordon's address reads as follows:

DR. GORDON.

"The affirmation that God has a Christian purpose toward our entire humanity involves an extension of the field of redemption so enormous as to make obsolete, at a single stroke, the whole theological map of the traditional view. And what seems worse, while all clear-seeing men are aware that this does not necessarily imply universal salvation, it is true that it looks that way. If God shall succeed, universal salvation will be the final result. This sounds perilous to good morals and seems to cut the nerve of all strenuous endeavor! Oh, my brothers, when will Christian thinkers fear atheism more than universalism; when will they see that the deepest immorality lies in distrust of the righteous will of God; when will they awake to the fact that only those who believe in a God for humanity and eternity for humanity can resist unto blood? Any scheme that puts God with an inclusive and everlasting purpose of redemption behind mankind looks like universalism, but let us remember that any other scheme is, in our time, a royal road to atheism. When we assert as we do so easily the brotherhood of man, let us be sure that the universe, according to our view, is not against it; let us be sure that there is in God a universal fatherhood upon which to found it."

The Lady and the Bird.

A million bobolinks killed last year! Four million other birds slaughtered in the same year—and for what? That their torn and distorted bodies might be flaunted in the headgear of American woman-kind!

These are no guess-work figures, but the official report of the Audubon Society of Massachusetts. And what does it mean? It means five million voices stilled in Nature's avian choir. Five million flashes of cheeriness and gladness taken from human life. Five millions of other young lives doomed to starvation or prey in order that the plumaged corpse of the murdered mother bird may be rent by a milliner and jammed in hideous shapelessness in milady's hat.

Ah! milady, is there no efficacy in these desolating figures? Is there no mercy in your heart, no conscience in your make-up, no sentiment in your soul? Can you look upon these open birds when you think that the killing of the birds with which you and your sisters are crowning your beauty is gradually silencing the grand oratorio of the forest and the fields?

A blessed industry! A voiceless forest! What a desolation it would be! And yet that is just what this country is coming to if the song birds of our land are to be killed off at the rate of five millions a year in order to gratify feminine vanity and keep women "in style."

What a grewsome, hideous, conscienceless "style" it is that murders melody and silences the lark that sings from Heaven's gate!—New York Mail-Express.

A Lake That Never Gives up Its Dead.

A very interesting and very sad thing about Lake Superior is that it never gives up its dead. Whoever encounters disaster—happily infrequent in the tourist season—and goes down in the angry, beautiful waters, never comes up again. Even those native sailors, when the daring French voyageurs, in their trim birth bark canoes, skirted the picturesque shores of this noble but relentless lake, down to this present moment, those who have met their deaths in mid-Superior lie at the stone-paved bottom. It may be that, so very cold is the water, some of their bodies may have been preserved through the centuries. Sometimes, not far from the shore, the bodies of people who have been wrecked from fishing smacks or from pleasure boats overtaken by a cruel squall have been recovered, but only after the most heroic efforts with drag net or by the diver.—St. Nicholas.

GOMEZ, THE WARRIOR

HE IS TO CUBA WHAT WASHINGTON WAS TO AMERICA.

His Words Upon Hearing of the Maine Disaster—A Grand Old Man Who Has No Fear and Has but One Aim—the Freedom of His People.

A story sent from the interior Cuba, describes in detail the reception of Gen. Maximo Gomes of the news of the Main disaster. That the veteran soldier and undaunted commander of the insurgent forces in the field should have been deeply grieved at this sad tragedy was to be expected. It was to be expected, too, that he should unhesitatingly attribute to Spanish activity the perpetration of a dastardly crime. His bitter experience fully justifies his conclusion, for he is not in a position to judge the Spaniard impartially even in a specific case which lacks satisfactory evidence of guilt.

But aside from his ready and unreservedly hotheaded opinion, there is an admirable mingling of sorrow and prophecy in his use of this catastrophe to point a moral from the Cuban view. In these words from the insurgent headquarters there is laid bare the soul of an invincible warrior who has no fear superior to the assaults of age and the heart of a patriot wrung with a sense of hope deferred. Gomez rests under the conviction that his letters to the Presidents of the United States, and his government's reports to the government at Washington, been delivered, should have saved $300,000,000 of loss to commerce, the Maine and her gallant crew, and all the foreign complications present and prospective, arising from the postponement of definite action.

There is, of course, in this view more of a judgment naturally biased. History, when impartial, will record that the United States has handled this question with admirable patience, political skill, and a determination to safeguard its own honor and the rights of Spain, and so meet the demands of international comity, that it shall especially stand blameless before the civilized world. The very fact that it is distinctively commercial nation has been willing to sacrifice $300,000,000 of loss in order that it might be absolutely right when it should decide to go about it is alone eloquent of the domination of principle throughout. But these considerations of the aged soldier who strike a responsive chord in the hearts of every American;

"One of the saddest disappointments of my life is the knowledge that there are in the United States persons who believe it possible. Just representations asking only for the recognition which we have the right to request, were made for the purpose of involving the United States in a war with Spain for Spaniards. We had fought the Spaniards ten years. Now we have been fighting them three years more, and an honest man can doubt after what we have done that we are resolved to be free rather than surrender. I have been thirteen years in the field and have sent against me across the Atlantic 400,000 men. I have needed no help to do that much, for with me were the 60,000 Cubans who died in the last war, and to-day the whole Cuban Army is ready to die for the principle we have laid down.

To this grand old man of a nation but unconquerable people the last of every right-minded American must be doffed. From the magnificence of the present war, of which he must be a spectator at a time of life which justifies permanent retirement, in which he has sacrificed a beloved son upon whom he had come to lean, and displayed an energy that would shame most young men, he has never spoken to the world a word of fear, and has not decrease the respect in which he is held and render more hideous by contrast the perfidy and brutality of his Spanish Master of himself at all times—even when his heart was most torn by the cold-blooded butchery and torture of his unarmed and helpless countrymen—no grander figure is presented by the annals of modern warfare.

Rightly may Maximo Gomez be immortalized by his people as the Washington of Cuba, for in character as in uncompromising, just—but terrible.

Raymond "Matched" Between the Lines.

"The late John T. Raymond carried his love of matching matches to such a pitch that he once actually made a bet while performing his role in a theatre here in Washington," remarked Mr. Whitney St. John, the well-known New Yorker.

"I happened to have a seat in the front row that night, and as soon as Raymond came on he spied me and nodded. That very afternoon he and I had been matching, and he came on second best. He hadn't been spotted a great while, when, half turning to me and pulling out a silver dollar to my huge amazement, he said very distinctly:

"'Heads or tail, Saint?' I caught on, and though I thought everybody in the house must be looking, I put my finger to my head and said, 'I'll win,' said Raymond, and immediately proceeded with his lines. It certainly was a funny thing, but the audience appeared to think it was rehearsed, though perhaps some were puzzled at its irrelevancy. Raymond himself thought it the best joke of the season, and after adjournment of the audience another matching engagement followed."—Washington Post.

A $1,000 SERMON.

THE NEW YORK HERALD GAVE THIS SUM IN A PRIZE CONTEST.

Rev. Richard G. Woodbridge, Pastor of the Congregational Church of Middleboro, Mass., Wins the Money by a Dissertation on the Power of Gentleness.

The New York Herald offered a prize of $1,000 to the minister who should write for publication the best sermon. A provision of the contest was that the money should be devoted to charity.

The sermon to which the Herald awarded the prize was written by the Rev. Richard G. Woodbridge, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Middleboro, Mass., and is given herewith:

"THE POWER OF GENTLENESS."

"Thy gentleness hath made me great."—Psalms, xviii., 35.

There is little in the popular idea of gentleness to make it desirable for God or man. We think of it as lacking in vigor and a long way removed from greatness. So suggestive is it of weakness and softness that we want very little to do with it.

Our ideas of gentleness need rectifying. We speak often of a gentle horse. What do we mean by it? That horse that is nervy and full of mettle, able to pass anything on the road, and yet so easily subdued that the voice of a little child would bring him to a standstill at once. That man is gentle who has the strength of a Hercules and the tenderness of a woman. Gentleness is power withholding itself and spending itself in goodness.

THE REV. RICHARD G. WOODBRIDGE.

A good illustration of gentleness was that on a Spanish battlefield. A gallant French soldier's sword was uplifted to strike his foe to the earth, but in his arm as the sword was about to descend that his antagonist had but one arm. Instantly he stayed his sword, brought it to a salute and rode on.

Gentleness in a woman is love's mighty magnet, and will attract its prey from the end of the earth. A woman without it is a monstrosity; a warrior with it is greater far than he who shows his power by burning villages, destroying crops, executing prisoners. The great General at Appomattox, considering the interests of the men in gray, treating them as his fellow countrymen, silencing the salute already under way to celebrate victory lest they should be further humiliated, and wasting the defeated ones home well fed and equipped for labor on the farms, declared himself a gentle man as well as a great soldier, and did more in that hour to make his country great than in other great men have done in a lifetime. Grant could have crushed the South in that hour; instead, he caressed it as a mother her weak, wayward child, and melted it to tears.

We speak often of the power of God, but it is the gentleness of God that works the greatest wonders. It is this that makes men great. See the gentleness of God at the beginning. It is not the strong arm, but the tender heart, that concerns itself with fallen man. It is not a king's voice that we hear in Eden, but a father's. Pathetic cry that, "Adam, Adam, where art thou?" Gentleness done down in human flesh to save a lost world He came in the same spirit. A still and quiet night it was when the Saviour was born. The stars looked down peacefully upon the shepherds as they watched their sheep. The world was wrapt in slumber. It was into this stillness and quiet that God's angels came and God's glory shone around. Gentle words those were the angel spoke: "Be not afraid." So sweet and gentle was the music of the angelic host that no one save the shepherds heard it.

The spirit of the Gospel is the same. It is summed up in the words: "A bruised reed will He not break; the smoking flax He will not quench." It is by gentleness that God seeks to win the world to righteousness and truth. "The Lord God is a sun." Sooner or later cold and icy hearts must give way before Him. We need more gentleness before the earth can become like heaven—gentleness on the part of parents. You can shout at your child. Even a look is more conducive to trembling submission; you can thrash them into obedience; you can starve them into submission. The strong can bring the weak to terms for a while by these methods. But if you want to show your child the sweet reasonableness of your position and to make him docile, obedient, trustful, sit down and talk gently with him and seek to make his heart your own.

We need more gentleness on the part of teachers. It is by appealing to the best in a boy that the best is developed. Humiliate a boy, degrade him, ridicule him, and you have not subdued him. Beam upon him gently and lovingly, spur him on, and he will be your friend forever.

We need more gentleness on the part of preachers. "The servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle toward all men." The Great Preacher was so gentle that Simon the Pharisee asked him to dine with him; the poor harlot lingered near His feet caressingly; Zaccheus and Matthew, the publicans, became His loyal disciples, and even a thief, in the agony of crucifixion, cried: "Lord, remember me!" The world needs nothing more than it needs gentleness and love. Human hearts are hungry for the music of gentle voices and the touch of tenderness. Why should we not all try to show that we are the sons and daughters of the gentle God?

Rough, rude boys have been made great for time and eternity by the sweetness and gentleness of mothers and sisters. Dull, willful, petulant scholars have been made thoughtful and earnest by the tender, patient love of self-denying teachers. Souls small, mean, selfish, sinful, have been made great by the gentle, faithful labors of those not willing that any should perish.

The night of life is coming on apace. It will be sweet to have the gates swing inward at our approach to the city eternal, and be welcomed by some watching for our homecoming, and to hear from joyful lips such words as these: "Thy gentleness hath made me great."

WIRE SAWS FOR STONE CUTTING.

One Cable Will Dress More Than 500 Square Feet.

In the stone quarries of St. Triphon, in the Rhone Valley, the stone is sawn by means of continuously running steel wire cables kept moist with wet sand. The wire, which is cast in the twist of the cable, forms the actual cutting matreial, and does the work rapidly and well. A running cable contains about 500 feet and can make cuts of 100 feet long if necessary. It will dress about 500 square feet of cut, before it becomes worn too smooth to hold sand. In order to remove a ledge of stone, pits are dug around it about a yard in diameter, and as deep as the cut is desired to be. The cable is then started and cuts the ledge into blocks, which being held only by their bottom surfaces, can be readily split off by wedges. These large blocks are then moved by a powerful electric traveling crane, and afterward sawed into smaller sizes, and loaded by the crane upon cars for transport. While the crane is rated at a capacity of thirty tons, a block containing 460 cubic feet and weighing thirty-three tons has been quarried and transported.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

GOVERNS THE HUB.

Josiah Quincy is the Number of Three Men Boston Mayors.

Mayor Josiah Quincy is the third man of his name who has served as chief magistrate of Boston City. He was elected last November for a second term by the Democrats over the Republican candidate, E. V. Curtis, who had himself defeated Mr. Quincy for the mayoralty two years before. In 1823 the first Josiah Quincy was Mayor of Boston. The second Josiah Quincy filled that office in 1847, and in 1895 the second, or Josiah III., became Mayor of the Hub. The present Mayor is 41 years old, and is a graduate of Harvard with the class of '90. He was graduated in law, but did not practice, preferring to go at once into "practical politics." When he espoused the Demo-

He was Assistant Secretary of State under the late Judge Gresham, and in all have turned over more consular officials than any of his predecessors. He has been member of the National Democratic Committee, chairman of the Executive Committee of the State Committee and has held other important political places. A Valuable Coin.

It is generally believed amongst French people that there is a five-franc piece still in circulation which is worth 100,000 francs, which is equivalent to $20,000. The story of this valuable coin is, that the Emperor Napoleon the First finding that a new issue of five-franc pieces, which he had ordered to be coined, was by no means popular with the people, made it known that in one of the coins of this issue he had caused an assignment for 100,000 francs to be hidden, and afterwards had had this particular piece reminted so that it should be undistinguishable from the rest. The story was received by a large number of the French with the greatest incredulity, but those who believed it, pointed out that the five-franc pieces were sufficiently large to conceal a small paper, and in order that the assignment should pass uninjured in the re-minting of the coin, it was written on asbestos paper. The consequence was that every year hundreds of five-franc pieces were spilt open, and those who believed that the coin is still in existence continue to destroy as many five-franc pieces as they can, with the hope of lighting upon the assignment. It goes without saying that the search is an expensive one, as when spilt open the coins can only be sold for their silver worth. However, it has now been suggested that the Rontgen rays should be called into the service, in any difference in the density of a piece of metal could readily be discerned by their aid. In this way the 100,000 francs assignment could be quickly discovered, or its existence proved to be a myth, by the examination of all the five-franc pieces issued under the rule of Napoleon, and seeing the years that have elapsed since then, the number of these coins cannot possibly be very large.

A Fetching Gown.

The incongruous combination of net, chiffon, or other transparent bodices, with cloth or velvet skirts, still appears among dressy winter toilets, and one very attractive gown lately worn at a fashionable gathering in the city consisted of a tailor skirt of nun's gray cloth elegantly fitted and hung, and lined with gray taffeta, shot with pink. The skirt was finished with stitched straps of cloth trimmed with small pearly looking buttons of opal gray. The waist was in full blouse style, formed of creamy point de Gene net, draped full over a second under-waist of the most exquisite shade of pink Liberty satin. The bodice opened at the side where it was cut in scallops, with a deep frill of beautiful lace pinked beneath the scallops, and fastened across with the same handsome buttons that decorated the skirt. These buttons were only visible through the meshes of the filmy lace pleatings. The collar was of pink satin to match. The waist was a trifle ruched bit of gold filigree, and the close sleeves were minus even a little frill or puff at the top.

Petticoat Styles.

Much care and attention is lavished these days on the underskirt. Many women now wear two of these petticoats, but the gown is assured of a better shape, fit and hang if the long underskirt is supplemented by an additional skirt falling to the knees or a little below.

In this season of the year the second underskirt is made usually of pique, flannel, cotton flannel, or, more elegant than any of these, light surah, lined with crepon.

Women with stout figures whose hips the wearing of a second underskirt makes too prominent, usually wear a single long underskirt falling to the ankles. This single skirt, when made of silk, is usually lined with surah or polonaise, as much to give it shape and durability as to make it comfortably warm.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Green Pea Soup.

Ingredients.—One pint of shelled green peas, a handful of pods, two sprigs of parsley, four shalots, two sprigs of mint, two lumps of sugar, two ounces of butter, half a small lettuce, one quart of stock, two tablespoonfuls of cream, or one ounce of cornflour mixed with a little milk.

Method.—Melt the butter in a stewpan, put in the peas, shalots (peeled and sliced), parsley, lettuce (cut up), mint and sugar; let all cook very gently by the side of the stove for fifteen minutes; do not let it fry brown, as the soup must be kept as green as possible; warm the stock and pour it on and simmer gently until the peas are tender; rub through a hair sieve, return to the saucepan, re-heat, and if necessary, thin with a little stock; add the cream and salt. If a cheaper soup is wanted stir in one ounce of corn flour mixed with a little milk instead of the cream.

Black Taffeta Shirt Waist.

At this season of the year when the weather is so uncertain it is well to have in one's wardrobe a silk or light woolen waist. Black taffeta shirt waists are tucked, corded, or shirred in every possible manner, and trimmed with lace insertions, or if preferred made perfectly plain with tucked yoke and deep cuffs and backs, with which is worn a scarf tie in bright colors, or one of net or mull.

An attractive woolen waist is of fine dark red serge, made tight fitting in back, slightly bloused in front and fastened with a large box plait. The trimming consists of small gait fronts, which also adorn the small leg-o'-mutton sleeves.

"Do you actually believe in signs?" "Why, certainly. For instance, if I awake in the morning and it is raining hard, I know that it is the sign of a wet day."

THE COCAINE HABIT.

IS SUPERSEDING THE OPIUM HABIT—ITS TERRIBLE EFFECTS.

Seemingly the Worst Narcotic Habit a Person Can Become Addicted to—It Kills Absolutely All Sense of Self-Respect and Decency.

An article in the New Orleans Times-Democrat says: Opium smoking, "hitting the pipe," as it is called, is practically a thing of the past. It is a fashion if there is within the bounds of New Orleans a room where any indulgence is for indulgence in the oriental vice. Of course, as long as there are "fiends" in the city, and these fiends have money enough to rent a room and buy an outfit, there will be opium smoking, but so vigilant are the police that "joints" are practically unknown.

Never a vice was killed, though, that another did not spring up in its place. Cocaine has superseded opium, and it is a question if cocaine is not doing more harm to-day than opium ever did. Indulgence in the cocaine habit is cheap. There is no stove needed, no needle, no long pipe. You can take cocaine in whisky, you can inhale the white powder, or you can use it hypodermically. Any one of the three methods insures forgetfulness of the wretchedness. Cocaine is dreamily maddening, is intoxicating, it deadens heartaches and bodily pains. Ten cents worth of cocaine will last most victims of the habit one to two days. Its extreme cheapness puts it within the reach of the most poverty-stricken.

The police realize what harm the cocaine habit is doing, and are making every effort to stamp it out. They are making slight headway, though. Not a day passes but that from four to ten shattered wrecks of humanity, devotees of the drug, are fined or sent to the calaboose from the prisoners' pen and take their medicine from the recorders in the shape of fines and imprisonment. When they have worked out their sentence they surrender themselves again to the benumbingly delightful vice without the slightest delay.

"The cocaine habit," said a police officer, who had just been dealing with an habitue of the drug, "is responsible for more crime, for more immorality, and for more degradation than any of the standard evils. Of course, it is against the law to sell the stuff, and any one caught in the act would be bitterly prosecuted, but there is no getting at the facts. There are too many druggists who are ready to violate the law for the profit there is in it. No reputable druggist will furnish the drug, but as detection is impossible, and there is big money in selling the stuff in spite of its comparative cheapness, a cocaine fiend never has any trouble in gratifying his appetite.

"You can take cocaine anywhere. A pinch of the stuff on the back of the thumb nail, a sniff and the drug is at work. I suppose cocaine is mostly taken this way. Inveterate users of the drug, I believe, get, sooner or later, to using the 'hypo.' I remember a long time ago when arrested a hoodlum and cocaine fiend and locked him up for creating a disturbance and using vile language. We searched him at the station and took away his syringe and supply of cocaine. When the effect of the drug began in his system he broke off he gave way to hysterical grief. Tough as he was, he wept and begged and prayed for his accustomed instrument and its deadly load. We refused to give him back his belongings. He grew desperate. The last we thought it safer to telephone to the Charity Hospital for instructions. We were told that it would be dangerous to keep him without the drug.

"I carried the fellow the syringe and some cocaine. He danced and shouted for joy. Dissolving about a grain of the drug in a teaspoonful of water, he rolled up his sleeve. The marks left by previous injections were so thick that it was impossible for him to find a spot big enough to allow the insertion of the needle, so his other sleeve was rolld up. There was the same result. At last it was necessary to insert the needle point in the man's right thigh, where there was an unpunctured spot the size of a dime. The man's skin looked as if it was suffering from smallpox. It was a horrible sight. I believe he has since died. I never knew until then how awful the use of the drug was.

"In my opinion the worst result of the cocaine habit, is that it absolutely kills all sense of self-respect and decency. Its users have no morals, no consciences. There is no depth too low for them to dive into to procure the money for supplying themselves with the drug."

Masses Still Sung for Napoleon.

In several of the parish churches of France masses are still sung for the repose of Napoleon's soul. In the great Cathedral of Notre Dame, for example, 113 masses are sung for Napoleon every year. One legacy from an old soldier provides for 104 masses during the year, and the services are observed with the greatest fidelity.

A NEW ANAESTHETIC.

Not a Poison—Its Influence Lasts for Several Hours.

Two German investigators, MM. Einhorn and Heinz, have discovered a new anaesthetic agent, to which they have given the name orthoform. This substance belongs to the chemical group of aromatic amido-ethers. It consists of a white, christalline powder, without taste or odor. It does not readily dissolve, and its action is slow. But this fact is compensated for by the duration of the influence of the substance. Orthoform is produced with acids from soluble salts, which possess anaesthetic properties.

Applied to the surface of a wound, or an irritated mucous membrane, orthoform, in a powder or ointment, produces insensibility. Many observations suffering bring this fact to light boldly. With bad burns in particular—and every one knows how distressing these are—orthoform subdues the liveliest pain in a few minutes, and its effect lasts for hours. Inasmuch as orthoform is not a poison (patients have taken it with impunity from two to six grams a day), one may safely make a fresh application when the anaesthetic influence has begun to diminish. One discovers how great is the toleration of it by the organism, for instance, in a case of cancerous ulcer of the face, which is the seat of such intense pain as to render sleep impossible. The ulcer is sprinkled with orthoform for a week, and the quantity applied may amount to fifty grams. The patient ceases to suffer, and no inconvenience follows the experiment.

For the torture of cancer of the stomach Messrs. Einhorn and Heinz have administered many doses of a gram in the course of a single day. In affords great satisfaction in all cases of vomiting. It acts on the skin and mucous membrane, and, as it is strongly antiseptic, it hastens recovery from bacterial ravages. It has no action on unbroken skin, but its powerful influence permits one to regard it as suitable for a local anaesthetic in cases where one is to operate on a mucous surface. Experiments of this kind have, indeed, been made at Munich.—Paris Temps.

Sold a Mine on a Bet for $1,500,000.

No reputable druggist will furnish the drug, but as detection is impossible, and there is big money in selling the stuff in spite of its comparative cheapness, a cocaine fiend never has any trouble in gratifying his appetite.

STORY OF A FAMOUS POEM.

Written, Then Stowed Away in a Desk for Three Decades.

Mrs. Rose Hartwick Thorpe, who wrote "Curfew must Not Ring Tonight," lives in a pretty frame cottage at Pacific Beach, near San Diego, Cal. When asked recently to tell how she came to write the poem that has made her famous, she replied:

"I cannot remember when I did not write poetry. I have done it ever since I was a child. My mother did not approve of my writing. One day after school I went to my room. I had been studying the historic period of the poem, and the whole impression of itself so strongly on my mind that I felt impelled to write about it. I was about half way through when my mother came in, saying a young friend had come to spend the afternoon and take tea with me. In great distress I called out: 'Oh, mother, can't she wait a little while?' My mother, thinking I was solving a hard problem in arithmetic, said she would amuse my friend until I could leave. At last I finished and put it away.

"Two or three years later I wanted a poem for publication in a Detroit paper to which I had been in the habit of contributing short poems gratuitously. I was unable at the time to write, as usual, and, on looking over my papers, found this one, which I decided to send, though doubting its acceptance, as it was so long. A day or two afterward I received a note from the editor, complimenting my past contribution highly, and prophesying for it great and immediate success."—Philadelphia Press.

ANXIOUS ABOUT HIS MONUMENT.

Evidently Wants His Little Plot in "God's Acre" Well Marked.

The late Dr. Tyler Hull, of Lansing, Mich., left the following peculiar will: "There shall be erected at my grave within a year after my decease a monument, if the assets of the estate shall warrant, according to the following conditions: If my estate shall foot up to $40,000 or more, then there shall be erected at my grave a granite monument worth $10,000. If my estate shall aggregate $30,000 and under $40,000, there shall be erected at my grave a granite monument worth $6,000." Then there follow six other items, couched in language similar to the above, and being in substance as follows: "Between $25,000 and $30,000, a $5,000 monument; between $20,000 and $25,000, a $4,000 monument; between $15,000 and $20,000, a $3,000 monument; between $10,000 and $15,000, a $1,500 monument; between $6,000 and $10,000 a $1,000 monument; between $4,000 and $6,000, a $500 monument." The last paragraph of the will provided that if the estate should aggregate less than $4,000, the whole question of a monument should be left to the discretion of his wife.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

PROBLEM THOUGHT TO BE SOLVED.

Photographs Sent Long Distances By Telegraph.

Dr. W. P. Dun Lazy, a young inventor of Cleveland, O., claims to have solved the long standing problem of how to send pictures by telegraph.

The machine can be worked upon any ordinary line and requires only the usual battery. Weather conditions do not interfere with its working. An ordinary portrait of a person, such as is used for a newspaper cut, can be sent through and reproduced over a long or short circuit in about seven minutes. Writing, drawing, matter can be likewise reproduced. The inventor believes that under practically the same method as employed in his present machine an entire matrix or a full page of a newspaper, properly prepared, can be placed on an enlarged cylinder and reproduced automatically by wire at distant points in printed form.—New York World.

AN ODD SLIP.

An Official Record of Queen Victoria's Birth.

Curiously enough, neither the birth, baptism nor confirmation of Queen Victoria is a matter of official public record. One might suppose that, filed away in its appointed place among the state archives, there could be found a document formally recording the birth of the child who, though not heir presumptive to the throne at the time of the birth, was removed from it by only three degrees. But such is not the case. With regard to her birth, all that was deemed necessary was its announcement by the state officials whose duty it was to be personally cognizant of the fact.

The Indian Fighter's Grave.

For more than a hundred years the remains of the Kentucky pioneer and Indian fighter, Edward Boone, a brother of Daniel Boone, have rested under the sward of a bluegrass pasture on the farm of Will Burris, on Cane Ridge, in Bourbon county. The grave has never been marked save with a piece of limestone rock, and time has obliterated any inscriptions which may have been placed by friends in remembrance on the stone. The body of Edward Boone is consigned to the grave made by his companions under a buckeye tree on the bank of Boone's Creek, which sometimes covers the grave after heavy rains in the spring. After interring Boone his friends placed a lime stone rock at the head of the grave, and then carved on the buckeye tree the single word "Boone," which is yet discernible to visitors to the grave.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

NEW ENGLAND FARMS

FOUR THOUSAND DESERTED AND GOING TO RUIN.

Left by the Owners to Careless Tenants—A Scheme to Populate Them With Needy and Deserving Persons from the Overplus of the Great Cities.

There are in New England 4,300 abandoned farms, the value of which has sunk to a minimum, and yearly the number of neglected acres, once fruitful and the hopes of the west and most patriotic stock in America has known, is increasing to such an extent that a practicable and immediate applicable remedy is looked for.

Sixty years ago there was scarcely a vacant farm in all New England, and there were very few that were not cultivated by the owners. They were veritable homesteads, where one family had lived for generations, and where the head of the house was the sturdy, hard working man of integrity, common sense and uncommon shrewdness, who has been passing away for a half century, and is seldom seen except in literature and the drama. His successor is the tenant, with no sentiment to bind him to the land, and very often his absence means acres returning to their original condition, and houses and barns falling into decay. All through New England are farms wrested from the forest by the axe, which for generations have come up every year after year with scythe, and where again the sound of the ax is heard as it fells the timber that neglect has allowed to grow.

Why are these farms vacant? There are in New England 25,000 acres of land, once under a high state of cultivation, that have been strangers to the plowshare for years. Why are they abandoned? This question has been asked by railway managers who look for business in the transportation of farm products, by men interested in the science of social economies, with a view to philanthropy, to which some profit may incidentally be attached.

"Farming does not pay," the son of the sturdy New England farmer tells us. If it does pay at all, it pays best on the rich stoneless prairies of the West, many who have gone there tell us. Thousands born and reared on New England farms have taken Horace Greeley's advice and gone West. They left no behind them capital in their farm. Father and mother have finished their work, and the children have left the old homestead to strangers; or worse, to the elements. Tenants interested in taking care of their farms, their places, very often a care-taker to look after the buildings is left, and often there is an abandonment, and sumac and fern thrive unmolested where once valuable grain was planted, raised and harvested.

The urban population has increased, while the rural has decreased. The daughters of the New England farmers have preferred to marry city men, the sons have gravitated to the centres of population, and the New England farms have been abandoned. They have become nearly worthless, but none wants them. The selling prices of land have been cut in two, three and four times. The felling of in the rural population has meant little to producers. Manufacturers and cross road settlements have suffered, the miller, the storekeeper and the blacksmith have been, through necessity, carried by the human tide to the city.

The beginning of an effort to change the present conditions has been inaugurated by a realty company, and its promoters lay great stress on the philanthropic side of their venture.

"Is it not strange," said the president of the company, "that there should be 92,000 unemployed men in New York City and tens of thousands of acres of fertile land within a few hours' journey, where honest, healthful employment can be had that will give a happy, comfortable living, with a market for the products of labor within easy reach? These abandoned acres should be for these men. Many of them, with a little money, who are actually struggling and suffering here, could be really happy and comparatively independent on a little farm right at our door, in Connecticut, or a little beyond in one of the other New England States.

"Then, with the country districted off, a practical farmer could look after the farms, give instructions as to crops, fertilizing, harvesting and marketing. The doing of this very thing may be the beginning of a reaction that will draw people from the congested cities to rural life and pursuits, build up farming communities and make New English villages and thus bring about the increased prosperity that we all wish for and talk so much about. If people once get the idea that this sort of a thing is going to happen and realize that they will be happier and more independent on the broad acres than in the narrow tenements, there will be a wash for the country, and the New England farm will again blossom and bloom with vegetables, grain and fruit!"—New York Herald.

Mrs. Ingersoll's Hour for a Nap.

This story was told an exchange by an intimate of the Ingersoll family. Very recently Mrs. Ingersoll spent an evening with a friend. At about 8 p. m. she began to give evidences of fatigue and yawned repeatedly and had the greatest difficulty in preventing her head from falling into a doze. Arousing herself with an effort she finally said: "You really must excuse me, but you know, dear, that I have accompanied the Colonel on a recent lecture tour, and have in consequence got into the habit of falling asleep at about 8 o'clock every evening." Which goes to show that no man can be an oratorical hero to his wife.

Hurrah For a Flagpole.

Along with the fact that the city is to have a flagpole, mounting its lofty peak high up in the air, from which Old Glory is to float to the breeze, we venture the suggestion that the city officials make the date of its raising a patriotic occasion.

A patriotic celebration of some kind is what a large number of Plainfielders are seeking for now, and the flagpole seems to meet the idea. It would afford an opportunity to make a display that would fit into current events to a nicety. We would suggest that some of the progressive Councilmen or the Mayor inaugurate the plan of such a celebration Let them start the ball rolling by calling together a few of the leading citizens to make the arrangements Once started, such a project will go on to a signal success by the popular feeling of devotion to any plan connected with paying tribute to the Stars and Stripes.

One of the distinguishing features of such an event could be a parade to include the various cadet companies of the city and borough, which number about 150, the several societies of a patriotic nature, such as the Uniformed Rank of Knights of Pythias, Junior Order American Mechanics, Red Men, Sons of Veterans, G. A. R. etc. Martial music galore could be secured from the Queen City Band and Independent Fife and Drum Corps.

Beside the organizations mentioned above, numerous citizens would also doubtless lend their presence either on foot or in carriages to make the parade a distinguished one.

Patriotic citizens would also decorate their houses in gala attire along the route of the procession, making the march a triumphant one for Old Glory.

After the parade had covered a route to be selected, it could disperse at the intersection of Front street and Park avenue, where all hands could heave to and raise the pole with great gusto. After the pole had been planted, short speeches could be delivered to the number of a half dozen by prominent men invited for the occasion. A patriotic song or two could be sung, with Councilman Runyon in the lead, and the affair ended with three hurrahs and a tiger for Old Glory as she went gliding up the pole under the guidance of Chief Doane, the fire-alarm gong, church bells and factory whistles making a great ado meanwhile.

By all means let Plainfield have a patriotic flag-pole raising.

Popular Sentiment a Safeguard.

Popular sentiment will doubtless act as a safeguard for the people's interest in the Squire county trolley franchise law which has been signed by Governor Voorhees with a very bad error in it—the failure to insert the amendment making it necessary to secure the consents of a majority of abutting property owners before the Board of Freeholders can grant a franchise.

The error is laid against the engrossing department of the late Legislature, and Governor Voorhees was much annoyed when he learned that he had signed the measure with such an important omission. Since his signature has been appended to the bill the Governor sees no other way than to let the law stand as it is. At the next session of the Legislature an amendment can be made to cover the defect.

There is not much likelihood, however, of a Board of Freeholders granting a franchise if they know the majority of people along the route were not favorable to the project. At present Union county is the only bailiwick in the State that is considering granting a franchise under the law, and as the Board of Freeholders is constituted there is no danger of their transgressing the line drawn by popular sentiment.

The worst effect of the error, then, is to show the slipshod methods in vogue in the legislative engrossing department.

As to Public Baths.

Experience in the operation of public baths in towns and cities shows that the shower bath system is superior to the swimming pool. The pool is accordingly not provided for in the latest and improved public bathing establishments, like the one in Philadelphia. These public baths are an inestimable boon for health and morality. The would be bather pays a small sum, perhaps 5 cents, then steps into a compartment entirely shut off to itself. Showers of hot and cold water are provided, so that he may have the temperature he pleases. The small fee entitles him to soap and towel. In the new baths in Philadelphia 20 minutes is allowed to each bather. Tiled and marble floors and walls insure the perfect cleanliness and purity of the place. The waste water is carried off at once after the bather showers himself. By this means the poorest inhabitant may keep his skin clean and shining. The baths will go a long way toward improving the sanitary and moral condition of towns and cities where they are in use. A public sentiment should be created making it thoroughly "stony" to use such baths, and every village in civilization should be provided with one.

Greece and Rome in the days of their glory reached some conditions that have never been improved on. One of these was that rich and poor alike used the luxurious baths provided for the people out of state moneys, and the relative social standing of the bather was neither lowered nor improved thereby, but staid just where it was before.

Coast Defending Patriots.

The warcry so common 35 years ago is once more heard in the land. Those born since that eventful day do not know what it is. For their benefit we utter it here. It is, "The old flag and an appropriation!"

It is heard loudest from those gentle patriots living along our seashores They want their coasts defended, oh! so very much. From Bannemungbunkport, Me., to the jumping off point of Texas reverberates the sound; then, gathering new force, it rises in a mighty swell, skips across lots to the Pacific coast and soars again nearer, clearer, deadlier than before—"The old flag and an appropriation, quick!"

If all the patriots who want their coasts defended at once were to get what they ask for, the emergency military appropriation of $50,000,000 would be expended in 24 hours and a billion more would be needed. Ballywhack wants its harbor deepened and its channel dredged out. Humptydump does not know exactly what it wants, but on general principles it would make things hum in the place if the president would spend a million or two there improving its rotting wharfs and starting a fort to defend the precious lives of the first families from the devastation of the wicked enemy. It is sorrowful to contemplate the pain it must give President McKinley to be compelled to refuse the requests of Bannemungbunkport, Ballywhack and Humptydump.

The United States army as at present composed is made up of 25 regiments of infantry, 10 of cavalry and 5 of artillery, 42,000 men in all. This is the peace footing of our army. Bills now before congress contemplate increasing the fighting strength of the regiments while adding as little as possible to the expense. It has been the criticism of European military experts on our army organization that we have too many officers to our companies as well as to our regiments. The bills under consideration in congress would add in time of war another battalion each to the infantry regiments, giving them three battalions instead of two each. Our cavalry and artillery regiments have already three battalions each, with a major at the head of every battalion. Under the proposed change, when the additional battalion was added to the infantry in time of war, another major would be added to it, making two majors to an infantry regiment. The proposed increase under the three battalion division would give to every infantry regiment 12 companies of 250 men each, without making any more colonels, for which heaven be praised.

Chicago has come the nearest to doing the square thing by her public school teachers of any great city in the Union probably. The board of education have adopted a graded salary scale for the primary and grammar teachers, increasing it year by year till a maximum of $1,000 is reached. This is a good living salary, and capable young women will be encouraged to enter the teacher's profession. They can save a little from this pay to take care of them in their old age. In fact, with care in expending it one of them might almost support a husband on it.

It was a pity to change the name of the cruiser Amazonas to New Orleans. Amazonas recalls the greatest river in America. It would also have recalled forever to the people of this nation the graceful kindness of a sister American republic in selling to us her best cruiser when there was a prospect that we should need it.

It is said that a majority of the persons who go to Alaska wish they had not done so. Very likely. People who start out in any new enterprise nearly always wish they had not done it.

What a Senatorial Vacancy Is.

The United States constitution says that when a vacancy occurs in the representation of a state in the United States senate that vacancy shall be filled by the governor of the state if the legislature is not in session. There is no express provision in the constitution for the contingency of a deadlock in a state legislature which results in the adjournment of that body without electing a senator. Without such provision there is nothing to do but for the United States senate to establish a precedent and follow it. Such precedent was made in the Lee Mantle case in Montana and also in the case of Wyoming and Washington states. The type is the Mantle case. In 1892 the Montana legislature adjourned without electing a senator, although Mantle was one of the regular caucus nominees. The governor of Montana after the adjournment of the legislature appointed him senator. The United States senate decided, however, that a seat which became empty in consequence of failure of a legislature to elect an incumbent was not a vacancy in the meaning of the constitution. They therefore refused to allow Mantle to take his place, and it was not until the legislature met in the following winter and elected him regularly that he came to the senate. Until that occurred Montana had only one representative in the upper house.

Following this example Mr. Corbett of Oregon is not permitted to be a senator. One good result it is to be hoped will follow the decision. This is that it may cause legislatures hereafter to attend to their business and elect senators on time, doing away with the disgraceful deadlocks that have so often marred their proceedings.

Naval Engineers.

At the suggestion and under the direction of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Theodore Roosevelt a bill has been prepared looking to the reorganization of the officers of our fighting ships and a large addition to their number. The 82 senior naval cadets now on the sea on their practice cruise will, when the bill becomes law, be commissioned as full fledged ensigns so soon as they reach home. An important change will be made in the grading of the engineers of naval vessels under the new law. There has been a long contention over the rank of the engineer of a fighting ship—a question, it was, whether he was to be treated as a gentleman and an officer or a mere greasy mechanic.

In spite of his Knickerbocker lineage no one is able to puncture snobbery or see an absurdity more quickly than Mr. Roosevelt. He heard the arguments of engineers and regular naval officers on both sides. Then he recommended that engineers should have under the reorganization their place as regular officers, with rank of captain, commander or lieutenant, and that they should have authority to issue commands to seamen as well as to machinists and firemen. The bill recommends that 100 extra machinists be employed as such, besides the number now entitled to bear rank and title. Henceforth, however, the cadets at the Naval academy are to be instructed, all of them, in running engines and managing machinery on board a man-of-war, and they will perform services as engineers. There will not therefore be a chance for promotion to outside engineers.

Canada will get money enough from American miners without trying to "hog down" their whole outfit, even to the food they take over the passes to supply them. It is said for a fact that American miners crossing the passes must now pay duty on every pack animal that transports their supplies, on their clothing and mining tools and on every pound of provisions, besides being compelled to pay also for the logs that build their cabins and the timber which goes into the boats to convey them through the lakes and down the Yukon. The Canadian government has the right, of course, to charge a moderate price for the timber used, but when it comes to taxing the miner's whole personal outfit it is a laughable proceeding, and the Canucks who do it will certainly overreach themselves. They cannot afford to drive away American miners. We have gold territory on the Alaska side of the line.

What kind of rule the Spaniards live under may be judged from the fact that the government has a monopoly of the tobacco trade of Spain, of the revenues of the Almaden quicksilver mines, the richest in the world, and also of leading railroads in the kingdom, and with all these resources the rotten old realm is yet bankrupt and has been for years. There is not much chance for an ambitious youth to rise and make a fortune in Spain.

Sympathies follow the pocket interest. No doubt the Rothschilds are with Spain rather than the United States in the present crisis because they have loaned Spain an immense amount of money on the Almaden quicksilver mines, whose revenues are pledged to them for payment.

Another reason for French sympathy with Spain is apparent. French capital is very largely invested in Spain. The Spanish railroad Compania del Norte is leased to a French company, and the tobacco monopoly has also much French capital invested in it.

DISCUSSING PLAN OF ENROLLING SOLDIERS.

Prominent Citizens Confer With Mayor Fisk.

VOLUNTEER RESERVE PLAN

WILL WAIT TO HEAR FROM GOVERNOR VOORHEES.

Mayor Fisk Acted as Chairman of the Meeting, Which Was Attended by Many Prominent and Influential Citizens—The Movement Explained by Letters From Headquarters — Chief Doane Says 95 Per Cent. of Enrollments Would Go to the Front—Enrollment Blanks to Be Distributed.

The first active movement in Plainfield towards the pledging of volunteers for the war between the United States and Spain has been started. If the sanction and indorsement of the Governor of the State is secured, then the citizens of Plainfield will open an enrollment office and all eligible men, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five, will be given a chance to volunteer their services to the Government should they be needed.

An informal meeting of war veterans and prominent citizens was held in the Mayor's office last Monday to discuss the advisability of the proposed movement. The meeting was really the result of a communication received by Mayor Charles J. Fisk from the leaders of the National Volunteer Reserve, an organization formed by the leading generals of the country two weeks ago, to enroll all the eligible citizens to form a grand reserve force to be called on to enlist in case of necessity.

Among the guests present were: J. Frank Hubbard, director of the Union County Board of Freeholders, Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, Roland Cox and S. C. Peck, members of the New York Commandery of the Loyal Legion, Captain William Hand, a veteran of the Civil War, W. W. Cleaton, past commander of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., Asa Collier, past commander of Major Anderson Post, Former Mayor Alex. Gilbert, T. O. Doane, chief of the Fire Department, John T. Baker, president of the Common Council, Walter B. Rittenhouse, former ensign of the New Jersey Naval Reserves, E. L. Walz, Edward White, John I. Finley, of Winfield Scott Post, and representatives of the local newspapers.

The Mayor read the letters he had received from the leaders of the National Volunteer Reserve, and also read some of the literature on the subject that had been furnished him. After stating the reason of the meeting, he asked for the opinions of those present.

Mr. Cox asked if it was clear that the movement had the indorsement of the administration. His Honor explained that in a personal interview with General McCook, the secretary of the Reserve, he had been assured that the government was heartily in favor of it. He said that he had consulted Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, in regard to what that city was going to do with the call. Mayor Rankin had said that Elizabeth had a regiment of its own and anyone who wanted to enlist could join it. Therefore he was not going to pay any attention to it.

Mr. Cox explained that he was not opposed to the movement but the only objection that he could see to it was that it might anticipate the work of the government and so interfere with it. His Honor then read letters from Secretary Alger and other prominent men of the administration, stating that they were thoroughly in sympathy with the movement.

Captain Hand thought that it was a good thing. His idea of it was that it merely enrolled the names of the men who were eligible and willing to go in case of need so as to give the government the moral support to be derived from the fact that there was a large army of men ready in case of need. Mr. Cox thought it would be well to communicate with the Governor and see if he approved of it.

W. W. Corriell told of his attempt to start a company in Plainfield and the substance of his correspondence with Adjutant General Stryker. He thought that in case of war, that most of those who went into such a movement would back out when the time came to enlist. His idea was that it was far better to recruit a company as they did during the Civil War. Chief T. O. Doane said that he believed ninety-five per cent of the Plainfield men who signed the enrollment blanks of the National Volunteer Reserve would be ready to enlist when the call came.

It was the general opinion of all that the enrollment blank was not an enlistment blank and that the latter would have to be signed before the government had any real hold on them. The idea, as suggested by Assemblyman Murray, was that it merely gave the names of those who could be counted on in case of necessity to volunteer. It was a preliminary step so that the recruiting agents would know what men were eligible and willing to stand by their country in time of danger.

It was decided to have Mayor Fisk communicate with Governor Voorhees at once and see if he indorsed the Reserve. In case he did, the Mayor will appoint an enrollment committee composed of those present last evening and such others as he may select. Then enrollment blanks will be sent among the members of the various patriotic orders of the city after which an enrollment office will be opened and kept open to the close of the war.

Many of those present expressed their willingness to bear their share of the expenses that might be incurred in conducting the work of the committee.

A GERMAN'S TRIBULATIONS.

Fell Asleep in a Freight Car and Hated Before the Judge.

Arrayed in tattered frock coat and trousers of army blue, Frank Walking, the descendant of a noble family of Germany, entered the dingy little courtroom at the rookery Tuesday Monday night a patrolman disturbed his slumbers in an empty freight car. But the German nobleman has grown accustomed to inconvenient circumstances since his arrival in this country. He made no objection when they locked him up with the creeping and crawling things in a cell, but resumed his rest without remark.

His decidedly battered appearance was against him when he was brought before Judge DeMeza this morning. Walking had not forgotten the teaching of his instructors in the "Fatherland" and he made such an eloquent plea that the Judge was very favorably impressed. Sentence was suspended on condition he would depart at once. And he did.

A Large Church Contribution.

At the morning service of the Crescent avenue church Sunday, the pastor made a call for $5,000 for the support of the chapels during the year. Although there was a small congregation present, the sum of $4,000 was pledged at once. The remaining $1,000 will be pledged by the absent ones before the week is out.

Episcopal Confirmations.

Bishop Scarborough, who visited Plainfield Sunday, confirmed eleven persons at Grace P. E. church in the afternoon, and at St. Stephen's church last evening four persons were confirmed. At both churches the attendance was large considering the weather.

BIG JACK POT FOR CITY.

POKER PLAYERS FINED HEAVILY BY CITY JUDGE.

Jack Kavanaugh Fined $50 For Being Proprietor of the Place—Others Fined $10 Each—Kavanaugh Rearrested

City Judge DeMeza held court Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock to take care of the cases of those who were captured in the police raid on the quiet poker game in an upper room at Kavanaugh's restaurant Sunday evening.

Kavanaugh, the proprietor of the place, was the first to be arraigned He entered a plea of guilty. Kavanaugh was arrested nearly three years ago on the same charge. On that occasion his place was raided by Rounds man Flynn and Patrolman Vendervveg. W. A. Coddington, then city judge, fined him $50 for the offense.

Judge DeMeza had a lecture prepared for the veteran restaurant keeper. Then he sentenced him to pay a fine of $50 or go to jail for twenty-five days. Councilman W. L. Hetfield appeared for Kavanaugh and made a short plea asking for a light sentence.

Hugo Wiertz, Peter Snyderwinn, Patrick Gleason and Joseph Block were fined $10 each. They had all entered a plea of guilty to the charge of gambling.

Kavanaugh was afterwards arraigned on the charge of selling liquor without a license. The specific offence named in the complaint was selling a half-pint of whiskey to Joa Block April 20th. He entered a plea of not guilty and was held under $200 bonds for trial Thursday afternoon.

PATRIOTIC ARCANUMITES.

Altar Draped With Flags, and Cheers for McKinley.

The members of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, held their regular meeting last Monday and it proved to be a rousing patriotic assemblage. The altar was neatly draped with an American flag, and the meeting opened and closed with the singing of "America." During the evening there were several patriotic addresses by the members of the Council and everyone was heartily cheered. At the close of the meeting Regent Bromfield suggested that three cheers be given for President McKinley, and they were given with an enthusiasm and will. Such a display of patriotism has never been witnessed before at a Council chamber. One application for membership was received before the meeting adjourned.

Telephone Wires Under Ground.

The work of laying the underground conduits for the wires of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company will be started this week. Manager Runyon, who will have general superintendence over the work, has received a sufficient amount of the conduits to start at once. The work will start on Park and North avenues and Front street, so as to allow the street department to get at those thoroughfares as soon as possible and give them what repairs are necessary for the summer.

Hospital Statistics.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital was held at the Public Library last Monday. No important business was transacted. The report of the medical director for the month, Dr. J. B. Prosbasco, showed that 18 patients had been received during the month; 14 had been discharged cured, and 5 discharged improved; 1 died. The total number treated was 35

STARS AND STRIPES TO FLOAT 125 FEET HIGH

City Flag Pole to be Located in a Prominent Place.

CHIEF TALK OF COUNCILMEN

OLD GLORY TO HANG AT FRONT STREET AND PARK AVENUE.

Several Different Locations Were Discussed—Merchants Will Contribute Enough to Pay the Difference Between a Pole 75 and 125 Feet High —A Keyless Fireboz to be Established in the Business Center of the City —$100 Appropriated for Celebration of Memorial Day—Other Business

The adjourned session of the City Council held last Monday was of a short duration for there was little business of great importance to be considered The chief topic of interest seemed to be the question of where to locate the flag pole from which to float the very handsome flag, 20 x 30, recently presented to the city by Edward White.

The matter was introduced by Mr. Runyon, who stated that the flag had been presented and the question of securing and locating a pole was under consideration by the fire and building committee. It had been suggested that a pole 75 feet out of the ground be secured A figure had been secured from a firm who offered such a pole at $125. but the merchants on West Front street said they would be willing to contribute the difference to have a pole 125 feet out of the ground. It was finally agreed that such a pole should be purchased and that the West Front street merchants be seen with a view to contributing the extra amount necessary for the purchase of the pole.

The question of where to locate the pole was brought up. Mr. Runyon said that Mayor Fisk's idea was to have the pole placed in front of the Council rooms, but the opinion of the committee was that there was hardly sufficient room at that point, and that a place in front of Schwed Brothers, on Front street opposite Park avenue, would be better. Mr. Hetfield said that he would like to have it in front of his office. Mr. Runyon said that J. E. Bowser had offered to contribute $25 towards the general expense to have it placed near the City Hotel. Mr. Moffett thought the corner of Somerset and Front streets would be a good place, or near the Babcock or Stillman buildings. Mr. VanHerwerden gave it as his opinion that the best place would be on Front street opposite Park avenue, and then the flag could be seen by persons coming from all directions. He thought that if it were placed on the corner of Front and Somerset streets North Plainfield would have a better view of it than Plainfield. Mr. Buckle favored Front street at the head of Park avenue, and finally Mr Runyon moved that that place be decided upon. It was so voted by the Council.

Another matter that came in for a share of general debate was the location of a keyless fire-alarm box on West Front street as petitioned for by the merchants on West Front street Mr. Runyon moved that the request be granted. Mr. Hetfield objected on the ground that there are two boxes very close together and it was not necessary to place another one between them. He favored the placing of boxes on the outskirts of the city.

Mr. Andrews thought it would be possible to combine one of the boxes, either at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, or at the corner of Grove and Front streets with one of the keyless pattern. This suggestion was gladly accepted and the motion made by Mr. Runyon that such a box be located was laid on the table and the fire and building committee was instructed to investigate the matter and report at the next meeting.

A communication was received from I. L. McVoy, chairman of the G. A. R. Memorial Detail, asking the Council to appropriate the usual amount of $100 for the proper observance of Decoration Day. On a motion offered by Mr. Moffett the request was unanimously granted

A communication was received from the Welsbach Light Company, of America, in which they agreed to give a public exhibition of the excellence of their system for street lighting if the Council so desired. They agreed to give the exhibition at their expense entirely. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

Mr. Barrows moved that the application of W. H. Morrison to run a hotel at Netherwood be taken from the table He then stated that the Corporation Counsel had received a letter from Robert Hunter, owner of the hotel, in which he stated that he would very soon lay a stone walk on Belvidere avenue Mr Barrows then moved that the license for the hotel to sell liquors be granted. It was granted, Messrs. Andrews and Moffett voting in the negative.

Mr. Hetfield called up the ordinance amending the ordinance regarding the rules and restrictions governing liquor dealers in the city, and moved it be placed on its second reading. Mr. Andrews moved that the ordinance lay on the table until the next meeting so that more time could be had to investigate the merits of the ordinance. Such action was taken

Mr Runyon moved that two two-way fire hydrants be located on West Fifth street between Monroe and Grant avenues, and the same was adopted. An electric light was voted for, to be located on Spooner avenue between Seventh and Essex streets, on a motion offered by Mr. Neuman. The meeting then adjourned.

CLUB WOMEN COMING.

New Jersey State Federation to Meet Here in May.

A meeting of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs will be held in this city Thursday, May 12th, by invitation of the Monday Afternoon Club, the Town Improvement Association, the Reasres, the Woman's Parliamentary Club, and the Club of Current Events, of Plainfield. The morning session will be held in the Park Avenue Baptist church from 10:30 to 1 p. m. Luncheon will be served at 1 o'clock in the Casino of the Union County Country Club, where the afternoon session will be held after luncheon.

Delegates will be guests of the Plainfield clubs at luncheon, and the clubs are requested to send the number of delegates to the chairman of the entertainment committee, Miss Emily B. Tracy, 410 West Eighth street, street, on or before May 5th

Club members other than delegates attending the meeting may obtain luncheon upon the payment of 50 cents. The chairman of the entertainment committee would like the names of all desiring luncheon previous to May 5th, that sufficient provision may be made.

The officers of the federation are: President, Miss Cecilia Gaines, 208 Summit avenues Jersey City Heights, N. J.; recording secretary, Mrs. Clarence W Butler, 33 Fullerton avenue, Montclair, N. J ; corresponding secretary, Miss Ada Davenport Fuller, 97 Clifton place, Jersey City, N. J.; treasurer, Mrs. Frederick Bickley, 215 North Seventh street, Roseville, N. J

Settled Insurance Loss.

Wm. A. Woodruff, the insurance agent, has settled the loss by fire at the home of Carl Kaerth, East Second street, which occurred last Friday morning. Mrs. Kaerth had started a fresh fire in one of the rooms on the first floor and a paper screen caught fire therefrom. Assistant Chief James Martin responded with a fire extinguisher and quickly put the fire out. The room was damaged considerably and the insurance was amply sufficient to cover the loss

Children's Auxiliary

The annual meeting of the Children's Auxiliary of the Town Improvement Association will be held Friday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. building at 4 o'clock This will be the last meeting of the season, and all are requested to be present and bring dues. It is wished that all children continue membership by paying the 10 cent annual dues, even though the meetings are not attended, as this aids the society.

A Real Estate Sale.

Mrs. Charles Smith, of Front street, has purchased of J. C. Dyer, of Andover, N. Y., a lot at 36 Craig place, near Grove street, with a frontage of 42 feet. It is likely that Mrs. Smith will build on the lot. Mr. Dyer will offer for sale the lot adjoining on the corner of Craig place and Grove street.

Assessors Getting Ready.

The Board of Assessors of this city are now preparing for their work of fixing the valuations on the different properties in the city. The necessary blanks have been prepared and the work will begin at once.

Changed Their Quarters.

The Grocers' Protective Association has changed its quarters from the Babcock building to the first floor of the building at the corner of Park and North avenues. The furnishings will be moved in a few days.

There is rejoicing over the advent of a bright baby girl at the home of Mrs. Edward O. Chickering, of Madison avenue. The little daughter has been named Anna Elizabeth.

AFTER "SPEAK-EASIES."

POLICE MAKE ARRESTS FOR ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING.

A Brother of Mike Watson Now in the Tolls, as Well as Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell—Examinations to be Held Later.

The police have opened a crusade against illegal liquor sellers. Within twenty-four hours two of the alleged offenders have been haled to the city court and brought before City Judge DeMeza.

Last evening Malachi Watson, brother of the famous "Mike" Watson, who has stood trial on the charge of illegal selling oftener than any other man in Plainfield, was placed under arrest at Watson's hotel on Grant avenue and taken to the city jail, where he spent the night in the cell.

It will be remembered that at the last trial of Watson, it was claimed that his brother Malachi, was the proprietor of the place. Now Malachi will have to answer to the charges of the police. The date of his alleged offence and the names of the principal witnesses have not yet been made public.

When arraigned before the City Judge Tuesday morning he pleaded not guilty and his trial was set down for Thursday morning. His lawyer, S. S. Swackhamer appeared with him and demanded a jury for the trial,

Tuesday morning Patrolman McCue arrested Mrs. Hugbie O'Donnell on the charge of selling liquor without a license at the O'Donnell establishment on South Second street. She and her husband are by no means strangers to the city court and the police. They have the reputation of being flagrant violators of the excise ordinances.

The details of her case have not been made public either. She pleaded not guilty and her trial will be held later in the week.

PETER IS NOT AMIABLE.

Colored Man Pays $10 in Court for Making a Disturbance.

The troubles of a family were aired in the borough court Tuesday morning before Mayor Wilson, who quickly disposed of the case. Peter Dickenson, of Manning avenue, was the defendant His wife, Rhoda Dickenson, was the complainant. A third party, who, according to the evidence, had caused the trouble, was Miss Laura Waller, the step-daughter of Peter Dickenson.

The charge was that Peter had assaulted the daughter and had called her hard names at her home Monday night. Peter was arraigned and the Mayor asked him what he had to say The defendant confessed that he had used names that were not strictly proper, but denied having assaulted his stepdaughter.

The Mayor agreed that the evidence against Peter was strong enough to hold him over and fixed bail at $10. In default he will go to jail for ten days, but he will probably pay the fine

Cecelia's Choral Concert.

While the Choral Society concerts are not to be held this season, the Cecelia Club will give its annual concert in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Tuesday evening, May 3d. The excellence of its past productions will be fully equalled, for the large chorus of female voices has been practicing for the event all winter. As usual, Mr Fitzhugh will conduct the singing. The chorus will be assisted by a soprano and a tenor soloist from New York. Mrs. Frank J. Smith, the well-known reader, will also take part in the programme for the evening Miss Jean Utter will act as accompanist. The tickets for the concert are now being sold on subscription.

PATRIOTIC WORDS HEARD IN PULPIT.

Revs. C. E. Herring and C. L. Goodrich Preach on the War Question.

Sunday morning at the First Presbyterian church the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring, delivered a strong sermon from the subject, "Trusting in Warships and in God." There was a good-sized congregation present and the patriotic words of the speaker were echoed in the heart of everyone there. Mr. Herring, in commencing his discourse, quoted the words found in Psalm twentieth chapter which read, "Some trust in chariots, but we will remember the name of our God." In part Mr. Herring spoke as follows:

"It is sad to think that just now as we are about closing the twentieth century we should be engaging with another Christian nation in war. The crisis has come, however, and the year of 1898 will go down in history recording such fact. For a time commerce will be destroyed and other great damage will result, but what will be the real result of the conflict? That is the question How far will it extend, and what will be the outcome? Our prayer should be that God may speedily end it.

"We rejoice, however, in the acquisition of a navy, also in the unity of sentiment. We pray that righteousness may prevail. We are now given to comparing our navy with that of our opponent, and we wonder whether our navy is any stronger. Some are trusting in iron-clads, cruisers and torpedo boats, but we should remember the name of our God.

"God is in this affair. This world is moving on a fixed plan. It is God's world and it is He that is fighting. It is a beautiful thought to think that we are workers together with God, and to know that He is not a disinterested spectator. It makes little difference if our navy is twice its present strength, if God is against us. It is He that rules and if we are not on His side we shall lose the conflict. When God's right arm is with us we are sure victors. The man who has faith in God is stronger than he who places his trust in material power. If a man has faith he has a solid ground to build on. The man who says that the strongest battalion wins, makes a big mistake. Napoleon learned that lesson at Waterloo. God may destroy all of our ships if we are not on His side and the side of right.

"The man who trusts in God may be assured that God will never change, while warships will change. A few years ago the Government expended $250,000 for a wooden warship, and not long ago the ship was sold for 10 cents. The art of building iron ships was learned and there was no use for the wooden ship. If God is for us, who shall be against us? We need to pray a great deal that God may be on our side and help those who are fighting for Him."

At the close of the service the congregation sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," with great enthusiasm.

A War of Humanity.

Even from the pulpit, the present National situation is discussed. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, made an address on "The Fateful Month of April" at a patriotic service held in the church Sunday evening.

There were several instrumental trios by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist, and P. Ludwig Condee, violinist. They also accompanied the singing.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich told of the important events in the history of the world and specially of the United States that had occurred during the month of April.

The present war was, he thought, one of humanity. Like the other conflicts that started in the month of April, liberty and self-sacrifice were to be discerned. If the war was one of revenge, as some said, then be declared that it was a damnable iniquity.

Young Patriots.

An amusing incident showing the prevalence of the war spirit among all elements of the community was witnessed on North avenue Saturday afternoon. A squadron of street urchins formed a provisional military company and marched along the street in martial array, carrying brooms and baseball bats for guns. One of the youngsters, acting as captain, marched proudly in front, waving a tin sword. Older men stood by and looked approvingly at the patriotism displayed by the youngsters.

Plainfielders in the Navy.

Plainfield is represented in the regular U. S. Navy by two young men. One is Fred Bennett, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bennett, of Duer street. Mr. Bennett is on the flagship New York. The other Plainfielder is Dennis Keefe, who is on the battleship Detroit, of Capt. Sampson's fleet.

To Rush Government Contract.

While the Pond Tool Works has not yet received any orders to rush their work on the disappearing gun-carriages it is deemed wise to increase the working force. Commencing with tonight a night gang will be put to work. The work on the carriages is being pused with all possible haste and it is expected that the first order for eight carriages will be completed in a little over a week.

Carrier Pigeons fot U. S Service.

Since Government officials have asked all owners of sturdy carrier pigeons to communicate with Lieut. Carter, of the U. S. Navy, with a view of using the homing birds for despatch service on the battleships, a number of fanciers of these birds in the vicinity of Plainfield are preparing to aid the Government by volunteering the use of their birds for service gratis, though compensation can be secured if demanded

HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL TEAM WON FROM STEVENS P EPS.

The Game Played on the L.G ande Avenue Grounds Saturday — Visiting Pitcher Received a Warm Reception

The Plainfield High School baseball nine found the team from the Stevens Prep. School an easy thing. The two teams met on the L.Grande avenue grounds Saturday morning for their match for the championship of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association. Four and a half innings were played and the local players were victorious by a score of 22 to 7.

The visiting pitcher received a warm reception in the first inning. The first three men reached the first safely and filled the bases. Then Lederer came to bat. The first ball delivered he knocked in the chicken yard in left field and made the circuit of the bases. Two more runs were quickly made in that inning. Then the visitors changed pitchers.

That did not help matters any. The local team was after the ball and they found it. Sixteen runs were added in the next three innings.

Edwards remained in the box for the Plainfield team during the entire game. He pitched a great game and held his opponents down to three hits. He had better support than at the first game.

The teams were as follows:

GOLF HANDI AP.

Some Good Scores Made by Hillside Players Saturday.

The grounds of the Plainfield Hillside Tennis and Golf Club were officially opened last Saturday after noon, when the first monthly handicap for club members was played. Eighteen players qualified and the playing throughout was excellent. The handicaps given were based on the records of the players for last year. In a few cases the handicap was large owing to the fact that the players had no record. The cup for the event was won by W. L. Glenny, who is considered to be one of the best players in the club. As will be noticed below he was a scratch man and yet made a gross score of 82, with a net score of 82. The total scores are as follows:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
W. L. Glenny	82	0	82

DEATH [OF MRS. J. V. BEEKMAN.

Died Very Quietly Sunday After a Severe Illness.

Mrs. John V. Beekman, of West Eighth street and Madison avenue, died very quietly at her home Sunday morning after a severe illness of about two weeks. She had resided in this city for about seven years. Her husband, John V. Beekman, is one of the officers of the Lidgerwood Manufacturing Company, of Brooklyn and New York. Mrs. Beekman leaves six children, one daughter, Miss Eda Beekman, of Plainfield, and five sons, Walter Beekman, of St. Paul, Minn.; Edward, of Brooklyn; John V., Jr., Wichita, Ill.; and James Gordon, of this city. Mrs. Beekman was a devoted Christian and a member of the Methodist church. Funeral services were held at her late residence Wednesday. Interment was made at Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Farewell of Organist MacClymont.

Next Sunday Fred Schilling, the new organist for the First Presbyterian church, will occupy his place for the first time. W. E. MacClymont closed his work at the church last Sunday by giving a special programme of much merit, assisted by the choir.

WOULD LEVY ON BODY.

STRINGENT ACTION TO ENFORCE A JUDGMENT.

Rather Than Have the Constable Take His Body to Answer for a Debt, Lebbeus Ayres Paid and Went Free.

An interesting legal case has just been settled out of court and the facts are of an amusing nature. One year ago Harry Campbell, of this city, purchased a farm in Piscataway township of Lebbeus Ayres. There was about twelve wagon loads of compost on the property and it was agreed between them to leave the same on the premises until April, 1897.

Soon afterward Mr. Campbell sold the farm to Patrick Haynes, of North Plainfield, and it was also agreed to leave the compost there from April to the time the place was sold. Mr. Ayres was living on the place and he was to move in March of that year.

When Mr. Ayres moved he took the compost with him. Mr. Haynes was soon informed of the fact and he consulted his lawyer, J. F. D. Kirch. The latter at once commenced suit against Mr. Ayres for the value of the compost. The case was tried in Justice Storms' court, New Market, and the plaintiff was awarded $25.

Mr. Ayres wanted a little time to settle and he was given until April 15th last. At that time he failed to settle and Justice Storms at once issued an execution against the body to satisfy the debt. The constable went to the home of Mr. Ayres and presented his papers. The defendant claimed he owned nothing and there were no goods to levy upon. The constable then said he would levy upon the body. This frightened Mr. Ayres and he immediately paid the amount awarded, which he considered far below the worth of his body.

A BICYCLE SOCIABLE.

First of Epworth League Runs Held Monday Night.

The bicycle sociable, which formed such a prominent part of the summer social life in many of the local churches last year, will again figure in the plans of the social committees for another season. The first of the year was held Friday evening by the Epworth League of the First M. E. church.

Owing to the cloudiness of the evening and the portending storm, the run was not as well attended as it might otherwise have been. Twelve young people gathered at the church, which was announced as the rendezvous, and at 8 o'clock started out.

James A. Stafford acted as captain and bugler of the run. Park avenue was chosen as the course. After a spin to the Oak Tree bridge, the party returned to the residence of James R. Joy, on Willow avenue, where light refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

NOW!

We come a noble army,
One country call our own,
With hearts to God uplifted,
Forth to the glorious fray.
Downtrodden Cuba calls us
To save the tyrant Spain.
Onward, and this our watchword,
Boys, don't forget the Maine.

Our banner floats before us,
The emblem of the free.
And 'neath its folds we'll conquer
Our foe fr m o'er the sea.
We love the starry ensign
That floated o'er the Maine,
And we'll unfold it once more
And have revenge on Spain.

Fair Cuba, cease thy weeping,
For soon thou shalt be free.
The Boys in Blue will help you
To gain the victory.
Down, down with the bold tyrant,
Down with the tyrant Spain.
For we can ne'er forgive her
For blowing up our Maine.

April 18, '98. —L. A. Westphal.

KEEN BLADE SLIPPED.

Butcher Egany, While at Work, Severely Cut His Left Hand.

James Egany, one of the clerks at Crane & Mundy's meat market, on West Front street, cut his left hand severely Thursday morning while attempting to open a can of prepared meat. The knife slipped and cut across all the fingers, nearly severing them from the hand.

Dr. W. C. Boone was called and dressed the wounded hand. Egany was able to return to the market next morning, and it is thought that no serious results will follow the hurt.

Funeral of Thomas Jennings.

The funeral services of the late Thomas Jennings were held last Saturday afternoon at 2:30 from the house, No. 35 Duer street. The attendence of friends and relatives was large. Rev. Dr. D. J Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church officiated. Those who acted as pallbearers were H. N. Spencer Theo. F French, L. E. Barkalew, David W. Rogers, George Watts and Mr. Coter. Interment was in Evergreen Cemetery.

P. R. R. May Buy the Raritan Road.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, it is reported, is negotiating for the purchase of the Raritan River Railroad. This Railroad extends from New Brunswick to South Amboy, a distance of twelve miles. By its extension to the main line the Pennsylvania Railroad would have a shorter route to seashore points

PATRIOTISM IN MUSIC

A DEMONSTRATIVE AUDIENCE IN THE Y. M. C. A. HALL.

Old Glory Displayed and "The Star Spangled Banner" Sung With Exhilarating Effect by the Whole Audience.

The concert given in the Y M C A. building last Thursday for the benefit of the building fund of the association was attended by a thoroughly musical audience. The audience was also a patriotic one, and at the close a demonstration of more than passing notice was witnessed. The singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and "My Country 'Tis of Thee," as suggested by W. A. DeLong, of Sandford avenue, had a great effect. The last number on the programme was omitted and the patriotic hymns were rendered in its place by the Lotus Glee Club and the audience. The singing brought a "Hip, Hip, Hurrah for Old Glory," from H. G. Newman. The others present quickly caught on. Men waved their hats in the air and women used their handkerchiefs. Everyone was stirred by the demonstration. During the singing of the hymns the American flag was displayed from the platform with stirring effect.

The concert was one of the best ever given in Plainfield, and the artists deserve great credit. Every number on the programme received an encore. No doubt, the hit of the evening was made by the Lotus Glee Club, composed of G. Morgan Strickler, first tenor; George Leon Moore, second tenor; Charles L. Lewis, first bass; Miles R. Bracewell, second bass, with Frank J. Smith, accompanist. Their work was simply superb. The tenor solo by Mr. Strickler, and the bass solo by Mr. Bracewell, fairly won the audience. Both have voices of the richest quality and strength. The appearance of Mrs. Richard C. Percy, soprano, was also an unqualified success. She has a voice of much sweetness and great control. The duet rendered by her and Mr. Moore, tenor, was appreciated.

The appearance of the piano quartette, consisting of Miss Carolyn Dewey, Miss Mabel Maxson, Miss Clyde Burnett and Miss Florence Caboone, who were in charge of Miss S. A. Palmer, won merited applause from the audience. They appeared three times and their playing was marked by the highest art of execution.

Phillip Egner, violoncellist, won the audience completely by his playing which was of the highest order. The expression and touch in execution was an ideal pleasure to all. Frank J. Smith, the accompanist, was perfect in his work which added greatly to the rendition of each number presented. It is seldom that a Plainfield audience has the opportunity of attending a concert given by such artists and the patronage accorded is richly deserving the Y. M. C. A. for whose benefit it was given.

OLD VETERAN SURPRISED.

F. M Whitely Celebrated His Sixty-Second Birthday.

F. M. Whitely, an old war veteran, and a member of several lodges, was agreeably surprised Wednesday evening by a visit from his associates and comrades, it being in honor of the sixty-second anniversary of his birthday. He received a great many tokens of remembrance which he appreciates highly.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Peter VanFleet, Mr. and Mrs Kettering, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shephard, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Barbour, Miss Allee Barbour, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Chas Westphal, Mr. and Mrs. Peter, Miss C ra Sheppard, Alex. Sheppard, Mrs. Kuzhals, Mrs. Charles Young, J. W. Coddington, Mrs. Joseph Bolsterli, Mrs. Everitt, Miss Jennie Everitt, Mrs. Peter Kline, Mrs. Edward De Vine, the Misses Devine, Mrs. Charles Myers, Mrs. Agnes Taynor and daughters, Miss Sarah E. Taynor and Miss Hattie Taynor.

Funeral of George Goodwin.

The funeral services of the late George Goodwin were held Wednesday afternoon from the Congregation al church, and Rev. C L. Goodrich officiated. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The remains were interred in the soldiers' plot in the Westfield cemetery. Those who acted as bearers were Comrades W. C Smith, W. W. Coriell, I. L. Mc Voy, Wm. Day, E. C. Morse, J. W. VanHorn and M. C. Dobbins.

Sunday-School Superintendent.

Former Councilman William A Westphal, who has been assistant superintendent of the Sunday school at the Holy Cross church, has been appointed superintendent in the place left vacant by the resignation of B. W. Western, who, with his family, has moved to Brooklyn. Mr. Westphal occupied his new position Sunday for the first.

DAMAGED BY LIGHTNING

A SERIES CF SHOWERS OF UNUSUAL VIOLENCE YESTERDAY.

The Electric Bolts Descended Chimneys and Frightened Occupants Badly— Considerable Money Loss Resulted.

A series of showers of unusual violence visited this section Sunday and continued at intervals all day. During the afternoon there was a thunder storm that wrought considerable damage in the city.

A bolt of lightning struck the residences of William Madden, 508 West Fifth street, and Mrs. Ann Kelley, 512 West Fifth street, during the storm at about 3:30 o'clock.

At the home of Mr. Madden, the lightning went up the chimney, blackened and burned the gilt moulding about the walls of the parlor and sitting room. The damage amounted to $30 there.

The lightning went up the chimney of the Kelly home. The sitting room was filled with flame and Miss Winifred I. Kelly supposed that all was afire. She screamed "fire." The tin covers to the openings in the chimney were blown out and the soot sent all over the rooms. The bolt pierced the chimney at the roof, making a clean hole there an inch in diameter. A large piece of lath and plastering was torn off the wall in the third story. The bolt went down the slate roof, tearing up the slate and splitting and shivering the rafter. It finally reached the gutter and thence through the water pipe to the ground.

The occupants were greatly frightened but felt no bad effects from the electricity. The damage will amount to considerably over $100.

During the very heavy rain of the afternoon, the water gathered under Watchung avenue railroad bridge faster than the sewers could carry it away. The sidewalks were flooded for the time. When the water went down, a sediment of an inch of soft mud was left on the sidewalks.

A few minutes before 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon a very sharp flash of lightning struck an electric light wire on West Front street opposite Mr. Pier's house and broke the wire, which was left hanging over the sidewalk until Frank Vanderhoff appeared and removed it by fastening it to the fence. No other damage resulted.

TOUCHED FOR $35.

Charles Smith Lost His Wad in Front of a Newspaper Office.

Charles Smith left his home at Tonton, Mass., last week with $35 in his pocket. When he landed in Plainfield Monday morning he han't a cent.

One of Smith's friends is in the Brooklyn militia. Sunday he went over to say good-bye to him. He was then coming to Plainfield to take a position at the Pond Tool Works. Sunday afternoon they went to New York together and walked past the New York Journal office. Smith's money was in his pocketbook. His ticket to New York was in his coat pocket Some kindly stranger relieved Smith of his pocketbook with its valuable contents. All he had left was one cent.

Luckily Smith had his ticket and was able to reach Plainfield safely next morning. He is going to board at 223 Grant avenue. He will start work at once at the Pond Tool Works.

An Actor's Claims.

Just as the goods of Daniel Ryan's Repertoire Company were to be driven away from Music Hall Saturday evening, Constable Rockafellow served a writ of attachment on them. The writ was issued by Justice Newcorn at the request of Joseph W. Clark, of New York, who was with Ryan's Company last season. The claim was settled.

Pythians Getting in Condition.

At the meeting of Crescent Company of Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias, Friday evening, committees were appointed to arrange for a hall in which to hold weekly drills. The members of the company desire to be thoroughly efficient in tactics so that they might volunteer should the situation warrant it.

To Confer With City Officials.

Next Thursday evening the fire and building committees of the City Council will hold a conference with representatives of the Home Telephone Company, of Trenton. The company has already applied for a franchise to establish its system in this city.

Hurt by Falling Masonry.

A piece of falling masonry from the roof of the Voehl building on West Front street struck Mrs. Peter B. Hodge, of Plainfield avenue, as she was passing the building Thursday. The masonry struck her on the head and inflicted a severe bruise.

Evangelist in a Local Pulpit.

Thomas Graham, the Scotch evangelist, preached at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening. He delivered a strong and impressive discourse that was attentively listened to by a large congregation present.

—An informal entertainment was given by the members at the meeting of Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias, Friday evening,

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

A toilet to envy is an afternoon frock of royal purple cloth and nile green silk and chiffon. The entire skirt and part of bodice is of the cloth, while the remainder of the waist is a shirred front of chiffon, bordered on either side with bands of green silk. Fine lace, forming epaulettes on the shoulder extend down the front to the waist. Purple velvet forms the choker and waistband.

Another gown of gray cashmere is trimmed with white satin, on which is mounted a net pattern in chenille and jet. This forms a deep collar and revers to jacket blouse, which closes in double breasted fashion and is edged by a narrow ruffle of the wool.

Accordeon Pleated Chiffon Gown.

The full skirt is seen in chiffon for evening dress, and nothing is more becoming or dainty for a youthful figure than a gown of accordeon pleated chiffon made over a silk lining. A chic evening gown of this description has the bodice also accordeon pleated below a wide band of cream guipure insertion, and belted at the waist with a girdle of pale blue velvet. Velvet bows are also worn on the shoulders.

The day of embroideries has reached its height and no chic evening gown is without its due allowance of fine insertions and applications. An example is a severely simple trained skirt of white satin covered with mousseline de soie. Up the left of the skirt extends from waist to edge a bow design of Venice point applications. The low bodice is tight-fitting, except the pouched front which is ornamented with the embroidery.

Spring Fancies.

Among the early spring costumes for the street or house nothing newer than the blouse is shown. The latest tailored costumes have the fronts lapped diagonally with one large drooping revers.

A blouse without darts, yet snug in fit, and with a flat basque, is one of the accepted styles for spring gowns of plain or mixed goods. The basque part is often dispensed with, but when there, it is cut in tabs or not, as the wearer elects.

One in two shades of cloth has a yoke, collar and vest of the light goods, with black braid forming Vs; revers, collar, close sleeves, tabbed basque and blouse having underarm seams only of the darker material; stitching on all edges and a black satin belt.

Stomach Trouble

Stomach trouble is the common name applied to a derangement of the system from which keenly felt but vaguely understood. It may mean inability to retain food or to digest it. It may mean nausea, pain after eating, fullness, inordinate craving for food, or entire lack of appetite. Whatever it means, there's trouble, and it's with the stomach. If you have stomach trouble, you will be interested in this letter from a man who had it and was cured by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For nine years I suffered from stomach trouble. I tried the skill of the best doctors of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and spent large sums of money, all in vain. One day while waiting a train in Bellaire, O., I picked up a paper with a notice of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I got one bottle to try it. It did me so much good that I purchased five more bottles. I took four of them and gained in flesh, my appetite improved, and now I can eat anything. My stomach is all right, thanks to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—CALVIN M. STEVENS, Uniontown, Pa.

TWO DARING HOLDUPS.

MISS MARIE PETERSON WAS ONE OF THE VICTIMS.

Her Screams Drove Away Desperadoes —James Hewitt Had an Exciting Encounter With the Highwaymen.

Two holdups are reported to have occurred on East Third street last Sunday between 9 and 10 o'clock. Miss Marie Peterson, of East Third street, was the first victim. Three men jumped over a fence and caught hold of her. Her screams frightened the highwaymen and they made their escape through a yard.

Soon afterward, James Hewitt, who resides near Miss Peterson, was on his way home, and he was stopped by a man, who was masked. Mr. Hewitt and his antagonist had quite a tussle, but Hewitt got the best of the man and escaped home. When he arrived home he found his folks talking about the holdup of Miss Peterson, which occurred only a short time before. The men were not known and they failed to accomplish their purpose.

ORDAINED A PRIEST.

Rev. Floyd Appleton Elevated Amid Impressive Ceremonies in Grace Church.

The services in Grace P. E. church Sunday morning were of an exceedingly interesting character, the principal event being the ordination of Rev. Floyd Appleton to the priesthood.

After the processional hymn, which was sung at 10:30 o'clock, an eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. George R Van DeWater, D D., of New York city. The text was First Timothy, 1:1, "The Lord Jesus Christ is our hope."

Dr. Van DeWater's sermon was followed by the presentation of the candidate by the rector of the parish, Rev. E M Rodman, D. D. The litany was read by Rev. Milton A. Olsen, rector of Grace church, Trenton.

The invocation was made by Rev. Prof. C. W. E Body, D. C. L., and Rev. Dr. D. F. Warren, of Jersey City, gave the Scripture reading.

The ordination rite was completed by Rev. John Scarborough, D. D., Bishop of New Jersey. The impressive words were spoken in the presence of an interested throng of clergy and laymen. Among the members of the clergy present were: Rev. Robert Holden, of New York; Rev. J. H. Logie, of St. Luke's chapel, New York, and Rev. H. D. E. MacNiel, of Jersey City. E D. Johnson, of the General Theological Seminary, and Harry Robinson, of Fanwood, lay readers, were also in the procession.

Rev. Arthur Fiske, of Westfield, acted as master of ceremonies.

After the ordination the Nicene Creed was recited, and a musical programme completed the service.

At the evening service a sermon was preached by Rev. Prof. C. W. E. Body, D. C. L.

A LIBERAL EMPLOYER.

That Is What Uncle Sam Is in the Matter of Vacations.

The length of time allowed Uncle Sam's servants for vacations with pay is prescribed in the Revised Statutes. Certain details, however, are left in the discretion of the executive. For instance, a recent order permitting government clerks to leave their desks at Washington for thirty days' vacation had to be passed upon by the President and cabinet. The law states that "all clerks and other employes" in the civil service of the executive departments are allowed thirty days' vacation and thirty days' sick leave each year, with pay, and for clerks of the lowest grade of merit, sixty days' sick leave with pay. What employer would allow his clerks to remain absent one-fourth of the year, with pay?

Army officers may spend thirty days a year away from their posts of duty, but this may be enjoyed not more than once in two years, when they may remain absent sixty days altogether. Many prefer to take their vacations every three or four years, when they may stay away three or four months at a time, long enough to take an extensive trip abroad. The latest medical officers of the marine hospital service are regulated just as are those in the army. Officials of our diplomatic posts abroad are allowed sixty days' holiday each year, not including time required for the voyage to and from this country, if they return home. Members of the legislative and judicial branches of the federal government, of course, suit themselves as to the disposition of their time while their respective bodies are not in session. They are for the most part independent in this respect, even while Congress is assembled. After all, Uncle Sam is the most liberal of employers, so far as vacations are concerned.—Washington Star.

A Case of Experimental Suicide.

Journalistic enterprise has led to a curious insurance case in Paris. M. Henri Martin, chief editor of the Courier de Lyon, was found dead in his room, hanging from a cord passed over a hook in the ceiling and attached to a dog collar round his neck. His life was insured for 30,000 francs, which the insurance company refuses to pay on the ground that he committed suicide. He had, however, been publishing articles on the scientific value of hanging, and was preparing one describing the sensations of a hanged man. The counsel for his family will contend that he was making experiments on himself, and that his death was accidental.

THE NEW CLUBHOUSE ON THE GOLF LINKS.

An Evidence of the Great Popularity of the Game.

PRETTY AND CONVENIENT.

FROM THE VERANDA CAN BE HAD A FINE VIEW.

The Interior of the Building Will be Finished Throughout in Wood Stained Various Colors in the Different Rooms—Exterior is a Modification of the Dutch Colonial Style—The Building Was Planned by Architect A. L. C. Marsh—Officers of the Club and What the Players Have Done.

About three years ago the Hillside Tennis Club determined, with some misgivings, to undertake to develop an interest in golf among its members. The name of the club was changed to its present title; about thirty acres of land were secured for the use of the few who were interested in the game, and the links (9 holes), about 2,100 yards in length, were laid out.

It soon became quite evident that the club was rapidly outgrowing its modest quarters; and for over a year the trustees have appreciated the necessity of securing more spacious grounds; but only last fall were they able to find available and suitable land.

They have now laid out, under the direction of Thomas Bendalow, links of 18 holes, aggregating over 5,100 yards. The limit of active membership has been increased to 200, and a non resident membership has been created for the Hillside links should prove especially attractive to this latter class. The grounds can be reached in twenty minutes' drive from the Plainfield depot, which is only 45 minutes from the foot of Liberty street, New York. The club's property is unusually well adapted for the game. A very inadequate idea of the lie of the land can be obtained from the map; but the property may be briefly described as consisting of over 100 acres of rolling country, with numerous natural hazards. The links afford a wide variety of play, and the views from the clubhouse in all directions are very extended and picturesque; indeed, it has been stated by experts, that the natural advantages of the grounds are far superior to those of the great majority of 18 hole courses in this country, and are surpassed but by three or four.

The building, as planned by the architect, A. L. C. Marsh, is about 67 feet long and 30 feet deep, with a veranda 12 feet wide and 41 feet long facing the southeast and one on the northwest side 12 feet wide and 67 feet long. From these verandas may be had a fine view of the surrounding country and the new links.

The entrance hall, which opens on the southeast veranda, gives access to the dining room, lounging room, ladies' reception room and stairs to the men's locker room in the second story. To the left of the entrance hall is the ladies' reception room 10 by 11 ft. connecting with the ladies' locker room and lavatory. This locker room is provided with 31 large lockers.

The lounging room, which is directly back of the entrance hall, is 30 ft. long and 18 ft. wide. It is provided with wide seats at both ends and a large rough stone fireplace in the center of the outside wall opposite the entrance hall. Broad casement windows reaching to the floor lead out of this room to the northwest veranda. An entrance to the serving room from this veranda and the lounging room is also provided for convenience in serving meals in all parts of the building without passing through the other rooms.

Over the lounging room is located the men's locker room which is 19 feet wide and 28 feet long and contains 74 lockers which are provided with wire doors, thus assuring thorough ventilation.

Opening from the men's locker room is the lavatory, containing a large shower bath.

The interior of the building will be finished throughout in wood stained various colors in the different rooms. The exterior is a modification of the Dutch colonial style.

Matches have been arranged for this season with the following clubs: Dyker Meadow Golf Club; Harbor Hill Golf Club; Baltusrol Golf Club; Suburban Club, of Elizabeth; Morristown Field Club; New Brunswick Golf Club.

The officers of the club are: G. A. Chapman, president; A. H. Atterbury, vice president; Josiah Browne, treasurer; John Duull Miller, secretary; W. T. Kaufman, secretary for golf.

C. W. Fox is the greenkeeper.

The names of the holes, the par, and distances are:

1.	Alpha	5	360	10.	Inferno	4	375
2.	Beehive	5	460	11.	Tyro	5	390
3.	Highland	4	350	12.	Paradise	4	250

ACCEPTED CHANGE OF PLEA

Sentence Suspended in the Case of Sexton Isaac W. Kennedy.

There was quite an array before City Judge DeMeza this morning. The most important case was that of Isaac W Kennedy, charged with not interring bodies in the Methodist cemetery a sufficient depth. His attorney, W B Codington, presented an affidavit to the effect that he had not been circulating stories to the disrepute of the Board of Health. On the strength of that, Corporation Counsel Marsh withdrew his objection to the plea of non vult. The plea was received by the Court and sentence suspended.

James Cullen, of Belle Meade, was found drunk on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon by Roundsman Flynn. Sentence was suspended.

The trial of William H. Smith for alleged violation of the health ordinance was adjourned for a week. So was the case of James Brown, who was charged with assaulting little Charles Miller on Paradise alley.

The trial of Edmund Brown on a serious charge was started and was discontinued until next Saturday pending settlement.

TALKED ON MISSIONS.

Superintendent of World's Y. W. C. T. U. Delivers an Address.

Last Friday in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church the Christian Endeavor Society of the church held an interesting meeting which was addressed by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, of New York, who is superintendent of the World's Y. W. C. T. U. Her subject was "Missions," and after the opening exercises were conducted by Miss C. R. Yates, Mrs. Barnes made her address. She told many interesting facts concerning the mission work being carried on in foreign countries, of the difficulties and obstacles encountered by missionaries in taking the Gospel to the heathen. Mrs. Barnes, through her talk, was able to enthuse those present with a greater desire to do more for missions. She is a very pleasant speaker and she spoke entertainingly for nearly one hour.

Last of the Season.

The last evening entertainment and ball of the season was given last Thursday by the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein in their hall on Somerset street. The programme consisted of musical selections by Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra, vocal selections by the German and Swedish sections of the society; calesthenic exercises by the pupils of the turning school under the direction of Henry Haurand. The pupils consist of small boys and their work was very creditable. The rendition of the 'Midnight Dream" and "Potpourri," by Miss M. Zimmerman, was one of the best numbers on the programme. The last selections was a musical quartette, composed of Paul Doetzer, first tenor; W. Gartner, second tenor; Chas. Dressler, first base; Chas. Sherer, second bass.

A Church Worker.

Friends of Mrs. Charles S. Lewis, formerly of Evona avenue, have supposed lately that she had returned to Plainfield, her name having been mentioned in connection with several entertainments at the Heavenly Rest parish house, of which her late husband was the founder. But the Mrs. Lewis spoken of, who has been of great assistance in the church this winter, lives on Seventh street, near Clinton avenue, and only moved there about a year ago. Mrs. Charles S. Lewis rented her house immediately after the death of Mr. Lewis last autumn, and removed to Pelham, where she has been ever since.

Patient Made His Escape.

Friday afternoon about 2 o'clock a patient at Brookside Retreat, Somerset street, was enjoying himself about the grounds, when he made his escape into the street. The man was without a hat and he ran as far as Howard street before he was captured. One of the attendants noticed the escape and gave chase. It was with a little difficulty that the man was caught and returned to the retreat. He was brought back on trolley car No. 2.

Mission Trustees.

The following trustees were elected at the East Third Street mission last Thursday evening: C. W. McCutchen, three years; R. K. Case and L. W. Randolph, two years; L. W. Serrell and I. L. Brady, one year. The board has organized by selecting C. W. McCutchen, president; L. W. Serrell, treasurer, and I. L. Brady, secretary.

Mrs. Linn Edsall Better.

Mrs. Seely Edsall, of Sandford avenue, has received a letter from the family of her son, Linn Edsall, who are now residing at Spokane, Wash. Mrs. Linn Edsall, who has been very dangerously ill, has so far recovered as to be able to enjoy a seat on the portico to her home once more.

CLEAR OF ALL DEBTS.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Annual Meeting Held Last Night—The Society is on the Roll of Honor Among the New Jersey Churches.

A state of affairs that few churches can boast of was reported at the annual meeting of the Congregational church held April 30th. There was an absolute freedom from any kind of debt, mortgage, note or otherwise, while a substantial balance remained in the treasury.

The meeting was held in the church parlors and was well attended. The annual church meeting was first held. It was called to order by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, who acted as moderator. The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the clerk, George F. Fuller, and approved.

The report of the Sunday-school for the year was made by the superintendent, Joseph A. Robinson. It showed an increased attendance of 6 per cent for the year. The collections had been nearly increased. $160 were given to missions. Mr. Robinson explained that the increase in attendance made a need for more teachers.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich read a report of the church work for the year. The benevolences had amounted to nearly $1,500. He stated that the church had been placed on the roll of honor at the New Jersey Conference, now in session at Montclair, for the large amount given per member.

The election was then held. George E Fuller was chosen clerk and A. J. Clarkson and L B. Morgan deacons. The three members of the official board elected were Rev. M. E. Dwight, J. A. Robinson and H. C. Nomer.

L B. Morgan offered a resolution, which was afterwards carried, that a vote of thanks be given A. J. Clarkson for caring for the communion service the whole life of the church.

The same collections for benevolent purposes as last year were decided on with one addition, the Church Building Society. The time for the taking of the collections was left to the official board.

The meeting of the society of the Congregational church was next held. John M. Whiton was made chairman of the meeting. The report of the treasurer showed that every bill due had been paid and that the church was absolutely free from debt and that a balance of $107.72 remained in the treasury at present.

The election of trustees was held and the following were elected: Geo. W. Rockfellow, Joseph E. Morse, Louis I VanAlstyne, Morris C. VanArsdale, John E. Stewart, Elsworth Dwight and J. A. Powlison. George E. Fuller was chosen clerk. Stacy Raynolds was elected auditor.

The board of trustees held a meeting at the close of the other meetings and organized for the year. George W. Rockfellow was chosen president and Joseph E. Morse, secretary.

JUST WENT ON A VISIT.

Stanley G. Fielding Had No Intention of Running Away From School.

Stanley G. Fielding, the young student who disappeared from the New Jersey Military Academy Sunday afternoon, has now returned to the Academy. Dr. Warde heard from the father of the lad in Chicago Thursday saying that Stanley was at Elizabeth and had telegraphed home. Young Fielding had already written to Dr. Warde but the letter did not arrive until after the doctor's return.

Fielding did not exactly run away but after having trouble with one of the older students, he rode his wheel to Elizabeth where he remained with friends in that city until Dr. Warde went after him yesterday afternoon.

Resolutions.

Thursday at a meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., the following resolutions on the death of their brother, Samuel W. Baxter, were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God, the Supreme Councilor of thy Universe, to remove from our midst our beloved and esteemed brother, Samuel W. Baxter, therefore be it

Resolved, That while we mourn the loss of our brother and bow in humble submission to Heavenly decree, we commune Counsellor, be it

Resolved, That we tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread in full on the minutes of the Council, and also publis hed in each of the daily papers; an engrossed copy be sent to the bereaved family, and the charter of the order draped for thirty days.

Adopted April 21, 1898.

IN MEMORIAM.

CYRUS EDMUND MOORE.

Gone to the portal to glory,
Gone to the realms of the blest.
Farewell to the earth and the sorrow,
Gone to the promised rest.

Gone where no trouble can enter,
Angels have welcomed him home,
Now he is sitting with Jesus,
Beck'ning others to come.

Soon shall we join him up yonder;
Let us keep faithful and true,
So that when summoned like Cyrus,
Angels will welcome us too.

WEDDED AT DUNELLEN.

TERRY-GRAY NUPTIALS CELEBRATED IN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Event a Fashionable One and Witnessed by a Large Concourse of Friends—Performed by Rev. Mr. Martine

In the marriage at Dunellen of Miss S. Louise Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Gray, of Washington avenue, to William Edwin Terry, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Terry, of Church street, which occurred April 20th at 7 p. m., in the Presbyterian church, one of the most fashionable weddings of the season was witnessed by a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

Long before the appointed hour the church was filled with people who were pleased with the rendition of a select programme of classical music on the organ by Miss Frances Phillips, of Hopewell. Precisely at 7 o'clock the first notes of the favorite Lohengrin wedding march were sounded, and at the same time the bridal party made its appearance.

The ushers, Thomas King, Blanchard Randolph, of Plainfield; Leigh Pearsall, of Westfield, and Robert Carpenter, of Dunellen, entered the church first, from the front, and were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Marjorie Thatcher, of Glen Gardner, and Miss Janie Churchill, of Dunellen, They were gowned in white organdie over green, with trimmings of lace and ribbons. They carried bouquets of pink roses. Then came the maid-of-honor, Miss Ethel Gray, of Irvington, cousin of the bride She wore a gown of white organdie over pink and carried pink roses. Following the maid-of honor, was the bride leaning on the arm of her father. She was richly gowned in white brocaded satin with peal trimming and chiffon. She also wore a veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lilias of valley tied with streamers.

At the altar the bridal party were met by the groom and his best man, F. H Archer, of New Rochelle, and Rev. A I Martine, the pastor of the church and officiating clergyman, who entered the church from the chapel door. The entire party formed a circle in front of the altar where a pleasing arrangement of palms and greens were displayed.

The bride was given away in marriage by her father. Following the ceremony the party reversed and Mr. and Mrs. Terry left the church first, followed by the other members. While the people were leaving the church the Mendelssohn wedding march was rendered perfectly.

At 7:30 a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which is to be the home of the bride and groom upon their return from a wedding tour in the south. The home was beautified through the use of choice flowers, palms and greens.

During the evening a wedding supper was served. The bride and groom left the scene of pleasure at an early hour to enjoy a bridal tour.

The elegance of the wedding gifts was evidence of the popularity of the recipients. Among the valuable collection of furniture, gold, silver, cut-glass, pictures, etc., were two checks of $100 each from the parents of the groom.

The groom is an employe of the house of John and James Dobson, of 73 Worth street, New York. The bride is an accomplished and talented young woman, and both have a host of friends.

FRIENDS CAME UNEXPECTED.

John Tier, Sr., Given a Jolly Surprise by His Card-Playing Friends.

A few friends of John H. Tier, Sr., of Bank place, gave him a jolly surprise last Thursday and the host was completely taken back. The feature of the evening was progressive euchre. Miss May MacLaughlin and Miss Mabelle Force won first and second prizes for the women, and the first and second prizes for the men were awarded to Ben LaVere and Will F. Williams.

After the game a pleasing supper was served and a general good time was enjoyed. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. N. Tier, Mr. and Mrs. Olmstead, Miss May MacLaughlin, Miss Etta Krymer, Miss Mabelle Force, Miss Allene Ayres, Miss Ada Chandler, Miss Etta Neuman, Miss Clara Williams; Theodore Mantz, George Neuman, Robert Clark, Edward Clark, George DeMeza, Ben. LaVere, Wm. Olmstead, David Krymer, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. LaForge, Mrs. Drumpleman, of Rahway; Robert Woodhouse, of New York. An additional feature of the evening was the musical comicalities given by Messrs. Robert and Edward Clark.

A Quiet Marriage.

April 20th at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus K. Case, East Ninth street, occurred the marriage of their son, Rufus I. Case, to Miss Elizabeth H. Doubler, of Philadelphia. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Mr. and Mrs. Case will reside in Philadelphia, where the groom is employed.

AN OLD-TIMER GONE.

THOMAS JENNINGS DIES FROM THE EFFECTS OF PARALYSIS.

Lived for Many Years on the Ground Where the Jackson Building Stands—Always a Friend of the Firemen.

In the death of Thomas Jennings, aged 68 years, which occurred April 20th at 10:45 o'clock at his home, No. 35 Duer street, Plainfield loses one of its oldest inhabitants, who was well and favorably known throughout this locality. Death was due to paralysis. For some time past Mr. Jennings was in poor health and recently he had suffered from two strokes of paralysis. One came on while he was visiting friends in Westfield, and the second stroke occurred a few days ago in his barn on Duer street. The third stroke occurred last evening and resulted in his death.

Thomas Jennings was the son of the late William Manning Jennings, who resided for years at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue where the Jackson building now stands. Previous to the erection of the brick building there stood a low, frame house which was occupied by the Jennings family for years. Thomas was born in that house and his father conducted a blacksmith business just back of it on Madison avenue. Thomas went to work for his father when a young lad and continued in the business for years. Later when his father was obliged to give up his work the business was taken by Thomas and his brother Rufus Jennings. Sometime afterward Thomas resigned and gave his time to taking care of his father until he died. From that time he has lived a life of retirement.

When a young man and the No. 2 engine house stood opposite his home, he kept the key for the engine house and whenever there was a fire he would unlock the doors and allow the firemen to go out with the engine His interest was always with the firemen.

During his illness he has resided with his sister, Miss Sarah F. Jennings, of Duer street, where his last days were made as comfortable as kind and loving hands could make them.

Three sisters, Miss Sarah E. Jennings, of Duer street; Mrs. Catherine L. Fountain, of Troy, N. Y.; Mrs. Jennie E Brokaw, of Duer street; and one brother, William Rufus Jennings, of Bridgefield, Conn., survives him. Another brother, Henry Jennings was killed at the North Avenue station during the commencing of the war. A cannon exploded, killing him instantly.

The funeral services will be held from the house 35 Duer street, next Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

DENIED NATURE'S GIFT.

WHAT DUNELLENITES SAY THE SEWER BEDS ACCOMPLISH

The Grounds Upon Which the Request to Have the Beds Declared a Nuisance are Made—Financial Interests Affected.

The following is the text of the complaint made by the citizens of Dunellen to the State Board of Health against the sewer beds of this city:

"First—the beds in and of themselves as at present located are a public nuisance because of their befouling atmosphere with a sickening stench which at times compels those in the vicinity to close their doors and windows, and thus are the victims of a double wrong in being denied the rights that are ours at Nature's gift.

"Second—That being so near and affecting the atmosphere, they must from their very nature become the source of the diseases that find germs in such localities and that spring from such influences.

"Third—That being so near, and the soil being of the nature that it is, it cannot be other than that the water of the place, heretofore healthful and fine, must become impregnated with malaria and typhoid germs which will eventuate in an epidemic, thereby endangering the lives of our citizens.

"Fourth—That the influence of all this has affected and does, and will more and more affect the financial interests of the place to a serious degree, as it already has, by putting realty at a discount, impoverishing business and causing the removal of worthy families from our midst.

"Fifth—That in addition to the points above stated, another may be properly mentioned, viz.: the stream known as Green brook, is also befouled from the same cause, its water is rendered obnoxious to those living on its line, and unhealthful for the live stock that feed on its banks and drink therefrom that furnishes milk for our tables, and hence the evil effects of it all comes back to us and to our homes through this and other channels."

Deacon T. R. VanZandt.

After the prayer meeting service in Trinity Reformed church Wednesday evening an election for deacon, to fill the unexpired term of F. S. Cutter, resigned, resulted in the unanimous election of Theo. R. VanZandt, the flour merchant, 304 Park avenue.

STRICT LAW RIDDLED BY JUST CRITICISM.

Building Ordinance Discussed By Board of Trade.

HARD WORDS APPLIED TO IT.

BOARD OF HEALTH ALSO COMES IN FOR STRONG COMMENT.

Prominent Citizens Say Unreservedly That the Building Ordinance is Not Suited to Plainfield and That it is Doing the City a Vast Amount of Harm by Retarding Building Operations—Several Truthful Instances are Shown—Board of Health Practices are Criticised by President Lounsbury.

A public meeting of the Board of Trade was held April 20th for the purpose of discussing the building ordinance. There was a number of members and contractors present.

Prior to the discussion some business of more or less importance was considered by the members. Secretary Harry C. Runyon stated that he had received letters from H. P. Baldwin and W. C. Wyckoff, of the Central Railroad, in which they stated that at present they could not reduce the fare or the rate of charges on freight between Plainfield and New York, as requested by the Board. C. B. Morse and George F. White were elected to membership and Adam Dealaman, of Dunellen, and Maze Edwards were proposed for membership.

President Lounsbury, who was in the chair, at this time called for a report from the committee on building ordinance, consisting of Messrs Eugene Laing, Horace Sherwin and Wm. Clum. Mr. Laing stated that the committee had had very little time to accomplish much and asked for more time. He said that he had seen several contractors who had promised to be present and offer a number of objections to the ordinance. The matter then rested for a few minutes while President Lounsbury made a report of the purchase of furniture for the rooms. Mr. Lounsbury also made a report of the work accomplished at Elizabeth last Monday when a postponement in the confirmation of the report of the Marin Act Commissioners was secured until May 6 h. On the latter date, he said, the court would confirm the report as against all who do not appear and make a protest. He had been given assurances by Lawyer R V Lindabury that the work of the commissioners so far as prior to 1891 was concerned, could be set aside, and he advised all to join the pool in contesting the findings of the commissioners.

Mr. Lounsbury then stated that the meeting had been called for the purpose of discussing the building ordinance, and it was intended to give all an opportunity of freely expressing their views on the subject. He said that many might differ from the opinion of the "powers that be," but he could not agree with those who had framed the ordinance. He thought the ordinance had been weighed and found wanting. He stated that he had written to seven places in New Jersey asking the city clerks regarding the ordinances relating to building.

In the case of Rahway they have no ordinance, neither has Somerville. North Plainfield, he stated, having no ordinance, is reaping the benefits of Plainfield's strict laws. Montclair with a population of 11,753 has no building ordinance, and East Orange with a population of 17,927 has no ordinance relating to building Orange with a population of 29,792 is without a building ordinance, and so is Elizabeth with a population of 43,834, but Plainfield with a population 13,629 has a very restrictive building ordinance.

Mr. Lounsbury then gave an amusing incident of how the ordinance works in Plainfield. He cited the property at the corner of Fifth street and Arlington avenue, where an outhouse was erected on the rear of the lot a distance of 70 feet from the house to take the place of the one worn out from age. The owner was obliged to put a tin roof on the small building.

L. B. Woolston spoke of an experience he had with the ordinance in erecting a small workshop in the rear of his new building on North avenue. He was obliged to cover a small cornice with tin, when he was allowed to erect a wooden fence ten feet high in the same place. He said that he would have put up a four-story building if the ordinance was not so strict. He also thought the fire limits should be cut down.

J. C. Pope cited several very absurd things about the ordinance, where a person is obliged to use brick to build a small addition to a house when the fire risk is not to be increased.

W. A. Woodruff waited a year to build an addition on his house and was then obliged to use iron columns when his house is a frame structure.

J. Fred MacDonald thought the fire limits covered too much territory, and that the ordinance should not touch anyone outside of the limits. Seaman Williams though the ordinance very extortionate, and amounted to nothing outside of the provision for lining inside of chimneys. Lawyer H. C. Runyon was of the opinion that the ordinance placed a premium on frame buildings. Architect Clum thought the ordinance should be repealed altogether and that it had worked a great deal of harm to building interests in the city.

Mr. Truell, of Central avenue, stated that he expected to erect a house at the corner of Fourth and New streets, but when he learned that it had to be built of brick he gave up the plan. He is now waiting to have the fire limits reduced. Eugene Laing said that people are being driven into the borough by the ordinance, and that a number of houses were to have been built, but the ordinance killed the plans. Mr. Lounsbury said that if a man wanted to keep chickens he should stay away from metropolitan Plainfield. Harry Runyon related an incident when a man employed by Mr. Pinto, of Central avenue, was obliged to stop erecting a hot-house, 15x3, until he could get a permit to put it up. J. D. Runyon thought the fire limits too large, and that it was foolish to be obliged to get a permit for every little thing. He thought, however, that the Council would be willing to make such alterations in the ordinance as were reasonable.

J. D. Spicer thought the ordinance a detriment to the interest of the city. He also said that never before since he came to Plainfield, thirty-two years ago, had there been so many empty houses in the city. There must be some good reason for it, he said, and it is too much government. The building ordinance and the Board of Health is too much.

Mr. Laing expressed an opinion that the Board of Health is more of a nuisance than otherwise. J. C. Pope cited the case of a year ago when Plainfield had a slight epidemic of scarlet fever and he blamed the Board of Health for scaring people away. Some person spoke of the newspapers being responsible for much of the scare, whereupon Mr. Spicer said that the newspapers do not compare with the Board of Health.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that a person has a perfect right to criticise, and while personally he had a very high regard for the president of the Board of Health he thought that in matters pertaining to the Board of Health he is a fanatic and a crank and that the ultimatum would be issued sooner or later.

Other remarks were made by Henry Liefke, G. O. Stevens, Horace Sherwin, A. C. Rogers, J. T. Vail, Mr. Jessup, and all were about of the same tenor as stated above. The result of the meeting was that resolutions were adopted which provides for the establishment of fire limits as follows: Central avenue south of the railroad 100 feet, Watchung avenue and Greenbrook, also that outside of the fire limits the ordinance is not to have any effect. These resolutions were adopted and referred to the building ordinance committee, and they are to present them to the councilmanic committee on fire and buildings.

The meeting then adjourned.

CASKET DRAPED WITH FLAG.

Patriotic Tribute at the Bier of Late Cyrus E. Moore.

At the funeral of the late Cyrus Edmund Moore, which occured Thursday afternoon, the casket was draped with the American flag and the flowers, which were very beautiful, covered it entirely.

One of the floral pieces was a large pillow from Camp, No. 30, P. O. S. of A., also one from the Sons of Veterans, of which the deceased was a member. A beautiful wreath from fellow-workmen of the National Wall Paper Company, of New York city, where Mr. Moore was employed before his health compelled him to give up work. The other floral pieces, consisting of wreathes, etc., were very numerous. His friends knew that he loved flowers so he was well remembered. Rev. Charles Herring officiated at the house and the interment was made at Hillside. The pall-bearers were: Edward M. Tomlinson, Maurice Sutphen, Daniel VanWinkle, W. Jennings, F. Clarkson and W. Rittenhouse.

Keep in mind that Scott's Emulsion contains the hypophosphites.

These alone make it of great value for all affections of the nervous system.

It also contains glycerine, a most valuable, soothing and healing agent. Then there is the cod-liver oil, acknowledged by all physicians as the best remedy for poor blood and loss in weight.

These three great remedial agents blended into a creamy Emulsion, make a remarkable tissue builder.

NATIONAL VOLUNTEER RESERVE.

The Work of Organizing It—Col. Washington to Form a Brigade.

New York, April 27.—The work of organizing the National Volunteer Reserve, which is attracting interest in Plainfield, has grown to such proportions that it has been found impossible to handle it at the headquarters in New York. The President's call for volunteers having rendered it desirable that all enrollments be immediately available to the Adjutant General of each State, the Reserve officers have requested that all enrollments now in the hands of organizations and individuals throughout the country be sent at once to the Adjutant Generals of the respective States, so that delay in transit to New York and thence to the capital of each State will be avoided. It is requested that a memorandum of all enrollment blanks be reported to the National headquarters in this city.

The desire for immediate assignment to organizations has become so great at the headquarters of the reserve that Col Washington, the President of the reserve, has consented to form a brigade, which is already far advanced. Enlistments for this brigade will be accepted today at the headquarters on the tenth floor of the Washington Building, Broadway.

Since Friday last 125 000 enlistments blanks have been demanded by the recruiting stations in different parts of the country.

STILL AWAITING ORDERS

Jersey Troops to Go to the Front Not Yet Designated

Trenton, April 27.—Governor Voorhees has not yet received the message from Washington giving the detail of the call for troops. He will not announce the regiments to be called out until the message comes.

The Governor, in reply to a dispatch from the War Department, stated that New Jersey was ready to put 4.000 National Guardsmen into the field, and that they were fairly well equipped. The only articles they are short of are shoes and shirts and modern guns The guard is miserably armed, nearly all the guns being of old style.

Adjutant-General Stryker says the State will not regard the designation by the War Department of Jersey City as a place for mobilizing the National Guard. The troops will be sent to Sea Girt, where they can be comfortably quartered, as from that point they can be transported quickly and without confusion. The order from Washington said Jersey City had been selected because of its excellent facilities for transportation by railroads and water.

New Jersey Troops May Get Extra Pay.

Trenton, April 27.—Gov Voorhees is considering the advisability of calling a special session of the Legislature to consider the wisdom of a State appropriation to supplement the Government's pay of the New Jersey troops in the volunteer army. It is suggested that only $13 a month will mean a hardship to many of the National Guard who will respond to the Governor's call for troops. The matter will probably be considered by the State Millitary Board today.

Westfielders Enlist.

Westfield, April 27—Chauncey K Penington, Elliot Howe and Robert Embleton, three Westfield young men, went to New York Monday with the purpose of enlisting in the army. They did not return and it is supposed they were accepted. The former sent word to friends yesterday that he successfully passed the physical examinations and been accepted. The letter did not say whether Howe and Embleton had been accepted.

Trolley Franchises.

[Special to The Daily Press.]

Bound Brook, April 27.—A meeting of the Borough Council was held here last evening. A franchise for the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company was passed on first and second reading. The franchise gives them permission to connect with their road from Somerville and the line to New Brunswick They are also to run a spur to connect with the trolley line to Lincoln and Dunellen.

Duty to Family.

New Brunswick, April 27.—Six members of Company D, Third Regiment, of New Brunswick, who have decided that their duty to their families demanded their presence at home, and in consequence asked for honorable discharges from the National Guard, are indignant because of the fact that Captain Kay had issued an order stating that the men had been dropped from the rolls.

Will Pay Enlisted Men's Assessments

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, April 27.—The members of Fanwood Council, No. 744, Royal Arcanum, at their meeting last night voted to pay the assessments of all members of the council who shall enlist in the army and navy.

Gave a Good Reason.

Edward Tomlinson, of LaGrandavenue, a member of the New Jersey Naval Reserves, was called last evening to appear before the court martial and give a good and sufficient reason why he failed to appear for a drill Monday evening. Decision has not yet been heard.

PATRIOTIC EMBLEMS.

Plainfielders Outwardly Exhibit Pride for Their Country.

There is no better sign of the present sentiments of the people of Plainfield than the way in which the Stars and Stripes have appeared on every hand since the war with Spain begun. As the conflict drew nearer and nearer, solitary flags appeared all over the city in the residental portions as well as in the business centre. When the first gun was fired, however, they appeared on every hand and have grown in numbers ever since until now in every street Old Glory can be seen waving.

The national colors are not confined to the decoration of building. Little American flags, knots of red, white and blue, are now to be seen on the coats of many of Plainfield's patriotic citizens. There was such a demand for the national colors at the local stores that the supply of little flags was exhausted on Monday and yesterday. Today, however, all are ready to supply the wants of the most patriotic.

Drivers of delivery wagons about the city have decorated the harness and wagon with small American flags. In a word, everybody is showing their patriotism by prominently displaying the colors of the American nation.

At the Plainfield High School yesterday a number of the girls wore neckties and belts of the tri-colored ribbon while others prominently displayed a bow of the national colors.

Hand kerchiefs consisting of miniatures American flags are again being carried. There are a thousand and one patriotic devices that are hurriedly being put on the market by the makers of novelties. Then the but ons, showing the Maine in all stages before and after her destruction, with suitable inscriptions, are being worn by the small boys.

Y. M. C. A.'S WAR PLANS.

It Will Establish Branches at Once at All of the Military Camps.

An army committee of the international committee of the Y M C A was named yesterday and instructed to take immediate steps for the prosecution of work at all military camps similar to that done by the United States Christian Commission during the Civil War. For two months past letters have been coming to the international committee from all over the country urging formation of a like commission in case of war. In response to these appeals the matter has been put into the hands of the army committee, Charles W. McAlpin, of New York, W. D. Murray, of Plainfield, and an official in the Government service at Washington, whose name the international committee will not give until acceptance of the place is received from him.

The work to be undertaken is to be similar to that maintained by the New York State Y M C A at Peekskill during encampment. The army committee was instructed yesterday to make necessary purchases of tents, books, chairs and supplies sufficient in number to equip quarters at Chickamauga, Tampa, Key West Atlanta, and wherever else camps are established Secretaries to go to camps and take charge of Y M C A. tents are to be selected at once. An advisory committee is to be formed and on it will be Dwight L. Moody. Mr. Moody was extremely active in work during the Civil War and may undertake it again during the present conflict.

THE IMPROVMENT WOMEN

ANNUAL MEETING REVIEWS WORK OF THE PAST YEAR.

Children's Auxiliary to Present a Fairy Play, "Cinderella," to Raise Funds for City Park—Officers for Ensuing Year

The Town Improvement Association, of Plainfield and North Plainfield, held its annual public meeting in the small hall of the Y M C A. building yesterday afternoon.

The president, Mrs. Pierre Malli, was in the chair. The treasurer, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, read the annual financial report showing receipts of $1,802 17 and expenditures amounting to $1 641 67. The report was accepted and the president and Mrs. A. Stuart Patterson were appointed auditors to examine the accounts.

The report of the committee on streets showed that an attempt had been made to secure the passage of a city ordinance prohibiting the throwing of papers or fruit into the streets. The attempt was unsuccessful.

The sanitary committee reported that it had made inspections of places where fruit and other eatables were stored, and in cases where the ordinance was being violated the Health Inspector had been notified.

The superintendent of the Children's Auxiliary reported a membership of fifty The children are planning to give the fairy play, 'Cinderella," in the Misses Scribner and Newton's School early in the summer vacation, to raise funds for the new city park. The committee on trees and parks reported that the money secured by the association had been nearly all expended in improving the park. The walks had been laid deep with stone beds to secure drainage. The south end of the park is all completed, but the north end is too much shaded to allow the planting of shrubbery, as was planned. Benches are needed for the park. J. W. Butterfield has been of great assistance in completing the landscape effects in the park.

All the officers were re elected for the ensuing year as follows: Mrs. Pierre Malli, president; Mrs Charles E Ryder, first vice president; Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, second vice-president; Miss E. Stewart, corresponding secretary; Mrs S. R Crum, recording secretary; and Mrs. Alexander Gilbert treasurer

Mrs. Malli Miss Stewart and Mrs. Gilbert were elected as the delegates from the club to the meeting of the New Jersey State Federation of Women s Clubs, which will be held in this city May 17th.

Mrs. Corwin, of Park avenue, is entertaining relatives from out of town

DUNELLEN

Dunellen, April 27—As yet the local Board of Health has received no word from the State Board of Health as regards the time when they will visit the sewer beds in Plainfield to investigate the same with a view to determining whether the beds are a nuisance or not. Adam Dealaman, of the local Board of Health, says he expects to receive word from the State Board very soon, as they promised to attend to the matter.

The work of re-setting the curbing along North avenue to the proper grade, has been temporarily stopped. It will be started again as soon as the trolley company make a move and determine just when they will begin to construct their road.

The closing exercises of the borough public schools will be held early in June. Principal Whitney will preside in his official capacity at that time, after which he will sever his connection with the schools.

A son of William Wyckoff has gone to New York to enlist in the regular army. Several other young men of the borough are thinking about enlisting.

A meeting of the Junior Epworth League of the M. E. church will be held next Friday afternoon. In the evening the regular class meeting will be held.

A very substantial crosswalk has been laid on North avenue near the property owned by F. A. Gise. The improvement is greatly appreciated.

The members of the M. E church will tender their new pastor, Rev. Alfred Jamison and family, a reception in the near future.

Next Friday evening an invitation social and dance will be given in Apgar's Hall. Messrs. Apgar are in charge of the affair.

Mrs. Duncan, of Philadelphia, who has been visiting her father, Capt Thompson, has returned home.

Miss Maude Bolton, of Somerville, has returned home after a short visit with borough relatives.

William H. Terry, of Church street, has been visiting relatives in Brooklyn and New York.

Adam Deslaman was in Plainfield yesterday looking after some business interests.

Mr. Richardson, of North avenue, has been improving his property very much.

Mrs. Laing has been entertaining relatives from out of town for a few days.

A regular meeting of the Borough Council will be held next Monday evening.

Mayor Brakely was in Plainfield yesterday on business.

NEW MARKET.

New Market, April 27.—Already pleasure-seekers are to be found in the vicinity of the lake, and it will not be long before boating parties will invade the town.

Miss Jessie Haynes has returned from a visit with out-of-town friends.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Scotch Plains, April 27.—W. B. Buckley has made arrangements with the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company to supply Scotch Plains with a bulletin service of war news. The bull tins will be received at the store of E. L. Hand, and will be posted in front of the store.

A union service of the Baptist and Methodist churches will be held in the Scotch Plains Baptist church Sunday evening. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Mr. Woodruff, pastor of the Methodist church.

Mrs. William Maguire gave a reception Monday evening in honor of Rev. Mr. Woodruff, the new pastor of the Scotch Plains Methodist church.

Miss Maguire has returned to her duties as a teacher in the Scotch Plains Public School, after a serious illness.

One candidate was initiated at the meeting of Fanwood Council, No. 744, Royal Arcanum, last night.

Rev. Dr. Parks spent yesterday with friends in New York State.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield, April 27.—Frank Townley, the fifteen-year-old boy, who suddenly disappeared from his home in Westfield some months ago, returned home yesterday. It was thought at the time of his disappearance that Townley had gone to sea, as he had often expressed a desire to become a sailor. He went only as far as Brooklyn, however, where he remained until yesterday. Upon his return to Westfield Townley did not go at once to his home to inform his parents of his safe return, but remained coolly upon the streets playing games until supper time.

The case of Beers against Ochiatti, which was to have been tried in Justice Toucey's court yesterday, was adjourned one week. The plaintiff claims $200 damages, alleging that she was bitten by a dog owned by Ochiatti.

The Sunday-school teachers of the Baptist church with a few friends met in the church parlor last night after prayer meeting.

The residence of H Frank Seiders, at Germantown, was damaged by lightning during the heavy storm on Sunday afternoon.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Two ounces of blood will fill a small wine glass, and that is the quantity of rich, red blood which is daily added to your blood vessels when you take one of Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids with each meal three times daily.

No other iron medicine will do this, because all others are unnatural or crude preparations of iron, while Capsuloids contain natural iron identical with the iron already in your blood.

You cannot take any ordinary iron medicine, because it's acid, and injures teeth, stomach and bowels; but

You can take Capsuloids, or natural iron medicine, because it contains no acid, is perfectly natural, and perfectly mild.

Infants and invalids, as well as adults, take Capsuloids without feeling them in the slightest, even though they have never been able to take any other kind of iron medicine.

What are Capsuloids? They are the natural iron called Hæmoglobin, extracted from the blood of healthy young bullocks. This natural iron is just the same as the iron in the human blood. We then enclose this dissolved natural iron in little soft pointed globes of pure gelatine. They are easily swallowed, are free from taste and smell, and their contents enter the blood within from one to three minutes after they are taken into the stomach.

Capsuloids is the greatest of all tonics for the nerves, heart, lungs, bronchial tubes, mucous membranes, liver, bowels, kidneys, and especially for all monthly irregularities, when these organs are affected with blood diseases.

Capsuloids act entirely through the blood in building it and increasing its quantity two ounces daily. The effect upon the health, color, nerves and spirits is seen almost as soon as you begin to take them, and the effect of adding two ounces of rich, red, new blood each day.

Many doctors have ceased using all other kinds of iron, and prescribe Capsuloids exclusively. Send for pamphlet containing their testimonials, and local testimonials.

LATE WAR NEWS

THE AMERICAN FLAG NOW WAVES OVER THE PHILLIPPINE ISLANDS.

Dewey's Despatch Has Arrived and Tells of Victory in the East.

A British Yacht Assaulted—A Military Government for the Phillippines—Fighting Orders for Sampson—The Oregon Coming North—Movements of Warships—Late War News.

BRITISH AROUSED NOW.

Three Warships Sent to Cuba to Protect Lives of Their Subjects.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 4, 10:50 a. m.—British subjects and property have now become the victims of Spanish violence on the island of Cuba. The feeling against the English has grown until the life of the British consul at Santiago de Cuba has been attempted and he was forced to use fire arms in self defense.

Reports of the serious condition of affairs at Santiago have reached this city for the past few days. The British consul sent word by the officers of the steamers that carried away the American and English refugees from that port, that his life was in danger, and calling upon the British authorities on this island to send him protection.

His requests for protection have become more and more importunate until a British man-of-war was ordered to direct its course to that port.

Today reports come of a serious uprising against the British colony at Santiago. The strong feeling against the British rose to such a pitch that a mob gathered in front of the consulate and threatened to kill the British Consul.

The Consul and his assistants entrenched themselves in the building and barricaded the doors and windows. The mob, tiring of of hurling epithets, began to use force and besieged the Consul and his little party.

At last some of the mob gained entrance to the place and the consul fired at them in self-defense. The mob retreated before the point of the revolver.

The Spanish authorities immediately sent a detachment to the consulate and arrested the consul for shooting at the mob. It is reported that he has been imprisoned.

Three British warships have been ordered to Santiago immediately to protect British subjects and property. It is understood that a force of marinis and blue jackets will be landed and force will be used if necessary. British officers here are greatly excited over the news.

Reports of further disorder comes from the port of Santa Cruz, in the Province of Santa Clara. Refugees have flocked there and to other places on the coast in the hope of finding means to leave the island. There are some English and Americans reported to be among them.

There are no vessels there to carry away the refugees, and it is reported that the Spaniards are slaughtering them by the wholesale. Great excitement prevails,

MAY SEIZE PORTO RICO.

Important Conference of the Naval Stragetic Board Yesterday.

Washington, May 4, 2 p. m.—The Naval Stragetic Board is now considering the course to pursue with reference to the Spanish fleet that sailed westward from the Cape Verde Islands.

They must either be met on the high seas and annihilated or we must seize Porto Rico, throwing Spain's base of supplies on the other side of the Atlantic.

It is understood that the Board has decided on the latter course.

A swift patrol will be established to notify the American fleet of the approach of the Spanish vessels, in order that our ships may give them battle.

There is still some nervousness felt over the possibility of the Spanish cruisers skirting the coast and damaging it since Spain despaired to cope with us in a face to face struggle.

Many efforts have been made to satisfactorily account for the failure of the first detachment of troops to start for Cuba according to the schedule. It is believed that there is a change in the plans.

Secretary of the Navy Long sent to the House today a deficiency estimate of twenty-one million dollars for the remainder of the fiscal year.

Washington, May 4, 1:25 p. m.—President McKinley announced today that he would soon liberate Captain Hart, of the fillibusterer Lauranda.

Translating a Cipher Dispatch.

Washington, May 4, 2:10 p. m.—Captain Crowninshield, chairman of the bureau of navigation, is now translating the long cipher cablegram supposed to be from Commodore Dewey.

Reported Assassination.

Gibraltar, May 4, 12:15 p. m.—Minister of the Colonies Moret and General Martinez Campos are reported to have been assassinated in Madrid. Senor Sagasta, the prime minister, is reported to have taken refuge at the British embassy. Great riots are occurring in Madrid.

London, May 4, 12:45 p. m—Madrid despatches discredit the the Gibraltar reports of the assassination of two leading Spanish statesmen.

Spanish Spy Captured.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 4, 10:30 a. m.—A Spanish spy was arrested in this city this morning. He was captured while tampering with the magazine of the auxiliary cruiser St. Paul at Cramp's ship yard.

British Yacht Assaulted.

Gibraltar, May, 4, 12:40 p. m.—A British yacht is reported to have been mobbed and stoned at the Spanish port at Malaga. It is reported that the yacht was compelled to put to sea to escape destruction at the hands of the mob.

DEWEY'S REPORT.

It Has Reached Washington at Last.

Washington, May 4, 4 p. m.—Washington is jubilant, for Dewey's report has arrived and it tells of a great American victory in the East.

The report in the shape of a long cipher cablegram arrived here during the morning.

Captain Crowninshield immediately began the work of deciphering it. The report is voluminous.

Its complete text will not be ready for publication for several hours.

Vice President Hobart was at the White House while the message was being deciphered.

He says that the report states that Commodore Dewey annihilated the Spanish fleet off Manila.

Dewey, he says, now has captured Manila and the American flag waves over the Phillippine Islands.

Dispatch Boat From Dewey.

Hong Kong, May 4, 10:45 a. m.—The United States revenue cutter, Hugh McCullough, which was used as a dispatch boat in Commodore Dewey's fleet, has arrived at Mirs Bay. It is believed that it has brought Commodore Dewey's report of the engagement at Manila.

CECILIA CLUB SANG WITH MUCH SUCCESS.

Their Annual Choral Given in the Y. M. C. A.

SOME PATRIOTIC FEATURES.

E. J. FITZHUGH DIRECTED WITH MUSICAL SKILL.

Every Available Seat in the Hall Filled—The Songs Rendered With Spirit and Correctness by the Chorus, Which Had Been Carefully Trained—Mrs. Frank J. Smith Showed Talent in Her Readings—The Cantata Produced in a Creditable Manner—Hall Patriotically Decorated With Banting.

The event of the year in local musical circles, the concert of the Cecelia Club, was given in Y. M. C. A. Hall last Tuesday. The combined attractions of the programme and the promise of good music brought an audience that filled every available seat. While it was not on the programme, the patriotic demonstration that concluded the concert was one of the events of the evening.

Part first opened with the chorus, "Spring Song," by Chadwick. It was sung with spirit and enthusiasm. E. J. Fitzhugh, familiar to Plainfielders through his connection as leader of the Choral Society in the past, acted as conductor and directed its movement with a skill that brought out the beauty of each selection. Then followed a short chorus, "Grey Eyes are Sly."

It would be difficult to find a more pleasing entertainer than Mrs. Frank J. Smith. She gave as her first selection a scene from "Twelfth Night." She has a faculty of entering into the spirit of her readings with an ease and grace that gives new life and interest to the selections.

"My Polly Was," a nonsense song, was a catchy air, and was sung with a spontaneity that was pleasing.

"Mr. Lotter's Ride," as recited by Mrs Smith, was delightfully entertaining.

"Nancy," a ballad, was sung by the soprano. "Snow Flakes" was then given by the entire club. "A Mother's Lullaby" proved the best of the club's different selections.

The first part ended with "The King's Command" by Mrs. Smith. A thrilling selection which offerred unusual opportunities for graceful movement. She was accompanied by Frank J. Smith on the piano.

Part two consisted of a cantata by the club. The cantata was the "Queen of the Sea." In it the club was assisted by Miss Adelaide Hoffman, soprano soloist as "Agneta," and by William Crane Andrews, tenor soloist, as the "Sea King." Incidental solos were sung by Mrs. H. E Rider, Miss Bessie Blair and Miss Alice Carroll.

The cantata included a number of difficult choruses which were sung in a manner that showed long practice by the club, and careful training by the conductor. The voices blended well, and while some were not of great power, they combined in the grand harmony with pleasing effect.

Miss Hoffman, the soloist, was suffering from a severe cold, that prevented her from using her sweet and powerful voice to its best advantage. Mr. Andrews had a very distinct enunciation and his technique was good.

The concert closed with "The Star Spangled Banner," in which the audience joined in singing at the request of Mr. Fitzhugh.

The platform and stage were decorated in tri-colored bunting and with American flags.

Miss Grace Petrie had charge of the entrance and was assisted by Miss Eleanor T. Van Deventer, Miss Eleanor Williams, Miss Saidee Mae Howell and Miss Bita Pond as ushers.

News From the Far East.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Foreign Circle of the Park Avenue Baptest church was held at the home of the president, Mrs. Walter Freeman Tuesday. After the usual opening exercises, Miss Helen Newcomb, of India, gave an account of the lives of the women of India, and told of the child widows, the dreadful plague and the famine. Miss Newcomb is one of the most interesting speakers we have heard. Cake and chocolate were served and the meeting adjourned.

Health of the Borough.

The Borough Board of Health met Monday and transacted very little of importance. The inspector, Wm. H. Pangborn, made his monthly report, which showed that at present there are only two cases of scarlet fever in the borough. The health of the borough was stated to be in excellent condition.

DR. WARDE'S DEALINGS

IT IS SAID THAT HE TOOK $500 BELONGING TO A STUDENT.

Stewart Rickards's Father Gave the Professor $500 to Keep for His Son and the Money Cannot Be Found.

The absence of Dr. A. D. Warde has caused a stir of activity among the several creditors about town. Those who have thus far put in a claim against the professor in Justice Mattison's court includes T. J. Carey, F. S. Runyon, C. H. Hand, A. L. Force, Geo. F. Brown, H. W. Marshall, Richard Meonzell, Mulford Estil and Ralph Waldo Emerson. All of the claims are in the hands of Murphy & Blatz, with the exception of the one of Ralph Waldo Emerson. His claim is in the charge of Judge DeMeza.

Mr. Stewart, of Philadelphia, who made the uniforms for the students, has sent in a bill for $200. The other claims amount to about $100.

It is said that Dr. Warde took with him about $500 belonging to a student named Stewart Rickards, of Chicago. Rickards' father advanced the money to Dr. Warde in small amounts for his son, the same to be used as necessary. Rickards thought the money was in the bank for him, but has learned that Dr. Warde held the money and when he went away he took it with him. Rickards is still in this city, but will probably leave for home soon.

There are other claims, it is said, that will amount to several hundred dollars in addition to the above. It is also said that the receipts from the performance of "The Merchant of Venice," were kept by the absconding debtor, although he settled some of the bills. Mrs. Julia Peck, of New York, has had a distress warrant issued against the professor for rent.

GRAND JURORS NAMED.

MAY TERM OF COURT CONVENED AT ELIZABETH TUESDAY.

The Plainfield Members of the Grand Jury—Manslaughter and Recent Murder Trial Will Commenced Wednesday.

Elizabeth, May 4.—The May term of the Union County Court opened here yesterday before Justice Van Syckel. The civil calendar is the smallest in many years, consisting of eighteen Supreme Court cases, fifteen Circuit Court cases, twelve District Court Appeal cases and thirteen Justice Appeal cases.

Lawyer Frank H. Dunn, Democrat, has been retained as clerk of the Grand Jury and Assistant Prosecutor until the October term. The Grand Jurors selected are:

Elizabeth — Foreman, Franklin Brooks, Frederick H. Levey, Isaac C Biggins, Meline W. Halsey, James B. Irwin, Postmaster William J. Whelan, Dr Edward O'Reilly, Louis Quien, Lebbins B. Miller.

Plainfield Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Frank Bushnell, Henry B. Paul, Marion S. Ackerman.

Rahway—Joseph G. Smith, Frank P. Freeman.

Summit—Stephen B. Mullen.

Clark—Benjamin King.

Cranford—George W. Littell.

New Providence—Albert P. Chase.

Springfield—Nicholas S. Cox.

Union—William P. Bonnell.

Fanwood—Robert B. Reilly.

The most important case before the Court will be the trial for murder of George Mansbanda and Louis Roesel, who are accused of killing Farmer James Pitts, of Summit. Their trial was begun this morning.

There are a number of Supreme and Circuit Court cases set down for the present term which are of interest to Plainfielders. The courts opened yesterday when the following cases were announced: Supreme Court—John C. Milne against Dehlia R. Voehl and George Voehl, in tort, Reed & Coddington represent the plaintiff and W. L. Hetfield the defendant; the Seeley Paper Mills Company against the Mountain Water Company, Reed & Coddington represent the plaintiff and Hiller & Hiller the defendant; the Jeffrey Manufacturing Company against the Plainfield Sanitary Company, H. O. Hance for the plaintiff and Codington & Swackhamer for the defendant. The Circuit Court cases are as follows: Sarah O'Brien against G. M. Phillips, Craig A Marsh for the plaintiff and Nelson Bunyon for the defendant; W. J. Pearson, et als., against the Plainfield Sanitary Company, Reed & Coddington for the plaintiff and Codington & Swackhamer for the defendant; George J. Tobin against the Plainfield Sanitary Company, Reed & Coddington for the plaintiff and Codington & Swackhamer for the defendant; C. A. Sturtevant against the Consolidated Traction Company, Craig A. Marsh for the plaintiff and Coult & Howell for the defendant.

MARRIED AN HEIRESS.

HENRY D. MORRISON WEDDED TO A CHARMING NEW YORK BELLE.

Miss Genevieve O'Day, Daughter of a Standard Oil Magnate, the Bride.—They Will Reside in London.

New York, May 4.—A fashionable wedding was celebrated yesterday afternoon when Miss Genevieve O'Day, a daughter of Mr. Daniel O'Day, vice-president of the Standard Oil Company, was married at the O'Day residence, No 128 West Seventy-second street, to Henry Dickson Morrison, a son of Mr. T. W. Morrison, of Plainfield, N. J.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Grace and Ruth O'Day, and the best man was Mr. Charles O'Day, of Pittsburg. Archbishop Corrigan, Mr. Chauncey M. Depew and former Police Commissioner Sheehan were among the guests at the large reception.

The marriage is the result of a brief but romantic courtship. The young people met a few months ago in London, where Mr. Morrison has business interests. They became interested in one another almost immediately, and Mr. Morrison travelled with Miss O'Day's family on the continent. By the time the party returned to London Miss O'Day and Mr. Morrison were engaged, and they came over here to be married.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison sail on Saturday for London, where they will reside.

THE LAST TROLLEY LINK.

BOUND BROOK COUNCIL AT LAST GRANTS A FRANCHISE.

The Right Given to the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, Which is Directed by Brunswick People.

Bound Brook, May 4.—The Council met last evening and finished up the business in connection with the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company by giving them a franchise to operate in the borough. The ordinance giving such right was adopted on the third reading and approved by the Mayor.

This is considered the last link in the long contest for trolley construction and means that there will be a direct line of trolley from Plainfield to New Brunswick and Raritan, touching New Market, Metuchen, Bonebamtown, Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan, Dunellen and Lincoln. Last week the Piscataway Township Committee adopted the ordinance on the third reading and the franchise was given to the company.

During the long fight for franchises there have been many small side issues to be considered, and it is now thought that everyone is satisfied.

The company will be known as the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, but the owners and officers are the ones that composed the Brunswick Traction Company. The latter company was willing to give up its name and take the name of the other company to satisfy a majority of the interested people.

It is expected that the work of construction will begin very soon and that before many months trolley cars will be running in all direction for the accommodation of the people, who for years have been obliged to put up with all sorts of inconveniences.

King and Queen Entertained.

Mrs. Rudolph Spiegel, queen, and Adolph Berry, king, of the Independent Gun Club, gave a supper last Monday evening at the Crescent Hotel on Somerset street. The rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion, and the supper was all that could be desired. During the evening handsome medals were presented to Christian Stiglits, Frank Schaeffer and W. Yaeger for making the first, second and third best scores during the season. Capt. J. A. Blatz made the presentation. The programme included recitations, songs, and dancing to music furnished by Prof. Frolich.

Rasores Club Election.

The annual meeting of the Rasores Club was held Tuesday and the following officers elected: President, Mrs. Horace Kimball; first vice-president, Mrs. A. S. Patterson; second vice-president, Mrs. I. C. Pierson; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. H. O. Holdney; executive committee, Mrs. Laura Gilbert, Miss M. G. Browne, Mrs. W. W. Smith, Mrs. Ulmer R. King, Mrs. Ernest L. Walz; delegates to the State Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Horace Kimball and Miss M. G. Browne; alternates, Mrs. B O. Bowers and Mrs. Henry E. Bowen.

—Persons who are suffering from corns, bunions and similar affections of the feet will find Mrs. M. V. Stickle, of 149 East Fifth street, an expert chiropodist. She has now assumed the pedicuring business of Miss Mary W. Boyd.

GROVER CLEVELAND AGAINST SQUIRE LAW

Expressed an Adverse Opinion About Its Constitutionality.

HE MAY FIGHT IT IN COURT.

VISITED AND CONFERRED WITH BY CRANFORD MAN.

Center of Opposition to the County Trolley Scheme to Come From Cranford Where Active Opposition is Being Made Against the Work of the County Engineers in Changing Route of the Principal Street—Mr. Cleveland Sees Grave Dangers in the Law as it Now Stands—What He Said About It.

Cranford, May 4.—The opponents of the plan to sell a trolley franchise between Elizabeth and Plainfield by the Board of Freeholders, as authorized under the provision of the Squire law passed at the last session of the Legislature, are preparing to make a vigorous fight against what they claim is an invasion of personal rights. The center of the opposition is in Cranford, where it is proposed by the county engineers engaged in laying out the route for the proposed trolley road to change the course of the principal business street in order to secure a straight line for the route. The opponents are organizing under the title of the "Union County League," which is intended to bring the opposition under one concerted movement. William Drysdale, a large property owner in Cranford, is one of the leaders in the movement, and a few days ago Mr. Drysdale had an important conference with former President Grover Cleveland, in his home in Princeton, with a view of employing his legal efforts to fight the provisions of the Squire trolley franchise law.

While nothing definite has been arranged it is thought that the former President will be engaged to fight the law in the courts. Since Senator Voorhees signed the law it has been found that there is an important omission of an amendment passed by both houses of the legislature, which provided that a franchise should not be granted unless the majority of the abutting property owners should approve of the plan. The advocates of the law say that the omission was an error, but the opponents seem to believe that it was a subterfuge by which the franchise can be put in to effect irrespective of the protests of those interested. It is on this point that the stability of the law will hinge.

Mr. Drysdale has given out the following as a portion of the interview he had with former President Cleveland concerning this point of law:

"I can hardly conceive," Mr. Cleveland said, "that any public body or any board of freeholders would be willing to incur the fearful responsibility, both official and personal, of acting under the law in its present state. Suppose they should begin tomorrow to widen North avenue, cutting trees, demolishing houses and otherwise destroying property and you take the matter to the Court of Errors and Appeals and that court should say that the law was void. Do you see what a terrible position they would have placed themselves in. Having acted without the authority of law, they would not only make your county liable for enormous damages, but would also make themselves personally liable. No, I cannot believe that any board would assume any such responsibility."

Monday Afternoon Club Election.

At the business meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club, Monday, the following officers were elected to serve during the coming year: President, Mrs. Edward C. Perkins; vice-presidents, Mrs. Thomas H. Tomlinson, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mrs. John M. Whiton; treasurer, Mrs. A. Stuart Patterson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. George M. Randall; recording secretary, Mrs. Charles A. Reed. The subjects for study next year will be "Electricity," and "The Elizabethan Period in England."

Succeeding in the West.

The many friends of Will F. Dunn, who went to Seattle, Wash., about a year ago, for his health, will know for the first time that he has gone to Skykomish, King County, Washington, about one hundred miles from Seattle, and accepted a good position with the Tacony Mining Company. He reports his health as being good.

SAVED BY AN ARTIST.

STORY OF A PAINTING FROM NAZARETH CONVENT, BARDSTOWN, KY.

It Was Destined to Be Split Up For Kindling — Artist John Ward Dunsmore Spent a Winter In Restoring It—It Accredited to Rubens.

Professionals and laymen alike will find a peculiar interest in a large picture recently on exhibition in Cincinnati, Whether it be a genuine Rubens entirely or in part or whether it be an example of brush work by one of that master's pupils remains to be determined. Mr. John Ward Dunsmore, who reclaimed it from the kindling wood pile at Nazareth convent, Bardstown, Ky., at odd times when the mood was on him during the winter scraped and cleaned, little by little, until the old painting stands out now in all its original beauty of color and freshness, filling the beholder with a sense of awe and wonderment—a silent tribute to the art of two centuries ago.

Every artist will recognize the subject, "Adoration of the Kings," the Virgin Mary, the Christ child in the manger, surrounded by the magi and the high priests who have journeyed to Bethlehem with their offerings of jewels and money. The picture, as it appears today, gives little evidence of what it was when turned over to Mr. Dunsmore by the venerable chaplain at Nazareth, old Father Russell.

By chance learning that some very old things had been taken down from the walls of a room in which one of the older sisters had died and thrown away as having outlived their usefulness, Mr. Dunsmore, from curiosity, asked to see a picture painted on boards which had come all apart and been sent to the kindling pile to be used for fuel in the convent furnace.

The sister who called Mr. Dunsmore's attention to the incident remarked that it is a shame to burn the thing, even if it had lost all its value as a picture. Few of the sisters remembered anything that would make its identity clearer. Those who did recalled that it hung over a long time in the "poor kitchen," the place where the poor were fed. When that place was cleaned and given an overhauling last summer, the picture, which with the accumulated grease and dust of years resembled more the grimy surface of one of the pots in the scullery than anything having artistic value, was thrust out to be split up for kindling.

With some difficulty the picture in question was fished out and turned over to him. The artist, it may be explained here, has been going to the convent for some two or three years giving instruction to a class of sisters. The mother superior, known as Mother Cleophas, readily agreed to Mr. Dunsmore's suggestion that he bring the pieces to Cincinnati with him, where he might discover what was beneath the dirt and grime. That was last September.

Pieces were sent him one day soon after his discovery, and the labor of restoration began a little later. Unlike the work of the present day masters, this picture is painted on a plaster ground, such as was used altogether those days, and which was in turn laid on hard oak panels. The whole thing, with the four panels joined, makes a picture about 25 by 40 inches in size. When found, the panels were all but eaten away by dust, dead, and hung together by the merest chance. The wood cleats which held them when planed or cut produced a fine powder, almost flourlike in consistency. This evidence of extreme age in the wood gives the finished in the appearance of the face of the picture.

"There was the accumulation of years of varnish. Seemingly everybody who was called upon to clean it in years gone by had put on it another coat of sticky varnish," said Mr. Dunsmore. "They apparently had not stopped to clean it first." The first panels, as stated, were all separated. The parting had taken place in the section of the drapery of the Virgin; there had disappeared with the separation of two others a piece of the red robe of the kneeling king in the foreground, and a small bit of the arched neck of the Virgin, who, by the way was evidently none other than the great master's second wife, Helena Fourment, was gone.

The arguments in favor of this being an original painting by Rubens are many, not the least of which is found in the historical fact which tells of the enriching in an art way of the churches of primitive Kentucky. Father Russell, the old chaplain at Nazareth convent, tells a most interesting and probably the most authentic story. His idea is that the picture in question was one of a number—about 100—masterpieces that came over from Holland and Belgium between the years 1790 and 1810. These were secured by early bishops of Kentucky from the galleries of the rich European monasteries, convents and the private collections in palaces of the noblemen. They were brought over without frames and were distributed among the few churches and religious institutions in Kentucky at that time.

Father Russell thinks Bishop David, who was the first bishop of Kentucky, was the one who personally collected the pictures and placed this identical one in the Nazareth convent. Other high church dignitaries of the present day in conversation with Mr. Dunsmore and the convent people think either Bishop Flaget or Father Nerinckx may have brought them. Both were among the earlier officials.

The picture will hang in the choicest spot within the walls of the convent at Bardstown, where it will be cherished as one of the institution's most valued and valuable possessions, in curious contrast truly to its exit on that day in the summer of 1897 when it was banished to the kindling wood pile through the door of the poor kitchen.—H. E. H. in Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

A Neat Traveling Suit.

It is well to possess one garment suitable for shopping or traveling, made of rough woolen goods or serge. A sensible model is made of rough brown tweed. The five gore skirt measures about four yards at the hem, and is finished with three rows of narrow black braid.

The blouse jacket is arranged with a back and front, the front fastening over double breasted, the edge being scalloped and machine stitched and fastening with three large buttons. The neck is finished with a shaped collar, which is of the material lined with silk and interlined canvas.

Coat sleeve made over a fitted lining is also finished with machine stitching at the wrist. This blouse coat is intended to be worn over a shirt waist.

In Rose Pink and White.

Bodices different from the skirt are most convenient for dinners, concerts and theatre parties, especially for young people. Some of the dressiest waists shown are of crepe de chine, with shirred sleeves and an gulmpe neck of white silk or velvet. Other waists have a bolero of velvet, and the majority of them have groups of fine tucks, composing the entire decoration.

A handsome model is of rose pink crepe de chine, trimmed with embroidery and cream lace and having a plastron and revers of white silk. The tight fitting sleeves have a small puff at the top. Revers of crepe de chine are edged with narrow black velvet, velvet also trimming the blouse and wrists of the sleeves.

The dainty hat of fine rose pink straw has a soft crown of white silk and is ornamented on the left side with black plumes and flowers.

Brides Now Wear Jewels.

It is noticeable at many of the smart weddings of the season that the bride no longer denies herself the wearing of any jewels. Formerly it was a sort of unwritten but carefully adhered-to law that a maiden on her wedding day should have no ornaments save those of her blooming youth and the typical flowers of her state. This, however, has been gradually changed, and brides appear more and more often with superb gems. It was literally a yard of pearls that a bride wore on her neck not long ago when she became a wife. A bit of sentiment about this comparatively new jewel-wearing of brides is that only the ornaments that are given by the immediate family or the groom shall be thus honored.

A Severe Law.

The Argentine Republic has imposed a tax upon celibates of either sex. These are due at the first two classes of the new law. "On and after January 1st, 1901, every male from the age of twenty to eighty shall pay a tax until he marries, and shall pay it once in every month." Clause 3: "Young celibates of either sex who shall, without legitimate motive, reject the addresses of him or her (ladies may propose in Argentine) who may aspire to her or his hand, and who continue contumaciously unmarried, shall pay the sum of 500 piastres for the benefit of the young person, man or woman, who has been so refused."

Satin Much Used.

Satin, as having greater lustre than silk, is chosen for the under dress of the organdie and gauze dresses now being made for the summer. It is claimed, too, that satin will be the most suitable material for the sheath skirt. Taffeta is too light in weight and too bouffante. The satin marvelleuse once so fashionable makes the most durable of all skirts, whether for an outer or an under dress.

Lavender Perfume for Smelling Salts.

Six drams of oil of lavender aug., five drops of oil of cloves aug., ten drops of oil of rose geranium, ten drops of attar of roses, one dram and a half of essence of ambergris, two drams of essence of bergamotta, one dram and a half of essence of musk. Mix and shake well before dropping on the salts.

Heard at a Party.

"I suppose you acquired a good deal of useful information while you were on a farm last summer."

"Yes. I noticed that while black hens layed white eggs it never happens that white hens lay black eggs."—New York World.

REIGN OF THE FLOUNCE BEGINS.

Some Rumor Says We Will Have Ruffles Galore on Gowns.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun)

If rumors may be taken as straws showing which way the wind blows, we may calmly contemplate ruffled skirts as one of the tenured revivals of fashions worn more than a hundred years ago. That the reign of the flounce is about to begin is one of the positive declarations from the hub of all things fashionable which need not be questioned. So our Summer gowns may be flounced and ruffled from waist to hem or from the hem to any intermediate point that may suit the figure or fancy, with all necessary confidence in the result.

There are pinked ruffles, ruffles trimmed with graduated rows of velvet ribbon, with lace and passementaries; ruffles edged with rows of baby ribbon and tiny ruches of chiffon, and ruffles with plain hems, according to the material employed; but the flounce in some form is inevitable. Of course it is the ultra tall, slim women who can indulge in skirts covered with flounces with satisfactory results, and, as usual, most of the new fashions are designed for women with slender figures; but there are always modifications to make them becoming to every one.

Ruffles are not confined to skirts chiefly, and waists and sleeves are both generously trimmed with ruffles.

Cording is another popular feature of dress trimming which bids fair to flourish to a much greater extent later on when the thin Summer gowns appear. Vests of chiffon, mull, and thin silk are shirred crosswise in fine cords in groups of three, and bodices of thin material are corded horizontally to form a yoke, or up and down all around with an inch space between cords. Various skirt trimmings are made of cords run into two inches wide when finished. Two cords as large as the small end of a pipe stem from the centre of the band, and the edges of the silk are double frills. This is set on the skirt of a blue and black bayadere striped silk gown.

The latest skirts are so close fitting around the hip that there is very little room for any petticoat underneath, which fact suggests the possibility of their being abolished altogether. But this is hardly probable, and the skirt makers are as busy as ever bringing out all sorts of novel and attractive models to tempt feminine fancy. One of the latest designs is silk for petticoats is in three shades of one color, each in a bayadere stripe fully an inch wide. The darkest medium, and lightest shade follow each other in successive band-

AN AGGRAVATING DISCOVERY.

The Last Link Found Two Years After an Estate Had Reverted to the Crown.

It was one of those big English estates which was to make a great many people rich if all the links in the long chain of ancestry could be found. The legatees in this country had twenty-one years in which to prove their claims, else the property would revert to the Crown. Everything possible had been done, and one link was still missing. This was an old family Bible containing certain necessary records. It was supposed to have been burned at the time of the Deerfield massacre, but, notwithstanding, every effort had been made to find it if by any possibility it was in existence; but without success and the time expired.

Two years later one of the legatees, a New York woman, chanced to see in a paper the advertisement of a woman who wanted work. The advertiser had signed her name, and it was a family name of the woman who was one of the claimants for the English estate. It was perhaps the persistent fascination which the earnest searcher into genealogical records never loses, and the force of habit formed in many years' search for precious documents, which interested her at once. She answered the advertisement in person, found that the woman had been the wife of a member of her family, who had died, leaving her in financial straits which had forced her to advertise for something to do to support herself.

But the strange and romantic part of the story was that among old books and papers which had been cherished as having belonged to her husband, the woman had the old Bible, with its register of births and deaths, the only link that had been needed to obtain the big estate, and now that it was too late it was found where it had been treasured simply as a souvenir.—New York Times.

FRANCES E. WILLARD'S ROMANCE.

Story of an Early Love Affair with Bishop Charles W. Fowler.

There was once an engagement between Bishop Chas. W. Fowler, and the late Miss Frances E. Willard. Those having read Miss Willard's memoirs will remember an intimation that at one time in her life her heart had its hero and that at an early day she wore a ring and exchanged solemn allegiances based on a supposition." Again she speaks of the romance of her life being ungnessed, a "secret lying within the temperate zone of a great heart's geography." To those who thought her one she would be because no brave Stanley had ever explored her heart's tropical clime; cold because no Balboa had ever sailed on the bosom of its wide, pacific sea."

In their youth Bishop Fowler and Miss Willard were students in the same Methodist college, both being members of the Methodist Church. Between them was a strong affinity, a friendship that eventually ripened into a deep, abiding love. The ring she speaks of wearing as "an allegiance based on a supposition," was a gift of Bishop Fowler. Both had great strength of character and were born leaders of men and women. The similarity of their temperaments was frequently considered by the young people as a barrier to matrimony, and it was finally agreed that it would be best for both to choose separate paths in life. The engagement was accordingly broken.

The Conversion of Senator George.

The late Senator George of Mississippi was an agnostic, while his wife was deeply religious, says a correspondent from that State. She placed a neighboring Baptist minister on his trail, and he got no peace. Once, riding slowly home from Carrollton and reading his mail, the preacher burst out of the woods on his right hand and began. They came to a creek and crossed it. It was, in the Senator's language, "saddle pocket deep." On the farther bank of the creek Mr. "Gilt down," he said, fiercely. The minister looked at him doubtfully. He feared a personal encounter. "Git down!" He got down. "Now," said George, "I'm tired o' being harried around in this here cotton tail rabbit an' you was a pack o' nigger dogs. Baptize me right here." It was winter time, but the venerable statesman would not be denied. The two men waded into the icy water up to their necks, and the ceremony was performed. Senator George climbed into his saddle and looked down on the shivering evangelist. "Now," he said, "you go home and stay home. I'm through with this — foolishness."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

Dieting on the Sid-.

A certain stout lady resolved to consult a physician about her corpulence. She had no previous experience with "banting" of any sort. The doctor drew up a careful dietary for her. She must eat dry toast, plain boiled beef, and a few other things of the same lean sort, and in a month return and report the result.

At the end of the time the lady came and was as stout as ever, but very gay through the door. The doctor was aghast.

"Did you eat what I told you?" he asked.

"Religiously," she answered.

His face wrinkled in perplexity. Suddenly he had a flash of inspiration. "Did you eat anything else?" he asked.

"Why, my ordinary meals!" said the lady.—Pearson's Weekly.

COACHING HIS CONVERSATION.

How He Conquered His Bashfulness in a Single Evening.

As an overgrown boy—for I was six feet tall at fourteen—I had experienced all the agonies of bashfulness in the society of the other sex, though greatly attracted to it. I find it difficult to convince my associates of later years that I then habitually sat mute while others chattered, for or two of remonstrance from my mother had in a single day corrected this during my senior year, so far as the family table was concerned, and this emboldened me to try the experiment on a wider field. I said to a classmate, thinker of other young men who made themselves quite agreeable, "These youths are not your superiors—perhaps in the recitation room or the playground hardly your equals. Why not cope with them elsewhere?" Thus influenced, I conquered myself in a single evening and lost my shyness forever. The process was unique, so far as I know, and I have often recommended it to shy young men. Being invited to a small party, I considered beforehand what young ladies would probably be there. With each one I had, of course, something in common—kinship, or neighborhood, or favorite pursuit. This would do, I reasoned, for a starting point. So I put down on a small sheet of paper what I would say to each, if I happened to be near her. It worked like a charm. I found myself chatting away the whole evening, and heard the next day that everybody was surprised at the transformation. I have to this day the little bit of magic paper, on which I afterward underscored, before sleeping, the points actually used.—Col. Higginson in "Cheerful Yesterdays."

THE NAVAJO INDIAN'S BLANKET.

Many Stolen Articles Could Be Hid Within Its Folds.

A Navajo Indian can hide more bulk within the folds of his blanket than a two-bushel basket could hold, and can successfully do many other acts before the eyes of the settlers along the San Juan and Animas rivers, during the early days, had to put all their stealable possessions in one corner of their places of abode and stand guard when the Navajos were visitors, which was a too frequent occurrence. "Chinny ah-go!" (meaning something to eat) was the first intimation, generally, that an Indian was near (perhaps a half dozen). They rarely exceeded half a dozen in number, as they, like the American hobo, had learned that smaller numbers stood a better show to get something to eat.

One day in A. R. Lincoln's cabin, on the south bank of the San Juan River, three bachelors were partaking of their evening meal when a Navajo with a pigtaus eye walked in. All tried to watch the Indian's movements, but he had managed to get several articles under his blanket and would not have been detected had not an accident befallen him. A hatchet which slipped from one of the folds in his blanket fell, and the sharp blade cut a long gash in the calf of his leg. The Indian looked at the roof of the cabin as if wondering where the hatchet had fallen from, but the blood upon the floor soon betrayed his betrayed him. His blanket was shaken and a butcher knife, miner's candlestick, several candles, and a package of tobacco, all belonging to the cabin, fell on the earthy floor.—From the Durango (Col.) Wage Earner.

Changes in the Status of Women.

In the largest library in Oxford, England, has hung from time immemorial this notice: "Women and dogs not admitted." It is allowed to hang still, to show the changes in the status of woman.

No less than eight women have seats on the London Board of Education.

Milton thought it improper for women to learn Greek and Latin.

Two hundred years ago no one thought of a girl playing the piano. Only men played.

Mary Wollstonecroft had to argue passionately for her friends who thought it unwomanly and improper for girls to study botany.

There was a time in the history of Boston libraries when women were not allowed to take books from the library. Now more books are taken out by women than by men.

Oil of the Olive.

The grinding and pressing of the olives are performed in very primitive manner in Sicily. First, the olives are placed on a circular platform of masonry about seven feet in diameter, upon which a heavy millstone is turned by means of a pole to which a donkey is attached. While the stone revolves a man is constantly engaged in turning the pulped olives over and over with a spade. In half an hour about one hundred kilogrammes will have been pulped in this way, when the mass is put in long rush baskets, which are piled in a heap in the press—an arrangement with a heavy, wooden screw, which is worked by six men. About half the oil is expressed in this fashion, the rest being extracted by subsequent processes. The fresh oil is green in color and is placed in earthen jars for eight days to settle and clarify. It is then ready for use.—New York World.

FIGHTING JO. SHELBY.

Anecdotes Told of the Famous Confederate General.

Gen. Jo O. Shelby, for he ever signed his name in that way, was a character with more phases than are ever wrought out by the moon, writes a correspondent of the Chicago Times-Herald. I knew him before, during, and after the civil war, more intimately after peace was declared and he had returned from self-expatriation in Mexico.

After the war I first encountered Gen. Shelby in connection with "the James boys' case," and was especially intimate with him during Frank James' trial at Gallatin, Daviess County, the home of Congressman Dockery of the Third Missouri District. Jesse James had been assassinated in St. Joseph by Bob and Charley Ford, and in the summer of 1883 Frank was arraigned for trial at Gallatin for the Winston train robbery, during which Conductor Westfall and a railway laborer, Callahan, had been killed by the raiders. Gallatin, an antiquated Missouri town, became a scene of excitement continuing three weeks. Stores were emptied to give sleeping room to those attracted to the trial. And among these were hundreds of ex-Confederates. Chief among these old soldiers of "the lost cause" was Gen. Jo O. Shelby. What Frank James had been a soldier in his command, "and a good one, sah," he emphasized in his Kentucky dialect," and I am hyar, sah, to see fa'r play." And besides the General there were troops of rough riders, men who had "rid" with Quantrell as well as Shelby, and who had raided with Morgan. Not only exciting, but the times were tempestuous, and at any moment, if the word had been given, Frank James would have been whirled out of the court room at the head of as desperate a set of men as ever rode through the brush. But it is undoubtedly due to Gen. Shelby, though never avowed, that "the word" was not given. But to better illustrate his control of these men, who came into town from all parts of Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Indian Territory, and Kentucky, let this story tell:

One day during the trial the General invited a detachment of his friends, as numerous as a squadron of cavalry, to join him in a drink. Repairing to the one saloon in the town, on entering it was found to be full of ex-bushwhackers who at times had belonged to Shelby's rough riders. A good many of 'em were full too. The General stalked in and commanded:

"You men get out of here. You have had enough. Get out."

They meekly obeyed. Bill Fool, Bill Gregg, Dud Palmer, who married Susie James, a sister of "the boys," and half a hundred more walked out without a word of dissent some of them even setting down their liquor untouched.

"Now" said the General as the room was cleared, "we gentlemen will take a drink."

Turning to Frank Tutt, a Missouri Pacific detective, I whispered: "Those men do not seem to realise that the war is over."

"You bet they don't," replied he, "when the old General is around."

Gen. Shelby was a witness for the defendant, Frank James. When summoned into court, quite early in the morning, after a campfire seance the night before, the old General was in an elaborate mood. When called upon to take the oath by the clerk, he assumed a haughty military pose and exclaimed:

"Not until I have had an introduction to the court, an honor which I have not yet enjoyed."

Pacified, the General gave his testimony, which was taken in hand on cross-examination by William H. Wallace, prosecuting attorney. Wallace said:

"Do you know Bill Ryan?" (a former member of the gang.)

"I do, sah," was answered curtly and pugnaciously.

"What kind of a looking man is he?"

"He has as villainous a countenance on him, sah, as you have yourself, Mr. Wallace."

Meeting a lady, he would take off his broad brim, slouch white hat, and, bowing low, would say in a most deferential tone:

"Your servant, madam," and stand uncovered before her, no matter how long the conversation was protracted.

At his home in Bates County, one of the largest wheat farms in Missouri, he was the prince of hosts. Let a traveler approach, he was at the door to meet him. "Dismount, dismount!" he would exclaim, and then, receiving his guest, would conduct him with cordial expressions of hospitality into the house, shouting from the hallway to his wife:

"Bettie, Bettie, Mr. — is here; bring him a toddy."

Just as hospitable and genial as her husband, Mrs. Shelby would appear, followed by a negro girl with a tray in her hands, and in the home of the Shelbys became the home of the guest as long as he wanted to make it so—for a day, week, month, or ye—

A KNOX STRAW.

STORY OF A SLAVE.

CONGRESSMAN BRUCE'S PLACE IN THE HISTORY OF HIS RACE.

One of Nature's Noblemen in Ebony—As a Successful Man He Provided for the Wife and Child of His Former Owner and Master.

If the life story of Blanche K. Bruce who died a few days ago, is ever written by a biographer who is properly endowed with the sense of perspective and proportion, it will constitute a romance almost as fascinating as any masterpiece of American fiction. The career of this extraordinary man presents an inspiring example of industry fidelity and honorable ambition triumphant over adversity, prejudice and injustice. Born and raised in slavery from which he was set free by the leveling force of war, he lived to prove himself fit for liberty, rising to the full level of rounded manhood and fulfilling the best ideals of patriotic citizenship. His modesty, his intelligence his charm of manner and the simple rugged honesty of his character was for him the friendship of the greatest leaders North and South. Official distinction was conferred upon him and he dignified his post. Men forgot that he was a negro—they knew him only as a sincere, honest, manly man, whose life was beautiful and true—and when he died the country knew that it had lost a loyal, earnest, devoted son and defender, whose soul was as white as the Easter lilies.

There was one strange, tender secret in his life which has but recently been disclosed, and it sheds a new radiance of its own upon the massive outlines of his character. It appears that the family that owned Bruce, the young slave, came out of the war as so many others of their class did, impoverished, bewildered and helpless. Their fortune had vanished in the flames that banished human bondage, and peace came only to find them without the means of support. The head of the household died soon afterward, and one more after another passed away until finally there were left only the widow of Bruce's former master and her young daughter. They were alone in the world, unused to its hardships and with no means of earning a livelihood. But their former slave remained faithful to them, and from his scanty earnings a generous share was set apart each week for their increasing needs. This thoughtful providence continued throughout Mr. Bruce's life. As his success broadened and his means increased he added to the allowance for the maintenance of his old-time mistress and her daughter, and so delicate, so modest and gracious were his ministrations of this sacred charity that they could not have been repelled, even if the beneficiaries had been able to get along without them.

The spectacle of this great-hearted man faithfully providing for the wife and child of the person who once held him in slavery is both noble and instructive. It is one of many cases in which former slaves have held fast to old associations, bound to the master's family by ties which nothing but death can sever. The relations which still exist in many Southern communities between the ex-slaves and their old-time owners are curiously affectionate. The former slave feels bound to the traits that raised him, bound not by law or principle, but by ties of association and gratitude which are stronger than freedom, and which are to him a sacred obligation. This relationship is beautifully illustrated in the career of Mr. Bruce, and it reveals a trait of steadfastness, benevolence and devotion in his character which doubtless explains his splendid success in the practical affairs of life.

The judgment from the history of a colored man who rose from the drudgery of slavery to the proud position of a Senator, who enjoyed the confidence and affection of many of the most brilliant public men of our times speaks in a voice of warning and protest against the unreasoning prejudices to which the negro race is still exposed in many parts of the country. Mr. Bruce was an example of the unfolding possibilities of negro growth and progress. No better answer can be contemplated with honest pride by every upright citizen, and the nation will view it with increasing wonder and admiration as the years pass by. The gentler side of his character, however, as the inadequate recital shows, was the crowning dignity of his life, for it proved that beneath his tawny skin there was the heart of a knightly gentleman and a soul of spotless white.

MONKS OF HIGH DEGREE.

In a German Monastery There Are Devotees Here in the Purple.

At Seckau, Germany, is the famous Abbey of Benzon, one of the best known and celebrated monasteries, especially because of the high station of the monks who are gathered there. The monks of the abbey include Prince Phillip of Hohenlohe, who has a most a definite aiden to the world; Father Charles, under which name is concealed the identity of a brilliant excavalry officer, belonging to an illustrious house; Prince Edward Schonburg-Hartenstein, and Father Benedict, Father Sebastian, once a major in the Saxon army, bearing the name of Baron Von Oer; Father John, who was Baron von Drais, and ran away from the court of Baden to embrace this career; Father Nicholas, who was Baron von Salis-Soglio; Father Hildebrand, who left something like the cowl and gown was a brave captain, by name of Count de Memptinæ, and many others too numerous to mention.

The Abbey Seckau is situated among the mountains of Steiermark, in a thick, wild forest, and in thirty years has gained considerable notoriety among monks belonging to the best-known families, celebrated for nobility or riches or distinguished in the arts. This monastery, where the rules are most rigorous, was founded over thirty years ago by two brothers, Maurus and Placidus Wolter of Cologne, two learned Monks sent by Pius IX. to Prussia to reorganize the monasteries there, which were degenerating. The pious Princess Catherine of Hohenzollern offered them the ancient Abbey of Benzon to establish a new house, which came into existence in 1883. Around the two brothers there soon gathered literary men and artists, especially from Dusseldorf, in love with the splendors of the Black Forest, who their continued their work, so that there is now an artistic school of Benzon, which may be said to rival the famous one of the Italian Abbey of Monte Cassino. But at Benzon they not only go in for the higher arts, but they make and provide everything for themselves.—Pall Mall Gazette.

TRICKS OF THE TYPES.

Some Amusing Mistakes of Which Compositors Are Guilty.

"What is this?" exclaimed a compositor who was expecting to be promoted to a proofreadership shortly. "'Sermons in stones, books in running brooks!' Impossible! He means, of course, 'Sermons in books and stones in the running brook.'" And a new reading of Shakespeare appeared next morning.

A sporting compositor thought "Cricket on the Hearth" must be a slip of the pen. He made it "Cricket on the Heath."

A writer on angling had the joy of seeing his sentence, "The young salmon are beginning to run," printed "The young salmon are beginning to swim," another thoughtful compositor having been at work.

Happier was the transformation of the sentence, "Bring me my toga" into "Bring me my togs."

There is a humble vein of humor in the story of the editor who wrote during an election, "The battle is now opened." The compositor spelled battle" with an "o," and the other side said, of course, that they had suspected it from the first.

Not very similar mistake that the late Baker Pasha, who might fairly be described as a "battle-scarred veteran," was called a "battle-scared veteran," the libel being by no means purged when the newspaper called the gallant officer a "battle-scarred veteran."

Owing to an error in printing the announcement, "A sailor, going to sea, his wife desires the prayers of the congregation," became "A sailor going to see his wife deserves the prayers of the congregation."

The statement "Messrs. ——'s preserves cannot be beaten," was rather vitiated as an advertisement by the omission of "b" in the last word.

Innocently gay was the newspaper report which said that the London express had knocked down a cow and cut it into "calves."—Lesta Typographica.

The Peregrinations of a $10 Bill.

Here's a mathematical problem which the Boston Post observer heard a bank messenger putting to a man of figures the other day: "A banker found a $10 bill. At home he gave it to his wife, who paid the butcher in settlement of his account. The butcher paid it to the farmer for a calf, and the farmer paid it to the merchant, who in turn paid it to the washerwoman, and she, owing the banker a note of $10, went to the banker and paid the note. The banker recognized the bill as the one he had found and which up to that time had paid $50 worth of debt. On a careful examination he found the bill was a counterfeit." Of course, the problem is, Who lost by the transaction?

Two Angelic Kansas Towns.

The last Kansas freak is the report of a cursory census taken of Lost Springs and Ransom, two towns in Marion County, with 200 population each. There is not a vacant house in either place, not an idle man or boy, not a tippler and not a dog. The claim is made that there never has been a drop of intoxicating liquor sold in either of these towns. The war made by the first-class dressmakers who combine a tailor finish with fanciful effects, embroidery and appliques of lace which cover revers, yokes, vests and collar, are a feature of this sort of gown. The costume is made either with a jacket and vest in some pretty contrast, or with the bodice plain in the back, and bloused a little in front. The embroidery is usually hand work, and consequently expensive.

SERGE FOR SPRING COSTUMES.

Plaitings of White swiss on Wool and silk Gowns a Novelty.

(By special arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

The gowns which aspire to be dress[y] at all are extremely fussy and elaborate, yet in general they are very pretty and tasteful. Chenille, which, by the way, was very much in evidence in our winter gowns, has developed some new possibilities. It is twisted into a dainty cord, using two shades of one color, or one shade, as you fancy, and applied as a finish sewn on in straight rows or coiled into a simple design. In an ecru nun's veiling one row of ecru chenille cord, and one row of white are sewn quite close together at the head of the circular flounce. The effect is pretty, but it requires a second look to see what produces it. Narrow plaitings and double frillings of black mousseline de soie are effectively used on grenadine, foulard silk, and barege gowns. Edging the circular flounces on the skirt and a square double yoke shaped collar they are especially pretty. Plaitings of white swiss muslin on wool and silk gowns are indeed a novelty, but they must have the finish of ribbon or lace on the edge. A blue and white foulard is trimmed on the bodice with swiss plaitings edged with a narrow black and white striped grosgrain ribbon. Plain satin baby ribbon is also used.

Grass lawns in open work stripes and variously embroidered designs mixed vests, yokes, and collars. Ecru canvas embroidery is another variety of material for this purpose. Gowns of grass linen are shown among the new dress models, which is an encouraging outlook for those who invested in the particular kind at costume last season. A gown of last season can be brought quite up to date, too, by making a new blouse bodice of glace silk in some bright color, using embroidered linen for the finish and the linen sleeves.

Cloth or serge, which has come into the front rank among fashionable materials, is the thing to have for your spring gown, and the most attractive costume in these fabrics is made by the first-class dressmakers who combine a tailor finish with fanciful effects, embroidery and appliques of lace which cover revers, yokes, vests and collar, are a feature of this sort of gown. The costume is made either with a jacket and vest in some pretty contrast, or with the bodice plain in the back, and bloused a little in front. The embroidery is usually hand work, and consequently expensive.

CHURCH MADE A CLUBHOUSE

Father Frieling's Odd Plan For Reclaiming Boys Who Are Wayward.

Rev. Herman J. Frieling, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church at Beaver Falls, Pa., believes in fighting the devil with fire. Many of the young men of his congregation had gone astray. They frequented clubs and saloons and totally neglected the work of the church. Father Frieling wondered how he could reclaim them. At last he thought of a plan.

A year ago St. Mary's congregation moved into a handsome new cathedral. Since that time the old church, a small wooden structure, has remained idle, except for an occasional bazaar or other entertainment. Why not use that and convert it into a clubhouse? Without further ado he proceeded to answer the question himself by making the transformation.

The old church is now in working order. There are billiard tables, pool tables and card tables, and there will be a library and reading room, as well as other features to furnish entertainment for the young men of the parish. The organization will be known officially as St. Mary's Literary and Dramatic club. Said Father Frieling:

"The object of the club is to draw young men and boys away from questionable resorts by giving them a place where they can enjoy all the games and amusements they find there, which are innocent enough in themselves so long as confined within certain limits. The first purpose of the club will be literary and educational in its nature. We will have dialogues, small dramas, recitations and essays. Music of all kinds will also be an attraction, and I propose to donate a piano out of my own funds.

"One of the strict provisions of that constitution will be that any member of St. Mary's club known to have frequented any other club or any saloon or billiard hall after having been made a member of St. Mary's club shall be summarily dismissed. By this means I hope to keep our boys from the evil associations they have learned to like and make them enjoy themselves as fully and with nobler results in our own club."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"THE WATERLOO VETERAN."

First Drama to Be Given In a Catholic Cardinal's Palace.

For the first time on record a dramatic representation is to be given within the walls of a Catholic cardinal's palace. The announcement is made that, at the request of the Catholic Social union, the general committee of which includes many members of the nobility, Sir Henry Irving has consented to give Mr. Mary Anderson's impersonation of his play, "The Waterloo Veteran," at the archbishop's house in Westminster, London, the residence of Cardinal Vaughan. The cardinal has given his approval to the programme and will himself be present on the occasion. The affair will take place in the large reception room at the palace, where seats will be provided for 250 people. The price of the tickets, which will be issued to private subscribers only, has been placed at $50 each, so that the performance will net the charity the magnificent sum of $12,500. Sir Henry Irving will be assisted by Miss Ellen Terry and the members of his company who usually take part in the presentation of "The Waterloo Veteran." — Boston Herald.

Archbishop Ireland's Discourses.

A Rome correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says: "Among other evidences of the influence and effectual presence of the American mind in Italy may be mentioned the publication of a selection of Archbishop Ireland's discourses translated into Italian. This work, which has recently appeared, is published at Milan and is entitled 'La Chiesa de la Societa Moderna' (The Church and Modern Society). It is translated from the third and latest American edition and is the only Italian translation authorized by the author, being the work of the Countess Sabina di Parravicino di Revel. In a notice of the work this translator, the Countess Parravicino writes that it is well readers should know that these discourses were not written for Italian readers, and that they have not been modified in any degree in being turned into Italian. Indeed this translation was not even submitted to the revision of the illustrious author, who only after three years' asking permitted the translation into Italian."

Mass In an Old British Church.

One of the features of the curious celebration of the two hundred and forty-ninth anniversary of the death of King Charles I in London the other day was a mass in the old Church of St. Margaret Pattens, in which is his royal banner, and whose altar cloths are wrought with his monogram. The anthem on the occasion was a collection of Old Testament texts generally supposed to refer to Christ's crucifixion, and a special hymn was sung, of which this is a stanza:

With stricken heart by proud rebellion bruised,
He found a crown of thorns in crown of gold;
Marred was his face by weeping, false accused,
Like thee, O Christ, forsaken, mocked and sold.

REVISED VERSION A DRUG.

Booksellers Are Still Overstocked with Copies of the Newest Bible.

Those who remember the enormous sales which attended the introduction of the revised version of the holy scriptures will be not a little surprised at the general collapse which has gradually made this publication a drug in the market. Over sixteen years ago the first edition of the revised New Testament was published at the Oxford Press, and at that time so strenuous were the efforts made to obtain advance sheets of it, that one house alone offered £5,000 for a single copy without success. When the revised version of the entire Bible was published, four years later, the run on the Oxford University Press warehouse was unprecedented, upward of 1,000,000 copies being issued between one midnight and the next midday. At the New York branch of the Oxford Press, in Bleecher street, the office was besieged night before publication, and special detectives were placed around the building to prevent overeager purchasers from obtaining copies, even by depositing their money.

It is estimated that 1,000,000 copies were sold in this country during the first three weeks after the publication. Such a sale has never before been known, and several American firms, including Harper Bros., D. Apleton & Co., Dodd, Mead & Co., and Porter & Coates of Philadelphia, issued American editions in large quantities to meet the demand.

The collapse was experienced less than two months after the first appearance of the new version. The total loss to American firms interested ed has been variously estimated to be between $500,000 and $600,000. From that date until now the sales have been extremely small, less than eight copies being sold to 100 of the King James version.

As a text book it is considered almost invaluable, and is used extensively by clergymen of all denominations and in many Sunday schools. Its superiority in technical accuracy is everywhere recognized. Its lack of popularity in public worship seems to grow out of a loss of sentiment, which is found to no large a degree in the authorized version. One of the passages which has evoked the most unfavorable comment is the translation of the Lord's prayer, which in Matthew vi., 9-14, is made to read as follows:

"Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one."

The substitution of "the evil one" for "evil" brought forth a flood of criticism.

Another passage which has attracted attention is the translation of "Gloria in Excelsis." Instead of "Glory be to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men," the revised version has it: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace among men in whom he is well pleased."

These two passages, perhaps, alone have decided the fate of the new version as a book "appointed to be read in churches."—New York Times.

THIS TOWN IS A COMMONWEALTH.

A New Colony at Ruskin, Tenn., which Runs Smoothly.

Mr. Klamroth, an advocate of social ism reform, a resident of Ruskin, Tenn., a small town near Nashville that is conducted on the co-operative commonwealth system, in an interview gives some very interesting facts about the new colony.

Ruskin is situated on the Nashville Chattanooga & St. Louis Railroad, fifty miles west of Nashville. It was incorporated in the month of August by thirty people. Its inhabitants now number 225 persons. The original incorporators of the town subscribed enough money to purchase half the land that is now the site of the town. The other half was bought by them by people interested in the enterprise and anxious to see the commonwealth succeed. This co-operative commonwealth colony now owns 1,005 acres of excellent ground and the stores, the farm land and the mills are all conducted on the co-operative plan. Nearly every family owns its own house but every resident in the place eats at the same dining table. In the morning the rising bell rings at 5:30 o'clock and all the members of the colony have to conform to a set of regulations which prescribe that all shall rise at the hour. At 6:30 o'clock the breakfast bell is rung and all the families of the village gather in the dining room. The table is waited on by schoolgirls, who also wash the dishes. At 7 o'clock another bell is rung that is the signal to begin work for the day. None of the men or women members of the colony are laggards or drones and as soon as this bell is sounded they at once be take themselves to the work that has been assigned.—Chicago Chronicle.

Old That Built Her.

"What I like," she said, "is a person who is frank—one who says just what he means, without beating around the bush."

"Well, then," he replied, "I'll be straightforward. There is something I've wanted to tell you for an hour or so."

"Yes," she urged, seeing that he hesitated, "what is it?"

A CHICAGO MAN'S DISCOVERY.

He Makes Artificial Milk with Real Cream on It.

W. J. Cook, of Chicago, says he can make artificial milk. He does this by means of a combination of chemicals. The product is said to look like milk, to taste like it, and to have the nutritive qualities of the genuine article. Besides penetrating the mysteries of the lacteal fluid which has for so many centuries puzzled man in his infant stage, Mr. Cook further makes the startling announcement that cows were never intended by the divine economy to be milk producers, but merely beasts of burden.

Members of the Labor Exchange in Englewood gave Mr. Cook an opportunity to prove that he knew what he was talking about. Mr. Cook brought along a five-gallon can, and gave each person a glass of his milk. He then sent out for an equal quantity of natural milk. Everybody seemed to like the kind that Mr. Cook provided, and all agreed that the cow had a dangerous rival.

Mr. Cook now performed a wonderful experiment. He sent downstairs for two glasses of milk. In one was the natural staple, and the other contained the composition. They were permitted to stand in an ice-box, and were produced after a stipulated time. It was found that the artificial milk had twice the amount of cream on its surface possessed by the quality provided by natural means after passing through the mysteries of the dairy.—New York Journal.

A Woman's Club of Indian Squaws.

The Maine Federation of Women's Clubs has admitted to membership a club of squaws, which will hold sales and give entertainments to raise money for charity, just as the clubs of white women do.

This latest development of the woman's club movement is the Wa-ba-na-ki Club, of Indian Island. Its membership is limited exclusively to the squaws of the Tarratine tribe, which occupies the Government reservation on Indian Island in the Penobscot, opposite Old Town.

The idea of the club originated with Mrs. Helen Coffin Beedy, author of "Mothers of Maine." Some months ago she became interested in people of Indian Island and being an enthusiastic club woman, proposed to the squaws of the island that they form a woman's club. The proposition was well received, and within a few weeks an organization was effected. The club name comes from the tribal title of that branch of the Maine Indians, to which the Tarratine tribe belongs. —New York Journal.

Vagaries of English Laws.

"If a man," says an intelligent detective officer, "is found sleeping out without the wherewithal to procure a lodging he can be fined or imprisoned, but if a man sleeps out for that purpose he found on him he cannot be touched.

"Then, again, you are perfectly at liberty to throw as much dirty water as you please over an intruder into your house—provided, that is, that he has no legitimate excuse for coming there; and should you honor him with a douche of clean water, you are liable to a prosecution for wasting the same.

"If a man goes into a public house, and says, 'Give me a glass of beer, please,' they cannot make him pay for it. And if you are not twenty-one, they cannot recover against you for cigarettes you have got on credit, though you may be compelled to pay as much as £50 for a fur-lined overcoat, as that is a necessity."—TIT-Bits.

Education Fifty Years Ago.

Lord Londonderry's descriptions of some of the Dames' and other schools of fifty or sixty years ago are exceedingly interesting. Many of these ancient dames were manifestly by no means intelligent answer to a simple question. One, on being asked as to the terms on which she gave instruction, replied: "Not understanding the question, I answer thus: With the use of the globes." We have in an authority of the late Lord Shaftesbury for the statement that one of these poor creatures, being asked if she gave moral instruction to her scholars, replied: "No, I can't afford it at threepence a week." A more amusing answer, however, was that of the teacher, who was asked whether proper attention was paid to the morals of the boys under his care. His answer was that "they did not teach morals there, as they belonged to the girls' department."—London Globe.

His Notion of It.

"Why," she asked, "do so many of the poets write about goldenrod? It seems as if every one of them had tried to glorify it."

"Well," replied the man who had worked on a farm, "the only explanation I can give is that the poets probably never tried to raise potatoes in a field where goldenrod had got a good start."—Cleveland Leader.

BOGUS RAW OYSTERS.

When Seasoned Said Not to be Distinguished from the Real Bivalve.

The municipal authorities of Paris are engaged in the suppression of an altogether novel form of food adulteration which is assuming phenomenal proportions. Real oysters are expensive in Paris, and so, with the object of suiting slender purses, artificial oysters on the half shell have been invented, which are sold at 20 cents a dozen, and they are so cleverly made and look so like the fresh that, once lemon juice or vinegar has been added, they cannot be distinguished from the real article, especially when white wine is taken in connection therewith. The only genuine thing about these oysters is the shell, the manufacturers buying second-hand shells at a small cost, and fastening the spurious oyster in place with a tasteless paste. The municipal laboratory has not yet proclaimed the ingredients of which these bogus oysters are composed, but has announced that they are of a harmful character.—New York Tribune.

Garrett P. Serviss.

It is safe to say that no American lecturer now before the public has a more decided magnetism in manner and matter than Mr. Garrett P. Serviss, president of the department of astronomy in Brooklyn Institute. His warmth of enthusiasm, breadth of knowledge, glow of coloring in description, raise the audience into the realm of poetic feeling. In his chosen field he conveys a vivid idea of the vast expanse of interstellar space, of the grouping of the nebulæ, colored and double stars, and the Milky Way. All Boston's Clerical Romancy.

William Dean Howells and other eminent Bostonians are given as authority for the statement that there is in the capital of Massachusetts a certain clergyman of widespread fame, who, unknown to the world at large, is a Romany. Every summer this reverend gentleman cannot resist joining some gypsy band and roaming from place to place as his kindred have done since within the memory of man. Little do the members of the congregation dream that, while they picture him as sedately journeying abroad, he is sitting beside gypsy camp fires and chattering the wild Romany tongue, to all intents and purposes a vagrant. But, as Mr. Howells points out, none ever heard it said that this preacher preached any the worse for his wild, free life over road and prairie. Indeed, the increased vigor and eloquence of his sermons immediately after each successive annual 'vacation' have long been matters of comment in Boston."—Washington Star.

Ruskin's Idea on the Bicycle.

Ruskin's view of the bicycle were expressed several years ago in a letter published, which has recently been brought to public attention, and contains the following:

"I not only object, but am quite prepared to spend all my breath and language in opposition of bi-, tri- and 4-, 5-, 6- or 7-cycles and every other contrivance and invention for superseding human foot on God's ground.

"To walk, to run, to leap and to dance are the virtues of the human body; and to ride, to stride on stilts, wriggle on wheels, nor dangle on ropes, and nothing in the training of the human mind with the body will ever supersede the anointed God's ways of slow walking and hard working."

ANCIENT BARBERS.

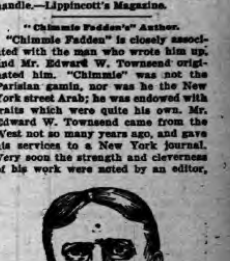
Big Men in Egypt and Had to Work Overtime, Going from Place to Place.

The cult of the beard, according to the ancient Jewish writers, started in the Garden of Eden. Adam, they tell us, was several miles in height, and was furnished with a prodigious beard, which reached to his middle. The ancient Jews, presumably on account of this believed Edenic origin, held this beard in such estimation, that they considered it a greater insult to seize a man by the beard than to tread on his corns. They cherished the hair on their faces as the callow youth of today does his adolescent mustache, trimmed it in various forms, perfumed it with odorous substances, and cut it only as a sign of great affliction. So far did they carry their veneration for its dignity that laws were actually passed regarding the manner of its wearing.

The barber's lot was a happy one in the land of Egypt, where the people had such a high regard for the tonsorial art that the majority of the men shaved not only the face, but the entire head, and capped their bald pates with wigs, while the priests went even further and shaved the entire body every third day. With this constant scrapping of chins going on, the barber's trade was an important one in the home of the Pharaohs, and its members were kept busily running throughout the length and breadth of the land from early morning until sunset. They carried their tools in an open-mouthed basket, and their razors were shaped like a small hatchet, with a curved handle.—Lippincott's Magazine.

"Chimmie Fadden's" Author.

"Chimmie Fadden" is closely associated with the man who wrote him up, and Mr. Edward W. Townsend originated him. "Chimmie" was not the Parisian gamin, nor was he the New York street Arab; he was endowed with traits which were quite his own. Mr. Edward W. Townsend came from the West not so many years ago, and gave his services to a New York journal. Very soon the strength and cleverness of his work were noted by an editor,



EDWARD W. TOWNSEND.

now lately deceased, and one who never made any mistakes as to the quality of the men who wrote for him. Mr. Townsend became familiar with the tenement districts in this great city, and here, for the major part, his characters are found, and lifelike and vigorous is his portraiture of them. "A Daughter of the Tenements" had a distinguished success, but not more than it merited. His latest book is called "Near a Whole City Full," which is a collection of short stories, and their incisive cleverness will be certain to make this last venture of Mr. Townsend a highly popular one.

His Responsibility.

A Sioux City father was going on a short business trip, and, as he kissed his seven-year-old son good-by, he said to him:

"Now, Charles, take good care of mamma while I'm gone."

The responsibility thus intrusted to the young man evidently weighed heavier on his mind that one would naturally expect, says the Journal, for one evening a other time afterward, as he lay on the floor, with half-closed eyes, he rather startled his mother by inquiring:

"Mamma, doesn't God take care of You?"

"Why, yes, my dear," replied the wondering mother. "Why do you ask?"

The little guardian heaved a sigh of relief, and answered:

"Oh, because I'm tired!"—Golden Days.

Soldiers' Pay.

Governor Voorhees cannot be accused of extravagance when he asserts that the members of the National Guard ought to receive better compensation for service in the army than $13 a month.

Some may argue that true patriotism should disregard the matter of pay when the Nation's stability and honor is at stake. That is quite true under certain circumstances. If this glorious country was on its last legs, devoid of credit and hampered as to resources, there would be reason and justice in demanding soldiers to fight our battles with meagre pay, but since such is not the case it seems to be the proper thing to compensate them at a rate of pay greater than fifty cents a day in excess of their keep.

The average members of the various State militia companies who have been called on as the first volunteers in the war with Spain are men who will undergo not a little loss in going into service.

Many of them are men with families who even in their most prosperous times earned scarcely more than what they needed to live on. Certainly it is that the militiamen of this class ought not be expected to enter into active service, leaving their families to shift for themselves—perhaps temporarily and as likely as not for all time if a Spanish bullet should strike a vital spot in their bodies. In such cases a man's patriotism is determined by his intention and effort to care for his family comfortably quite as much as it is by offering his life's blood on the battlefield. And no man can perform these duties as a citizen on $13 a month.

Others there are who will be compelled to relinquish good positions which they have only attained after years of studious and honest endeavor. Their withdrawl from the competitive business world will make better opportunities for the ones that stay at home, so that any claims the latter class may make against an increase of soldiers' pay on account of extraordinary expenses for the conduct of war in a general way, are counterbalanced by the benefits they receive commercially by the very conditions that argue the increase in pay.

Assessors Take a Hint.

The narrow escape which the assessors of Bergen county had from indictment for failure to assess property at its actual value, which was advised by Supreme Court Justice Dixon in a vigorous charge to the Grand Jury last month, has had its effect with the Union County Board of Assessors An informal meeting of the Board has been held and a resolution adopted that this year all valuations on taxable property be put at their actual value in the real estate market. Another important point brought to light during the conference was that a number of local assessors in various townships have not been taxing the property of corporations under the belief that the tax was levied by the State. The erring ones agreed to remedy this practice this year. It is expected that this new system will result in loud protests from property owners, but the assessors are fearful of indictment unless they follow the letter of the law.

A labor leader in the clothing manufacturing trade says there will be few strikes hereafter in that line of work. The reason given is the melancholy one that strikes do no good to the employees themselves. Hereafter sweatshop and contract clothing workmen will silently and steadily strive for the abolishment of the entire contract labor system so far as their trade is concerned.

Monuments to the heroes who lost their lives on the Maine will be erected in many parts of the country. Proceedings looking to that end are already on foot. It is too soon. Plans for the benevolently inclined should use their money to help the families of the Maine dead. After the wants of the living are relieved there will be plenty of time to build monuments to the dead.

In an emergency it would be possible for the United States to raise an army of 14,000,000 men. Only Russia or China could equal that number and our soldiers would be far superior to theirs in intelligence and power of endurance.

Pure Food Law.

There is an impression in Europe that American merchants are more unscrupulous and dishonest than those of other nations. Particularly this impression works against us in the sale of our food products there. The natural jealousy of agriculturists who cannot compete with us in the sale of food products solaces on the popular belief and inflames it to the furthest extreme.

There is one way in which this opposition can be successfully killed. That is by using the utmost care in the prep aration, inspection and branding of all food products that leave our shores, from pickles to horse meat. Secretary Wilson of this agricultural department is exactly right in asking congress to pass a national pure food law, so that each package going abroad shall be precisely what it purports to be. Several states have passed for themselves such pure food laws, but the complications arising from interstate trade have made the execution of these laws a matter of difficulty, impossibility in fact.

The right thing is a national pure food law that shall cover the whole country. Secretary Wilson asks for especial rigidness in regard to food products shipped abroad. There is no reason, however, why we at home should be poisoned any more than foreigners in Europe. Let the law cover the whole United States and let it be passed just so soon as the Cuban question is out of the way.

A Rare Find.

The discovery in the desert of eastern California of extensive turquoise deposits is an incident of importance both from the economic and historic standpoint. Professor Gustav Eisen of San Francisco believes he has here found the original beds whence the Aztecs obtained the fine turquoises so numerous among them. The Desert Beds show evidence that they were worked at one time. Among them are numerous pits, five to ten feet across, which plainly have been dug by man, although it was as plainly done a long time ago.

Upon rocks in this desolate region are hieroglyphics which may reveal many things to the scientist. They appear to have been made by an older people than the Aztecs, whose picture writing is known and understood. The characters upon rocks at the turquoise beds resemble those left by the Mayas of Yucatan, which perhaps is not surprising. Considering what Professor and Mme. le Plongeon have discovered and made known in regard to that wonderful people, it would not be strange if they had pushed their civilization as *far north as Arizona and eastern Cali*fornia.

From the economic outlook the stones are exceedingly valuable. They are as quiatis in color, vary in size from that of a small pea to a large bean, and a man may gather up a hatful of them in a day.

Farmers are too easily fooled into making contracts which give the advantage to the other side. Various manufacturing and other corporate establishments open their jaws and take in the agriculturist as a whale swallows minnows. New York seems to have been one state that considered the farmers in this matter of being fleeced by powerful corporations. The legislature at the last session passed a law giving best sugar manufacturers a bounty of 1 cent a pound. They fixed a string to it, however, which will hold the manufacturer in the straight path. The law says that the bounty shall be paid only so long as the farmer who grows the roots receives not less than a certain price per ton for his product. Farmers should learn to protect themselves, find out something of the profits of manufacturing enterprises for which they grow the raw material and then tie up the person who works up the raw material in a contract mutually advantageous to both.

In proportion to their original numbers there would be more Confederate veterans than ex-Union soldiers in our army of volunteers for a Spanish war. There are two reasons for this. One is that the south is justly so proud of Fits-Hugh Lee that old Confederates who could go would flock to his standard to a man, and he would certainly lead them in the field. He has said so. Then again the average age of the Confederate soldiers was considerably under that of the Union men, so that there are proportionately more Confederates than Union men still young enough to shoulder a musket and march.

Nobody but a rabid Spaniard would pretend to discredit the word of Consul General Lee, and Lee has summed up the starvation record in Cuba by figuring that 400,000 peaceable persons have been driven from home as reconcentrados by the Weyler order and that 200,000 of them have died. Starvation as a military policy is something so damnable that the government resorting to it in the humane and enlightened nineteenth century should be wiped off the earth. It is time for Spain to go.

It was a gracious act on the part of the Globe Insurance company, whose headquarters are in England, to send word to its employees in New Orleans that their places would be kept and their salaries paid by the firm during the time they were absent, if they wished to enlist in the United States army in case of war with Spain.

The Poor Growing Richer.

It is pleasing to find that Hon. Thomas B. Reed pauses in the task of cearing it over the house of representatives and takes his pen in hand for a brief space to indite a letter to the public press testifying to his belief that the poor are growing richer. Many a musically sounding utterance has deluded millions. Speaker Reed thinks emphatically that the smoothly turned sentence, "The rich are grower richer; the poor are growing poorer" is one of them. In brief, he characterizes it as "at all times a great, an enormous lie."

To back up his opinion he compares the world of even 50 years ago with the world of today. The very fact that the average man today has the probability of longer life than the man in the same grade of life had a century ago proves our conditions of life to be better than they were. The poor of today have "better food, better clothing, better shelter, more commodious housing, better heating, better air to breathe, better water to drink and better methods of carrying away the refuse which used to contain and nourish the seeds of disease and death."

In his own native New England, which he knows best, Mr. Reed finds the greatest changes. He declares that if ordinary people today had to live in such houses as even the "best people" of 50 years ago dwelt in "we should think we were camping out at Valley Forge." The houses of those days were full of cold, shivering rooms. It was not till the furnace and the stove came in that mankind could be comfortable, and even then not till the utilization of coal. "It was when coal came in that the heating of a house all over became practicable."

The honorable speaker grows eloquent as he points out how much better food we now have than even our grandfathers ate. "No more yellow saleratus heats itself in the middle of the biscuit." Speaker Reed evidently knows how that is himself, or he could not describe the thing so vividly.

Our ancestors of half a century ago knew nothing of the people's carriage, the universal trolley car, which enables the poor family to enjoy an outing equally with the rich. The hours of labor are shorter and growing still more so. Eight hours a day is understood to be the proper limit. For all that, Mr. Reed commends the spirit of discontent which urges the poor on to struggle to obtain still better things.

By ordering a new trial for Zola the French authorities are simply dancing upon a powder magazine with a lighted fuse steadily burning its way toward them. The French republic is not so stable in its place that the explosion cannot hurl it into fragments. The charge on which it is proposed try Zola again is that of slandering the members of the court martial which tried and acquitted Esterhazy in declaring that they were ordered by the authorities to clear him. Thus the sentence against Dreyfus would be made to appear just. By the 23d of May, when the second Zola trial begins, the authorities hope the fickle French public will have lost interest in the case and will see Zola sentenced and the sentence executed with indifference. But for all that the world is gradually settling into the conviction that Zola is right and the French authorities are murdering justice.

The government has bought so many vessels of various kinds for the auxiliary fleet that it will have left upon its hands when the present misunderstanding is over a hundred craft that are of no immediate use to it. It will not dispose of them all for what they will bring, however. The present emergency has warned us that we need to keep constantly ready a considerably larger navy than old time Americans have believed we should ever want. The crack lines and the best of the smaller boats will therefore probably be retained for the regular navy.

The Spanish armistice in Cuba was as impotent as the howling of a dog at the moon. The fighting did not cease for a single day, nor for one hour did the patriots let up their attacks on the Spanish troops. If the queen regent and her ministers believed that their puny proclamation would have any effect, it shows only the boundless ignorance of real conditions even in the minds of the best informed of Spaniards.

Although the president cannot constitutionally call out the national guard for a foreign war, yet it is their high American privilege to volunteer their services, and when the opposing ranks actually close for fight not many of our gallant state militia will be absent from the scene.

The number of rich American citizens who offer to help fit out and maintain in the field regiments from their respective states is notable and is increasing. It shows that money does not choke patriotism, as so many Americans who have none are fond of declaring.

There will be companies of stock brokers, of telegraph clerks, of railway trainmen and miners enlisted for the war. But the liveliest, bowlingest company of all will be the cowboys from the plains of the trackless west.

Many people think they are sensitive when they are only ill natured.

OVERSEER OF POOR HAS SALARY REDUCED

Christian Hansen to Receive $250 for His Services.

TALK FOR EVEN LOWER PAY

CITIZENS' COUNCILMEN THOUGHT $100 WOULD BE AMPLE.

The Minority Report of the Committee Rejected by the Council—$130 Voted to Buy Clothes for the Police—W. C. T. U. Ask the Council to Adopt a Curfew Ordinance—A Petition Asking to Have Park Avenue Repaired—Important Action Taken in Reference to Unpaid Taxes Before 1880.

The regular May meeting of the City Council was occupied in the discussion to a great extent of small matters, all of which were important in their way. The question of fixing the salary of the overseer of the poor and the location of electric lights came in for the greatest amount of talk. These matters, as well as all others, were agreeably settled to the satisfaction of all the members. Business of the evening was opened with the reception of many petitions, all of which will be found below.

The Council received two petitions, one from A. R. Beerbower and others, and another from the cyclists of the city, asking for the repavement of Park avenue with a permanent pavement, preferably asphalt. D. S. Randolph and others asked for crosswalks at Fourth and Liberty streets.

A petition was received from the W. C. T. U. asking the Council to adopt an ordinance compelling children under 15 years to keep off the streets after 9 o'clock in the evening in the summer and 8 o'clock in the winter. On motion of Mr. Runyon the matter was referred to the streets and sewers committee.

F. R. Fish and other residents of Martin avenue asked for three electric lights on that avenue, and the matter was referred with power.

The report of Overseer of Poor Hansen showed that there had been thirteen new applicants and six granted. At present there are twenty beneficiaries on the list, five of whom are at the City Home.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported the granting of thirty sewer permits, and Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of nine teen permits. These reports together with that of the city physician were received and filed. The Council gave the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company permission to go ahead and open up certain streets to lay wires underground.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution giving the proper committee authority to proceed to widen Westervelt avenue.

Mr. Buckle presented a resolution authorizing the expenditure of $150 for serge coats for the policemen for the summer.

Mr. Hetfield objected to the expenditure, and stated that the people of the city were opposed to furnishing the police with clothes and giving them increased salaries. The motion was adopted, Messrs. Hetfield and Leifke alone voting no.

Mr. Runyon stated that at the next meeting he would present plans and specifications for a new hose house in the West End.

A breeze was created at this time. Mr. Andrews presented a minority report of the alms committee regarding the fixing of the salary for the overseer of the poor. Mr. Andrews moved that the salary be fixed at $250 a year for three years. He stated that he disliked to present such a report, but he found that he could not agree with Messrs. Hetfield and Liefke, the other two members of the committee.

Mr. Hetfield was of the opinion that $100 per year was sufficient for the official, as only a portion of his time is occupied in looking after the duties of overseer of the poor.

Mr. Andrews said that last year it cost the city $700 in medical attendance, and this year it was figured to make the expense $610. He considered Mr. Hansen a thoroughly competent man and well worth the salary.

Mr. Buckle made a motion that the salary be fixed at $200. He thought that amount would make a fair salary for the office.

A motion to lay the matter on the table was lost, as was also Mr. Hetfield's motion to make the salary $100. Messrs. Hansen, Hetfield, Moffett and Leifke voted in favor of the motion for a $100 salary, and the same four members voted against the motion offered by Mr. Andrews making the salary $250. The latter motion prevailed.

On a motion offered by Mr. Newman, the light committee was authorized to allow the Welsbach Light Co. to give a test of their light in Plainfield.

Mr. Newman started a discussion regarding the electric lightings of the Plainfield streets. He moved that four lights be located on South avenue from the last light to Terrill road.

Mr. VanHerwerden amended the motion by substituting the number to six. This caused a lengthy discussion and finally four lights were granted by the Council, it being in their opinion the best plan in view of the fact that the Council is limited as to the number of lights to be granted this year.

Mr. Hetfield offered a resolution that the Corporation Counsel be instructed that it is the sense of the City Council that the Court at Elizabeth do not confirm that portion of the report of the Martin Act Commissioners which refers to taxes prior to 1880. Messrs. Hetfield, Barrows, Runyon, Buckle and VanHerwerden all spoke in favor of the resolution and the same was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Mr. Barrows moved that when the Council adjourned it be to meet in two weeks when the question of giving the electric light company power to place their wires underground would be discussed.

On motion by Mr. Buckle ordinances authorizing the repairing of Woodland, Stelle and Madison avenues, were adopted on their third reading, as was also an ordinance relating to the installing of separate sewers to carry off drainage water.

Mr. VanHerwerden offered a resolution which provides for the expenditure of $360.92 on sewer work. Mr. Runyon called up the resolution regarding the location of a keyless fire alarm box on West Front street, and on his motion the box was ordered placed on that street. It will probably be located near Music Hall. The last business transacted was the reception of a petition from about forty business men on Front street asking the Council to locate the proposed flag pole on Front street at the head of Park avenue. The petition was filed after which the Council adjourned.

Church Auxiliary Elect Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, held Monday afternoon in the parlors of the church, the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. M. T. VanWinkle; first vice-president, Mrs. G. Q. Dolliver; second vice-president, Mrs Robert Clark; third vice president, Mrs. John Krymer; secretary Mrs. H. W. Marshall; treasurer, Mrs. O. W. Dunham. The two latter officers were re-elected. The annual public meeting of this valuable auxiliary will be held Sunday evening next in the church, at which time an address will be delivered and the reports of the secretary and treasurer for the past year will be read.

Young Vandals.

Some young men who had more time on their hands than anything else have committed a most outrageous piece of work on the new Sycamore avenue bridge by twisting the iron on the sides of the bridge all out of shape. Some attempt should be made to catch the parties who did it and bring them to justice.

Temple Builders Elect.

The Temple Builders of the First Baptist church held its annual meeting last Sunday afternoon and elected the following officers: President, G. H. Batchelor; vice-president, L. H. Biglow, Jr., treasurer, R W. Barnes; secretary, Frank Jones.

THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE.

Lung Troubles and Consumption Can be Cured

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist Makes a Free Offer to Our Readers.

The distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, demonstrating his discovery of a reliable cure for Consumption Pulmonary Tuberculosis), bronchial, lung and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affections general decline and weakness, loss of flesh, and all conditions of wasting away, will send THREE FREE BOTTLES (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of this paper writing for them.

His "New Scientific Treatment" has cured thousands permanently by its timely use, and he considers it a simple professional duty to suffering humanity to donate a trail of his infallible cure.

Science daily develops new wonders, and this great chemist, patiently experimenting for years, has produced results as beneficial to humanity as can be claimed by any modern genius. His assertion that lung troubles and consumption are curable in any climate is proven by "heartfelt letters of gratitude," filed in his American and European laboratories in thousands from those cured in all parts of the world.

The dread Consumption, uninterrupted, means speedy and certain death.

Simply write to T. A. Slocum, M. C., 98 Pine street, New York, giving post-office and express address, and the free medicine will be promptly sent direct from his laboratory.

Sufferers should take instant advantage of his generous proposition.

TRAVESTY ON JUSTICE.

SWEENEY PERJURY CASE ENDED IN A FIASCO MONDAY.

Justice Mosher Stood Before a Mirror in Mocking Mood—Complaint Was Not Prosecuted by Young Mr. Nash.

The case against Willie Sweeney, a clerk in the law office of Counselor William K. McClure, for perjury, called in Justice Mosher's court Monday afternoon, ended in a fiasco as was expected.

V. W. Nash, Jr., who represented the prosecution, wanted to withdraw the charge, but Counselor McClure, appearing for Sweeney, protested against such action and the Justice declined to permit the complaint to be withdrawn.

No witnesses for the prosecution were sworn. For the defense Counselor called young Mr. Nash and young Mr. Sweeney. The trial throughout was a travesty on the dignity of the law, and Justice Mosher added the finishing touch when he arrayed himself before a mirror and mockingly declared, "Here I am, Judge, what do you want." It will be remembered that Justice Mosher had been subpoenaed to appear before himself as a witness. The Justice was laughed at.

Finally, after considerable fun had been extracted out of the proceedings by the crowd who had gathered to witness them, the Justice dismissed the case.

Counselor McClure says he is not through with the case yet.

No Cure—No Pay.

DEVELOPED A FINE ART IN PRINTING.

Success of the Aluminum Process of Lithographing.

WORK DONE IN PLAINFIELD.

FACTORY OF THE ALUMINUM PLATE AND PRESS COMPANY.

Established and in Operation in This City—In Charge of Skilled Mechanics Who are Turning Out Machines That Will Completely Revolutionize Color Printing—Aluminum Plates Combine Durability and Lightness, Besides Being Able to Do the Best Work—A Splendid Industry for Plainfield.

A new plant has been recently started at Netherwood, which promises to be one of the most extensive as well as one of the most important, not only in the State, but in the country.

Through the discovery that the new metal aluminum possesses certain properties which render it not only available, but an invaluable agent or medium in all kinds of printing and superior to any of the materials now employed, particularly in lithography, a revolution has been inaugurated that promises in the near future to effect a radical change in present methods. This discovery is amply protected, not only in this country, but in Europe, and the process by which it is applied in the work of surface printing has been adopted, and is now in successful operation in several of the principal lithographic establishments in New York and elsewhere. As lithographic stones have heretofore been exclusively used, continuous and persistent efforts have been made to overcome the difficulties inseparable from the manipulation of such heavy, rigid and cumbrous masses, some of which weigh from five hundred to over a thousand pounds. The work, it is true, was all that could be desired, especially in the highest grade of colored printing, or chromo-lithography. But some thing more was desirable, and in the unremitting, though fruitless endeavors to attain that something, millions of dollars and nearly a hundred years were spent. Some conception can be formed of the nature of the difficulties encountered from a statement of the mere fact that a print in ten colors covering a surface of thirty-six by fifteen inches requires ten stones weighing in the aggregate over six thousand pounds, or three tons. The time lost in the handling of such heavy masses, their liability to fracture, the high prices of the finer qualityand the great care required in the handling, rendered lithography one of the most expensive methods. The great object, therefore, was to find, if possible, a suitable equivalent—some material which, while it would be free from the defects of the lithographic stone, would give as satisfactory results. It was hoped that among the various metals, or metallic compounds a substitute would be discovered which would possess all the desired qualities.

Among all the metals it has been found that aluminum is the only one which possesses in combination all the essential elements, or properties of porosity, lightness, flexibility non corrodibility and facility in manipulation. These are the properties which not only render it especially applicable to work heretofore performed with the lithographic stone, but give it a decided superiority over the stone in the matter of economy as well as in the quantity and quality of the product.

It is specially deserving of notice that as the metal is made from clay, the source of supply is literally inexhaustible and as the method by which the aluminum or ore is reduced to the metallic state has been, and is likely to be still more, materially cheapened, no apprehension need be entertained on the all important question of quantity.

It is very evident that the lithographic trade, not only in the United States, but in Europe also, has been stirred to its depths by the conceded success of the new metal as a printing medium, which meets all the requirements of the art; and the change which is already foreshadowed in the printing mechanisms of the day is shown by the growing demand for the rotary in place of the slow and tedious movements of the flat bed presses. In the prophetic words of "L'Imprimerie," the organ of the typographic and lithographic trades of France, describing the revolution inaugurated by the use of aluminum in surface printin , we may well ask "who can arrest this endless progress? The future alone can say; but it has opened a hitherto unknown route to the three distinct branches of engraving, lithography and typography."

The paper referred to, alluding to the progress thus far made in France, remarks that they have already a number of engravers, designers, etc., who have recognized the fact that their work was easier upon aluminum than upon stone, and that the economy and advantages from its use secure its extension over a field which could not be dreamed of for the stone. Furthermore, it adds, "another point in favor of the metal, is that it affords the means of a direct transition between the lithographic and typographic methods, thus opening a wholly new way to general printing."

In other words, it means a revolution in which, as already stated, the best results of lithography with the most economic and rapid methods which have heretofore been possible only through relief printing will be produced by the new printing medium. Lithography or surface printing as an art would seem in fact to have reached its climax; only one thing was wanting to enlarge the field of its operations, and that one thing, for the possession of which millions have been spent in vain, having at last been found at its merits having been proved by tests of the most conclusive and convincing character—conclusive and convincing to the most exacting critics—its final adoption in place of the various forms of relief printing is, as claimed, only a question of time and the construction of the necessary mechanical devices to meet the new and changed conditions of the art.

When aluminum was first extracted from its native clay by the celebrated French chemist, St. Clair Deville, less than half a century ago, the cost of its production was over one hundred dollars a pound. Improvements in the process of reduction have, however, brought the price down to almost a two-hundredth part of that figure, although less than ten years ago the market rate of the pure metal was five dollars a pound. Even at this price, however, it would have been considered too costly for the purpose to which it will eventually be applied.

Today the metal can be purchased at a price materially below that of the stone—indeed, at a comparatively small fraction of the cost of the best quality of stone.

The great reduction in the market price of the meta., the uses of which are constantly multiplying, is destined to effect a revolution, not only in surface but in relief printing as well, for relief printing, through the improved methods secured by this invaluable discovery, is certain to be eventually superseded by the new system.

As the aggregate yearly value of the output of the printing trade of the United States, is, according to the last census of the industrial products of the country, nearly three hundred millions of dollars, and as the new process is adapted to all kinds of printing, an approximate idea of its actual value may be formed in its application to this great industry. In brief, the discovery of the valuable properties of the new metal has rendered absolutely practicable the production of the highest and most artistic effects of the lithographic art, or surface printing, by the application of the most rapid and economic methods. It is in this the great value and superiority of the aluminum plate over the lithographic stone consists. Its lightness, it is one to one hundred compared with the stone which is heavy, rigid, and, on account of its great weight, difficult of manipulation. In the case of the larger plates the cost varies from one-fifth to one-tenth that of the stone according to the area of the printing surface. In the matter of speed, while the product of the stone rarely exceeds six or seven thousand impressions a day, the product of the aluminum plate ranges from twelve to twenty, and thirty thousand, and even higher will doubtless be attained hereafter by the more rapid operations of improved printing mechanisms.

The simplicity of the process and the fact that it dispenses with many of the expensive and tedious details inseparable from relief printing, as well as the additional fact that it is certain to lead, not only to improved, but less complicated machinery, commend in a special manner the new system, (which is now known by the distinctive title of aluminography) as the most important advance which has yet been made in this great industry.

It is for the manufacture of the machinery and plates required in this new method of printing that "The Aluminum Plate and Press Company" has established their first manufacturing plant in this city. The building can be seen from the railroad and their sign is so conspicuous that it is literally true that "they who run may read." The principal office of the company is at 57 Nassau street, New York, and the laboratory as well as the factory is located here in Plainfield. The machinery employed is not only of the best and most efficient description, but it embraces all the improvements up to the latest dates. The buildings are spacious, well lighted and in every respect admirably adapted to the purpose for which they were erected.

The main structure comprises the machinery department proper, the engine room, the offices and the designing department, with ample room for the assembling and completion of a large number of presses at the same time. It is compact, strong and constructed on the most approved plan for the production of all kinds of printing mechanisms, and especially of that particular class of presses required in aluminum surface printing. In a word, it is not only one of the most thoroughly equipped factories in the United States, but it is furnished, as we have said, with the latest and most improved machinery.

In addition to the main building there is a foundry fitted with all the necessary appliances, minor structures for the storage of materials of all descriptions and ample space in the plot on which the factory stands for whatever additional buildidgs may be needed. As the factory is furnished with a powerful electric plant it can be run to its highest capacity night and day to meet the demands of the trade and to supply orders within a reasonable time commensurate with the best quality of work.

The most satisfactory guarantee that could be given as to the character of the presses made by the Aluminum Plate and Press Company consists in the fact that they will not only be constructed by mechanics who have been selected on account of their proved skill and long experience in this special line of work, but the factory itself is under the direction and supervision of the best talent in the designing and manufacture of printing machinery, men who have acquired a high reputation in this particular industry, and the success of whose improved and patented devises has been proved by the marked appreciation in which they are held by the trade. It is only through such mechanism that surface printing on aluminum can be developed in its most advanced and varied forms, and brought to the highest state of perfection of which this particular style of printing is capable. The practical experience which has been already acquired in this direction by the superintendent, has been turned to the best account in the construction of the new rotary press.

As rotary presses for surface printing have heretofore been necessarily limited to the use of zinc and as the work done on this material has been almost wholly confined to the coarser grades of posters, they were naturally deficient in the essential requirements demanded for the fine and artistic work which has been rendered possible only through the substitution of aluminum for both stone and zinc.

The success of the new metal and its preliminary use on flat bed and rotary presses, such as they were, have, by exposing the limitations and inefficiences of both machines led to much needed alterations and marked improvements in the new rotaries now in course of completion in the factory of the Aluminum Plate & Press Company in Plainfield. To secure the best results in color printing certain important and indispensable changes were necessary, the effect of which will be seen not only in the adaptability of the new presses to the most exacting requirements of the highest grade of color printing, but of all kinds of commercial work.

The printing presses turned out in this factory will, therefore, be constructed according to the most improved designs, in which economy combined with the highest efficiency will give them a marked advantage over machines which were primarily and solely designed some ten years ago for the use of zinc plates, and which are not up to the requirements demanded by the new conditions developed by the use of aluminum and the advanced state of the art.

We may say in conclusion that the great presses to be turned out at these works will be completed in a few days days when those of our citizens who are interested in the growing industries of Plainfield may witness them in operation.

CRY OF EXTRY! EXTRY! DISTURBS EDUCATORS

Young Newsboys Fall Under Bann of School Teachers.

KEEPS LADS FROM STUDY.

CHIEF OF POLICE ASKED TO ENFORCE TRUANCY LAW.

Board of Education Monday Night Passed Resolutions Calling Attention to the State Law Which Says No Child Under Fifteen Years Shall be Employed in Any Labor Unless Attending School the Required Length of Time, and Says Newsboys Do Not Comply With This Provision of the Law in this City.

The sensational New York papers have fallen under the bann of the Plainfield Board of Education. No longer will the horde of small newsboys crowd about the depot and the neighboring corners until school is dismissed. That is, if the Board can help it.

Monday night at the May meeting of the Board of Education a resolution was passed which will, in effect, if carried out, prevent the sale of the numerous war extras by young boys until after 3:30 o'clock when school is dismissed. The resolutions and the preceding preamble were prepared by Superintendent Maxson to do away, if possible, with the throng of small boys that are usually found in the vicinity of the station. While the resolution sounds decidedly strict, it was admitted by the members of the Board that they had no way of enforcing it except by moral suasion. Its moral effect on the small boys is hoped, however, to keep most of them off the streets.

The resolution was unanimously passed after a somewhat lengthy discussion. Several of the members of the Board, particularly Mr. Abbott, seemed to think that it might be a hardship on some small boys of poor families who had to earn their bread. Mr. Lounsbury was of the opinion that it might be better to leave the matter until some future day when the entire matter of truancy could be taken up.

Mr. Maxson based his argument in favor of the resolution on the fact that since the issuing of the war extras by the sensational New York papers, many of the small boys, some times with and sometimes without the consent of their parents, remained away from school in the afternoon to sell papers. Most of them spent their time in hanging about the corners and did very little towards pushing their trade. He thought that they really went out for the fun rather than the revenue.

The resolution was as follows:

WHEREAS, Under the State law no child under the age of fifteen can be employed in any labor unless attending school the required length of time during the twelve months preceding; and

WHEREAS, There may now be seen a large number of boys on the street during school hours ostensibly selling papers, but many of them doing little but loiter around the corners; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Chief of Police be requested to see that each boy on the street during school hours be requested to show a paper from the principal of some school, public or private, saying that he has attended school the required time and therefore may be legally absent from school.

There was little else done at the meeting aside from the discussing and passing of the resolution.

The report of the medical inspectors showed that they had examined 3.6 pupils during the month of April, making a total of 1 474 examined in all. Of these 651 were unvaccinated, or nearly 45 per cent. During the month 19 cases of defective eyesight and 5 cases of defective hearing were discovered.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflammed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free

"I WOULD NOT LET YOU TRY A CAT FOR ME"

What Justice Nash Said to Justice Mosher.

HIGH WORDS WERE HEARD.

MOSHER SUBPOENAED AS A WITNESS BEFORE HIMSELF.

A Great Ado That Has Grown Out of an Attempt to Collect the Incipient Sum of Ten Cents — Mosher Held Nash's Tenant for Grand Jury and the Latter Was Much Put Out by Such Action — Justice Mosher Told Justice Nash That He Was No Gentleman—The Former Asks for Advice.

There is dire trouble between Justice of the Peace Nash and Justice of the Peace Mosher, growing out of the decision of the latter to hold F. De Roosa in $200 bail for the Union County Grand Jury, on the charge of assault and battery preferred by William Sweeney, a clerk in the law office of W. K. McClure. The case seems to be a very complicated one and is not without its humorous phases.

It seems that DeRoosa is a tenant of Justice Nash's. When Sweeney had the Italian arrested because he alleged that the former struck him in lieu of settling a bill of ten cents he was trying to collect, V. W. Nash, Jr., who is studying law in his father's office, volunteered to appear in his defense before Justice Mosher. Sweeney prosecuted his own complaint and as both counsels are under age the trial was rather ludicrous.

After hearing the evidence Justice Mosher reserved decision till Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. At the appointed hour young Mr. Nash was present to hear the result. Justice Mosher stated that he held DeRoosa for the Grand Jury and then asked the youthful counsel where his client was.

"I thought he was going to be discharged," it is said young Mr. Nash replied, and then added, "I don't see how you can find him guilty."

The Justice admonished the aspiring lawyer that if he didn't have the prisoner before him in half an hour he would send a constable for him.

Sometime after that Justice Nash himself, accompanied by DeRoosa, appeared before Justice Mosher, the former apparently somewhat excited. Justice Mosher says that Nash exclaimed to him, "I wouldn't let you try a cat for me," at the same time throwing a legal paper on his desk.

"You're no gentleman," replied Justice Mosher.

"I have a perfect right to tell you what I think of you," added Justice Nash in vigorous tones.

"You are no gentleman," repeated Justice Mosher.

By this time Justice Mosher had opened the legal document and found it to be a subpœna for himself to appear before himself as a witness in the case of the State against Sweeney, on the charge of perjury, which was preferred as a result of the evidence that Sweeney gave in the assault and battery case.

The subpœna was made out to Justice Mosher and says "you are hereby commanded personally to be and appear before Justice Mosher, Esq., Justice of the Peace," and is signed by "V. W. Nash, Justice of the Peace."

Justice Mosher turned the subpœna over to a lawyer for advice as to whether he could give evidence in a case which was being tried before him.

Justice Nash furnished the $200 bail for DeRoosa.

The annual meeting of the Children's Auxiliary of the Town Improvement Association was scheduled to be held in Y. M. C. A. Hall Friday afternoon. Owing to the stormy weather the attendance was so small that the election of officers was postponed until some future meeting.

The report of the treasurer was read. It showed that there were fifty subscribing members of the auxiliary. The receipts for the year were $4.07, the expenditures $3.41, leaving a balance of 66 cents.

Interesting papers on the "Thrush" were read by Miss Wilhelmina Patton and Miss Leila Howard.

Arrangements were made to give the fairy play, "Cinderella," in Misses Scribner and Green's School this spring.

WONDERFUL BOY SINGER

HEARD AT THE ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN IN ST. MARY'S HALL.

Kids Fair to Rival the Late William Scanlan—A Clever Programme Rendered by Parochial School Scholars.

Thursday in the Parochial School Hall a fine entertainment was given under the auspices of the Society of the Immaculate Conception of St. Mary's R. C. church. Miss M. Smith, organist of St. Mary's church, presided at the piano.

The opening selection was followed with the presentation of a drama entitled "Which is Which," or "The Fire of London." The programme as rendered was a thoroughly enjoyable one. Every part was creditably taken.

Especially noteworthy was the appearance of George McTernan, a boy singer, who bids fair to rival the late Wm. Scanlan. Another feature was the part taken by Lilly McInerney, a little tot, who assumed the part of "Polly" in the first drama.

The several selections by the chorus of school children and the rendition of "Goosey, Goosey, Gander," by the choir of St. Mary's church, were well received.

In part second a one-act drama entitled "Dutch Justice," was given in an excellent manner. Credit should be given the Sisters of Charity and Madame Bartlett for their untiring efforts in arranging the entertainment and drilling each one in the several parts. The programme was as follows:

WEDDED IN BROOKLYN.

A Former Plainfield Girl Becomes a Wife.

Last Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Voorhees, No. 173 Decatur street, took place the marriage of their youngest daughter, Miss Nellie Louise Voorhees, to Charles Whitely Veitch, also of this city. The beautiful home was thronged with relatives and friends of the happy couple, and the decorations were unusually pretty.

The ceremony of the Episcopal church was performed by Rev. Dr. Nels, pastor of the Church of the Epiphany, Brooklyn. The bride was attended by Miss Sadie Henderson as maid of honor, and Miss Margaret Bach served as flower girl. The best man was Franklin Jones. The ushers were Chester Franklin and William J. Phillips.

The bride wore a gown of white silk, en train. She also wore a veil, and was greatly admired for her beauty and personal charm. During the reception which followed an orchestra discoursed favorite selections. The wedding supper was replete in every particular.

Mr. and Mrs. Veitch left during the evening for Savannah, Ga., where they will spend a portion of their honey moon. On their return they will live in Brooklyn. The bride and her parents were former residents of Plainfield, and the many friends of the bride will wish her and her husband much joy and success in their married life. They were well remembered with presents of beauty and usefulness. Those from Plainfield who witnessed the marriage were Miss Mabelle Force, Miss Cora Laire, L. Warren Randolph and Russell Johnson

Spoke to Endeavorers.

At a meeting of the Hudson County Christian Endeavor Local Union, held at the Newman Methodist, Jersey City, Thursday evening, the 28th inst., State Treasurer, E. E. Anthony, of Plainfield, was present, and after partaking of a most substantial dinner, served by the women of the mission, he told of the coming annual meeting to be held at Nashville, Tenn., in July.

EFFECT OF THE WAR ON CURRENT PRICES.

Slight Advances in the Cost of Necessaries of Life.

FOOD PRODUCTS FEEL IT.

HOW PRICES CONTINUE WILL DEPEND ON LENGTH OF WAR.

If the Conflict Ends in a Few Months It is the General Idea That No Material Advance Will be Made in the Prices of Goods—Flour Selling a Dollar More a Barrel Than It Did a Week Ago—Slight Advance in Sugar—The Difference in Meat Cuts Falls on the Local Retail Dealers.

"Now for war prices again," says the pessimistic citizen, with a shiver, as he recalls the rising scale for the ordinary commodities of life that swept over the country from 1861 to 1865, and those who hear him solemnly declare: "Yes, everything from a paper of pins to a barrel of flour is bound to go up."

In the different branches of trade, however, such a wide, sweeping state-ment is not generally indorsed. The local merchants admit that there will be an early advance, for the most part slight, on many lines of goods, but they say that some branches of trade will not be materially affected at all. Nearly everything in the way of prices, they argue, will depend upon the length of the war. Should it be terminated within a few months, it is the general opinion of local trade that no material advance will be made in the prices of staple goods. If, however, it is prolonged beyond that point, in the natural course of things, there will be a noticeable increase in the general cost of commodities.

Food products will feel the war influence first of all, but it is not expected that household furnishings or utensils, or articles of personal wear, will be affected at all within the next six months. Even in imported dry goods little advance in prices is looked for, in view of the small import trade in that line with Spain. Goods from other countries will come here in ships of non-combatant Powers, and even if the exigencies of the case should require that merchandise from Europe be discharged for the United States at Canadian ports, and sent thence overland, the increased transportation charges, it is claimed, would probably not make difference enough in retail prices to be regarded as a fixed advance.

Whatever rise or steadiness there may be in the cost of the commodities the chief staple of all, wheat, has led the way in an upward tendency. Flour is selling today at a dollar more a barrel than it did two weeks ago. This advance, however, is not directly attributable to the international embroglio. Indeed, many grocers frankly acknowledge that they cannot understand the advance, particularly as the reports predict a fair season for the crops all over the country. They regard the Letter wheat "corner" in Chicago as the most likely cause of the higher price of flour. Sugar, too, has advanced slightly.

Coffee has advanced about two cents a pound since the declaration of war. But little of the crude sugar cane, such as was formerly sent from Cuba, has been imported since the rebellion broke out on the island a few years ago, so the complete stoppage of that line of goods will not be very noticeable.

"Even if a tax is not put on tea and coffee," said a grocer this morning, "prices will surely advance. Teas have already risen in price about two and a half cents a pound, wholesale, and coffee has gone up two cents a pound." Pork has gone up one cent a pound, and that means that everything in that line will soon be higher. There appears to be a great demand for salted meats, possibly owing to the demand for it ordered for military use.

The price of beef has already increased somewhat in the Eastern markets, but this is not attributed to the opening of hostilities in Cuba. It is the result, rather, of the "between times" season, when grass-fed cattle are falling off, and corn-fed cattle are not yet killed in plenty.

The brewers say that beer is now down to the bottom price, and that it would be impossible to preserve the quality and sell it for less than they have been doing. The extra dollar that goes to the Government will not tend, naturally, they think, to increase the amount consumed. Realizing what the added burden means for them, they protested vigorously all over the country, and mean to keep up the fight; but they realize that it will be a stiff uphill battle to get the tax removed.

The tax on cigars will fall more heavily on the retail dealer than on his average customer. The tax mean $2 per thousand, or only an increase of ten cents on the price of a box of fifty cigars. This increase is so small that dealers will not attempt to raise the price of a single cigar. The same general facts will hold true with respect to tobacco in all different kinds, forms and uses.

SMART WOMEN TO MEET.

NATIONAL EQUAL SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION CONFERENCE.

An Important Event to be Held at East Orange and to Which Plainfield Women Will Take an Active Part.

A National woman's suffrage conference will be held at Union Hall, Orange, Friday and Saturday, May 6th and 7th. The afternoon sessions on each day will begin at 2:30, the evening sessions at 8 o'clock. It is expected that this will be an important event in the history of the suffrage movement in New Jersey, and the National, State and local elements will be fully represented.

The presiding officer will be Miss Mary G. Hay, of New York, who will also take part in the discussion on the second day. Miss Hay is an attractive speaker and a chairman of practised ability, having been connected nearly all her life with public work of various kinds. Rev. Antionette Brown Blackwell, whose presence will honor the conference by representing the noble pioneers of the cause, will open the first session with prayer, and the same afternoon she will speak upon "Women's Place in Civilization."

The prominent National speakers will be Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Rev. Anna H. Shaw. Mrs. Catt is widely known as one of *the most bril*liant and convincing speakers in the country, and is a woman of charming personality. She is a native of Wisconsin, and has always been an ardent believer and active worker in the cause of woman suffrage. Her sub*jects will be as follows: First evening.* "The True Democracy." Second day afternoon, "How May We Win the Suffrage?"

Rev. Anna H. Shaw will appear on the second day, taking charge of the "question box" in the afternoon, and in the evening delivering an address. Her earnestness and eloquence is too well known in this State to need further comment. Another notable feature of the first afternoon will be an address by Homer B. Sprague, Ph.D., on "Suffrage and Education." Prof. Sprague's eminent character and fame as author and lecturer add much weight to his disinterested advocacy of woman's progress.

On the same occasion there will be a symposium, in which the following questions will be considered: "Does the Wife Need Suffrage?" by Mrs. W. J. Pullen, president of the Camden League; "Does the Business Woman Need It?" by Miss Jennie Morris, of Moorestown, N. J.; "Does the Professional Woman Need It?" by Dr. C. V. Luther; "Does the Tax-paying Woman Need It?" by Mrs. Isabella H. Demarest, of Closter, N. J., corresponding secretary of the W. C. T. U. All these women, representing the State, are speakers of ability.

The first evening a "Suffrage Farce," entitled "The Judgment of Minerva," will be read by its author, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, President of the New Jersey State Association, and Vice-President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Hall, the daughter of Julia Ward Howe, has for years been one of the ablest and most active workers, both for suffrage and for the club movement. Her farce is intended to show the absurd and illogical attitute of the anti-suffragists, and has been presented to many audiences, always arousing much laughter and enthusiasm.

The second afternoon, Mrs. Mariana W. Chapman, President of the New York State Association, will speak on "Women in '48 and '98." Mrs. J. D. DeWitt, President of the Essex County Association, will give "A Word to Essex County," and Miss Marion Lindsay Smith, of East Orange, representing the local element, will present the question, "Is Woman Suffrage Right?" At the beginning of each session, attractive music will be rendered. There will be singing by Mrs. Jean Sies Starr and Victor Baldwin, and violin solos by Albert Gosweiler.

ELECTED NEW OFFICERS.

Postponed Meeting of Endeavorers of the Congregational Church.

The postponed business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church was held last Friday at the home of E. L. Suffren, of Sycamore avenue, in connection with a sociable.

The principle business was the semi-annual election of officers which resulted as follows: President, Charles Wilson; vice-president, Robert Suffren; secretary, Miss Julia Belknap; treasurer, Philip Suffren. The chairmen of the committees were chosen as follows: Prayer meeting, J. A. Powlinson; lookout, Mrs. Harold Tomlinson; social, Miss Katheryn Dwight; flower, Miss Saidee Howell; good literature, Miss Alice Morgan; and missionary, Miss Mary Chase.

The new constitution was adopted with very few changes. An informal social hour followed.

Received a Masonic Degree.

F. L. C. Martin and Wm. E. MacClymont received the degree of past master at the regular communication of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., held Thursday evening.

A PLEASANT PASSING OF THEIR TENTH YEAR

Monday Afternoon Club's Auspicious Event Thursday.

AFFAIR HELD IN CASINO.

ECHOES OF PLANTATION LIFE THE PRINCIPAL FEATURE.

The Casino Artistically Decorated for the Occasion—Mrs. E. C. Perkins, the President, Assisted by Other Members, Graciously Received the Guests Beside the Open Fireplace—Holland, the Season's Topic, Emphasized in the Decorations—A Charming Southern Woman Delighted Audience.

Eighteen ninety-eight has given us little worse in the way of weather than the cold rain of Thursday afternoon, but even miserable weather could not make the tenth anniversary celebration of the Monday Afternoon Club, which was held in the Casino of the Union County Country Club, at 3 o'clock, anything but an entire success.

The cosy little theatre never looked prettier than on this occasion. The stage, of course, was artistically decorated, handsome furniture, rugs and many flowers assisting in the home like effect. A novel feature of the decorations was the presence of three large Dutch milk cans, the property of George Wharton Edwards, which served as a reminder of Holland, the country which has formed the subject of the club's study during the past year. The stage was not alone in it pretty decorations, however; the whole room was arranged in the most fashionable manner, covering the floor, seats drawn into cosy and less formal positions, and pretty tables, holding flowers, or arranged for the serving of refreshments, making a very tasteful appearance.

In front of the deep fireplace the guests found the president of the Monday Afternoon Club, Mrs. Edward C. Perkins, who was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Lowe, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. Duos VanVliet and Mrs. Randall.

The souvenir programmes of the afternoon's entertainment were decked by the well-known artist, George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, who was the first honorary member of the club. The cover of the programmes was an imitation of the Dutch hand-made paper, and bore a charming little drawing of a woman *in the costume of the United Nether*lands, sitting at a window, through which can be seen a typical Dutch windmill. The tulip, the national flower of Holland, also appeared on the cover, and the whole was tied with yellow, the national color.

Mrs. Perkins, president of the club, gave a short address, describing its formation, which was the result of a desire on the part of a number of Plainfield women to help in the education of their children by educating themselves. Mrs. Perkins also explained that it had been expected that the founder of the club, Miss Elisa Elvira Kenyon, would be present, and say something about the future of the organization. It had not been possible for her to do so, however, as was explained in a very graceful note, written by Miss Kenyon and read by Mrs. Perkins.

Although Holland was the subject emphasized in the design of the programmes and in the decorations, it had no part in the afternoon's entertainment, which might be called a series of echoes of old plantation life. Mrs. Henry J. Gielow, a charming Southern woman, delighted the audience with her dramatic dialect recitations. Several of these, "Mammy's Reminiscences," "Dat time Honey got los'," "Seein' Sperrits" and "Blow ill breezes," were arranged by Mrs. Gielow from actual occurrences in her own life on a Southern plantation. No one who had not been raised among the Negroes of the South could give with such naturalness of voice and movement, the scenes which carried the audience in thought back to the days of the plantation life, to the "mammy's" little cabin, and the "great house" where the colored woman rocked her white nurseling to sleep with her quaint crooning song. Equally interesting were the plaintive plantation melodies sung so skillfully and touchingly by the baritone soloist, James H. Childs, with their exquisite piano accompaniments, which were evidently improvised, so unusual and full of delicate harmonious touches were they.

The afternoon was one of perfect enjoyment, and the audience seemed loath to leave their seats when the last encore was sounded. Lights began to gleam out from the tea tables, however, and to the mental and emotional treat was added the *physical comfort usual at an after*noon tea. Mrs John M. Whiton and Mrs. Howard Fleming presided at one table, Mrs. William H. Murray and Mrs. Charles A. Brooks at another, and a number of the members of the club assisted in passing the dainty refreshments. A buzz of conversation ran through the room, and a period of general sociability ensued. Many were the words of congratulation exchanged concerning the completion by the club of ten years of successful work, and the pleasant event which celebrated it, and many were the thanks showered upon the charming southerner, in her black satin gown with the patriotic colors in her hair, and upon Mr. Childs and his gifted accompanist. A large number of prominent society women were present, and many pretty costumes lent life and color to the pleasant scene.

"LINKE'S REST."

Country Home in Passaic Valley Dedicated Yesterday.

Seventy-five friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Linke, of West Front street, Sunday journeyed across the mountains to the old Moore farm, recently purchased by Mr. Linke as a country seat. The place is beautifully situated on the farther slope of the second mountain, close to the Passaic river, a mile from Sterling.

A historic old stone school house, erected in the year 1797, and an immense elm tree, one of the largest in in Somerset county, mark the spot as one well-known to old inhabitants of the region and to pleasure seekers as well.

It was a double celebration, for in addition to the dedication of the new summer home, it was the birthday of both Mr. and Mrs. Linke. A name was selected for the place by vote. The suggestion of Otto Linke, which was enthusiastically endorsed by Max Wiertz, of "Linke's Rest" was unanimously chosen. In honor of it, a young oak tree was planted amid happy ceremonies of which Henry Haurand took charge.

Speeches followed the planting of the tree. William H. Pangborn and Percy C. Ohl gave some very interesting sketches of the early history of the farm and the surrounding district going back even to the times of the Indians.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS' PAY.

An Interesting Case Decided in Justice Moffett's Court.

The case of Spangenberg against Bullock, which was tried in Justice Moffett's court Thursday afternoon, attracted the interest of all the real estate brokers of the city, whose interests it affected more or less.

Former Councilman Spangenberg secured a tenant for a house on Kensington avenue belonging to Mrs. Lydia P. Bullock. The defendant gave a lease for three years and accepted a check for one month's rent, but refused to pay Broker Spangenberg his commission when the latter demanded it.

At the trial the plaintiff was represented by I. P. Runyon, of Pope & Runyon, and W. O. Angleman appeared for the defendant. The prosecution produced several real estate men who testified that it was customary for the broker to receive commission when the first month's rent is received by the owner.

The defense made an effort to prove that no contract had been made with Spangenberg relative to the renting of the house.

After hearing all the evidence and arguments of counsel, the Justice gave judgement in full for the plaintiff. The amount was $54.

Of Interest to Teachers.

The State Board of Education has a bureau of information for teachers and school officers. Its object is to serve as a connecting link between supply and demand in our educational field; to give our teachers and school boards intelligent and disinterested service free of charge, and, as far as possible, to be instrumental in securing for boards of education the most acceptable service obtainable, and for the teacher the position to which he is best adapted. Copies of a circular and forms of application may be obtained of County Supt. Mets, of Somerville.

Death of Peter Connolly.

The death of Peter Connolly, aged seventy years, occurred last Thursday at the home of his son, Edward Connolly, 339 East Third street. Mr. Connolly had been feeble for some time and his death was not wholly unexpected. The funeral services were held from the late residence last Monday morning at 8 o'clock. The remains were then taken to Easton, Pa., on the 8:21 train where a service was held at St. Bernard's church. Interment was in St. Bernard's cemetery, Easton.

The Mayor Warned Him.

Mrs. Kelly, wife of Gregian, and Benjamin Vandervoort, colored, residents of Jenning's lane, near the mountain, appeared in the borough court April 28th. Vandervoort was the defendant. The woman claimed that he was intoxicated and attempted to assault her. She had him arrested on a warrant. Mayor Wilson heard the story of both parties and decided to fine Vandervoort $5. The amount was paid, and His Honor warned him not to come in court again or he would get the full penalty.

MILL OWNERS GET FAVORABLE VERDICT.

Water Company Loses Its Case in Supreme Court.

MUST PAY $430.95 DAMAGES

JURY WAS OUT FROM 12:30 TO 4 O'CLOCK.

The Case is a Very Important One and Senator Reed Outlined and Conducted a Prosecution That Was Effective in the Mind's of the Jurors—Judge Magie in Charging Said the Evidence Was Contradictory, But the Witnesses Seemed Honest and the Jury Must Decide the Truth of Claims.

The trial of Harper, Hollingsworth & Co. against the Mountain Water Company came to an end Friday after a contest lasting nine days, during which every point was fiercely contested. Senator Reed, of North Plainfield, represented Harper, Hollingsworth & Company, the plaintiffs, while Chandler Biker and Richard Lindabury, of Newark, fought for the interests of the Mountain Water Company. The case is one of the first of the kind to be tried in New Jersey and the verdict naturally interests many people. Senator Reed won a great victory when he secured from the jury a verdict for $430.95 for his clients, as damages.

Mr. Reed followed every point closely and the result was that the case was clearly developed in the minds of the jury. In the charge to the jury, Judge Magie made every point clear and plain. The opposing counsel fought the case equally well and many excellent points in behalf of their clients were made. It is not likely that the case will rest, for the defendants will probably appeal and the case will then be taken before the Chancellor, who will determine definitely the amount of damage for all time. However, the outcome of the case will be watched with the greatest interest.

At the opening of court Senator Reed continued his argument. He briefly reviewed the evidence sustaining his part of the case as given by almost a score of witnesses and also reviewed the testimony given by the defense.

Judge Magie charged the jury at 11:30 and talked for one hour. He went carefully over all the evidence as produced by the witnesses. He said that a great deal of it was contradictory, although the witnesses on both sides appeared to be honest men. The jury must decide which to believe and which to leave out.

The jury retired to the Grand Jury room where they considered the case carefully from 12:30 to 4 o'clock. On the first ballot which was taken, soon after retiring, it stood in favor of the plaintiff. From that time until 4 o'clock a number of ballots were taken and the case was discussed at length. Finally a verdict was given in the plaintiff for $430.95. When the verdict was handed in Judge Magie and the defendant's counsel was absent. Senator Reed was present and thanked the jury for the verdict which was handed to Clerk Somers.

PARLIAMENTARY CLUB.

Miss Clementine Yates Elected President for Ensuing Year.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's Parliamentary Club, held at the Y. M. C. A., Thursday morning, the following officers were elected: President, Miss C. B. Yates; vice president, Mrs. Carmon Farse; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Stephen R. Krom; recording secretary, Mrs. Henry M. Maxson; treasurer, Mrs. Frank J. Hubbard. Miss Yates and Mrs. Maxson were re-elected. Mrs. M. H. Eston and Miss C. B. Yates were elected delegates to the meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held in this city, Thursday May 12th. On account of that meeting, the next regular meeting of the Parliamentary Club, which shou l be held on that day, will take place Tuesday, May 10th.

Ask your doctor how many preparations of cod-liver oil there are.

He will answer, "Hundreds of them." Ask him which is the best. He will reply, "Scott's Emulsion."

Then see that this is the one you obtain. It contains the purest cod-liver oil, free from unpleasant odor and taste. You also get the hypophosphites and glycerine. All three are blended into one grand healing and nourishing remedy.

THE MEN OF MYSTERY SURPRISE THE WOMEN

An Auspicious Event in Trinity Reformed Church.

GIFT OF HANDSOME MANTEL.

THE PRESENT ESTABLISHED IN THE LADIES' PARLOR.

Members of the Ladies Christian Work Society Asked in a Casual Way to Visit the Parlor April 27th by Pastor Schenck—On Arriving There They Were Overcome by Surprise to See the Handsome Mantel Presented in Appreciation of Their Efforts in Assisting to Make the Recent Alterations in the Edifice.

Ever since April 24 the women of the Trinity Reformed church had been enjoying all the delights of anticipation. A mystery was to be revealed to them April 27th. Furthermore, the mystery originated with the men of the congregation. Husbands, brothers and friends were questioned, but the secret was well kept and did not leak out until the time came for the revealing of all its details.

It will be remembered that the new ladies' parlors in the church has been recently furnished in a handsome way by a committee from the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church. When the room was planned a place was left in it to set a mantel, with a gas log beneath to heat the room during the spring and fall months when the furnaces were not running.

It was well known that the women had done grandly in helping to pay for the recent alterations and afterwards in furnishing the church. As the mantel and heating apparatus was really needed in the parlor, the men of the congregation decided to secure them and placed them in position entirely unbeknown to the women.

C. M. Thorpe, a member of the consistory, selected a beautiful mantel of antique oak, with large oval mirror above, from the large stock at his store on Park avenue. To this was attached one of the latest style of gas logs, and hot water heaters, something entirely new, that Mr. Thorpe hopes to place in many Plainfield homes, as it is decidedly the best heater of the day. The entire expense of the mantel and heating attachment will be paid by the men of the congregation.

The first the women of the congregation knew that anything out of the ordinary was to take place was April 27th when the pastor read a notice asking them to be present at the prayer meeting Wednesday evening, stating that an important announcement would be made after the service. In response to the request there was an unusually large attendance at the meeting April 27th.

Before the benediction was pronounced the women were asked to tarry a little after the meeting and meet the men in the parlors. After the closing words of the pastor, as everybody rose and turned to go out the sliding doors separating the parlor from the lecture room were rolled back and the beautiful mantel with the cheerful grate fire below greeted them.

The parlors were quickly filled and congratulations and thanks were showered on the men for their beautiful gift. The enthusiasm rose so high that E. E. Anthony was compelled to mount a chair and make a short humorous and patriotic speech in which he presented the mantel and gas-log to the women in the name of the men of the congregation.

Ayer's Asthma Cure

better known as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, has made a record for its remarkable cures of asthma. Cases that have been considered beyond hope or help have been cured by this remedy. We give two examples of such cures out of the many on record:—

"My mother has been a great sufferer from asthma for the past 20 years, and her recovery is almost without a parallel. On account of her advanced age—over seventy—we had but little hopes of ever seeing her well again; but we are sincerely grateful to inform you that she has been entirely cured by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."
INGLIS BANKS, Tar Brook, N.S.

"I was a sufferer for a long time from asthma, vainly endeavoring to procure relief in the use of ordinary remedies. At length I was induced to try a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The first bottle afforded me so much benefit that I continued the use of the remedy until entirely cured."

STAY-AT-HOME CYCLISTS.

A NOVEL SOCIABLE HELD IN THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Decorations Were Inclined Towards Bicycles and Patriotism—Interesting and Original Programme Was Given.

Something of the order of a stay at-home bicycle sociable was held by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church April 27th in the church parlors. Instead of going forth for a little spin, the members and their friends gathered there to enjoy a decidedly novel entertainment.

The decorations were inclined toward bicycling and patriotism. There was a variety of Spalding wheels, tandems and single wheels, grouped on the platform. Four rifles were stacked there, about which the wheels were grouped. Large American flags were hung on the walls.

The programme opened with a piano duet by the Misses Cornelia Miller and Kizzie Naegle. It was their first appearance in America, D. E. Titsworth, the master of ceremonies, explained. Then followed a "Bicycle Journal" consisting of several parts. D. E. Titsworth first read a short sketch of the origin and growth of the wheel. Then followed a series of "Loose Spokes," a group of humorous sayings about the wheel and its various riders. A vocal trio was well sung by Mrs. W. C Hubbard, Mrs. P. T. Clawson and Miss Elizabeth Allis. Miss Jessie Utter accompanied them.

Dr. Frank Wells, who was the first purchaser of a wheel in Plainfield, had been asked to tell some of his experiences with the bicycle. He presented Robert Burdette's experiences while learning to ride as much funnier than any he had passed through. Mr. Titsworth read them.

"The Story of a Tandem," written for the occasion by Mrs Jas. Everett Kimball, was read by Mr. Titsworth. It was a well-written little sketch of the trials and tribulations of a tandem. Miss Elizabeth Allis read a story entitled "The Major's Conversion." It was a tale of wheels and wheelmen.

After another duet by the Misses Miller and Naegle, Mr. Titsworth announced that sections of bicycles would be distributed among the audience. The recipients were requested to match them with others and find the mate to theirs and escort the holder thereof to supper. Pictures of wheels and wheelmen were cut into two sections and distributed among the audience. Then refreshments were served and a social time followed.

This decidedly novel sociable was planned by the committee in charge which consisted of Miss Ernestine Smith, chairman; Mrs. William C. Hubbard, Miss Jessie Utter, Miss Maud Mosher, Frank Manson and LaRue Bliss.

MISSION WORK RESCELEBRATE

Second Anniversary of a Warren Chapel Society.

The King's Circle, Foreign Mission Society of Warren chapel, celebrated its second anniversary at the chapel Thursday evening.

This circle is composed of members of Miss Rachel Maier's Sunday-school class. The programme last evening consisted of singing by the society, vocal solo by Miss Ketcham, recitations by Frankie Whitely and Mazie Maier, vocal solo by Ada Bush, and recitation by Jennie Morning.

During the evening an interesting talk was given by Mrs. W. H. Richards. Miss Mary Maier, vice-president of the Circle, read a very interesting letter from Miss Rachel Maier, who is now in Africa doing mission work.

The annual report of the Circle for the year showed that about $19 had been received and expended for mission purposes. Besides a great quantity of clothing and useful articles had been collected and sent to foreign fields.

Funeral of Mrs. Beekman.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Eliza Anne Beekman were held April 27th at 11 o'clock from the house on West Eighth street. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, officiated and spoke comforting works concerning the exemplary Christian life of the departed. During the service Miss Minnie G. Morse sang two pretty solos. The floral tributes were beautiful and consisted of a large cross and a pillow, with several smaller pieces. Interment took place in Green Wood cemetery, today.

Fire Department Improvements.

It is the intention of the fire and building committee of the Council to make several improvements in the fire department this year. Some of the apparatus is to be painted and put in good shape, and several first-class fire lanterns will be purchased, no doubt, if they are greatly needed.

HOT FIGHT AGAINST THE COUNTY TROLLEY

An Uprising of Indignant Property Owners.

PROTESTORS ORGANIZING.

WILL RESIST THE EFFORTS TO BE MADE UNDER THE SQUIRE LAW.

Anti-Trolley Crusade to Go Under the Title of the "Union County League"—A Citizens' Meeting Held in Cranford Saturday Night and the Preliminary Details Arranged to Make the Fight—Eminent Lawyers to be Employed—An Address to be Issued to Property owners Showing Invasion of Rights.

Plans have been practically completed for the formation of a "Union County League" in New Jersey for the purpose of resisting the attempt to carry through the Boulevard trolley scheme which was authorized by a recent act of the New Jersey Legislature. A number of the property owners along the threatened North avenue, in Union county, have signified their intention to join this league, and at a citizens' meeting held at the residence of William Drysdale in Cranford Saturday evening the preliminary details were arranged.

A committee on permanent organization reported a constitution and by-laws for the "Union County League," and the organization is to be incorporated without delay. Although it will be of a semi-social character, its chief purpose is to watch and protect the interests of the property owners of Union county. Membership qualifications are to be limited only by the demonstrated sympathy of the applicants with the purpose in view. It is the intention of the leaders of this league to employ one of the most eminent lawyers in the country for the permanent protection of their property. An address to all property owners in Union county, explaining the danger they are in, is being prepared, and when printed will have a wide circulation.

A committee of Cranford property owners, which has been hard at work for the past few days circulating blank forms of protest against the Boulevard trolley scheme, reported results satisfactory to the projectors of the Union County League. These protests have been largely signed by a majority of the residents of Cranford and by the owners of a majorty of lineal feet on North avenue in Cranford. The work of the committee will be continued until practically the entire population of the town of Cranford has signed.

In the discussion of this subject, which has stirred Union county from one end to the other, much has been said about the damages to be awarded for the land taken for the purpose of widening North avenue and the accompanying trolley. "What assessment to be made on the land which the highway wideners do not take. Wright Babcock, of Fanwood, has been looking into the mathematics of the proposed "improvement" and he says: "At a recent public meeting called to consider this subject I heard an estimate that the average value of properties abutting on the proposed boulevard was $10 per foot front. At this estimate, which no one will regard as partial to owners, the required strip of land, twelve miles long by forty feet wide, would cost $633,600.

"The cost of moving or razing more than 100 houses, most of which are dwellings that would require new cellars and new water, light and sewer connections, would surely reach $100,000. And, finally, the stone and cement, labor, machines and tools, salaries of commissioners, and all other incidental expenses would certainly be no less for the new road than they were for the present one, which is said to have cost $10,000 per mile, adding $120,000 more, and making the total $853,600. This sum might be reduced, however, by whatever sum a trolley company would pay for the use of the road. The highest price so far bid for the privilege is $100,000, if still in force, (not per annum, but for the whole term of the lease) Assuming that this sum can be increased to $200,000, the work would add more than $600,000 to the county debt, (already $481,000) and it would increase the county taxes over $30,000 per year for thirty years, or until the bonds were paid, and this, when the country is entering upon the expenses of a war and the price of all the necessities of life are advancing."

Arrangements are being made to hold a general public meeting of property owners in the Cranford Opera House, under the direction of the Union County League.

Doing the Work Good.

The employes of the telephone company are receiving much praise for the very excellent manner in which the work of putting conduits underground is being done. The streets have been put in extra good condition where the conduits have been put in.

A WAR FOR HUMANITY.

REV. CORNELIUS SCHENCK'S PATRIOTIC SERMON SUNDAY.

He Prays for the Success of the United States Because it is a Contest Waged in the Interests of Humanity.

There was no uncertain sound in the patriotic discourse delivered by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at the church service Sunday morning. Previous to the sermon, Mr. Schenck personally gave expression to his feelings of appreciation for the decoration of the pulpit with an American flag, which, he said, was done by kind hands, and without his knowledge.

The text of the sermon was taken from Exodus, fifteenth chapter and third verse: "The Lord is a Man of War; the Lord is His Name." In part the reverend gentleman spoke as follows:

"I have shrunk from talking in the pulpit about the present National crisis, not because I am not patriotic, but because for several weeks you have been surfeited with the news continually by day and night, and "extras" at the noon hour. I have thought that when you come up to the house of the Lord you deserve the Bread of Life. The first point I wish to speak to you about this morning is, 'Is war in any case justifiable?' Second, 'Is war with Spain justifiable?'

"War is a great evil. It costs life and treasure, which is undesirable. War, the evil that it is, and as undesirable as it is, is justifiable when humanity is to be relieved. David, of old, asked for divine guidance in military affairs, and God has given the sword to defend the right against the evil-doers.

"The second point, is there justification for the present war, is a concrete question, and I am not surprised that you ask the question. We have professed to be a peace-loving nation, and for thirty-three years the sky has been clear of clouds. The God of Mars has had no opposition and peace has been our watchword. Difficulties have been settled by arbitration since the north and south shook hands over Dixie's line.

"Now this is all changed. The dove of peace has folded her wings and the old rifle has been taken down, cleaned and placed in a handy place. The resolutions adopted by Congress and the President's call have been answered. War is here between the United States and Spain. I pray for the success of our arms.

"If the motive of the war was for territorial engrandizement, then it would be an unholy war before God and man. The resolutions adopted by Congress and the President disclose such a motive. When the United States wants property she goes into the markets of the world and pays hard cash for it, as in the case of the purchase of Louisana where $15,000,000 was paid, and Alaska, where $7,250,000 was paid.

"Our critics accuse the sea accuse us of desiring conquest, but people who live in glass houses should not throw stones. This country is too old for the United States of America to go to war for revenge. The sentiment was to strike quick and hard when our battleship Maine was blown up and 266 sailors were killed, but our nation was greater than the occasion. The greatness of the unknown was the admiration of the world. The Lord has said, 'Revenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath. Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord.'

"Is there another nation that would be likewise? Not another one would have held back one hour. While we will remember the Maine, that is not our slogan, our watchword. It is a war for humanity and civilization, and to uplift our weaker brother. Clear the ship for action and let all say amen.

"We couldn't stand by if we would and see suffering humanity crying for bread. Let this war be waged on the ground that it is solely for humanity. There are two things to do. First, stand by the President and the Government. This is not a time for disputings or hair splitting, but a time for loyal support. We all condemn bushwacking, and the man who purposely sends up the price of the necessaries of life at this time deserves to be hung from the yardarm of the nearest ship or lamp post. If a commodity rightfully goes up bear it manfully, you who are living on a small margin.

"In the second place God is the God of His people, and we must trust Him, and the decree of the Almighty God will be righteously fulfilled."

Preceding the sermon the organist, A. L. Titsworth, played "The Star Spangled Banner" and "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and at the close of the service choir and congregation joined heartily in singing the latter popular National hymn.

An Address to Mission.

Mrs. J. S. Bussing of New York, has been secured by the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church to make an address at the meeting of the Band Friday afternoon next at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all to hear Mrs Bussing.

TO WHITEWASH THE ROCK

HISTORICAL SPOT TO HAVE A COATING OF WHITE.

Constable Pangborn and Edward Conshee Will Do the Work—The Plan of Chandler W. Riker That Failed.

Washington Rock is to be defended. Not against the assaults of a Spanish army but against the ravages of time. It is really but right that that historical spot should be looked after especially at such a time as this.

Constable William N. Pangborn and Edward Conshee are now at the head of the movement which they have fathered for several years. It is to see that the Rock receives a coat of whitewash and that the brush about it is cut away.

For years it has been the custom of some patriotic citizens to whitewash the Rock so that it can be seen for miles around. This year Mr. Pangborn and Mr. Conshee have started a subscription to raise sufficient funds to whitewash the Rock and clear away the brush in front of it.

In connection with the movement to keep alive the historic interest in Washington Rock, there were some interesting happenings of a few years ago. Chandler W. Riker, of Newark, president of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, attempted to purchase the model of Washington's headquarters at Morristown that was shown at the World's Fair. It was his intention to bring the building here and place it near Washington Rock. He then planned to run the trolley from this city up the Rock and make a summer resort of that part of the mountain.

The State refused to part with the house, and so Mr. Riker's plan failed.

Y. M. C. A. SOLDIER BRANCH.

Religious Work to Be Carried on Among the Militiamen.

An effort has just been inaugurated by the Young Men's Christian Associations of this State to make the soldiers at the Sea Girt State Camp more comfortable. They have arranged to erect on the camp grounds a tent, 30x50 feet, in which will be placed the best and latest magazines, daily and weekly newspapers and other suitable reading matter, together with all sorts of games. Writing material will also be furnished so that the men will have a quiet place to read or play games or correspond with home. Two experienced Y. M. C. A. secretaries are to be constantly at the association tent, they themselves living in a tent similar to the one occupied by the soldiers, and giving all their time, night and day, to helping the soldiers.

It is hoped that as long as the camp lasts the association's tent will be a social and religious center. Bible classes will be organized and Sunday services will be conducted for the men and also aim will be to surround the soldiers with the comforts of home and to throw around them some of the Christian influences under which they have been living.

Each State where camps are to be established will have a similar Y. M. C. A. tent. There will be no expense, of course, to the soldiers. It would seem that our patriotic citizens would support this special work liberally and enable those in charge to make the soldiers as comfortable as possible while they are getting ready to fight for us.

The committee appointed by the International Y. M. C. A. committee to have charge of this work throughout the United States is composed of Alfred E. Marling, Col. John J. McCook, Morris K. Jessup, William E. Dodge, William D. Murray and Chas. W. McAlpin, with an office at 6 West Twenty-ninth street, New York city.

Accepted a New School House.

The Board of Education of North Plainfield Township met last Friday evening and formally accepted the new school house recently erected, and which is now being used for school purposes. The Board decided to engage Mrs. Higgins and Miss Higgins as teachers for the balance of this year and for next year also. The old school house will be put up for sale May 20th, and it is thought that the Township Committee will purchase it for a town hall. After the sale and removal of the old building the grounds will be graded and put in good condition.

Death of John Mellick.

John Mellick, aged 70 years, died Sunday morning on the farm near Mt. Pleasant, where he and his brother lived for years. The brothers were very wealthy, and it is supposed that the wealth of the deceased will be left to the surving brother. The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house.

New Clubhouse Started.

The framework for the new clubhouse of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club has been put up. It can now be seen from Park avenue. The clubhouse is to stand on the side of the hill from where an excellent view of all the surrounding country can be obtained. The site is well chosen.

—A Communion service was held at Grace M. E. church Sunday.

FINE CHURCH WEDDING.

MOORE-STEWART NUPTIALS CELEBRATED SATURDAY NIGHT.

The Ceremony Performed by Rev. W. H. Richards Before a Host of Admiring Friends—Reception Held After.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place in the Crescent Avenue church Saturday evening, when Miss Anna Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Stewart, of this city, became the bride of Eugene Albert Moore.

When 7 o'clock, the hour set for the wedding, arrived, the church was thronged by a host of friends and relatives of the bride and groom. The decorations about the pulpit were elaborate, and were made up principally of rare varieties of palms and a profusion of cut flowers, arranged with pleasing effect.

After a few minutes of expectancy the waiting friends and relatives heard the strains of the wedding march peal forth from the great organ, and a minute later the bridal party advanced up the aisle. The bride, leaning upon the arm of her father, was attired in white satin, trimmed with chiffon and old point lace. She wore a diamond sunburst, a present from the groom, and carried a bunch of white roses.

The maid-of-honor was Miss Kittie Stewart, a sister of the bride; and the bridesmaids were Miss May Evans, Miss Ida Stewart, Miss Mabel Pierson and Miss Clara Moore. The maid-of-honor was attired in white satin trimmed with point lace. The bridesmaids were white organdie over pink silk and carried pink roses. The ushers were Percy Stewart, Walter William Tyler and Walter Moore, of this city; Frederick Fish, of Chicago, and Mr. Kilmer, of Philadelphia.

The party was met at the altar by the groom and the best man, Horace Moore. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., pastor of the church, the Presbyterian marriage service being used.

After the ceremony the wedding party were driven to the home of the bride's parents, 237 West Seventh street, where a wedding reception and dance were held from 7:30 until 10 o'clock.

The house was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, palms and smilax which gave a bower-like effect to the dining room, hall and parlor.

The guests were allowed during the evening to inspect the wedding presents, which were very numerous and included a profusion of rich cut-glass, silverware, china and jewelry.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Moore left on their wedding tour which will be through the south. Upon their return they will reside in their own house on College place.

SLEPT BESIDE DEAD CHILD.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gelett's Horrible Discovery Early Yesterday Morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gelett, of Harmony street, were greatly frightened Sunday morning about 5 o'clock when they awoke and found their infant daughter, Eloise, two months old, dead in bed.

Mrs. Gelett at once went to the home of Chief Marshal Wilson and informed him of the death. The Chief went to the home of Mrs. Gelett and saw the child. He then went to Somerville and informed County Physician Wagoner, who came to North Plainfield and gave a burial permit. In the opinion of the county physician the child died of convulsions.

The parents say that the child has been perfectly well since it was born. The funeral services will be held today or tomorrow.

A CURIOUS ACCIDENT.

Zachriah Wilson Fractured Bones While Stooping Over.

Zachriah Wilson, of Harmony street, is now confined to the house as the result of a fracture of two bones in his leg. The accident happened Saturday afternoon while Mr. Wilson was stooping down to pick up some thing at his barn on Chatham street. When he attempted to rise from his stooping position he was unable to do so. Word was sent to his home and his son, George Wilson, went to the barn and found his father lying on the ground. He secured a horse and buggy and took his father home. Dr. Long was sent for and set the bones. The doctor says that Mr. Wilson will be confined for several weeks.

Won Medals at Holy Cross.

The choir boys of the Church of the Holy Cross who won the silver medals for the month of April were Everett Sherwin, George Hill, Kenneth Stuart and Luther Shepherd. The medals are awarded for regular attendance, punctuality, good behavior and improvement in singing. A further prize of a silver cross will be awarded to the boy who makes the most improvement in singing during each month.

A New Tenor Heard.

Mr. Lenox, tenor, who has been secured to take the place of Mr. Strickelett, resigned, at the Crescent Avenue church, sang very acceptably in the choir Sunday. At the morning service there was communion. Four persons were received into membership on confession and six by letter.

PROF. WARDE DECAMPS UNDER AWFUL CHARGE

Accused of Heinous Offenses By Young Students.

PARENTS VERY INDIGNANT.

THE SUAVE PROFESSOR DEPARTED QUICK TO ESCAPE ARREST.

Fearful Tales of His Acts Told to Members of the Faculty by Members of the School, Who are Sons of Prominent Citizens—Affidavits Made and Warde Confronted With the Truth —Indignantly Denied the Charges, but Hustled Out of Town Immediately—Parents Will Have Him Arrested.

A. D. Warde, Ph. D, formerly superintendent of the public schools in North Plainfield, and for the past year at the head of the New Jersey Military School on Prospect place, left this city Saturday afternoon resting under charges that has created a great sensation in aristocratic circles, as the military academy was attended only by the sons of wealthy people.

Last Wednesday several members of the faculty of the military academy were approached by a number of the students of the school—sons of prominent citizens—who told a fearful tale of Prof. Warde's practices among the young lads entrusted to his care for education of mind and morals.

The members of the faculty were dumbfounded at the revelations the boys made, but after some consideration one of the teachers was delegated to take the boys involved in the charges before a notary public and make affidavits with which prosecution could be commenced.

Three of the boys who had made confessions were taken to Lawyer George Bird, of Front street, and before him related the circumstances and details of the practices which it is alleged Dr. Warde was guilty of.

The affidavits were taken by two of the faculty and Dr. Warde called Saturday morning. He was first told of the charges and denied them in toto. The affidavits were then shown to him, and he still indignantly maintained that they were false.

He was told that the matter would not be allowed to rest and was advised that the best thing he could do was to leave town and relinquish all authority in the school. After an hour's interview Dr. Warde told the members of the faculty to come to the school in the afternoon at 2 o'clock and he would have another talk with them.

The affidavits were mailed with a letter of particulars to Prosecutor Dungan, of Somerset county, at Somerville. Mr. Dungan is in the south for his health and the documents were received by his assistant, who was expected to come to this city today to cause the arrest of Dr. Warde.

In the meantime a number of the students at the academy were cautioned to watch Dr. Warde's movements and report immediately to one of the faculty if they should see Warde making arrangements to depart. Saturday morning the watchers noticed Dr. Warde packing up some of his effects, as if about to make a hurried departure.

The boys hurried to notify the members of the faculty, and the military academy was visited in the attempt to catch him before he had left. He was gone when the scholars and the faculty reached there. He had been seen going down Washington avenue and a search was made for him along the streets, but to no avail.

It seems that Dr. Warde took a street car to the Evonia station of the Central Railroad and there boarded a train for New York. Where he went no one knows. Before leaving he made arrangements with Percy Robert Colwell to continue the school, stating that he would not return to town.

The parents of the boys on whom Dr. Warde practiced his detestable and heinous offenses are very indignant, and they are determined to land him in State prison for the offenses if it is possible to arrest him. Every effort will be made to locate his whereabouts.

Monday morning Lawyer Charles J. McNabb appeared in Justice Smalley's court in the borough and secured an attachment in favor of Mrs. Harry Shearer, of 5 Grove street, against Dr. Warde for a board bill of $54 50.

State Letter-Carriers to Meet Here.

The annual convention of the letter-carriers of New Jersey will be held in this city Decoration Day. It is expected that there will be about 150 delegates present from all parts of the State. It has been suggested and thought of that the carriers may be willing to take part in a patriotic demonstration in this city, if one is held, in connection with the raising of the flag recently presented to the city.

Off to the Klondike.

Dr. Gaston, of West Fifth street, and Gerald Underhill, of Washingtonville, left a few days ago for the Klondike. They will be absent about a year. Dr. Gaston's family will summer at Washingtonville.

Volunteers to Man the Badger.

The Battalion of the East, New Jersey Naval Militia, assembled on board the Portsmouth at Hoboken last night in response to a special call. Commander Irving read a communication from the Navy Department calling for a detail to man the Badger. The call explained that the men must obtain leave of absence from the militia for one year and enlist in the regular navy for for that term. Commander Irving said he was willing to go, and asked who else. Of the 285 men, 243 responded. Some of the others said they would decide today. Commander Irving will name 185 men and twelve officers today.

OLD COURT CRIER DEAD.

JAMES A. RITCHIE PASSES AWAY AT HIS HOME IN SCOTCH PLAINS.

A Familiar Figure in Union County Courts for Many Years—Was an Ardent Democrat, but Liked by Everybody.

Scotch Plains, May 3—A familiar figure for many years in the courts of Union county has passed away. Early this morning, at 1:30 o'clock, James A. Ritchie, one of the landmarks of the Democratic party in Union county, died at his home in this place.

James Ritchie had lived a good life for four score years. He was early identified with the Democratic party of the county and was considered one of the best known of his party. He was a hard working, energetic party man, and he numbered among his friends not only all the prominent Democrats of the county and State, but many of his political opponents as well. Forty years ago he and his wife moved to Scotch Plains where they have resided ever since.

Ten years ago, Mr. Ritchie was appointed court crier at Elizabeth. There he has remained ever since until his feeble health compelled him to give it up. He was appointed during a Democratic administration but the Republicans never made an effort to oust him and he remained steadily at his his post undisturbed by the tumult in political waters.

It was only recently that Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. His widow survives him, also one daughter, Mrs. Joseph Pithian, of Bridgeton, N. J.

Mr. Ritchie was nominated for Assemblyman by the Democrats several years ago, and was postmaster at Scotch Plains under President Cleveland's first term.

WARDE'S SCHOOL CLOSED

ITS DISGRACED PROPRIETOR LEFT TOO MANY DEBTS.

Percy Robert Colwell Finds That There Are $300 in Claims to Be Settled—He Considered Them Too Heavy to Assume

The New Jersey Military Academy is no more. The blow it received in the sudden departure of its superintendent, Dr. A. D. Warde, with a heavy cloud hanging over his head, stirred it to its foundations. Percy Robert Colwell, a member of the faculty, determined to go on with it. He had been assured there was no indebtedness. Monday came the blow that resulted in the complete dissolution of the institution. Instead of the place being clear of debt, Colwell found that claims amounting to $500 were owing to various dealers about the city.

Colwell had hoped to finish the school year and had secured all but a few of the old pupils to continue the school with. When the first of the claims came in and, an investigation showed something of the full amount of the indebtedness. Colwell decided that he would not stand between the creditors and their just dues and so gave up all claims to the school.

Tuesday was the last day in the history of the New Jersey Military Academy. The boys said good bye to their instructors, the boarding pupils packed up their effects and started for home while the sumptious furnishings of the building were turned over to the creditors, Colwell acting as temporary executor, if such he might be called. The boys carried home their school books and departed from the academy for ever.

Nothing more has been heard from the superintendent of the defunct school since his departure from the Clinton Avenue station. He has appar ently left this part of the country far behind him.

A JOLLY SERENADE.

Fine Time Enjoyed by the Germans Last Evening.

The members of the Gesang and Turn Verein had a jolly good time in at Tuesday when they called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Kellar, and serenaded them. Mr. and Mrs. Kellar were recently married. The guests assembled in front of the house about 9:30 and sang several of their favorite selections. While this was going on, the bride and groom appeared at the door and invited their friends inside. An evening of sociability and music was the pleasure of all, and a bountiful supper was served by the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Kellar received the heartiest congratulations of all present, and when the guests departed they left their best wishes for a happy and successful journey through life. The affair was arranged by Henry Haurand, brother of Mrs. Kellar, and was in every particular a great success.

George L. Colgate and family are moving from Putnam avenue to Kensington avenue.

The Misses Boone, of West Seventh street, are entertaining company from out of town.

Lawyer W. B. Codington and family have returned from a visit with relatives at North Branch.

SIR KNIGHTS WERE HOSTS TO FAIR ONES.

Ladies Royally Entertained By Trinity Commandery.

PRESENTATIONS ARE MADE.

EMINENT COMMANDER KIRKNER GIVEN PAST COMMANDER'S JEWEL.

First of the Events was the Presentation of Lodge Paraphernalia by the Grand Prelate of New York State, Followed by the Gift of a Beautiful American Flag to the Commandery by Mrs. Harry Marshall—Musical and Patriotic Programme Was Rendered and an Elaborate Banquet Closed the Evening.

The Sir Knights of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., did themselves proud last Monday when they entertained in a royal manner their lady friends. Occasionally this Commandery receive the fair sex, and when they do nothing is lacking to make the event one of genuine pleasure. As expressed by several members previous to the affair, "There were several things up the sleeve to be divulged later."

Even that worthy Past Master, Jacob C. Kirkner, who assisted in preparing the notices to be sent out, was wholly unaware of what was in store for him and his brother knights.

The first event of the evening was the presentation of the beauseant, guidons and prelate's robe and cap by Rev. George C. Maddock, Grand Prelate of the Grand Commandery of the State of New Jersey, with an eloquent speech. They were received on behalf of the Commandery by the Eminent Commander, J. C. Kirkner.

Following this presentation a large and beautiful American silk flag was presented to the Commandery by Mrs. Harry W. Marshall, on behalf of the lady friends of the Sir Knights. After it was received by the Eminent Commander all present joined in the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," which was followed with three rousing cheers.

The surprise of the evening was the presentation to Past Commander Jacob C. Kirkner, of a costly and elegant Past Commander's jewel. The recipient was completely surprised when Right Eminent Sir John E. Rowe, Grand Commander of the State of New Jersey, presented Mr. Kirkner with the valuable token of esteem on behalf of his brother Knights. Mr. Kirkner was equal to the occasion and accepted the gift with a few words of profound appreciation.

The programme of the evening was interspersed with recitations by Miss Mary Lacky, instrumental selections by William E. MacClymont, vocal selections by Elmer E. Runyon, and selections by the Plainfield Mandolin, Banjo and Guitar Club, all of which were duly appreciated by those present.

Before the festivities closed the members of the Commandery presented a beautiful basket of flowers to Mrs. J. C. Kirkner and a bouquet of flowers to Miss Kirkner.

After the close of the programme a banquet was served, during which Sir Knight, Frank W. Miles entertained the audience with selections on his phonograph.

SEEN CENTURY OF LIFE

MRS. SARAH E. STEAD CELEBRATED HER HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY.

Event Made an Auspicious One This Afternoon by Friends and Relatives of the Old Lady, Who is Hale and Hearty.

The rare occasion of celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of a birthday was Tuesday the pleasure of Mrs. Sarah E Stead, daughter of the late Jonathan Berkman, a descendant of an old Holland family, who came to this country in the days of the Revolution. Mrs. Stead is also the widow of the late Thomas Stead, of Holland descent.

The occasion was marked by a quiet celebration in which the two children, Mrs Anna Marie Allen, of Somerset street, and Thomas J. Stead, of New York, were present to join in the festive event. There were also present Mrs. Harrison Coddington, daughter of Mrs. Allen, and her children, Miss Jessie Coddington, Harry Coddington and Allen Coddington, of the borough; Mrs. Anna M. Jurisch, of Madison; David Moore, of Green Village, this State, and Mrs. Thomas J. Stead, of New York.

The celebration was held at he home of Mrs. Stead's daughter, Mrs. Allen, of Somerset street, where she has been making her home for some time.

Mrs. Stead was born in Hunterdon county in 1798 and lived there for years. Later she was married to Thomas Stead. They lived at Westonville for over fifty years. Mr Stead died in 1873. For over seventy five years Mrs. Stead has been a member of the Baptist church, and for the most part of that time of the First Baptist church, of this city. She is a woman of rare Christian quality and at her age enjoys fairly good health. Tuesday she was about the house and thoroughly enjoyed singing a favorite hymn. At the celebration she sang another hymn.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. In a parlor on a table there was arranged a large cake mounted, and one hundred candles brilliantly lighted, stood as monuments to the years of usefulness lived by Mrs. Stead. The colors red, white and blue were prominently displayed. Overhead there hung a picture of Mrs. Stead, Mrs. Harrison Coddington, Mrs. Allen and Allen Coddington, representing four generations. There was also displayed an American flag and the figures 1798 1898.

In the dining room the table was artistically decorated with flowers and fruit and lots of good things to eat. The delightful repast was served while the hostess was receiving the congratulations of her relatives and friends. Mrs. Stead fully enjoyed her celebration and was perfectly happy in knowing that she has lived to complete the one hundredth year of her life. Aside from a slight affection of the hearing and eyesight she is apparently in the best of health.

During the afternoon she occupied an old-fashioned chair in the parlor and held a bunch of choice roses. She frequently nodded her assent to the pleasure and happiness experienced by all present.

Accepted a New School House.

The Board of Education of North Plainfield Township met last Friday evening and formally accepted the new school house recently erected, and which is now being used for school purposes. The Board decided to engage Mrs. Higgins and Miss Higgins as teachers for the balance of this year and for next year also. The old school house will be put up for sale May 30th, and it is thought that the Township Committee will purchase it for a town hall. After the sale and removal of the old building the grounds will be graded and put in good condition.

Committees Busy to be There.

At the spring meeting of the Yale Alumni Association, of Long Island, scheduled for Friday evening at the Brooklyn Club, William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, is announced as one of the members who will contribute to the entertainment.

Miss Todd, of Landedown, Hunterdon county, is visiting her friend, Miss Force, of Duer street.

George Bedford, an employe at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, is in Washington putting up presses for Mr. Scott.

Two Ounces of Blood Daily

Are added to your veins by taking one of Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids with each meal three times daily. This is the only natural iron medicine known. It is the natural iron extracted from fresh bullocks' blood.

We do no miracles; all we do is to cure people and give them two ounces of new blood daily when they take Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids. By enriching the blood they restore its natural iron or Hæmoglobin to it; it cures all the chronic blood diseases, among which may be mentioned anæmia, or paleness; chlorosis, or green sickness; palpitation, rickets, scrofula, consumption or tuberculosis, indigestion, amennorhœa, pains in the head or back, and all monthly irregularities. Physicians will tell you that this is the only medicine in the world that can do this, and if they are up-to-date they prescribe them in all such cases.

LATE WAR NEWS.

POWERS WANT SPAIN TO GIVE UP; SAMPSON TO BOMBARD HAVANA.

Proposition For Spain to Surrender Cuba and Pay United States Big Indemnity.

First United States Troops Landed in Cuba With Help for Insurgents—Sampson to Help the Invading Land Force—Spanish Populace Furious Over Return of Fleet to Cadiz—Dewey the Ruler in the Phillippines.

THE LATEST.

POWERS WANT PEACE.

A Joint Appeal May be Made to Compell Spain to Give Up Cuba and Pay Indemnity.

Washington, May 11, 11 a. m.—The great triumph at the American fleet at Manila has put a new face on the present conflict in the eyes of the Powers of Europe. They now appreciate that they cannot dictate to the United States.

Spain is not in such a position, however, and the Powers can bring much force to bear upon her in event of their united support of any definite course of action. Then, too, Great Britian will not take part in any joint movement against the United States.

There is now talk of a joint appeal from the Powers to Spain to compel her to withdraw from the conflict, recognise the independence of Cuba and make suitable reparation to the United States.

The representatives of the Powers in this city held a conference this morning that was of much importance. They considered a proposition to compel Spain to sue for peace.

The basis of this proposed peace would be the relinquishing of Cuba by Spain, and the payment by Spain of an enormous war indemnity to the United States. The Phillippine Islands would then be returned to Spain.

Commodore Dewey would be permitted to hold the Phillippine Islands until the indemnity had been fully settled. Cuba would be allowed to form such manner of government as her people wished.

President McKinley will be approached today with a view to ascertain the views of the administration regarding such a course.

A leading diplomat here said that he did not believe that the administration would favor any plan that provided for the returning of the Phillippine Islands to Spain. Neither did he think that an agreement could be reached which did not give the United States a coaling station in the East and one in the West Indies.

Japan Wants Phillippines.

Yokohama, Japan, May 11, 1 p. m—The Jigi Shimpo, the leading newspaper in Japan, advocates the purchase of a portion of the Phillippine Islands for Japan.

TO BOMBARD HAVANA.

Report That Sampson Has Been Ordered to Co-operate With Army of Invasion.

Washington, May 11, 11:20 a. m.—It is reported at the Navy Department that Secretary Long sent orders to Rear Admiral Sampson this morning ordering him to return to Key West with his fleet to co-operate with the army of invasion in the bombardment of Havana.

After that is accomplished, he may then proceed to capture Porto Rico, in which he will be assisted by a portion of the land forces.

It is reported at the Navy Department that Commodore Schley's fleet at Old Point Comfort has been ordered to proceed south to assist in the bombardment of Havana by the navy while the army attacks it in the rear.

CUBA INVADED.

First United States Troops Landed With Supplies for the Insurgents.

Key West, May 11, 11 a. m—The first installment of regular troops of the United States Army has been landed on the shores of Cuba. With them is a large quantity of supplies of provisions, firearms and ammunition for the insurgent army.

The side-wheel steamer, Gussie, one of the fleet of transports, sailed from here yesterday with Companies E. and G. of the First Infantry on board. There was also on board a large amount of supplies for the insurgents.

Word was received this morning that the Gussie had landed the expedition, which is under the command of Captain Dorst, of the Fourth Cavalry, has been successfully landed on the northern coast of Cuba, fifty miles west af Havana.

A portion of the cargo of seven thousand Springfield rifles, 250,000 rounds of ammunition and general equipment for the insurgents was sent ashore under cover of the darkness. The two companies of the First Infantry was landed with the supplies to protect them until they shall have been turned over to the Cubans.

The Gussie will make two other landings where the remainder of the supplies will be left.

FURIOUS POPULACE.

Disgusted at the Return of the Spanish Fleet to Cadiz.

Madrid, May 11, 11:30 a. m—The rioting was renewed here this morning. The populace was furious at the return of the Spanish fleet from the Cape Verde Islands.

The people expected that the fleet would give battle to the American fleet under Rear Admiral Sampson and would defeat the Americans, thus retrieving their honor after the defeat at Manila.

COAST PATROL FLEET.

Several Armed Yachts Were Delivered to the Government This Morning.

Washington, May 11, 12:10 p. m—The armed yachts, Restless, Viking, Felicia and Aileen were delivered to the government this morning. They will form the nucleus of the coast patrol fleet that is being organized.

Commander William M. Hemphshill has been appointed to command the dynamite cruiser, Buffalo, formerly the Nictheroy now on its way here from Brazil, where it was purchased.

Off For SanFrancisco.

Portland, Oregon, May 11, 12:20 p. m—Four companies of volunteers leave here tonight for SanFrancisco, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel aryan. Several officers of high rank have been ordered to hurry to SanFrancisco to embark for the Phillippines.

THE FLEET AT CADIZ.

London Globe Correspondent Says That They Will Sail Today.

London, May 11, 12:15 p. m.—The London Globe this afternoon publishes a despatch from Cadiz, saying that the Spanish battle ships Pelayo and Vitoria, armored cruisers Emperado Carlos V., Almirante Quendo, Viscaya, Infanta Maria Teresa, and Cristobal Colon, the protected cruiser Alfonso XIIII., the torpedo boat destroyers Pluton, Proserpina, Osado, Audaz, Furor and Terror, several small torpedo boats and transports are now at that port.

They are all ready to sail except the Pelayo, the repairs on which have not been quite completed. The Globe correspondent believes that the squadron will sail today.

He also adds that troops will leave for the Canary Islands next Sunday. Three battalions of marines are now quartered at San Bernando ready for embarkation.

Lieutenant Colwell, the naval attache at the American Embassy, said this afternoon that he disbelieves the report that the Spanish fleet from Cape Verde Islands is now at Cadiz.

To Build a Battleship.

San Bernardino, Cal., May 11, 12 m.—The railroad men of California have started a fund to build a battleship for the United States government.

A Dastardly Attempt.

Atlanta, Ga., May 11, 11:40 a. m—A second attempt was made this morning to poison the men in the infantry camp near this city. Arsenic was placed in the water.

More Rough Riders.

San Antonio, Texas, May 11, 1:20 p. m—Thirty-nine eastern clubmen and three hundred and forty cow-boys joined Roosevelt's Rough Riders here today.

Montana Was First.

Washington, May 11, 1:10 p. m—The Adjutant General announced that there are fifty thousand troops now ready for service. The Montanans were the first prepared.

Allen Sworn In.

Washington, May 11, 1:10 p. m.—Charles H. Allen, of Massachusetts, the successor to Roosevelt as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was sworn in this morning.

Pleasing Situation at Havana.

Havana, Cuba, May 11, 12:50 p. m—The city is on the verge of a panic owing to the announcement from Madrid that no supplies will be sent.

HIGH MASONIC HONOR FOR W. H. SEBRING.

Elected Grand Commander for State of New Jersey.

HEAD OF A NOBLE ORDER.

HIS CHOICE WAS THE RESULT OF SUCCESSIVE PROMOTION.

Mr. Sebring's Worth and Ability in Masonic Circles is Recognized Throughout New Jersey — Empowered to Make Arrangements for the Triennial National Conclave to be Held in Pittsburg Next October—Dr. D. C. Adams Elected Grand Junior Warden—Other Officers Chosen by the State Conclave.

Trenton, May 11—William H. Sebring, of Plainfield, was yesterday honored with the highest office that a Knight Templar of the Masonic brotherhood can attain in New Jersey—elected to the Grand Commandership of the State.

Mr. Sebring's selection was the result of the established custom of successive promotion to high and honored offices for a number of years.

It is recognized by Knights through out the State that Mr. Sebring will make a fine Commander for the noble order of the Templars, and from this chair he will next year become a Past Grand Commander—a position which falls to the lot o. but few Masons.

Besides the choice of Mr. Sebring, the conclave yesterday elected the following other officers:

Deputy Grand Commander, Dr. Peter McGill, Lambertville; Grand Generalissmo, William P. Pugh, Jersey City; Grand Captain-General, Joseph Davidson, Washington; Grand Prelate, Rev. George C. Maddox, Trenton; Grand Senior Warden, David Demarest, Paterson; Grand Junior Warden, Dr. D. C. Adams, Plainfield; Grand Treasurer, F. T. Wiess, Bordentown; Grand Recorder, Charles Bechtel, Trenton; Grand Standard Bearer, R. A. Shirriff, Elizabeth; Grand Sword Bearer, J. D. Boggs, Asbury Park; Grand Warder, John Henry, Newark; Grand Sentinel, P. C. Osmun, Hamilton.

The Grand Commander was empowered to go ahead and make arrangements for the triennial conclave to be held in Pittsburg, Pa., during next October.

PARLIAMENTARY CLUB.

Chairmen of the Various Committees Were Appointed.

The meeting of the Parliamentary Club Tuesday morning was particularly well attended, and the programme committee reported on the special meeting of the club which is to be held on the afternoon of May 26th in the large Y. M. C. A. Hall. This special meeting will be open to the public to a certain extent, each member being privileged to invite five guests. The programme will consist of a parliamentary drill to illustrate the work of the club, and reports from special committees.

At the meeting yesterday morning Mrs. F. A. Dunham was in the chair. Chairmen of the committees were appointed as follows: Committee on foreign affair, Mrs. W. L. Paton; local affairs, Mrs. W. B. Manson; art and literature, Mrs. T. Frank Bedlong; bulletin, Mrs. F. A. Dunham. Mrs. J. M. McNaughton and Mrs. Oliver King were appointed auditors.

Miss Eastman, of Crescent avenue, was elected a member of the club.

Many Houses Being Painted.

Marsh, Ayres & Co., the Park avenue decorators, began work on the following houses Tuesday: For Mr. Herbst, of Terrill road, five houses on West Seventh street; Robert Bushmore's house, on West Seventh street; F. O. Herring's house, on East Ninth street; Mrs. N. B. Fisk's house on La Grande avenue; Mrs. Wooden, Orchard place; E. C. Duffy's house, Central avenue, and Councilman Peck's house, on Willow avenue.

Martin Wants More Room.

The F. L. C. Martin Company need more room to carry on their increasing business. In their present location on Park avenue they feel the disadvantages of not having their repair shop in the same building with their store. When the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company take possession of Mr. Martin's building next year, the company will look for larger accommodations elsewhere.

Smith Demands a Jury.

Henry G. Smith, of Westervelt avenue, will be tried Friday morning at 10 o'clock in the city court, on a charge preferred by his wife of calling her names last week. Smith has demanded a jury and the venire was issued this moning.

UNFURLING THE FLAG.

THE EVENT TO BE MADE AN OCCASION OF PATRIOTIC DISPLAY.

New Pole Has Arrived But it Will be Raised in a Quiet Manner—A Big Time When Stars and Stripes are Floated

It will only be a matter of a few days now before the immense flag pole of the city will be placed in position at the corner of Front street and Park avenue. The councilmanic committee in whose hands the matter was left by the Common Council, has decided that there will be no public celebration when the pole is placed in position. The grand demonstration will be made when the American flag, the gift of Edward White to the city, is raised to its forty position on the new pole.

The new pole has arrived, as has already been stated in these columns. It will be given three coats of white paint and will then be ready for setting. The pole will be set in its position by the employes of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, under the direction of Manager Charles W. Runyon.

There has been much enquiry as to the precise location of the pole. It is the intention of the Committee to place it on the sidewalk, close to the curb, in front of Schwed's clothing store. It will be placed as near the centre of Park avenue as possible and probably on the site now occupied by a lamp post.

Mayor Fisk is of the opinion that if the pole is not placed in position quickly, it will not go up until after the war comes to an end.

It will be the flag raising that is to be one of the events of the year in Plainfield. That will take place on May 30th, Decoration Day, and the Grand Army will take charge of the exercises.

After that the flag will continue to fly rain or shine until the close of the war. No decision has yet been reached as to what is then to be done.

ALL OVER A DEAD HEN.

COMPLICATED ASSAULT CASE BEING HEARD IN SOMERSET COURT.

Mrs. Anna Thompson Threw the Hen That Had Been Shot by John Earned Into the Face of the Fowl's Assassin.

Somerville, May 11—Circuit court was occupied yesterday and will be today with an assault case that is very complicated. It is the action of Mrs. Anna Thompson against John Earned, living on adjoining farms near Bound Brook.

Mrs. Thompson is the owner of a large flock of fowls, and it seems that some of the chickens were frequent visitors to the garden of the neighbor. The visits, however, were not relished, and one fateful day Earned took down his old shot gun and poured a dose of lead into a trespassing fowl. Then he threw the dead body over the fence on to Mrs. Thompson's property.

Some time after that, at an opportune moment, Mrs. Thompson threw the dead chicken into the face of Earned. That act was followed with a free-for-all fight in which a dozen members of the two families indulged in a battle royal, and from which Mrs. Thompson emerged with a broken rib or two and sundry bruises.

The case now being heard is the result. Some very exciting evidence is being offered and the court habitues are greatly interested in the outcome.

In the assault case against John Kline the jury found the prisoner guilty. Judge Bartine will pronounce sentence Friday of this week.

Miss Newcomb Coming to Plainfield.

The New York Tribune of Monday has an extract from a thrilling address by Miss Helen Newcomb on "Darkest India." Miss Newcomb recently spoke to a few ladies in the parlor of Mrs. W. A. Freeman, of First place. She is planning to visit Plainfield soon again, and many should avail themselves of the opportunity to hear a speaker of such interest.

Appointment to Hospital Practice.

In the list of appointments from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Medical School of Columbia University, is Norman H. Probasco, son of Dr. John B. Probasco, of East Front street, who is appointed to Bellevue Hospital. The examinations for appointment are competitive. His service is to begin July 1st, and is surgical.

Feared the Rabies.

Union Village, May 11.—The two valuable dogs owned by Charles VanPelt and David French, which were bitten by the mad dog that invaded the town Friday, were killed yesterday for fear that they would be affected with the rabies. VanPelt has not yet decided what to do with the pigs which were bitten by the mad dog.

CONGRATULATING TIME.

NEW FIRE COMPANY FOREMAN ENTERTAINED HIS MEN.

No. 2 Engine Company Assembled Around the Banquet Board and Had a Felicitous Occasion of It

Tuesday evening at 7:15 o'clock the members of No. 2 Engine Company took their engine out for a test. The apparatus was taken to the foot of Westervelt avenue and a successful "wash" was given. The boys returned to fire headquarters about 9 o'clock and were then invited by the new foreman, Frank Hand, to adjourn to Fred Caspar's hotel on Front street. When the company arrived there they found a tempting repast prepared for them and all did full justice.

Chief T. O. Doane made a few remarks in which he thanked the foreman and company for its generous hospitality, and he said that he knew the new foreman would do as well as his predecessors.

First Assistant James Martin also complimented the foreman and company, and said that he knew the company would stand by their new foreman. He praised the company for what it had done and bespoke unity for the future as it had been in the past. Second Assistant J. W. Murray, Jr., also thanked the boys for their kindness and paid a compliment to the company for its efficiency.

Foreman Frank Hand made a few remarks in which he thanked the boys for electing him to his new position. Other remarks were made by Adolph Karhman, William Chamberlain and R. B. Rogers. The latter said that for the first time since the company was organized he occupied the position of a private, having held an office of some kind every year up to the present one.

Remarks were made by Andrew Jennings, and the company was pleased with vocal solos by Robert Eick, William Townley and Willett Marsh.

MARRIED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Van Fleet Celebrate Their Silver Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter A. Van Fleet, of East Third street, celebrated their twenty fifth wedding anniversary last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Van Fleet were married in Elizabeth, but moved to Plainfield soon afterwards, and have since made their home in this city.

The house last night was prettily decorated with American flags and flowers, and presented quite a gay appearance. The guests numbered about 125, and were from Jersey City, New Brunswick, Pleasant Run and this city. Many valuable presents were given by the guests, principally silverware. A handsome silver tea set was given by the Daughters of Rebecca, of which Mrs. Van Fleet is a member. There were silver spoons, knives, cut glass, a pretty table and other articles.

Miss Katie Vreeland, of Jersey City, a vocal soloist, and Miss Van Drisan, of New Brunswick, a fine musician, entertained the guests. Supper was served under the supervision of the hostess. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Kershaw, and Miss Katie Vreeland, of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. La Forge, Miss La Forge and Miss Van Dusan, of New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. Cole and daughter, of Pleasant run. Rev. Cornelius Schenck and Rev. Mr. McKelvey were also invited.

IN CITY COURT.

A Frenchman Who Says a Colored Man Struck Him.

John Scott, colored, was arrested last night by Officer Watson, on a complaint made by Justice Durnthier, the latter a Frenchman, on a charge of fighting. Scott pleaded not guilty, and his trial was set down for Saturday. Durnthier says that he was standing near Scott's house on Plainfield avenue, when Scott came up and struck him a blow across the face. Scott says Durnthier struck him first with a shovel.

Patrick Dunavan was arrested by Officer McCue on complaint of his wife, who charged him with calling her names. His trial was set down for Saturday, May 21st.

Officer Cash arrested Jacob Sternberg for peddling without a license. He was fined $3 which he paid.

OLD SCHOOL MENTOR TALKED ABOUT SPAIN

Miss Julia Bulkley Addressed Scholars Yesterday Morning.

TOPIC WAS A TIMELY ONE.

COLLECTION TO BUY THE BRONZE EAGLE WAS TAKEN UP.

Miss Bulkley Has Just Returned From a Foreign Trip, and She Recited a Few Observations Made on Her Tour Through the Land of the Dons—Spanish People are a Cruel Nation in Their Pastimes—Their Boasted Honor Amounts to Nothing—Remarks Received Heartily by the Scholars.

Yesterday was a rather eventful one at the Plainfield High School. Miss Julia Bulkley, now of the University of Chicago, and once the superintendent of schools in this city, paid a short visit to the school and made a few remarks on the topic of special interest at this time, Spain and her people. Then the collection for the bronze eagle that is to surmount the new city flag pole was taken and resulted in a goodly amount.

While there were very few of the pupils who had ever been directly under Miss Bulkley's supervision, she was well known to most of the High School pupils. She has just returned from a trip abroad and spent a day in Plainfield before going to Danbury, Conn., to visit her brother.

Miss Bulkley had little time to prepare anything, but consented to tell something of Spain, through which she had passed two years ago.

She sketched the trip of her party as they landed at Gibraltar and thence over to Algeciras, where they first landed in Spain. The coast looked unproductive, and so it was, for the wealth of the land is in the interior. They went to Granada, where they saw the Alhambra, then through Seville and Cordova to Madrid. Madrid is described as being located on an unproductive tableland, where nothing but royalty could maintain a city. Then the party continued northward to the Pyrenees, which marks the boundary of Spain.

The climate was very similar to that of this country except that Madrid, on account of its elevation, was somewhat cooler.

She told something of the pleasures of the Spanish people, principally bull fights and cock fights, in which cruelty was very apparent. The beggars were obtrusive throughout the country, especially in the large cities where the step to thieving and pilfering was very short.

Miss Bulkley told something of her personal experiences at Spanish hotels. While there was a great deal of show and display on the part of the Spaniards, when it came to something solid they were found wanting. Their boasted honor amounted to nothing as was seen when American Minister Woodford was not even treated with common courtesy on his departure. Miss Bulkley's remarks were received with hearty applause.

The collection to secure funds to purchase the eagle was afterwards taken up in the class rooms. At the same time it was taken up in the other public schools about the city.

RED CROSS BENEFIT.

Funds to be Raised to Aid the Sick and Wounded of the Army.

A benefit for the Red Cross fund for sick and wounded of the United States Army is being arranged to be given in Music Hall May 19th. The entertainment will consist of the presentation of a skit from one of the burlesque successes produced at Weber & Field's music hall in New York during the present season, together with a number of specialties by the best vaudeville artists in the theatrical profession.

The benefit will be given under the auspices of Mayor Fisk and a large number of prominent people of Plainfield, nearly a hundred having already pledged their support to the affair.

Breaking Quarantine.

Because the Board of Health complained that Martin Stevens, of Cottage place, is not complying with the quarantine regulations and allowing people to go in and out of his house where there is a case of scarlet fever, Chief Grant has detailed Officer Giese to watch the house with instructions to arrest any one not heeding the notice.

—On the evening of Friday, May 27th, a strawberry festival will be given in Hope chapel.

—The Women's Association of the Congregational church will hold a patriotic sociable in the church parlors Friday evening.

WORK OF LEO XIII.

An Estimate of the Pontiff by a Member of the Apostolic Delegation.

One of the most adequate tributes to the life and work of Pope Leo XIII, says the Boston Pilot, is the following brief contrast from an address recently delivered by Mgr. Donato Sbarretti, auditor of the apostolic delegation:

"The person of Leo stands gigantic and shining as light in dark places, as a bright sun in our restless and turbulent age. The loftiness of his intellect, the integrity of his life, the purity of his purpose, the nobility of his enterprises, the youthlike enthusiasm for good to all Christendom and mankind command and win the esteem and admiration even of the enemies of our holy church. He is the Maecenas of fine arts and sciences; he is a poet, a philosopher, a theologian, a statesman. His power and determination of will are indomitable—combined, however, with exquisite meekness and gentleness of heart. He personifies in himself all the rare and high qualities of pontiff, king and father. He stands in the full needs and faced and solved the most trying problems.

"With the keen penetration of his mind, he saw that the principal dangers of our age were positivism and materialism, godlessness, and their consequences anarchism in the family and in civil society. He offers as a substantial remedy the return to Christian philosophy under the safe guidance of "The Angelic Doctor." To overthrow the foundings of anarchy; he points out the holiness and indissolubility of the marriage tie, the source and foundation of the family; the mutual rights and duties between subjects and rulers, and in an admirable encyclical he treats on the relations between labor and capital with so much love of justice and so much affection and interest for the laboring classes as to win from them the glorious title of "The Pope of the Laborer." But he perceives at the same time that the full solution of every social question consists in seeking first the kingdom of God. Therefore, as another St. Paul, he invites all to the unity of faith, knowing with certainty that this is the victory which conquers the world—our faith."

AN ORIENTAL PRELATE.

Bishop Anzer Has Thirty Thousand Christian Chinese Under His Charge.

Bishop Anzer, the celebrated Catholic prelate of Shantung province, who on various occasions has been honored by the Chinese government, arrived in San Francisco recently and went directly to the parochial residence connected with the church of St. Boniface.

Bishop Anzer's dioceses in China has developed from German missionary work, which proved very fruitful. The bishop has under his charge 30,000 Christian Chinese, whom he regards as models of Christian virtue. He says that their daily life resembles that followed in religious orders. They attend mass every day, even when obliged to travel long distances to do so, and say the morning and evening prayers. His experience has led him to consider that the people as a whole are ripe to receive the truths of Christianity. About 2,000 Protestant missionaries are already in the field seeking converts.

The bishop has under his jurisdiction 55 priests, 8 religious brothers and 150 teachers. These are all supported and chapels built from the funds advanced by the Society For the Propagation of the Faith. But the average pay priest, he says, are totally inadequate to meet the necessary expenses. There are, including those in the dependencies, 1,200,000 native Catholics, 600 European priests and 1,450 native priests. The work of Christianizing he does not consider can be carried on as encouragingly here as in China. The very fact that the people are here only temporarily makes the effort less promising in results.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Story From the Vatican.

Prince Massimo, who represents the oldest princely family in Rome, tracing his descent from the Cæsars, was on his wedding day waited upon by the city fathers to present and offer his congratulations to *the pope on the occasion of one of sev*eral papal anniversaries which have taken place this year, when the officer in charge of the guard at the castle of San Angelo, seeing the gilded chariot lumbering across the bridge, thought it was the king, and, calling out his men, the guard presented arms as Prince Massimo, in one of the pope's stanchest supporters, drove past. This piquant mistake had already reached the pope's ears when the prince entered the audience chamber, and Leo XIII was much amused at joked the prince on his being mistaken for the king. "But I, too, have the blood of the house of Savoy in my veins," said Prince Massimo. "And very good blood, too," answered the pope.—London Post.

A Youthful Contributor.

The Savannah News says that the first contributor to the fund for the new Roman Catholic cathedral to be erected in Savannah was the 6-year-old son of the Rev. Robt. White, rector of Christ Episcopal church, in Savannah. The little fellow had been frugal with his savings, and he had accumulated $5. This he converted into a gold piece, and in a manly fashion carried it to a member of the cathedral congregation and tendered it as a starter for the rebuilding fund. The gentleman accepted the little fellow's contribution and added $500 to it on his own account.

A Cathedral Telephone.

In a hospital at Morristown, N. J., such Roman Catholic patient has at the head of his bed on Sunday a telephonic connection with the cathedral. He can, therefore, while lying in bed hear the service and the sermon.—New York Journal.

A WARM LAKE IN ALASKA.

The Water Never Is Cold but One Could Bathe in It.

Dawson City, wonderful as it is in many things, has still another wonder about which little has been heard. It is an immense lake, located back in the mountains not far away from the greatest town on earth, the waters of which are always warm. Fish in countless thousands can be caught in the coldest weather without trouble, for the waters of the lake are never so cold but one could bathe in them. The third claim this wonderful body of water has for distinction is that, while it is hundreds of miles from the ocean, and there is no apparent connection between the two, the lake is affected by the tide. Lake Selawik is the name given to this discovery by Father Tosi, a Jesuit missionary, who for years has been working among the Alaska Indians in the interior.

Father Tosi noticed that at times during the midst of the long arctic winter the Indians had fresh salmon. He could not explain it, for all the known streams and lakes were frozen solid. Finally he took a trip into the hills to a lake which was sixty miles long and fifteen in width. He called it Selawik. They have kept the secret well, and only a few white men know of the lake.

Father Tosi says that a man with a boathook could pull more salmon in an hour than he could eat in a fortnight, and suggests salmon catching in midwinter as an occupation for those who cannot get other work. With two good dogs and a sled the lake is within easy reach of Dawson. There would be no trouble in keeping the fish caught on account of the high temperature. The Indians are still trying to guard their secret, but there are men at Dawson who know of the lake and its wonderful peculiarities.—Seattle Times.

Music for the Poor.

A conservatory of music has been established in a New York tenement house by Miss Emilie Wagner, of Baltimore, formerly a student at the Peabody Conservatory, and a graduate of the Woman's College, of Baltimore. The idea is to interest the ignorant and degraded in music, and thus uplift them. A beginning was made with a single room in a crowded tenement district, where lessons were given at a few pennies a lesson to little ragamuffins. Success came at length, after some discouragements, and now the conservatory has eighty pupils and three full corps. Several former pupils are assistants, and some have developed extraordinary talent. The work is self-supporting, but is carried on, of course, from philanthropic motives. A result has been, it is believed, the elevation of some that tend to elevate the home life of a number of the tenement dwellers.—Baltimore Sun.

A Model Husband.

A very active old gentleman who lives in the southwestern part of the city is noted in his neighborhood for his industry in keeping his yard in fine condition. He works hard all day in the city, but when he returns from work he is always active in helping with the yard work. He is also especially good to his wife, and he helps her much in her household labors. She appreciates his help, too, for the work is done so willingly.

Not long ago the old gentleman was helping at his house. He was doing more than two block people would do. A neighbor happened by and say him bustling about the kitchen. The neighbor remarked that he was a model husband. To this the man replied: "Well, I want to be just as kind to my wife as I can. When I get to heaven I am going to hunt up my first wife and beg her pardon for not helping her more."—Topeka State Journal.

Her Very Good Reasons.

"I would be a reformer, a politician and a real strong-minded woman, if it were not for two insurmountable obstacles." the New York Commercial Advertiser quotes a pig girl with the plumpest hat as saying.

"And what are they?" inquired the friend who belonged to nineteen clubs.

"Well, in the first place, no meeting or club business could lure me from a daintily decorated Turkish-rugged home, furnished with plenty of books and sofa pillows. Secondly, I could never be heart and soul in the fray for women's rights while there remained children to teach, to sew for or to sing to."

Not Much Difference.
